CROWNING IS COSTLY GAME.

Over Million Pounds Sterling to Be Spent on Pageant and Fetes.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It costs money to crown a king. Here is a conservative estimate of the amount to be spent from the royal exchequer alone, as incidental to the coronation.

Cass Lake, Minn., physician of good repute, the man who warned the United States government that efforts to enforce "Pussyfoot" Johnson's interpretation of the Indian treaty with respect to liquor selling in the north country would be resisted with gun play, was arrested at 10 o'clock this morning at Hibbing, Minn.

Pinkerton detectives say he is the head and plotting genius of one of the most daring gangs of yeggmen that ever invested this upper end of the Mississippi Valley. Specifically, the warrants charge "conspiring for the wilful, malicious, and felonious destruction of property."

At 10:30 this morning Pinkerton detectives and other officers, following a carefully-considered plan, surprised two yeggmen cracking a safe in a store at Puposky, eighteen miles north of Bemidji. In a point-blank fusillade of shots by the two parties, both the yeggmen were severely wounded, one was captured and the other, trailing blood on the underbrush from a gaping wound in his side, made his escape through the forest surround-

KINGLY HEADS AWAIT CROWN

King and Queen at Buckingham.

Semi-State Marks Arrival of Britain's Monarchs to the London Palace.

Coronation Festivities Fairly Launched; Royal Guests Already Coming.

Police Precautions Arousing Resentment of Populace; Seats Sell Slowly.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] King George and Queen Mary returned to Buckingham Palace from Windsor today and inaugurated the coronation festivities. The fete will reach its climax next Thursday, but social, political and state events will crowd each other continuously until July 1.

Semi-state marked the arrival of The Majesties in the metropolis, the procession from Paddington station to Buckingham Palace consisting of landaus drawn by four bays with postillions and escorted by the Royal Horse Guards. Large crowds everywhere greeted the King and Queen with cheering and followed them over the whole route.

Most of the royal guests and other special missions from abroad will arrive Monday. John Hays Hammond, special ambassador from the United States, will make his official entry into the city at noon on Monday. He will be met by the Duke of Connaught, representing King George, and other officials.

ROYALTY WELCOMED.

Dowager Empress Maria of Russia, who will spend the coronation period with Queen Mother Alexandra at Sandringham, arrived this afternoon. She was welcomed at the railroad station by King George and Queen Mary, the Queen Mother Alexandra and a host of other members of the royal family and diplomats.

This afternoon at Buckingham Palace the King received the American and other foreign officers participating in the jumping competitions at the horse show at Olympia.

In the meantime the whole city is preparing for the celebration. All of the hotels are filling up with visitors, stands have been erected to provide viewing spaces along the route of the parade, and Scotland Yard and police called from America and the continent are laying plans to protect royalty from violence and the general public from crooks. In connection with the latter, there has been some severe criticism.

ELABORATE PRECAUTIONS.

Scotland Yard is taunted with having given way to a bad case of nerves. Preparations made for dealing with the expected crowds have given rise to protests that London next week is to be inhabited by peaceable citizens, and not by a city given over to German invasion.

The whole route of the royal procession has been barred by big wooden gates, which have proved a serious hindrance to traffic this week and which, it is predicted, may, in case some officials lose their heads next week and order them closed at an inopportune moment, turn out to be a serious danger.

As a consequence of the police regulations closing the routes at an early hour in the morning spectators will have excessively long waits before they have a chance of seeing the royal procession.

Suburban visitors, it is calculated, will have to leave their homes at 2 a.m. on Thursday in order to get on the line of the royal route before 7, when the troops will take up their stations, and then remain in the places they occupy till some time after 3 in the afternoon.

BEACHES MAY DRAW.

Besides the inconvenience entailed, a feeling of general apprehension has been aroused by the numerous orders and warnings issued by the authorities and a goodly part of London's population will undoubtedly avail itself of the cheap excursions to the seaside many railway companies are offering.

Londoners have also resented the attempts to wring out of them prices they consider extortionate. Agencies for the letting of seats in windows to view the procession are necessarily putting a brave face on the affair and declaring that the places are selling well, but, judging from palpable signs, the demand is not at all commensurate with the supply. For instance, big advertisements are appearing in the newspapers offering seats in the best positions at moderate prices.

It is estimated that £1,500,000 has been spent in stands along the routes of the royal processions, exclusive of the sums paid in rent for the sites on which they are built.

STUPENDOUS EXPENSES.

It is impossible to total all the money changing hands directly in consequence of the coronation, but a conservative calculation puts it at much over £5,000,000. There are no

BRUTAL MURDER BY ROBBERS.

New York Woman is Throttled to Death by Rope Tied Around Neck Twisted by Stick.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, June 17.—Robbers today entered the home of Mrs. Morando in the lower East Side, tied a rope about her neck and murdered her by tightening the rope with a stick. Then they lacerated her ears by tearing out the diamond ear-rings and took from her fingers four diamond rings.

Mrs. Morando, who was 35 years old, and the wife of a prosperous merchant, was alone in her apartments when the robbers made their appearance.

If Gentler Sex Ruled, He Opines Man Would Work from Morn to Midnight, Then Lay Awake Listening to Wives Chewing Rag—Give 'Em Pants; Let 'Em Work.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Jack Johnson is spending money like a Pittsburgh millionaire. He has ordered an expensive motor, a bass viol and has bought a diamond necklace for his wife. His modest expenditures for the week have been about twenty thousand dollars. Today he speeded to Brooklands, where he intended to aeroplane had the wind not been strong. Returning, he struck the fore end of the suffragette procession.

Johnson said:

"When the time comes that men ain't able to run business, women ought to put on the pants and make a living for the men. I never give my seat to a suffragette in a car. They want the same rights as men; let them undergo the same chances. If women had the rule, men would work from 6 in the morning until midnight and then they would not get any rest, as women would chew the rag the rest of the time.

"If women had their way there would be no music halls, racing or aeroplanes. Anything they could not do themselves they would not let men do. If they got the power they would have men fighting one another.

"Show me a wise woman who ever invented anything, show me a smart suffragette movement capable of anything but to stir up malicious mischief and stone-throwing raids on Parliament, and I will swim back to the United States."

On Guard.

POLICE OF ST. LOUIS PATROL BIG YARDS AGAINST UNIONS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] At the request of lumber-yard and lumber-product factory owners who are outspoken in their belief that a plot of union labor exists to put the torch to their establishments, policemen tonight are guarding a dozen of St. Louis's largest plants. Six to ten in each squad are stationed inside and outside the establishments, aided by a corps of private watchmen.

Today brought forth a well-directed investigation. Chief of Detectives Allender detailed a squad of his men to delve thoroughly into the motives of probable incendiarism.

Four sash and door factories were destroyed Thursday night. An iron-works nearby was also leveled. Friday night at virtually the same hour as the previous fire, 7 o'clock, the plant of the William G. Frye Manufacturing Company was burned. It was but a block from the conflagration of the previous night.

A POSSIBLE POINT.

Railroad brakemen yesterday gave information to the police which further strengthens the theory of incendiarism.

It has been reported this blaze was discovered in a box car in the Frye yards. Instead, these brakemen declared they saw the blaze in a pile of straw just inside the fence surrounding the Frye establishment. The straw, it develops, was removed from box cars just outside the plant.

Chief Allender, after ordering an investigation, said:

"I have instructed my men to ascertain, if they can, the cause of these fires. I have no direct evidence they were of incendiary origin, and it may be merely coincident that they came so close together. The circumstances are such, however, that the investigation is highly proper and timely."

President Frye of the Frye Company declares he has had no labor trouble in his plant. Five of the other officials are outspoken in their belief that the destruction was the result of incendiarism.

Fire Chief Swingley's opinion of the origin of the blaze was largely instrumental in causing a thorough police investigation.

UNION LEADERS OBJECT.

Officials of the Carpenters' Union, whose constituents have been on strike for several months, today were loud in their denounciations of plant owners in requesting a guard. They maintain it gives unwarranted weight to suspicion that union labor had a hand in the conflagrations.

Recently a portion of the carpenters withdrew from the national organization and formed a new union. Several members of the new organization are said to be empolyed in the plants under guard.

"The fact that two fires are similar in many respects and happened so close together, looks suspicious," declared Frye. "I have no suspicions against any persons and no accusations to make. We have not had any serious union labor difficulties."

Chief Allender and a squad of men devoted several hours yesterday to inspecting the ruins and railroad yards adjoining. He refused to make any statement of his conclusions and a conference between himself and Chief of Police Young immediately after was equally barren of opinions.

Friday night, while the fire at the Frye was in progress, John F. Larson, president and treasurer of the Lohse Patent Door Company, appealed to the police for a guard at his factory. His request was followed shortly after by similar expressions from a dozen other yard owners and manufacturers.

It is known that vigorous protests have been lodged by members of the striking carpenters with lumber yards that have been supplying contractors who employ non-union labor with material. The lumbermen in all instances have ignored the protest.

Thirteen Singles, Four Two-Baggers and a Triple—All in One Family—Births, That Is.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PITTSBURGH, June 17.—August Clendeaux, 42 years old, an expert glass worker of Ford City, near here, departed for New York today en route to Belgium, his native land, accompanied by his wife and twenty-four children. Incidentally he also takes with him a comfortable fortune made in the glass industry. Clendeaux and his wife came to this country twenty-one years ago.

The family was happy today. Clendeaux was especially joyous. He is a great admirer of baseball and described his family and departure as follows:

"The score is 24 to 0. (He meant none of the children had died.)

"It was a great game, too—thirteen singles, four two-baggers and a triple. Now we make a home run."

Fifty Thousand Suffragettes Break British Phlegm by London Parade.

Gorgeous, Glittering Pageant Raises Enthusiasm to the Burning Point.

Nobility and Shop Girl Touch Shoulders; Whole World Sends Its Fairest.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Proud indeed are the women of England because of their monster demonstration in London this afternoon—a dazzling climax of more than sixty years of agitation for woman's rights. In a procession, seven miles in length, were between 40,000 and 50,000 women clad in small hats and smart well-fitting costumes that radiated all the colors of the rainbow. The marchers moved like soldiers, five abreast, never looking back and never losing step.

A hundred brass bands and several groups of women pipers in Highland dress thrilled both the marchers and the public with their martial music. A thousand girls in white sturdily bore aloft a thousand banners, every one a work of art that required months for the making, the whole forming the finest banner display ever witnessed in the world's capital. The entire procession was embellished with rich emblems, foliage, flowers, flags and pennons fluttering everywhere.

GLITTERING PAGEANT.

The first figure in the march was "General" Mrs. Drummond on horseback, displaying the well-known militant colors, purple and green. Beside the "general" came the color bearer, followed by a group of new crusaders, just ahead of a Joan of Arc on horseback, enveloped in silver chain armor. This vanguard, striking in arrangement and immensely dramatic in appearance, drew roar after roar of applause from the coronation visitors massed along the route.

Behind the van came, on foot, the great leaders of the movement—Mrs. Pankhurst, Christabel Pankhurst, Mrs. Pethick Lawrence and Mrs. Tuke.

Then came a pathetic touch, the "prisoners' pageant," representing the 700 imprisonments suffered by the women in their fight for votes. This touching spectacle was succeeded by a historical pageant, a most brilliant thing, the reincarnation of Britain's women of power—Boadicea, Victoria, the Abbess Hilda, founder of the first English university, attended by nuns in scarlet and blue; Alipora, Countess of Norfolk, and Dames Crispin, Bowden and Ann Startupp, each preceded by a carrier bearing a banner showing the name and dates.

HISTORIC CHARACTERS.

The historical pageant also embraced women governors and custodians of castles, high sheriffs and peeresses, who were summoned to Parliament in the reign of Edward III. The medieval characters were dressed in gorgeous costumes copied from the Kensington Museum.

The object of this revival of the past was to show that women had always been politically ambitious and had always desired to take an active part in national affairs; that they had once enjoyed privileges that modern society had wrested from them.

The "voteless women" banner preceded women representing Florence Nightingale, Charlotte Bronte and Josephine Butler, who were deprived of their rights at the time of the reform bill.

The pageant of the empire was made up of women carrying garlands of roses, Irish colleens, Scotch piper lasses and high-hatted Welch women, one leading a goat.

But the gigantic demonstration was not confined to women of the United Kingdom. Australians were there with their emblem, a kangaroo, led by Mrs. Fisher, wife of the Prime Minister of the Commonwealth; Lady Curburn, wife of the Agent-General of South Australia, and Vida Goldstein of Victoria.

South Africa was represented by the white-haired Mrs. Saul Solomon, wheeled in a bath chair, as she has not recovered from the injuries she received at the hands of the London police.

In front of the Canadian contingent walked Mrs. Balfour, wife of the late speaker of the House of Commons at Toronto, carrying a maple leaf. The Indian section marched beneath the representation of an elephant. Scandinavia was represented by women carrying branches of a birch tree. Finns, gayly attired in their national costume were led by Mme. Malmberg.

AMERICAN ACTRESS.

Then out of the bewildering mass of colors rose "Old Glory" that foretold the coming of the American group headed by Inez Milholland of New York, Katherine Dreier of Brooklyn, Elizabeth Freeman of New York, Mrs.

LONDON A BLAZE OF COLORS AND LIGHTS

Streets of Metropolis Take on Gala Aspect.

Crowds Throng Paves Morning Until Night.

Last Rehearsal of Coronation Takes Place Monday.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

LONDON, June 17.—On the eve of coronation week, London is ablaze with colors. A few days ago the aspect of the streets suggested a city in splints, so vast was the area of bare timber. All this has been transformed with paint and hanging fabrics. The metropolis now appears in extreme gala attire. From early morning until late at night the streets are crowded with a cosmopolitan crowd.

Musical rehearsals are proceeding with choir and orchestra for the great ceremony in Westminster Abbey. No fewer than 450 voices compose the choir, drawn from every cathedral in England.

REHEARSAL MONDAY.

The interior transformation of the abbey is completed; and with the final rehearsal Monday, at which their majesties are expected to be present, everything will be in readiness for Thursday's celebration.

Early in the week the last of the royal delegates will arrive and London will then contain as distinguished a company as ever gathered in any capital.

Few seats remain unsold and those only the most expensive.

Although John Hays Hammond, special ambassador from the United States, is in London, he does not arrive officially until Monday. He will then go to Dover, where Lord Sandhurst and staff on behalf of the King and the staff of the American Embassy will welcome him. From Dover he will proceed to London, where the Duke of Connaught will receive him officially.

WEEK'S PROGRAMME.

The week's programme includes a dinner at Buckingham Palace, a ball at Stafford House, a state dinner at Buckingham Palace, a dinner by the Duke of Connaught, and a dinner by Sir Edward Grey, the Foreign Secretary.

Ambassador Whitelaw Reid, who has been ill at his country place during the last week, is said to be greatly improved and expects to be able to attend the festivities.

LONDON GIVEN OVER TO HOLIDAY SPIRIT.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

LONDON, June 17.—The final preparations for the coronation festivities through the next week are rapidly being brought to a close, and the city is fast being given over to a spirit of holiday rejoicing on a colossal scale, with untold thousands of visitors from America and other parts of the world here, to join in the royal demonstration.

A notable feature along the lines of route to be followed by the newly-crowned King, in his procession through the streets of London next Thursday and Friday, is the almost complete transformation of familiar sights. Churches, ancient edifices, public buildings and open spaces, business premises and private residences have entirely changed their appearance. Starting with the Westminster Abbey itself, the annex added to increase the accommodation has altered its aspect almost alarmingly, although efforts were exerted to lend an air of age to the stucco addition.

The Parliamentary church of St. Margaret and the adjacent Parliament square are unrecognizable in consequence of the gigantic stands covered with purple bunting, surrounding and hiding them from view. On the latter spot the statue of Lord Beaconsfield appears to look down on the passing procession as from a private box at a theater, for it is inclosed in a square wooden palisade reaching to the breast.

MAY PURCHASE CHAIRS.

Then along Whitehall, stand after stand varies the usual appearance of the imposing government offices and the old-fashioned admiralty. At Trafalgar-square Landseer's lions have disappeared under timber tiers of seats. Old Saint Martin's in the Fields is cloaked in bunting and surrounded by crowded stands.

In response to many petitions from participants in the coronation ceremonial, the Office of Works has decided to permit those present to purchase as souvenirs the chairs and stools on which they sat, all of which are marked with the word "Coronation" and embossed with the crown and the date of the occurrence.

The onerous duty of the disposition of the guests has fallen on the Earl Marshal, the Duke of Norfolk, who far many weeks has been the busiest man in England. His task was rendered all the more difficult by reason of the fact that the space in Westminster Abbey is very limited and before he was able to take into consideration any of the thousands of applications for invitations from the distinguished visitors and others desirous of being present, he was compelled to provide sitting room for no fewer than 4040 official guests.

These guests comprised forty members of the royal family, 250 foreign rulers and representatives of foreign states, 1450 peers and peeresses, 670 members of Parliament, 300 members of the diplomatic corps, privy councillors, bishops and judges, 600 official colonial representatives and 730 officers of the army and navy, king's councillors and members of the royal household. As the Abbey is capable of holding only slightly under 6000, there remained only about 2000 places to be disposed of by the unofficial public. A large staff was engaged in the Earl Marshal's office for over a month in sending out courteous refusals.

PECULIAR DILEMMA.

A peculiar dilemma arising out of the scarcity of first-class carriage horses which has developed since the universal introduction of the motor car, affected many members of the peerage and ancient nobility participating prominently in the regal functions and processions of the coronation. The question of horsing the cumbersome but elegantly emblazoned family state coaches which have been in service sometimes for centuries, on such occasions became in many cases acute and recourse had to be had for their supply not only to the stables of country mansions, where most of the animals are now kept, but to the public livery stables, which for a time enjoyed something of their prestige.

No fewer than 60,000 troops, comprising representative regiments of the regular army, the yeomanry, the territorial volunteers, and detachments from Canada, South Africa, Ceylon, Hongkong, the Malay States, Malta, Bermuda and the West Indian colonies, together with a naval brigade, are to be engaged in keeping the routes along the line of the procession. These are under the supreme command of Field Marshal Lord Kitchener, who was specially appointed to the post by the King.

In addition to the military, the entire police forces of the city and of greater London, numbering altogether over 20,000 men mounted or on foot, are assisting in keeping order.

To avoid the terrible consequences of possible rushes into the main thoroughfares from side streets, barriers of timber are erected at the most dangerous street junctions.

NOTABLES OF MANY LANDS TO BE THERE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

LONDON, June 17.—All eyes are now turned to the fast approaching coronation, with its series of regal and spectacular events, which culminate next Thursday with the actual coronation of King George V at Westminster Abbey.

The decoration of the interior of the Abbey, which on this occasion is to be on the most elaborate scale, has been caried on by the Office of Works. The scheme is a strikingly brilliant one. Resting on the foundation of a splendid pile carpet of royal blue, into which are worked the emblems of the Order of the Garter and other heraldic designs, the central figures of the historic pictures are to be grouped in their gorgeous robes, the King in the imperial mantle of cloth of gold worn by the late King Edward at his coronation in 1902. It is woven from plate-gold threads worked on silk and as it hangs from the monarch's shoulders is fastened by a clasp in front and shimmers with brilliant effect in any light. It bears a design of laurel leaves and is covered with emblems representing the imperial crown, the imperial eagle, the rose, shamrock and thistle, and also the lotus flower, representing India.

Four knights of the Order of the Garter, the Earl Cadogan, the Earl of Rosebery, the Earl of Crew, and the Earl of Minto, have been assigned the proud task of holding the canopy over the head of the King, while four Duchesses, those of Hamilton, Montrose, Portland and Sutherland, will perform the same task for the Queen. The King's long train is to be borne by no fewer than eight pages, the Marquis of Hartington, the Earl of Airlie, Viscount Cranborne, the Lord Romilly, the Hon. E. G. W. T. Knollys, A. E. Lowther, W. H. E. Campbell and V. A. C. Harbord.

SURROUNDING MONARCHS.

Surrounding the monarchs are to be the representatives of foreign rulers and States, among them the Crown Prince and Princess of Germany, the Crown Prince and Princess of Denmark, Prince and Princess Henry of Prussia, the Crown Prince and Princess of Roumania, the Crown Prince of Servia, Prince Henry of the Netherlands, Infant Ferdinand Marie of Spain, Archduke Karl Franz Josef of Austria, Prince Huyoshi Fushimi of Japan, and the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz.

This latter Prince is not here as the ruler of his State, for court etiquette forbids the presence of ruling princes at a coronation, so he takes up the position of a close relative of the King. All these princely personages will wear their brilliant uniforms glittering with orders and decorations. Then in the order of their precedence are to be placed row after row of peers and peeresses.

American ladies are to figure very prominently in the ranks of the peeresses. Three of the duchesses, those of Roxburghe, Manchester and Marlborough, are the daughters of Ogden Goelet of Newport, Eugene Zimmerman of Cincinnati and W. K. Vanderbilt of New York, respectively. The Marchioness of Dufferin and Ava is the daughter of John H. Davis of Washington square, New York. The Countess of Essex is the daughter of the late Beach Grant of New York: the Countess of Suffolk, the daughter of the late Levi Zeigler Leiter of Dupont Circle, Washington; the Countess of Granard, daughter of Ogden Mills of New York; the Countess of Donoughmore, daughter of M. P. Grace of New York; the Countess of Craven, daughter of Bradley Martin of New York; and the Countess of Tankerville, daughter of the late J. G. van Marter of New York.

OTHER NOTABLES.

Then there are Viscountess Falkland, daughter of the late Robert Reade of New York; Lady Cheylesmore, daughter of Francis Omerod French of New York; Lady Newborough, daughter of the late Col. H. M. Carr of Kentucky; Lady Monson, daughter of the late Gen. Roy Stone of Mendham; Lady Leith of Fyvie, daughter of Derrick Algernon January of St. Louis; Lady Ashburton, daughter of J. C. Connelly of New York; and Lady Bateman, daughter of James Jeffrey Graham of New York.

Several Indian and other eastern princes in their multi-colored costumes will form part of the central group, which includes also the Sultan of Perak and the Sultan of Kedah, and the honorary Indian aides-de-camp of the King, including the Maharajahs of Idar, Gwalior and Bikanir, who, with the Gaekwar of Baroda, are among the special guests, but the Indian deputation is restricted on this occasion owing to the King's intention to visit India later on and hold an Imperial durbar at Delhi.

The special ambassadors and envoys of those states and republics unrepresented by princes form an interesting group, together with the delegations from the overseas British colonies. The latter include the Prime Minister of the commonwealths of Canada, Sir Wilfrid Laurier; of Australia, the Hon. Andrew Fisher; of New Zealand, Sir Joseph George Ward; of South Africa, the Rt. Hon. Louis Botha, and of Newfoundland, Sir Edward P. Morris.

Besides the foregoing, the Prime Ministers of New South Wales, Tasmania, Western Australia, Victoria, New Brunswick, Ontario, Alberta, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, British Columbia, Prince Edward Island and Quebec take their places, while the representatives of the Bahamas, Bermuda, British Honduras, Barbadoes, British Guiana, Ceylon, Hongkong, Jamaica, the Leeward Islands, Malta, Mauritius, the Straits Settlements, the Malay States, Trinidad and the Windward Islands complete the group.

The sombreness of the simple court costumes worn by the distinguished civilians and members of Parliament will be somewhat relieved by the high lights from the beautiful stained glass windows of the Abbey, which throw an effect of charm and color on the otherwise severe and stately aspect of the venerable edifice where this regal event is to take place.

THE PLACE OF HONOR HELD AS USUAL BY THE TIMES.

The following extract from an article published in the June number of the Mail Order Journal, of Chicago, Ill., shows The Times' enviable position among the world's leading newspapers, and contains interesting matter relative to classified advertising:

"CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING"

The Classified Pages the People's Forum and Market — The Real Employment Agencies of Labor—The Real Estate Market's Center—Business Opportunities for Everybody and Everything.

The classified columns of newspapers have actually become the real labor markets, the medium for renting rooms, flats and houses, the city real estate markets, the mart for all who want to buy or sell the thousand and one things which go to make up the daily life and interchange of a community. Thousands, to find work or help, are buying the papers best patronized with want ads; thousands, to find board or boarders, rooms or roomers; thousands, to buy or sell building lots or houses, or to rent houses or apartments; thousands, to buy or sell stores, and so on. These columns are a mirror of the daily life. They have helped many to a start in life and to climb the ladder to success, or to form valuable and lasting business and trade connections. It is impossible to measure in money the good the classified columns are doing for the masses, or the amount of money that is interchanged daily in trade or real estate transactions, or the social and business connections established by those who rent rooms or find board or buy or sell any of the thousand things needed in households as a result of this kind of publicity. It is hardly an exaggeration to state that the classified columns of the newspapers are today the most read portions. The want ads are so classified as to enable the reader to find what he is looking for, so arranged that hundreds of offers which may not interest him need not be read.

The constant growth in the patronage of the classified columns of newspapers furnishes the best and strongest proof of their value, while the quantity of classified advertising gives evidence of the standing and circulation of a publication. The general pulling qualities of a newspaper can best be attested by the extent to which the people of a city are using its classified columns. The poor puller does not often attract the classified advertiser more than one or two, or perhaps three times.

The extent to which the classified columns are used is evidenced by the quantity of this advertising carried by the following papers, from which we were able to obtain reports covering either the year 1910 or the twelve months prior to May 1. We regret that we have not received reports for more papers, but that was due to the neglect of the publishers to keep separate statistics of their classified business. Here is the list:

BEACON FIRES WILL SIGNAL CORONATION.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

LONDON, June 17.—Beacon fires built on 2500 of the most prominent points of the British Isles, in England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland, will, on the evening of June 22, flash the tidings of the coronation of King George V to the remotest recesses of the country. At 10 o'clock in the evening magnesium rockets will be fired from all the points selected in England, Wales and Ireland, followed by a shower of colored rockets. Then the fires will be lighted and the people gathered round will sing the national anthem.

The same programme will be observed in Scotland half an hour later, the delay arising from the fact that daylight lasts longer in the northern regions. The ancient beacon hills, used in olden times to warn the inhabitants of the approach of enemies, are to be utilized on this occasion.

The state carriage in which King George will proceed to the coronation has carried five of his predecessors to the Abbey on a similar mission. It was built 150 years ago, in 1761, for King George III, and its body, which weighs aver four tons, is of fine oak with allegorical paintings by Cipriani on the panels. Its initial cost was $35,000. George IV, William IV, Victoria and Edward VII also drove in it to their coronations.

It will be drawn in the procession to the Abbey by eight of the celebrated cream horses from the royal stables, and a groom in state livery will walk at each horse's head. The harness, which is covered with red morocco leather and gold-plated metal facings, will be the same as was used at Queen Victoria's diamond jubilee and at Edward VII's coronation in 1902.

Many of the foreign ambassadors and peers will use elaborate state carriages, richly upholstered and brilliantly emblazoned with coats of arms in which to drive to the ceremony, but no person except those belonging to the royal family may have more than a pair of horses attached to his carriage.

The imperial crown which will be placed on King George's head at the coronation is not yet a century old, and in its present form has never been worn by any sovereign. It was first made for Queen Victoria in 1838 and King Edward VII wore it unchanged at his coronation, but since that occasion it has been enlarged and embellished. In its front has now been set the great Cullinan diamond, the "Star of Africa," which takes the place of the magnificent broad-spread sapphire, now placed at the back.

Besides these enormous precious stones, whose value is inestimable, many hundreds of glorious diamonds, pearls, rubies, emeralds, brilliants and smaller sapphires adorn it. These are set together in the shape of Maltese crosses, fleurs de lis, oak leaves and acorns, roses, thistles and shamrocks. Altogether it contains over 3000 diamonds and 300 pearls, with smaller numbers of the other stones.

Some of these are of great historic interest. For instance, the sapphire in the cross at the top of the crown was formerly worn by Edward the Confessor in a ring, while a huge uncut spinet ruby in the center of a Maltese cross of diamonds in the front bears the name of Edward the Black Prince, and the same stone was set in the helmet of Henry V at the battle of Agincourt. The broadspread sapphire which has just been moved to the back formed part of the regalia of the Scottish kings, and was bequeathed by the last of the unfortunate Stuarts to George IV. Many of the other stones which ornament the new King's crown have formed part of the regalia belonging to the English kings since the period of the Norman conquest in 1066.

The Queen's crown, in accordance with precedent, dating from the return of Charles II to his crown, is entirely new. It is ornamented only with diamonds, and is absolutely dazzling in its brilliance. The immense "Koh-i-Nur," or "mountain of light," is set to the front. No jewel in the world has such a story as this. Its authentic history can be traced for over six centuries and tradition carries it back much farther. In 1304 it was captured from the Rajah of Malwa by Ala-ed-din, and two centuries afterwards it was discovered in the possession of the Moguls. It was used as one of the eyes of the royal peacock adorning Aurungzebe's throne and then by means of conquest, assassination and trickery passed from the hands of one Indian prince after another until it was finally secured by the powerful Sikh, Ranjit Singh.

At the annexation of the Punjab it fell into the hands of John Lawrence and was sent to Queen Victoria by Lord Dalhousie. Legend gives the great diamond the power of bringing good luck to any woman who wears it, but men are said always to suffer misfortune when it is in their possession. Another tradition says that "Who holds the Koh-i-Nur holds India." The remainder of the Queen's crown is composed of a cap of violet velvet with an ermine edge, around which is a circlet of diamonds, from which rise diamond arches tapering to a point where they unite beneath the diamond orb and cross. It weighs altogether only eighteen ounces, as the queen gave instructions that it should be as light as possible.

KIDNAPING CHARGE AGAINST EASTERN SLEUTH.

Indianapolis Grand Jury Finds Three True Bills Against Los Angeles Prisoner for Dynamiting. Gov. Marshal Upheld in Action on Extradition Papers.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

INDIANAPOLIS (Ind.) June 17.—Detective W. J. Burns and James Hosick, a city detective of Los Angeles, Cal., were indicted on charges of kidnaping John J. McNamara, secretary of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron workers from this city and McNamara was indicted on charges of conspiracy to dynamite, by the Marion county grand jury today.

In all the grand jury returned eight indictments, but named only the three men in the charges. Three of the indictments are against McNamara, who is in jail in Los Angeles, where he was taken after being arrested in this city on April 22, 1911. One indictment charges him with "conspiracy to dynamite industrial workers of the Peoria & Pekin Union Railway at Peoria, Ill." and the other two referred to the concealing of dynamite in this city.

The other five indictments are against Detective Burns, who is under $10,000 bond to the local grand jury, and Detective Hosick of Los Angeles, who has not been arrested.

The grand jury reported they found no evidence to sustain the charges of kidnaping against Walter Drew of New York, counsel for the National Erectors' Association; J. A. G. Badorf, Drew's associate; W. J. Ford, assistant District Attorney of Los Angeles county, California, and Frank P. Cox, of this city, the chauffeur who drove the car in which McNamara was taken from this city to Chicago, all of whom were arrested here and held to the grand jury for investigation.

Gov. Marshall, who honored the requisition for McNamara, "acted clearly within the law and did in the premises what he should have done," according to the grand jury's report.

details of the large amounts that will be paid in coronation expenses from the King's privy purse, but officially the national exchequer will disburse over £1,500,000.

Upwards of £800,000 will be expended by the public authorities, private corporations and individuals upon decorated lighting in London's streets. Two thousand five hundred bonfires throughout Great Britain will cost £50,000. A West End jeweler today calculated £500,000 would be spent upon jewelry specially purchased for the coronation.

Arrangements are complete for the formal coronation ceremony on Thursday, and the details indicate that the event will be of a greater magnitude than any previous one.

Mildred Bridges, Aged Seventeen, Whom Chicago Cult Leader Is Said to Have Led Astray, Holds Fast to Belief in Purity of Man Now Facing Jury and Jail.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "The public may crucify me upon the cross of its contempt; the State may pierce my heart with its spears of false charges, but I never will testify against Evelyn Arthur See. I am a pure girl. I know that See is the best of men and I will not help the State in its plot to send him to the penitentiary."

Mildred Bridges, 17 years old, daughter of Stephen A. Bridges, wealthy jeweler, for whose alleged abduction Evelyn Arthur See, "Revealer of the Absolute Life," is on trial, today made this reply to the final effort of Assistant State's Attorney Burnham to induce her to testify.

Both sides said today that they had obtained evidence that had never before been made public, and while Prosecutor Burnham said he was positive See would be convicted and sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary, Attorneys James B. and Francis J. Callahan, of counsel for See, were equally as positive that their client would be acquitted.

"We have a sensational truth ready that will knock the State off its feet," said Francis Callahan. "We cannot now give the least inkling of this, but the State's attorney does not even dream what it is. The coup we will spring will, in itself, free See.

"Neither of these girls was guilty of the actions that the State charges to them."

ESPEE SAFE CRACKED.

SAN JOSE (Cal.) June 17.—Residents in the vicinity of the Southern Pacific depot at Los Gatos were aroused at 2 o'clock this morning by a loud explosion, which proved to be in the depot. Three men observed running from the building, were fired at by Night Watchman Moffitt, but they escaped up the canyon. Investigation disclosed the fact that the safe had been literally blown to pieces, and money was scattered all over the premises. The combination lock was found across the street. A posse is scouring the country between Los Gatos and Alma in search of the burglars, who are believed to be amateurs.

SHIP AHOY.

FRESNO, June 17.—Capt. McMurtry at 9 o'clock this morning safely piloted the steamer J. H. McDonald through the Miller & dam on the San Joaquin River on the return trip from Fresno to Stockton. This is considered the only dangerous spot on the river and without doubt the steamer will now finish its voyage without incident. The J. H. McDonald left Skaggs Bridge at 4 o'clock this morning. The vessel has several tons of dried fruit on board and will take on a cargo of grain farther down stream.

The money was put up, but Sullivan shorty afterward went back to the goldfields, and Rosenthal got cold feet, selling out his interest to Stewart for $100. Sullivan had aready sold out for a like sum.

Stewart got the bond reduced to $5000, which he had out of what Rosenthal and Sullivan had put up. He signed up over $150,000 of leases and then sold his lease to the Lincoln Realty Company at a $115,000 profit.

Rosenthal and Sullivan at once put in claims against Stewart, holding that, inasmuch as their money had been used in making up the $5000 deposit, they were still partners.

Judge Seawell decided that both partners had sold out all their interest to Stewart and that their interest in the $10,000 deposit was forfeited when they accepted $100 each from Stewart.

CHINESE CAUGHT, HOWEVER.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—Opium that would have commanded a price of from between $6000 and $7000 in Chinatown, was seized by customs inspectors last night in a Chinese laundry wagon, where it had been concealed beneath soiled clothing. The Chinese driver, Yee Fong, drove his valuable freight without haste until he noticed two inspectors on his trail. Then he whipped up his horse, but failed to escape. When overhauled, the clothes baskets yielded 185 tins of the drug, which the inspectors think was recently taken off a sailing vessel arriving from Mexican ports.

CASHIER SCORED IN OPEN LETTER.

FAILURE OF KERN VALLEY BANK CAUSES STRIFE.

Men Addressed in Published Card by Cashier of Defunct Organization Respond With Severe Criticism of the Bank Official, His Methods and Lack of Fealty.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BAKERSFIELD (Cal.) June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] C. N. Beal, who, with W. S. Tevis, Lymon Stewart and H. A. Blodget, was addressed in a notice published by Cashier Ronald McDonald of the Kern Valley Bank, demanding payment for the Sunset Road Oil Company bonds held by the bank, today gave to the press an open letter to McDonald in which is denied any indebtedness to the bank, directly or indirectly, or any responsibility for the payment of the bonds.

Beal's letter is longer than that of W. S. Tevis, recently published, and is severe in its criticism of McDonald.

Beal declares that in April, 1905, the Kern Valley Bank was in a failing condition, and the bank commissioners would have closed it had not Tevis interceded, and by his assistance extending over a year, made it possible for the institution to continue. The letter says:

"You now know that the discredit which you brought upon the securities of the bank by instigating the suit to foreclose the Sunset Road Oil Company bonds, was the direct cause of the bank's suspension; that the bringing of this suit was the result of your efforts to hold up Mr. Tevis, myself and others; that but for your faithlessness you would not have been in a position to make these efforts; that you betrayed and alienated the only men who in the past had been the bank's friends and the only one who ever came to its assistance, and that the failure of the bank at this time was due to you and to you alone."

BISHOP CELEBRATES THE DAY.

Suspends Business and Makes Manifest its Joy Over the Start of Railroad Construction.

BISHOP, June 17.—Every business house in the city closed this morning during the celebration held to commemorate the commencement of work on the Bishop-Laws Railway, which will connect the Souhtern Pacific at Laws and give Bishop direct railway connection with the outside world.

The importance of the new line to Bishop is great. At the present time passengers and freight destined to this place must be transported a distance of six miles by stage and freight wagons. It will take about six months to complete the road, and when it is in operation freight may be shipped directly to Bishop without transfers.

The stock in the Owens Valley Railway Company, which is building the road, is held mostly by local people. Harry Shaw, president of the Owens Valley Bank, is president; H. N. Beard manager, and C. E. Johnson, resident manager. A fifty-passenger motor and express car will be operated over the road. The celebration opened with an automobile parade in which fifty machines took part. On the site of the proposed new depot and freight yards a programme of music was given and refreshments served. A. L. Rowan delivered an address on the benefit to be derived from the roads.

The first shovelful of dirt was dumped on the right of way by President Shaw. Over a thousand people witnessed the exercises.

DAUGHTER REGAINED AFTER LONG SEARCH

Portland Juvenile Court Aids Father Find Babe.

Thirteen Years Since He Saw Face of His Child.

Foster-Parents Abandon Girl Entrusted to Them.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] For thirteen years E. F. Apley, a wealthy rancher of Napoleon, N. D., searched for his daughter, taken from him when she was one year old, and was rewarded this morning in the juvenile court when she was restored to him.

The girl is now 14 years old and had never seen her father until they met in the courtroom of Judge Gatens. She is going back home with him and there is not a happier couple in Portland today.

Apley formerly lived in Wisconsin. His first wife died soon after the birth of Lillian. By mutual consent the babe of less than one year was placed in the care of a family by the name of Owens, who lived near by. Unusual attachment developed between the little child and its foster parents, and the father was not allowed to see it.

One day he broke down the door and sought to take his child by force. He was arrested and ordered not to molest the foster parents, who quickly moved away and never informed the father, who searched in vain for his child.

A few days ago a relative of the foster parents wrote the father of the girl that his daughter had been cast off by her guardians and was in charge of the juvenile court here. He lost no time in coming to Portland and arrived last night.

The case was in the juvenile court this morning on proceedings to commit the girl to a home, but when the father appeared she was awarded to him. Both the girl and the father were overcome with joy.

YOUTH'S IDEA OF FRIENDSHIP.

Alameda Boys Seal Comrade Pact by Severing Each Other's Thumbs With Blow of Ax.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

ALAMEDA, June 17.—As the result of a compact made to cement their friendship that each should cut the other's thumb off with an ax, Ada Ambruiller, aged 13 years, residing in San Jose avenue, is minus his first finger, and Ernest Miller, one year his senior, and living in Fountain street, is going around with his hand in a sling and the nail of his thumb clipped off by the ax.

The fact that Ambruiller lost his thumb first and fainted kept Miller from going through with the entire operation. When Ambruiller had clipped off the nail with the ax, Miller went crying into the house and told the story. When questioned about the compact today the boys said that they were pals and to clinch the matter and make sure of a life's friendship, they decided that each cut off a thumb. Both boys are under a physician's care.

Portland (Or.) Surgeon, Famous for Treatment of Appendicitis, Himself Goes Under the Knife.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] After performing over 500 operations for appendicitis Dr. A. E. Rockey, a prominent surgeon himself, was placed under the knife yesterday. Although his condition was serious last night, today he was reported as much better and the signs are most favorable.

There is the appearance of the irony of fate in Dr. Rockey's being stricken. For years the surgeon has been dealing with this particular form of trouble.

Several of the most prominent surgeons of Portland assembled in the operating room and assisted in the knife work so that the patient had the combined wisdom and counsel of many of his leading colleagues and competitors.

ANTIQUE GEMS LOST.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) [Exclusive Dispatch.] Antique gems, worth more than $2000 and of great sentimental value, have been lost by the family of Gen. T. M. Anderson, retired, who appealed to the city detectives today for assistance in finding them. It is believed they were lost in transit between Gen. Anderson's home here and his country place near Vancouver. They were placed in an automobile, but were not found at the end of the trip. All of the articles were very old and of peculiar design and fine workmanship and an earnet effort is being made to recover them.

SACRAMENTO, June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] To avoid race riots on the Fourth of July in Sacramento, the committee in charge of the celebration named by Mayor Beard last night issued a decree that there will be no Japanese fireworks and no raising of the Japanese flag on that day. A year or two ago there was a display of daylight fireworks and bombs were sent up, which, when exploded, displayed the Japanese flag, which caused hostile demonstrations.

San Francisco Woman Breaks Same Arm Thrice, Same Way, Same Place.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DIXON (Cal.) June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] For the third time within a year and each time while on a visit to her friend, Mrs. Louis Spot, of this place, Mrs. Jessie Coleman of San Francisco has broken her arm through being tipped out of a buggy.

About ten months ago Mrs. Coleman was on a visit here, and while riding in a carriage the horse became frightened and threw her out. Her arm was broken.

Last week, with other women, Mrs. Coleman was enjoying a ride at the same place. An automobile frightened the horse and she was thrown out, breaking her arm.

Yesterday, while sitting in a buggy waiting for Mrs. Spot to get in, she was jerked suddenly from the buggy by the horse rearing. She was thrown out and her arm was broken for the third time. In addition to a new break, the fracture of a week ago was rebroken.

Mrs. Coleman has about decided to walk hereafter while visiting in Dixon. She is now fearful of losing the use of her arm through the frequent fracture.

LODI MAN DIES OF WOUNDS.

Citizen Shot by Newspaper Editor Succumbs—Slayer Declares He Shot to Kill.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LODI, June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Charles Sollars died early this morning, a victim of the bullets fired by Sam B. Axtell, editor of the Sentinel. That he was murdered in cold blood is the assertion of his friends.

For many years Axtell and Sollars have not spoken, and the breach between them has steadily widened until the trouble which caused the shooting. What is generally considered the real cause of the shooting occurred a week ago last Friday night, when two ladies in Mr. Axtell's automobile on the way to Stockton from Lodi, in attempting to pass a hay wagon, were compelled to run the machine into a ditch.

A story in a local afternoon paper, on which the name of Axtell was connected with one other resident of Lodi as taking joy rides, is said to be the real cause of the shooting.

Axtell is said to have accused Sollars of making false statements. A. E. Humphries and Fred Kettleman were also highly indignant because they believed Sollars had circulated a false story relative to the accident. The investigation shows that Axtell walked into the garage and shot Sollars from behind without the slightest warning. Then he followed Sollars up in a race around the garage. Axtell says he shot to kill.

Formal charges of murder in the first degree will be filed against Axtell Monday morning by Dist.-Atty. E. P. Foltz. The Coroner's verdict charged Axtell with the murder of Sollars. Axtell remains cheerful in his cell at the jail and evidences less concern about the shooting than his friends or other interested parties. He has refused to discuss the murder for publication.

Samuel McGuire, the other, was found in his underclothes barefooted. He had gone to his room in the Paine building, and then declaring his supposed pursuers had camped in front of his door, took off his clothes and walked along a ledge on the side of the building, three stories from the ground, and went back through another window. He had a bucket lid which he used after a fashion of Roman gladiators to defend himself from imaginary bullets.

Painless Operations On Teeth

depend largely on the man who uses the instrument. If he is careless, irritable or unsympathetic, he will inflict pain frequently, no matter what methods are at hand to avert it. Patience and gentleness are as necessary as skill and science in dealing with agony.

For this reason members of my staff are selected not only for their skill, but for patience and gentleness, and they are required to give special care and extra time to the nervous and sensitive.

I know from personal experience the value of careful, gentle and sympathetic manipulation.

And not only do my operators prepare teeth for filling and crowning painlessly, but they can cut entirely down to a live pulp (nerve) when necessary and remove it without pain. Indeed, the patient would never suspect that they were operating on a nerve if they did not tell him. My method has entirely revolutionized the old and painful way.

Now if you will take the time to visit my office and hold a consultation with me I am sure I can convince you that I am the Dentist you should patronize. Don't delay—come today.

ROBBERS LOOT MAIL CAR.

Shasta Limited Held Up By Two Masked Men Near Drain, Or., Who Make Getaway.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

DRAIN (Or.) June 17.—The mail car of the Southern Pacific Company's fast passenger train, known as the Shasta Limited, which left Portland for San Francisco at 6 o'clock last night, was robbed between Drain and Yoncalla shortly before last midnight by two men. The passengers were not molested and no one was injured. The robbers, who so far as known, took nothing except a few registered mail pouches, escaped.

Sheriff George D. Quine of Douglass county at Roseburg was notified by telephone, and securing an engine set out at once for Yoncalla accompanied by his deputies. On arrival there, he formed a posse and at daylight took up the search, the local officers having abandoned it after several hours fruitless hunt. The Sheriffs of Lane and Jackson counties are keeping watch for suspicious characters.

The men who committed the robbery were both under 30 years of age, of medium height and dark complexion and were clean shaven. They were roughly dressed and wore no masks. One was armed with two revolvers; the other had an automatic pistol.

AFTER BANDIT'S RECORD.

CHARGES AGAINST YOUTH.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

VALLEJO (Cal.) June 17.—Chief of Police W. T. Sanford will leave tomorrow for Sacramento to confer with the authorities there in regard to the criminal record of Frank Melville, the "boy bandit," who now is in the County Jail at Fairfield. Melville will be arraigned on Monday on two charges of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to commit murder. The grip carried by Melville when Chief Sanford fired on him near the three-mile house last Wednesday night was found today. It contained only a soft hat, which showed the imprint of a revolver.

NATIVE DAUGHTERS ADJOURN.

ORDER IS FLOURISHING.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SANTA CRUZ (Cal.) June 17.—The grand parlor of the Native Daughters of the Golden West devoted the last day of its session here to finishing the presentation of reports. That the order is in a flourishing condition was shown by the report of the Financial Committee. It was then recommended that all books of the order be experted. When the newly-elected grand officers were installed, handsome gifts were presented by the delegates to the retiring grand president, Mrs. Mamie G. Peyton of Stockton.

BANKERS GO A-FISHING.

RARE SPORT AT LAKE TAHOE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

TAHOE TAVERN, June 17.—The California bankers, in State session here, turned their energies to sports on their last day. J. M. Henderson of Sacramento entered a seven-pound trout in the contest for the fishing trophy. This catch inspired the other delegates to try their luck on the lake. There was also keen interest in the bowling contest. Altogether the meeting has been so pleasurable that few of the visitors left for home today.

Why You Ought to Drink Puritas Distilled Water This Summer.

Hundreds of People Use It Throughout Southern California.

Puritas Distilled Water is the ideal summer drink, for a number of good reasons.

In the first place, it's nothing in the world but pure, sparkling water.

You can't find a trace of minerals or any foreign matter in a drop of it.

And in the summer time really pure water is a decided necessity.

Because then the body excretes more waste matter than in cooler weather.

And good, pure, clean water is the body's best aid in flushing out the whole system.

Puritas Distilled Water is better to drink than most of the beverages so many of us indulge in, because it's hard to really know whether they are pure and wholesome.

And even if they are, we usually drink them served so cold that they do more harm than good.

Their chill stops digestive processes and retards the whole body's action.

Get a five-gallon demijohn of Puritas—it costs only 40c, delivered anywhere within the old city boundary lines. At outside points the cost is a trifle more, because of the long haul.

Drink it whenever you're thirsty; have it handy; use it plentifully; it will pay you in every way.

Puritas Distilled Water is obtainable through dealers in most towns in Southern California. If you are unable to find it readily, just communicate with us. Home 10053; Main 8191.

Completely Cured of Chronic Diarrhoea

MR. W. S. WISWALL.

An acute sufferer since 1894, Mr. Wiswall had lost faith in everything until he tried this great medical whiskey.

It worked a complete cure, and now he "can never say enough in praise of it."

In his letter he says: "It is with pleasure that I write stating what Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey did for me. In 1894 I had a sickness which left me with chronic diarrhoea in the worst form. For years I spent a great many dollars fruitlessly in my endeavors to find relief and I was completely discouraged. One day, after suffering for about 15 years, I read that Duffy's would cure chronic diarrhoea, and I made up my mind to give it a trial. It was the best move I ever made. I used it for one year and I was completely cured. You will know how much good it has done me when I tell that I am at present working every day and am just as well as I ever was in my life. I can never say enough in its praise." W. S. Wiswall, 52 Reservoir Ave., Providence, R. I.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

has always been and is now a pure, wholesome, healthful medicinal whiskey, produced without regard to expense in compliance with the requirements of the Foods and Drugs Act, the doctors, "Materia-Medica" and the "Pharmacopoeia," the two recognized authorities of drugs and medicines in the United States. Great care is used to have every kernel thoroughly malted, thus producing a liquid food, tonic and stimulant, requiring no digestion. Its palatability and freedom from injurious substances render it so that it can be retained by the most sensitive stomach. Its gentle and invigorating properties influence for good every important organ in the body. It makes the old feel young and keeps the young strong and vigorous.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is the only whiskey that was taxed by the Government as a medicine during the Spanish-American war.

CAUTION.—When you ask your druggist, grocer or dealer for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, be sure you get the genuine. It is sold in SEALED BOTTLES ONLY—never in bulk. Look for the trade-mark, the "Old Chemist," on the label, and make sure the seal over the cork is unbroken. Price $1.00 a large bottle. Doctor's advice and an illustrated medical booklet sent free on request. The Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y.

Minard, principal of the Marquette High School in Maywood, whose sudden death last Sunday, during the absence of her husband, has not been explained by the police, was filed today. TO TEST CHILD LABOR LAW.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SPRINGFIELD (Ill.) June 17.—An appeal was today taken to the Supreme Court of the United States in order to test the constitutionality of section II of the child labor law of Illinois, which prohibits the employment of children under 16 years of age in certain lines of work. The appeal was granted to a manufacturing company of Chicago in which the Supreme Court of Illinois held the child labor law constitutional and affirmed the judgment of $4300 rendered in favor of Arthur Beauchamp, who was injured in the defendant's employ.

MAYOR AN INCENDIARY?

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

ST. PAUL (Minn.) June 17.—In a warrant sworn out by the Sheriff, Dr. E. D. Dumas, Mayor of Cass Lake, Minn., was charged today with being the leader of a gang of incendiaries. The issuance of the warrant followed the wounding of two robbers and the capture of one of them as the two were preparing to blow a safe at Pupesky, eighteen miles from Bemidji. The charges of incendiarism against Mayor Dumas grew out of a number of fires, which have occurred in and about Cass Lake, Black Duck and other places. Dr. Dumas was arrested at Hibbing, Minn., as he stepped from a train at the head of the Cass Lake baseball nine, of which he is also manager. He declared he was the innocent victim of a conspiracy to ruin him.

NEW NAVAL STATION.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, June 17.—Uncle Sam's newest naval training station, located on Lake Michigan, thirty miles north of Chicago, was opened to the public inspection for the first time yesterday. Rear-Admiral Albert Ross, commandant of the station, personally conducted visitors over the $3,500,000 plant, which includes thirty-nine buildings and covers 182 acres of ground. The station will be formally opened on July 1.

DARING KANSAS ROBBERY.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

LAWRENCE (Kan.) June 17.—While Deputy Treasurer Eddy was at work on the books in the Courthouse here last night, a stranger walked into the office and held him up at the point of a revolver, taking $3200 in currency and coin, which lay on the desk.

LUTHERAN SYNOD.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

DULUTH (Minn.) June 17.—The Augustana synod of the Swedish Lutheran Church of America today took up a discussion of the best way to collect the balance of an assessment, amounting to about $60,000, made at the semi-centennial last year. The assessment amounted to about $250,000, of which about 70 per cent. has been collected. This money is used to create an endowment fund for the Augustana College in Rock Island, Ill. The various conferences were assessed according to their membership and some have collected as high as 90 per cent. of the allotment, while others are only beginning.

POTATO AND CORN CROP POOR.

Kansas Farmers Glum Over Outlook Unless Speedy Rains Come—Wheat Doing Better.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TOPEKA (Kan.) June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The wheat harvest is now in progress in one-third of the counties of the State. The dry weather has prematurely ripened the grain and farmers are rushing the work of cutting, day and night. The few reports that come in from the threshing are very favorable, as they all show that the grain is plump and large and the heads are unusually filled out.

Farmers and experts, after these tests, are inclined to raise their estimates of the total yield over the conditions before the beginning of harvest. Generally, they think the yield is better than expected and they predict a little more than 60,000,000 bushels.

Corn conditions are very discouraging. No general rains have fallen in the State for three weeks, and only in spots have there been showers. The Weather Bureau gives no hope for a change, and rain is not looked for within the next three or four days. The extreme heat has passed on, and the weather is clear and fair, with northwest winds, which are indications of continued dry weather.

Farmers and others who have studied conditions throughout the State say the corn is suffering seriously and that an average crop cannot now be expected. Unless general rains come within a week, a failure, the worst for fifteen years, may be looked for.

The potato and vegetable crop along the Kansas River Valley is seriously damaged and many say the potatoes are a complete failure because of the long drought. Already potatoes are selling here for $2 per bushel, and the dealers say the prices will go higher.

"Christian Proposal of Arbitration" Between America and England Pleases Evangelical Denominations.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, June 17.—"On behalf of the National Council, representing the whole of the Evangelical Free Churches of England and Wales, having about ten thousand separate congregations, we beg to express our profound thankfulness not only for the most Christian proposal that you have made in favor of arbitration between the two countries, but for the cordial unanimity withw hich these proposals have been welcomed."

This was part of a message from across the sea, brought to President Taft today by the Rev. F. B. Mayer, representing the National Peace Council, a union of twenty-five peace societies of Great Britain and Ireland, and other bodies in sympathy with the idea of arbitration.

Mr. Mayer brought a memorial engrossed on parchment conveying the thanks of the peace organizations of the British empire.

HOT ON LORIMER'S TRAIL.

Senate Investigating Committee Will Call Yates, McCormick and Entire Illinois Legislature.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, June 17.—The Lorimer Investigating Committee of the Senate today practically decided to summon as witnesses in the inquiry the entire membership of the Illinois Legislature which elected Senator Lorimer.

Cyrus H. McCormick, president of the International Harvester Company, and former Gov. Richard Yates of Illinois will be heard by the committee Tuesday.

McCormick and Yates will be questioned as to their knowledge of the collection and disposition of the $100,000 fund alleged to have been used in procuring the election of Mr. Lorimer.

Mr. Yates also will be interrogated concerning his knowledge of the so-called "jackpot" fund in the Illinois Legislature.

The decision to summon as witnesses practically all the Illinois Legislature is accepted as proof of the committee's purpose to examine everyone having the slightest knowledge of the facts surrounding the election of Mr. Lorimer.

TO PUT SUGAR ON FREE LIST.

WARBURTON HAS BILL.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Representative Warburton of Indiana introduced in the House today a bill placing sugar on the free list and increasing the revenue on manufactured tobacco. The bill is in line with the arguments made by Mr. Warburton in his speech against the Underwood wool bill, in which he declared that revenue from tobacco could be largely increased. This bill proposes to tax snuffs 24 cents a pound, loose tobacco prepared for sale, 16 cents a pound, and a graduated increase over the present tariffs on cigars and cigarettes.

WASHINGTON BRIEFS.

Two New Dreadnaughts.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—The battleship Florida, now nearing completion at the New York navy yard, today was ordered placed in commission on September 15. Her sister ship, the Utah, is expected to be ready on August 1. These two dreadnoughts will be the greatest in the American navy and will be attached to the reorganized Atlantic fleet. Their displacement will be 23,000 tons and their speed twenty and three-quarter knots.

Released by Mexicans.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—William L. Dunne, a former San Antonio, Tex., newspaperman, who had been held prisoner at Monterey, Mex., was liberated by the Mexican Federal courts today, according to State Department advices. Dunne was charged with instigating a plot against the leadership of Francisco I. Madero, Jr.

Steel Inquiry Delayed.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Progress of the investigation of the United States Steel Corporation by the House Special Committee on Inquiry will be retarded for ten days or more by the absence of Representative Stanley, chairman of the committee, who has been called to his home in Kentucky. The next meeing of the committee will be held in Washington, early in July.

Present Tariff Framer Jumps Into Wool Fight.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Accusing the Democrats of having abandoned their free trade principles in the framing of the wool tariff revision bill and declaring they are as much one-man ruled as they ever charged the Republicans with having been, Representative Sereno Payne of New York, chairman of the committee which framed the Payne-Aldrich tariff, made the principal speech in the wool bill debate today.

With the intention of closing general debate on the bill, the House held a night session tonight and Representatives favoring and opposing the bill were given a chance to speak. Chairman Underwood hopes to reach a vote on the measure probably next Tuesday or Wednesday.

Mr. Payne, referring to the farmers' free list bill, said:

"No such crude measure before was brought into this house by any committee. There is not a man on either side who can tell within $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 what difference it would make in the revenues."

Representatives Foster of Illinois and Mays of Florida spoke in favor of the bill.

UNDERWOOD'S BLUNDER.

Mr. Payne declared that Mr. Underwood in his opening speech on the bill had made an egregious blunder, a mistake of $85,000,000 in his explanation of the treasury statement whereby he defended the partial duty kept on wool in the bill as due to the necessity of revenue.

"Do you ever remember," asked Mr. Mann, "when an opening speech on a tariff bill had not appeared in the Record within a few days after its delivery?"

Mr. Underwood's speech has not yet been printed.

In defense of Mr. Underwood, Mr. Harrison of New York said that the reason the speech had not been printed was because Mr. Underwood's duties were so heavy that he had not had time to go over it.

Speaker Clark took part in the debate.

"Did not the shoe manufacturers," he asked Mr. Payne, "promise us, when the tariff bill was in committee two years ago, that if we took the tariff off hides they could give us cheaper shoes? Yet I have seen no reduction in the price of shoes."

Mr. Clark referred to the United Shoe Machinery Company, which he said was, in his opinion, "as tight a trust as there was in the country."

ASKS OF PROSECUTION.

"Why has not the Attorney-General prosecuted this trust?" he asked. "Did you refer to him the testimony given before the committee about the trust?"

"No," said Mr. Payne. "I am not a prosecuting officer.

Mr. Payne admitted that, in his opinion, the shoe machinery manufacturing industry in this country is controlled by a trust.

In regard to the wool schedule of the Payne-Aldrich law, Mr. Payne said:

"I wanted to revise and equalize the wool schedule and equalize the duties. But I was not able to carry it through."

He made a defense, however, of the bill as a whole.

Mr. Payne declared that the Democrats had not put raw wool on the free list because "some gentlemen at home had said it would ruin them and their State if there was no duty on wool." As to one-man power, he said, "it makes no difference whether it is one man who enforces the rules in the Speaker's chair and who appears in the open, or whether he pulls the wires that control the caucus. You are about as free as the white slaves we hear so much about."

AT NIGHT SESSION.

At the night session, Representative Martin of Colorado, a Democratic member from a sheep-growing State, declared that he was being attacked by the Republican press in his district for yielding to the pledge of the Democratic caucus on the Underwood bill.

"The more I hear the stand-pat protectionist lamenting the betrayal of Democratic principles involved in this placing of a duty on raw wool," said Mr. Martin, "the more I think the proposition is not such a bad thing for the producers of raw wool."

Representative Dyer, a Missouri Republican, attacked the bill, declaring that it would work great harm to the sheep industry of his State.

Representative Cullop of Indiana, supporting the bill, assailed the Republican argument of protection for American workingmen.

"The great danger to American labor," he said, "is the importation of foreign laborers by our great captains of industry to take the places of American workmen at lower wages."

OFF ON BELATED HONEYMOON.

Former Wife of William Winter Jefferson, Divorced, Weds Capitalist of New Jersey Town.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Christie MacDonald, the musical comedy singer, sailed for Europe this morning on a deferred honeymoon with her husband, Henry L. Gillespie of West Orange. Miss MacDonald, who formerly was Mrs. William Winter Jefferson, became Mrs. Gillespie last fall.

Although there had been rumors around among her friends that she had married again, nothing definite became public until today, after she had sailed. Then her press agent found a letter from her, left for him, in which she remarked that she was on her honeymoon.

Henry L. Gillespie is the son of Thomas A. Gillespie of West Orange. The son is president of the Union Clay Products Company of New York and also has other business interetss.

Thomas A. Gillespie, the father, was at the pier to see his son and daughter-in-law off. Mr. Gillespie tonight said the couple married last fall, but he did not care to go into details as to when or where the ceremony was performed.

Miss MacDonald was married in 1901 to William Winter Jefferson, son of the late oseph Jefferson, at the Jefferson home at Buzzard Bay. She obtained divorce from Mr. Jefferson in April of last year.

Eminent Catholic Dignitary Declares Woman's Place in Home and Not at Ballot Box.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BALTIMORE (Md.) June 17.—Cardinal Gibbons scored woman suffrage in an address last night at the commencement exercises of St. Joseph's College. He said:

"I think the place for women is in the home. Woman should not want to vote, but if they took proper interest in affairs of their household and brothers they could easily have them cast their ballots in the right manner. In doing this women will be the champions of what is right."

Charles L. Hopper of Omaha was unanimously elected president of the Travelers' Protective Association at Philadelphia yesterday.

COOKE IS ACQUITTED.

Jury Finds Him Not Guilty of Embezzlement From Big Four Railroad in Ohio.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CINCINNATI, June 16.—"Not guilty" was the verdict returned here today by the jury trying the case of Edgar S. Cooke, who was charged with having embezzled $24,000 from the Big Four Railroad. It required a few minutes less than two hours for the twelve arbiters to reach this decision.

The trial was the last of three in connection with the $643,000 shortage of Charles L. Warriner, Cincinnati treasurer of the road, who is now serving a six-year sentence in the Ohio Penitentiary.

The second trial was that of Mrs. Jeannette Stewart Ford, "the woman in the case," and at this trial the jury disagreed. Mrs. Ford was charged with blackmail.

Four ballots were taken, the first resulting in nine for acquittal and three for conviction. In each of the subsequent ballots one juror deserted the ranks of those for conviction until the verdict was unanimous.

on the Mexican frontier was rather a failure. True, the troops were promptly dispatched to the place of rendezvous, but having arrived at their destination it developed that there was such a lack of organization that it required several months' time to make the one division of troops that were mobilized in Texas.

This would indicate that under our present system it is impossible to mobilize a single division of troops at war strength within a reasonable time. It clearly shows that something is radically wrong, and the sooner we find out what that something is the better for our country. We expend upward of $100,000,000 a year on our military establishment. It ought to be in a complete stage of preparedness for any possible emergency."

DELAYS NINE-HOUR LAW.

ST. LOUIS, June 17.—Because of the attitude of hundreds of working women who have sent petitions to him, the prosecuting attorney has agreed to hold up action on the new law requiring employers to hire women for only nine hours a day. He will not demand that the law be enforced until the end of the summer. The women say the new law will cut off their recreation on Saturdays.

THE GREATEST MUSICAL EVENT IN THE HISTORY OF THE WEST JUST CONSUMMATED

Barker Bros. Secure Largest Piano Order Ever Given on the Pacific Coast, From Von Stein Academy of Music, for Entire New Equipment of More Than Thirty Magnificent Grand and Upright Pianos of the Famous Baldwin Make

A MOST NOTEWORTHY TRIUMPH FOR THE BARKER BROS. PIANO DEPT.

Baldwin Pre-Eminence Established again and again in every case where highest possible musical excellence is the Standard Sought!

—The position of pre-eminence occupied by the Von Stein Academy of Music at once attaches a degree of importance to this extraordinary piano order that merits the attention of all who are interested in musical matters or in the piano question. The placing of this order by Mr. Heinrich Von Stein, the director and founder of the Von Stein Academy of Music, is but another recognition and indorsement of the award given to the Baldwin piano by the international jury of twenty of the world's greatest experts, who accorded to the Baldwin the "Grand Prix" over all other makes, both foreign and American.

—The selection of the Baldwin pianos by the Von Stein Academy was made only after the most thorough comparison and consideration, and was placed in accordance with the conclusion that the Baldwin acoustic properties and the enduring wearing qualities of the instruments, together with their wonderful tone, entitled them clearly and decisively to preference. The order was placed with a full understanding of the heavy use to which they would be subjected in academy work, and with full appreciation of the important part the pianos occupy in the fostering of the musical enthusiasm and the attainment of exceptional proficiency in the student.

A great special clearance of new and used pianos will begin at once in order to dispose of all the pianos taken in exchange and to make room on our floors for the arrival of incoming factory shipments.

—The Baldwin Piano stands first and foremost today among the world's finest makes. It is the choice of such great artists as de Pachmann, Pugno, Sembrich, and hosts of other. Los Angelenos will readily remember how many of the musical celebrities visiting the city have expressed their preference for, and have used, the Baldwin Pianos in their engagements here. The selection of the Baldwin Piano by the Los Angeles Examiner as its grand prize in connection with a life scholarship in the Von Stein Academy, is a recent recognition of the Baldwin's leadership. This great order now from the Von Stein Academy is still another testimonial to the Baldwin Piano's pre-eminence. The Baldwin Piano is not only the artist's choice, but the choice of all lovers of good music, as an instrument for home use. If you contemplate the purchase of a Piano, it will pay you to inspect the Baldwin.

—In connection with this great sale of Baldwin pianos which we have just made to the Von Stein Academy of Music for the equipment of their conservatory in this city, and their various branches in Los Angeles, Pasadena, Alhambra, and at other points, we have taken in exchange the instruments previously in use, embracing a number of makes whose names are familiar to the public. These instruments, it will be remembered, have mostly been in use but a few months. All of them will be thoroughly overhauled and placed in good condition and offered for quick sale at prices that will tempt any piano seeker who has a view to economy.

—The most stupendous value ever offered in the following makes of pianos in parlor grands, baby grands and uprights in a large variety of styles of cases—Decker & Son, Knabe, Mason & Hamlin, Everett, Conover, Melville Clark, Haddorf, Cable, Harvard.

—The largest part of these offerings have been in use less than eight months, and none of the pianos more than three years. We are going to positively make prices that make this the most stupendous price-cutting sale ever offered. Our Piano Dept. will in a very short time be installed in the elegant rooms being arranged for it on the first floor of our new annex, and we have a special shipment of several carloads of pianos coming to us direct from the Baldwin factories. We intend to sell all stock now on hand with a rush. If you are in the market for a piano this is your opportunity.

NEW ERA TO DAWN WITH CORONATION

Full Meaning of Great Event Impresses Subjects.

World-Wide Is Importance of the Coming Change.

Stupendous Happenings Are Ahead for England.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Neither King George nor Queen Mary gives any sign of minimished nerve force, despite the tremendous pressure ofwork incident to the coronation next week. When his medical advisers urged the King yesterday to spare himself a little, "because of the supreme desirability that Your Majesty be at your best next Thursday," he replied: "Look to yourselves, gentlemen. I shall be fit. All is going well and there is no tonic like success."

Dr. Jowett's remark to a New York reporter on the eve of his sailing, "George V is a King who is interested in all religions," is understood to have given a great satisfaction at Windsor Castle, where one of the most acceptable communications received is the coronation address of the Australian Catholics offering "loving homage and devoted loyalty." The latter lies beside a copy of the special coronation service adopted by the non-conformist churches of the United Kingdom.

On the other hand, the King is acclaimed in sporting papers as "A perfect sportsman, like Edward VII," and is congratulated on the fact that "beginning with the latest Derby the clergy have been seen on race courses in considerable numbers, whereas in the previous reign a clergyman at a race was as rare as a black swan."

QUEEN NO DRESS CENSOR.

That Queen Mary has no intention to be the victim of serious misrepresentation is evident from the sharp denial issued of the report that she had expressed a wish as to dresses to be worn by women at Ascot in the royal inclosure.

Her selection of the pink carnation, "Lady Hermione," for the coronation bouquet she will accept from the Gardeners' Company, has, of course, stimulated the demand for "pinks." Hundreds of thousands will be worn.

By no means all the favor of the crowds of all nations surging along the streets is given to the King and Queen. The Prince of Wales is a prime favorite with everybody.

It was while "Jack" Johnson was looking in a window at a photo of the heir to the throne, dressed in the robes of a Knight of the Garter, that the negro pugilist had his lively experience with a London gathering.

NEW PRINCE OF WALES.

Wherever the photo of the King and Queen are displayed these are accompanied by one of the Prince. He is becoming a manly lad, getting stouter as he grows older, and in this respect resembling his grandfather at the same age. His manners are cordial, and he bids fair to be the best-liked Wales of the last five. In temperament and mental make-up, it is said, there is much in common between him and the German Crown Prince, whose rule on the Spree may be coincident with his own on the Thames.

The youthful Duke of Westminster is another whose picture is quite generally displayed in connection with the coronation, in which he will be a by no means inconspicuous figure. Slight, boyish-looking, mild-mannered and happy-natured, he is a favorite with all classes of people.

For the investiture of the Prince at Carnivon Castle, following the coronation, the Welsh are making elaborate arrangements. A medal in gold and silver will be struck by the royal mint. David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, whose Welsh residence is at Criceleth, is deeply interested in having the investiture memorable in history.

BIG DISPLAY BY WELSH.

He announces that "our 2,000,000 people will give a celebration such as our beloved principality never has seen yet; not a festival for a party or a sect, but for the democracy with all classes represented."

Every Welsh national institution will have delegates at the July ceremony. The national Welsh choir will sing "The Men of Harlech," "God Bless the Prince of Wales," and the British national anthem. Mr. Lloyd George is Constable of Carnivon Castle. He has been conducting rehearsals in the courtyard.

England's crescendo of coronation rejoicing will reach next Thursday a climax never before touched in British annals. The act of crowning will be, thinks a prominent writer on world politics, not only the "most splendid incident in our whole imperial epic from the viewpoint of pageantry, but also invested with a moral grandeur unsurpassed, if equaled, in any other land in any age."

ALL CLASSES IMPRESSED.

The moral significance of the function of the fetes in celebration of it begins to impress all classes. In a way it adds an element of soberness to the universal jubilation.

John Bull is waking up to the fact that the reign of the new monarch is beginning formally, amid changes of the greatest importance to the democracy throughout the Kingdom and the Empire. The era of George V is likely to be richer in epoch-making events than was the Victorian.

Week-end reviews, commenting on the "startling swiftness of recent political metamorphosis," drew up lists of the "stupendous happenings just ahead or just behind."

They point out that the reign of George V opens amid the reconstruction of the system of taxation, with a consequent breaking-up of estates held intact for centuries, the "breaking of the sceptre of the House of Lords," the establishment of a regime of national insurance "at heaven only knows what ultimate cost," and the consummation of the passionate desire of Ireland, "now but a short distance in the future."

In the broader imperial field they see the new king's name associated with the first formal admission of representatives of the over-sea dominions into the secret chamber of the London foreign office "under an inviolable pledge of silence," the conclusion of a treaty of general arbitration with Washington—"an event almost as vital as a war between us and the States;" and Canada's unexpected assertion of "autonomous right" to make her own fiscal arrangements with Uncle Sam.

MRS. DREXEL'S HEART STONY.

Repulses All Efforts Put Forth by Friends Looking to Reconciliation With Husband.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Since Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel returned to London from New York, renewed efforts have been made to induce her to be reconciled to her husband.

To all of these overtures Mrs. Drexel remains deaf. Her heart, the informant says, has become like adamant and she even refuses to listen to the pleadings of her children, who remain friendly to both their parents.

The final word from her to her solicitor and to the counsel and friends representing her husband, is that she is determined to have the suit for divorce proceed as rapidly as possible.

Mr. Drexel's friends say they think he should have been given another chance. They say he was always devoted to his wife, and feels keenly the present situation.

Mr. Drexel has returned to Paris, and all hope of a reconciliation is now apparently abandoned.

STILL LOYAL TO ENGLAND.

Canadian Premier Tells British Statesmen Not to Worry Over Effects of Reciprocity Treaty.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

LONDON, June 17.—At a luncheon of the Constitutional Club, presided over by A. J. Balfour, today, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Premier of Canada, told the big gathering of British statesmen and over-sea premiers that the reciprocity agreement between the United States and Canada need cause no alarm to any one.

Canada, he said, wished to trade with the mother country in preference to other lands, but that did not mean that it should deal with her alone. Whatever privileges were granted to other countries would be given equally to England.

"In Canada," he added, "the policy of British preference has been hoisted to the top of the mast, and there it will stay, whatever Great Britain does or does not do."

CAMORRIST TRIAL DRAGS. VICTIM'S SERVANT ON STAND.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

VITERBO, June 11.—Today's session of the Camorra trial was occupied with the taking of testimony of unimportant witnesses. Among them was a servant of Gennaro Cuoccolio, the Camorrist for whose murder the thirty-six members of the society are being tried, who said that his employer wore eye glasses and also the ring which later was found, it is alleged, by carabineers in a mattress at the home of a woman friend of Guiseppe Salvi, another member of the Camorra.

OFFICIAL ASSASSINATED. BRITON DIES IN INDIA.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

TRICHINQPOLY (British India) June 17.—Robert William D. Ashe, British collector for the maritime district of Tintevelli, was assassinated today by a Brahmin attorney, who then committed suicide. With his wife, he was sitting in a car of a railway train at Maniyachi, when the Brahmin approached and, without a word, shot the collector dead. As he conducted the trial of Tuticorin rioters last year, his murder is attributed to revenge.

BIG SHIP HELD BY STRIKE. FOREIGNERS IMPORTED.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

LONDON, June 17.—The steamer Minnewaska of the Atlantic Transport line was unable to sail for New York today, the crew refusing to sign on the old terms and the owners declining to grant an increase. The shipowners at Liverpool are meeting the strike situation by importing foreign seamen, many of whom are taking the places formerly filled by Britishers. The men refused to join the trans-Atlantic liner sailing from Glasgow. They were replaced by outsiders. The mail steamer Britain, for Cape Town, which the strikers thought they had tied up at Southampton, got away this afternoon, picking up the crew in the Solent.

CHICAGO D.A.R. HURLS DOWN GAUNTLET TO ENEMIES.

Will Sue for Money Damages if Compelled to Resign from Organization—Opponents Receive Defi, Think Twice and Decide to Let Matters Rest as They Are.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Lewis K. Torbet, former Regent of the Chicago Chapter of the D. A. R., today sent a solid shot into the camp of her enemies by threatening legal retribution if they attempted to oust her from memship in the Daughters of the American Revolution. As a result, it was admitted today, the plan to follow up the letter demanding her resignation with proceedings to expel her fron the ranks of the order has been abandoned.

"The matter will go no further," said a leader of the opposition element to Mrs. Torbet. "The letter, sent through action taken by the Board of Managers, will stand, however, as a protest against the actions of Mrs. Torbet in connection with the national election.

"It is true that the members individually sought and obtained the best legal advice possible as to expelling Mrs. Torbet from membership.

"We have all been told, however, she would have ground for action if we did, and would in all probability sue every individual member who had any money that could be collected as damages, if we voted to expel her on accouut of conduct unbecoming a member."

From Mrs. Torbet's side came verification of this statment.

"Of course such action would furnish legal basis for damage suits which would certainly be instigated.

"The fact is that the letter sent to Mrs. Torbet demanding her resignation was not unanimous. It is a good thing they are waking up to the fact that they have gone far enough in the matter, and will be in danger of getting themselves in legal difficulties if they continue their hounding practices."

FORMAL LIBEL OF HORNET.

Filibustering Vessel of Note in Southern Waters Now in Hands of Federal Courts.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW ORLEANS, June 17.—Formal seizure of the gunboat Hornet for alleged violation of the neutrality laws was made here today on orders of the United States Circuit Court.

In the libel filed against the gunboat by the United States Dist.-Atty. Beattie, it is charged that the Hornet was fitted out in New Orleans on December 21, 1910, with a large supply of arms and ammunition, including many guns and cannons, and that it was used in a military expedition against the Honduran government.

FRANCE WOULD TEACH AMERICANS BEAUTIES OF LITERATURE AND ART.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] That literature and art are potent factors in the upbuilding of international trade and political relations is the opinion of French Deputies, Senators and men of leters who have just completed the organization of the Franco-American Institute.

Its object is to familiarize the entire population of the United States—from women's clubs to labor unions—with French culture and art, both plastic and literary, and also with French science. A central museum will be established in New York, with branches in Chicago and other cities.

The entire scheme is said to show a striking resemblance to the recent project of the National Business League of America to establish an international code court in Chicago for the purpose of building up foreign commerce, except that the French are putting forward their art products as the best national advertisement.

The Franco-American Institute is merely a portion of a great scheme, backed by the government, to spread French culture throughout the civilized world by means of the Alliances Francaizes and similar organizations.

"The Institute will be controlled by a central committee in Paris," said Deputy Paul Deschanel today.

SUFFRAGISTS PARADE.

G. W. Mitchell of Massachusetts, Gertrude Elliott, the American actress, and Mary Winter of Indianapolis, followed by five white garbed girls bearing bannerettes symbolic of the American States in which women have been enfranchised.

Among the musicians walked Ethel Smyth, Blanche Marie Hesie and Esther Palliser. A large contingent of noted writers was led by Elizabeth Robins, Flora Annie Steel, Beatrice Harraden, Sarah Grand and Israel Zangwill. The acresses included Lena Ashwell and Yvette Guilbert. Beside women doctors in academic robes marched Mrs. Bertha Ayrton, a well known scientist and the only woman member of the Institute of Electrical Engineers.

The procession embodied all grades, creeds and professions, from Lady Frances Balfour and Muriel, Countess De la Warr to sweated factory workers. Nurses, typists, teachers, sanitary inspectors, gardeners, mothers of families and domestic servants all played their part in the unforgettable drama. Annie Besant was there. Mrs. Bernard Shaw led the Fabian women, whose ranks comprised twenty-five societies mustered in full force.

The marchers were reviewed from a balcony in St. James' street by Mrs. Wostenholme Elmy, the oldest of the militant suffragists, who has devoted forty-five years to fighting for votes. The great day closed in a flood of suffragist eloquence in Albert Hall before 12,000 persons. There were overflow meetings in four other halls.

ENGLISHMEN STUNNED.

The demonstration is likely to have a stunning effect upon the old-fashioned Englishmen who, wide-eyed and open-mouthed, viewed the stupendous unfolding of woman's purpose and power. Year by year the revolt has been growing, but the typical Englishman was unimpressed. The hand-to-hand struggle between the women and the police left him much in the same mood as Louis XVI, when he laid the foll of the Bastile to a mere street brawl.

Today's great effort proved what it was intended to prove—a symbol and a testimony to the irrepressible spirit of revolt. British women have testified to their indomintable purpose to win equality with men in quite the most vital and significant affair in the long schedule of the coronation events.

DIVINE SARAH IS SATISFIED.

Closes Long Tour Bubbling With Happiness Over Favor Shown By American Public.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] When Sarah Bernhardt reaches New York tomorrow she will have completed a tour of 25,000 miles, visited 103 American cities, given 2 performances, won nearly a million dollars from theater-goers and lost fifteen pounds. Quite a little jaunt for a woman of 67. However, Sarah was feeling exceedingly chipper when seen at Weehawken in a private car that has been her home for the greater part of the gigantic trip. She is going to take off her things and rest for a while at the Marie Antoinette tomorrow. On Thursday she will sail

Oldest Broadway Jeweler Closes His Doors

Building Occupied by S. B. Bailey, at 353 South Broadway, to Be Torn Down and Another Skyscraper To Be Built There.

The trend of improvements in the building line, going on all over the city, has picked on a spot this time that has been the home of one of the best-reputed Broadway merchants for years upon years. Mr. S. B. Bailey, the first man to open a jewelry store on Broadway, sixteen years ago, and long before Broadway was what it is today, is practically forced out of a place of business through this move.

Mr. Bailey put it this way: "Talk about erecting a big building here has been going on for some time, but as nothing definite seemed to be behind it, I gave the rumor but little notice. The owners' statement that I must at once prepare to vacate these premises therefore came at me something like lightning out of the clear sky. Los Angeles is in a prosperous condition, and I have but recently finished making my stock rich, select and complete, as it has never been before. It's here, and I must do something with it. I have hunted up and down Broadway, but find no other suitable location."

No Other Location for Jewelry Store Available.

"There seems to be but one thing for me to do, and that is to turn my stock into cash. Having been the first to establish a jewelry business here, I hate to discontinue, but circumstances leave me no other choice. The time given me is short. I must have a big, quick sale, and that, of course, is going to mean a big loss in a money way. I have simply got to sell goods at prices where immediate selling will be not only possible, but assured. The public will rub their eyes in surprise at the small prices at which they can buy the finest grade of goods."

Being one of the best known merchants in his line, so long established here, there can be no question of Mr. Bailey's sale being immediately accepted as absolutely bona fide by the public, as they have long learned the truth of every claim made by this store.

To bring this Sale to a quick close this Auction has now been decided on.

This Engine Weighs More Than Thirty Tons, and the picture shows the task of taking it off a truck and installing it under the Hotel Alexandria.

HEAVY MACHINERY TO MAKE LIGHT FOR GROUP OF GREAT BUILDINGS.

YESTERDAY the last unit of the largest private electrical plant in Los Angeles was installed in the Hotel Alexandria.

The one piece of machinery weighs over 60,000 pounds, and required ten horses to haul it to the Fifth-street side of the Alexandria. The machinery is one of the three units which have been installed as the electrical power plant of the hotel, and will supply light and power to the present hotel, the $2,000,000 annex, the Security building and the new Chester building, in course of construction. The cost of the plant will total over $100,000.

It was necessary to cut a hole twenty-five feet square through the pavement and a part of the street on the Fifth-street side of the hotel in order to get the machinery in position.

The machinery, which embraces a new dynamo and engine, is the first of its kind to be installed on the Coast, and one of the only two in the United States.

The huge casting and engine towered twenty feet in the air, and came just under the trolley wires as the truck moved along the street.

DEMOCRATIC LEGISLATIVE PROGRAMME LACKS VOTES FOR SMOOTH RUNNING.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Delay in the smooth progress of the Democratic legislative programme and the vote on the wool tariff revision bill will be occasioned Monday because the Democrats of the House, for the first time since the beginning of the special session, today were unable to muster enough votes to support a motion to adjourn until Tuesday and avoid consideration of the committee discharge calendar.

Ever since the opening of the session the Democrats have successfully dodged a provision in this calendar, "the dollar-a-day" pension bill, but they must face the issue Monday.

The only way the Democrats can avoid a vote on the pension bill Monday is by adjournment immediately after the House convenes. The Democratic whips have sent out an appeal to the members who are out of town and by noon Monday Mr. Underwood hopes to have sufficient strength to enable him to run his steam roller over the Republican opposition.

DES MOINES WOMAN DIES ON EVE OF INHERITING MILLIONS OF RICE ESTATE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DES MOINES (Ia.) June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Marie E. Schuler, 66 years old, sister of and direct heir to the millions left by the millionaire recluse, William Marsh Rice of New York, died tonight at her humble home in Oak Park, a Des Moines suburb. Mrs. Schuler, who has supported herself during the last few years by washing the clothes of her more favored neighbors, died with a fortune just out of reach.

The eleven-year fight of Attorney Albert T. Patrick, now in Sing Sing prison under sentence of death, charged with murdering the millionaire, is drawing to a close. Mrs. Schuler had been notified, shortly before her death, that in any event she would share in the estate.

Death occurred in the little single room cottage in which Mrs. Schuler has made her home for many years. The surroundings were of abject poverty. The one room in which she lived with her children contained only the bare necessities in the way of furniture. Old as she was, Mrs. Schuler had been forced to work to the last.

The immense estate of her brother could not be divided until the case of Attorney Patrick was decided finally. Patrick claims he is legally dead and the Governor of New York has been called in to decide the case. Five times sentenced to the chair before commutation of sentence was made, Patrick declares that on the fifth date set for his electrocution, because of some one's neglect of duty, he remained alive on the next day.

Mrs. Schuler and Mr. Rice were members of a family of ten children reared in Crawford county, Pennsylvania. Immediately on attaining his majority William Rice went out into the world to seek his fortune. For years the result of his efforts were unknown to his relatives. Only after he had become many times a millionaire did he notify members of his family of his residence.

The contest by the Des Moines relative begun in 1901, soon after the murder of Rice, Mrs. Schuler, through New York attorneys in charge of the handling of the estate, had been notified she was legally entitled to the sister's portion.

distance and protested their innocence.

Policemen blocks away from the murder heard five shots. It is said Cunliffe was trying to arrest two men or had one in custody when the other turned on him and shot. The policeman fired three shots. The bullet that killed the policeman was discharged so close that powder burned his uniform. The bullet went through his breast close to the heart.

UNWRITTEN LAW IN IDAHO.

Husband Who Kills Man for Assaulting Wife Freed by Jury on Insanity Grounds.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOISE (Idaho) June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The plea of the unwritten law and the story of a wrecked home resulted in the return of a verdict of not guilty at Twin Falls following a sensational trial in in which O. J. Halberg, slayer of Andrew Barclay, was the defendant. The jury based its verdict on the grounds that Halberg was insane at the time the crime was committed.

The story told by Mrs. Halberg was most pathetic. She declared that Barclay paid attention to her while he was a boarder at her home. She asserted that he induced her to meet him in a down-town hotel, and when she refused to elope with him, he assaulted her. She kept her secret for several weeks, but finally told her husband, who, driven to desperation, hunted up Barclay and shot and killed him.

UNIONITE PICKETS BEAT YOUNG GIRLS.

Scenes of Violence Occur in Another Ohio Town.

Garment Workers' Trouble Is Spreading to Akron.

Workers Given Until Monday to Give Up Their Jobs.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

AKRON (O.) June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The union garment workers of Cleveland, who declared a strike against all the shops in that city recently, have extended their picket system to the Akron shops. Although there is no strike here, the first instance of open violence and law-defying disorder began on Friday night, when three women and one man, who came here from Cleveland to do picket duty at the Korach Shirt Factory (an open shop,) made running attacks on the women operators emerging from the factory. The police came to the rescue of the assailed girls and took four pickets—three women and one man—into custody.

A state of terror prevails among the young girls employed at the Korach factory. Several have been openly threatened with physical violence and bodily disfiguration if they persist in their determination to work. The pickets have given the girls until Monday to surrender and have threatened to see to it that they would not be able to work after this week if they do not join the union.

Miss Theresa Serber Malkeal, a socialist agitator of New York, has been making speeches here and the disorder and threatened violence are largely attributed to her influence.

SCHOOL BOARD IS ADVISED.

Postal Card Vote of Patrons Puts South Pasadena Body in Position to Make Changes.

SOUTH PASADENA, June 17.—The Board of School Trustees held a meeting recently at which the postal card vote was canvassed relative to the two propositions submitted on the matter of establishing kindergarten work in the schools of the city.

The proposition to take $8000 from the balance of $9000 remaining against the building fund, received 277 votes, and the proposition to levy a special tax for the kindergarten work, amounting to $8000, received twenty-one votes, making the total vote cast, 298.

The Board will proceed immediately to utilize this fund to establish kindergartens in the Marengo, El Centro and Lincoln Park schools. They will put up a permanent bungalow at the Marengo avenue school, and a temporary building at the El Centro school, if it can be done legally without interfering with the city's ordinance prescribing fire limits.

At the Lincoln Park school, they will complete the second floor, which will make plenty of room for kindergarten work on the first floor.

While Rev. Curtis Meserve was backing out of the Mission garage, on Mission street, about noon, a South Pasadena car ran into him. The fender of the car was completely demolished, while the automobile escaped with a few minor injuries, the step and horn being smashed, and the frame work of an extra wheel which was strapped on the car, broken.

A reception in honor of the heads of the musical department of the Methodist Church, was given last night by the members of the church. One hundred and forty people gathered to do honor to Miss Mabel Bishop, organist and chorister, Miss Esther Bedell, soloist; and to Edwin Cooper, whose leadership added so much to the evening song service. After a musical programme, Rev. John Oliver, pastor, presented Miss Bishop and Miss Bedell with purses of gold, and John H. Jacobs, presented Edwin Cooper, who has spent fourteen years in the church, with a set of seventeen books, from the church and congregation.

Fifty-Thousand-Dollar Issue Proposition at Glendora Falls to Receive Required Number of Votes.

GLENDORA, June 17.—The proposition for a $50,000 bond issue for a new grammar-school was defeated at a special election here today by a vote of seventy-eight to fifty-seven. Differences of opinion relative to the site are said to be the principal reason for this result. It is expected that a campaign for such an issue, with the site question better understood and more definite, will be started soon.

GIN MUD-PIE; ACID FOR DAD.

Little Girl Steals Papa's Booze; Substitutes Poison; He's Dying.

[Associated Press, Night Report.]

NEW YORK, June 17.—Eight-year-old Ethel Jackson wanted water a few days ago to make some mud pies, but, fearing to ask her mother for it, stole into her father's bedroom and took his bottle of gin from the bureau. When the the child's cooking was done, it occurred to her that her father might miss the liquid, so she filled the bottle with some colorless liquid which she found in the medicine closet. The substitute proved to be sulphuric acid. The father, Edward Jackson, is dying at the Lincoln hospital today from a draught of what he supposed to be gin.

Redondo Beach.

LAUGHTER RINGS LOUD ON SHORE.

EMPLOYEES ENTERTAINED BY LOS ANGELES COMPANY.

Nearly a Thousand Men, Women and Children Go to the Ocean by Special Cars and Enjoy a Round of Merrymaking—A Programme of Sports and Feast Among Features.

REDONDO BEACH, June 17.—From 10 o'clock this morning until late this evening the employees of the Los Angeles Investment Company, their wives and families, were practically in possession of the town. The plunge was theirs, the dancing pavilion, the picnic grounds and even the ocean if they wanted it.

Nearly 1000 men, women and children came on the special cars secured by the company for the occasion. Officers of the concern, the office force, carpenters, plumbers, draughtsmen, electricians and others employed by the company, with their families, mingled in the merrymaking.

Free transportation, 200 boxes of candy for the women, numerous cases of fruit, tickets for the plunge for the women and children, cigars for the men, and tickets for dancing were given to the employees by the company for the outing.

A programme of sports was presented this morning commencing with an exciting tug of war, between the mill men, captained by R. A. Birmingham, and the outside carpenters, captained by S. P. Jones. The outside men won in three minutes but the mill men say their end of the rope was rubber.

The winners in the sports were as follows: Tug of war, outside carpenters; 100-yard dash for men, first, E. A. Robinson, second, M. A. Musso; 50-yard dash for fat men, first, F. Therkorn, second, R. W. Fleck; 50-yard dash for ladies, first, Emma Allen, second, Bessie Murphy; sack race, first, Arthur Wright, second, Millard Wright; 50-yard dash for girls under 16, first, Doris Wedge, second, Jessie Flemming; 50-yard dash for boys under 16, first, Edwin Musso, second, Arthur Kirby; 100-yard dash for office force, first, Harry Hark, second, M. A. Musso; 50-yard dash for ladies of office force, first, Persis Bingham, second, Mrs. Ercell Hunter; three-legged race, W. W. Lord and C. Ludke; 50-yard dash for girls under 12, first, Helen Hunter, second, Lila Haslan; 50-yard dash for boys under 12, first, Earl Wise, second, Oliver Kilham; potato race for ladies, first, Irene Howell, second, Anna Buffron; pie eating contest, first, Arthur Kirby, second, Frank Dawson; 100-yard dash free for all, first, E. A. Robinson, second, J. Kirtz. Prizes were given to the winners of first and second places.

At noon the picnickers were busy for about an hour with the picnic dinner under the trees in the grove. A. B. Marshall, the head of the plumbers, informally welcomed the happy crowd, saying he expected the visitors to have a better time than they ever expected to have in the future.

In the afternoon many danced, others spent the time in the plunge. Previous to the dance S. W. Brigham and Gail Edmiston entertained the crowd in the pavilion with several vocal numbers.

The committee in charge of the picnic was composed of F. H. Covey, general superintendent; A. B. Marshall, W. D. Deeble, secretary, and Ernest Ingold, publicity man of the company. G. M. Derby, treasurer of the company, took an active part also in making the picnic a success and looked after things in general. President C. A. Elder could not be present, owing to a business trip to San Francisco.

Kenneth Hall and Harry Langpost, aged respectively 12 and 13 years, runaways from the McKinley Industrial School, were taken back to the school yesterday from here by the superintendent. The boys were found in a box car, sound asleep, by an officer and when questioned said that they had run away from the school on account of ill treatment from the overseer.

SOUTH PASADENA.

SOUTH PASADENA, June 17.—The paving of the main thoroughfares is at present the most talked of subject. As usual the west end is fully alive to the importance of immediately paving Pasadena avenue from the approach of the bridge across the Arroyo Seco, now in course of construction, to the junction of Mission street. Common with all large movements there was at first opposition based on differences of opinion, but several meetings held by the resident property holders and a final meeting held on Friday evening at the residence of Mr. Penfield, Mr. R. D. List presiding, have resulted in sweeping away all opposition. On invitation Trustees Wilson and Jacobs were present and much credit is due these gentlemen for overcoming all objections. It was the sense of the meeting that no time be lost in paving Pasadena avenue with asphalt macadam and that the burden of the cost be made as light as possible to the abutting property owners by forming an assessment district.

MADERO PLANS TO OUST CIENTIFICOS; CROOKEDNESS REPORTED IN RAILROAD.

Member of Present Cabinet Declares Minutes of Directors of Big Oil Company Show Illegal Agreement for Rebates—Governmental Fabric to Be Cleansed of Federal and Local Officials Not in Sympathy.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

MEXICO CITY, June 17.—With the idea of eradicating even the remotest Cientifico influence in the present governmental machinery or that over which Francisco I. Madero expects to preside after the coming general elections, a movement is on foot not only to oust "Cientificos" and their friends from Federal or local offices, but also to investigate the legality of certain foreign concessions with which some Cientificos are said to be partly identified.

According to a member of the present Cabinet, it is absolutely necessary to renovate the governmental fabric, cleansing it more particularly of the Cientificos than the "Porfiristas," so-called followers of Gen. Diaz.

How far the upheaval will extend has not been defined, but today the Maderos came into possession of certain information which may cause a change in the directorate of the National Railways of Mexico, the stock of which is controlled by the Federal government.

A photographic copy of minutes of a meeting of a well-known oil company has been obtained by the Maderos, indicating the apportionment of a number of "free shares" of the stock to directors of the National Railways. It is alleged that in this manner the oil company secured a monopoly of contracts for lubricating oil and Federal protection in the granting of rebates.

Incidentally, rumors were circulated, said on good authority to be well founded, that the oil company in question is endeavoring to sell out to another company believed to be less likely to be injured by the talked-of governmental investigation.

ENFEEBLED AND SICK DIAZ DEFENDS SELF.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CORUNNA (Spain) June 17.—Physically enfeebled and sick at heart, Gen. Porfirio Diaz, an exile from the republic of which he was chief builder, at last has yielded to an impulse to self defense. In a formal statement he justified his administration as President of Mexico and reproached his countrymen for what he describes the their ingratitude.

The expression, the first of a personal nature since he was forced from office, was made on board the steamer Ypiranga, during the brief stop of the vessel in this harbor last night. Diaz had received the Governor of Corunna and the commandant of the port, who, with their staffs, had boarded the vessel at the direction of the government to present the greetings of Spain and the Mexican Consul.

When he was approached by newspaper representatives, at first he asked to be excused, pleading indisposition and explaining that, though the troublesome tooth had been extracted he still suffered from an abscees on the lower jaw. However, atfer consultation with members of his party, the following statment was given to the Frabra Agencia, the official press association of Spain:

OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

"Gen. Diaz is saddened by the recent events in Mexico and the ingratitude of his countrymen.

"He voluntarily sacrificed his ambition in the hope of obtaining tranquility for the nation, foreseeing that if he continued to defend his cause, he might afford a pretext for intervention.

"The bitterness and deep disappointment which he felt was mitigated by the warmth of the manifestation of sympathy on his departure from Vera Cruz.

"Much has been said about a military dictatorship, but can one thus define a regime which rested on an army reduced to 14,000 men?

MISTOOK PEOPLE.

"Gen. Diaz, when he assumed power, had to deal with conditions requiring energy, but afterward the nation ripened and was more able to direct intself constitutionally. Gen. Diaz's later policies were interpreted by his adversaries as a sign of weakness.

"Gen. Diaz, confident of the good sense of the people, thought that the agitation would disappear, but the people, easily forgetting the merits of the Diaz administration, allowed themselves to be dragged into a revolutionary movement."

During the night the Ypiranga departed for Santander and Havre. According to the present plans, Diaz will land at Havre and go with his family to Switzerland.

THROUGH WITH MEXICO.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

PARIS, June 17.—A dispatch to the Temps from St. Sebastian says that Gen. Diaz has declared at Vigo that his resignation of the Presidency of Mexico was his final service to his fatherland, as he had been convinced by his friends that only through his withdrawal could peace be restored. Nevertheless he believed that he could have remained and won over the revolutionists. When he left Mexico the Treasury reserve totaled about $31,000,000, which he believed has been squandered by the revolutionists. In conclusion, Gen. Diaz insisted that the United States government was in no way responsible for his resignation.

Satisfied.

MEXICO IS PLEASED WITH CHAMIZAL BOUNDARY DECISION, GETTING BIG SLICE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

MEXICO CITY, June 17.—Mexico is pleased with the decision rendered by the international arbitration court sitting at El Paso in the so-called Chamizal boundary case, because, according to a telegram received here today, from Alberto M. Carreno, secretary to Senor Beltran y Puga, Mexico representative, this country is awarded practically four-fifths of the tract in dispute.

Senor Carreno's telegram reads as follows:

"The committee's decision undoubtedly is favor to Mexico since we get what we ought to have claimed since 1867, namely the territory which we lost as a consequence of the floods in 1864.

"The majority of the commission decided that the treaties of 1848 and 1853 do not lay down an invariable boundary line and that therefore it was necessary to replace the line as it ran when the first loss of Mexican territory took place, owing to the violent erosion of the Mexican bank of the Rio Grande."

Another telegram received by Acting Foreign Minister Saloda Alvarez from Vernando Beltran y Puga, the Mexican commissioner, says:

"The president commissioner (Judge Eugene La Fleur, of Montreal, Can.,) and the commissioner of Mexico declare that the eminent domain of that part of the Chamizal tract comprised between the line in the bed of the Rio Bravo del Norte (Rio Grande) drawn by Emery and Salazar in 1852, and the middle line of the river's course as it was in 1864, prior to the flood of that year, belongs to the United States. The eminent domain of the remainder of the tract belongs to Mexico."

OUTLAWS SHOOT DOWN TWO MEN IN MAKING ESCAPE FROM DEPUTY SHERIFF,

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BUTTE (Mont.) June 17.—The sheriff's office was advised tonight that Conductor William Kidd had died in a hospital at Pocatello tonight of a wound inflicted by one of the two outlaws in effecting escape today, from the custody of Deputy Sheriff Samuel Melton of Spencer, Idaho.

Deputy Melton, who also was wounded, probably will recover. Posses from Spencer, Dubois, Lima and Monida have the outlaws surrounded in Tooley's Swamp and a special train bearing the prison bloodhounds from the Montana Penitentiary is awaited.

STORY OF SHOOTING.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SALT LAKE CITY, June 17.—Deputy Sheriff Samuel Melton of Dubois, Idaho, and William Kidd of Pocatello, a train conductor, were shot and seriously wounded today, by two men on a southbound Oregon Short Line train, near the mouth of Beaver Canyon, Idaho.

Deputy Sheriff Melton boarded the train at Dubois and arrested two men on suspicion of having robbed a saloon at Monida, a town on the Montana-Idaho line. He conducted the prisoners into the smoking car and searched them, taking from one two pistols, which he placed on the car seat.

As the sheriff reached in his pocket for handcuffs, one of the men picked up a pistol and shot Melton three times through the upper part of his body. Conductor Kidd seized the man, who fired a bullet through the abdomen of the conductor. Both the wounded men fell to the floor of the car. The prisoners then held the passengers at bay and pulled the cord signaling the engineer to stop the train.

When the train stopped the two men alighted and escaped into the country. The alarm was immediately given and posses were sent out from the towns of Spencer and Dubois. The wounded men were taken to Pocatello for treatment, both in dying condition.

AUTOISTS KILLED BY TRAIN.

WESTBURY (N. J.) June 17.—When an automobile in which Wilfred Jay, editor of the magazine Whip and Spur, and Charles J. Ross, official photographer at the polo games at Meadowbrook, were hurrying to a polo game this afternoon was struck by a Long Island railroad train at a crossing near here, Jay was instantly killed while Ross received injuries that caused his death tonight. Charles J. Bannister, chauffeur of the car, jumped and escaped with a severe shaking up.

NEW PANAMA BONDS GO LIKE HOT CAKES.

Entire Issue Over-Subscribed at Least Thrice.

Small Investors Grasp Chance at Good Security.

Opening of Bids Shows Credit of America Solid.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Such estimates of the bids for the government's 3 per cent. $50,000,000 Panama loan as are available tonight indicate that the loan has been three times over-subscribed and that the average price of the new bonds will run a little over 102.50.

The bona fide bids received will total about $170,000,000. Of that amount $2,000,000 was subscribed at 3 per cent. or more, $32,000,000 at over 102.50; $81,000,000 at between 101.50 and 102.50 and $52,000,000 at 102 and under.

SUCCESSFUL BIDDERS.

The successful bidders and the amounts which they will receive are as follows:

Harvey Fisk & Sons of New York, $10,000,000; Hanover National Bank of New York, $4,600,000; American Exchange National Bank of New York, $3,500,000; William A. Reed & Company of New York, $1,000,000; Seaboard National Bank of New York, $600,000; National Park Bank of New York, $500,000; Folsom & Adams of New York, $400,000; First Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, $350,000; Hibernia Savings and Loan Company of San Francisco, $300,000; Seattle National Bank, Seattle, Wash., $200,000.

REST IN SMALL LOTS.

The majority of what remains available below these sums will go to small bidders scattered all over the country. If the price of the bonds averages 102.50, and treasury officials think it will, they will yield to the investor 2.90 per cent.

The National City Bank of New York, which bid for the whole issue at prices varying from 100.1005 to 102.50, will not get any of the new bonds. Neither will Kuhn, Loeb & Company, who bid for $10,000,000.

The prices bid for the new bonds are taken to indicate that the national credit of the United States is the best in the world. Securities of England, France and Germany are selling at a discount, and many financiers believed that the Panama loan would bring little above par.

Not since the Civil War has this government issued bonds which did not have an artificial value because of the national bank circulation privilege attached to them. The price of these new securities, available for investment only, are taken to reflect the credit of the nation.

Secretary MacVeagh and A. Piatt Andrew, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, who has had active charge of the issue, opened the first bids. Secretary MacVeagh expressed satisfaction at the showing.

NEW WAY TO STOP RUNAWAY.

College Professor Turns His Knowledge of Chemistry to Good Use in Quick Time.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

YONKERS (N. Y.) June 17.—Prof. Charles Edgar Beake of Syracuse University, turned his knowledge of chemistry to practical account in an unusual fashion here last night. He was walking on Jerome boulevard when he saw a runaway horse approaching. Two screaming children were in peril in the cart which the horse dragged along.

The professor happened to have in his pocket a package of an ammonia compound with which he had been experimenting. He threw a handful in the horse's eyes as it came opposite him and the blinded animal stopped as if shot.

Then, while a bystander held the horse he stepped to a hydrant and prepared a solution of another chemical. With this he washed the ammonia from the horse's eyes in time to save it's sight.

George Hobard Loses at Poker After Ignoring Warning That His Opponents Were Professionals.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Dr. Carl Anderson of Jersey City tells on his arrival on the Lusitania of a card game in which supposed professionals made a rich haul. He said that on last Monday night he, with his friends, George Hobard, of Reno, and H. Warwick of England, played poker with two strangers upon invitation of one of the two. Next morning a fellow passenger told me he had seen the strangers playing peculiar games on another ship, so I warned Hobard and Warwick, but they were willing to take a chance and played again that night. The sharps cleaned up $2500.

WOMEN FIGHTING OVER SUFFRAGE.

WISCONSIN BATTLE GROUND FOR THE RIVAL CLUBS.

Coming Campaign to Win Voters to Cause of "Equal Rights" Promises to Eclipse Famous Stephenson Primary Election—Two Organizations Primed for War.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MADISON (Wis.) June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Now that the Governor has signed the woman suffrage bill, which will unquestionably be approved by the voters when submitted to them at the next election, the suffragette hosts are farther divided than ever. Wisconsin is in for a hot fight, hotter than even the Stephenson primary-election campaign of 1908, which still continues redolent, stirred up by those who have pinned their political ambitions to Senator La Follette, and who best flourish by diverting public attention from themselves.

The Senior Woman's Suffrage Association, which has been in existence for half a century, has thrown down the gauntlet. Mary Swain Wagner of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., to whom Wisconsin is primarily indebted for the suffrage legislation, once in a public address bitterly attacked this organization. She then organized the Political Equality League with Senator James's daughter as acting secretary, and it is these two organizations, principally, that are now making the fur fly.

Miss Swain's organization has never wanted for money. She is a thorough organizer, a woman of acknowledged executive ability. When she called for $10,000, which she said would be the required amount to put the bill over, the money was forthcoming.

But when the bill had been passed, she retired to her estate, which adjoins Vassar College.

Van Riper was knocked down by an electric shock last Tuesday when he touched a brass water faucet and has been in a hospital ever since. He claims that the faucet was connected with a wire and that Finnegan, with whom he had quarreled previously, turned on the current, when he started to wash his hands at the faucet.

CLAREMONT SCHOOL EXERCISES.

Peculiar Point Raised By Speaker Was that One-Tenth of Town's Population Was In School.

CLAREMONT, June 17.—The commencement exercises of the first class to graduate from the Claremont High School took place at the Congregational Church last evening.

A splendid programme was given by the graduates. Orations were given by Miss Helen De Camp, C. William Johnson and J. Brooks Blaisdell. At the close of the exercises, E. H. Sanford,, president of the Board of Trustees, presented the diplomas. He stated that one-tenth of the population of Claremont was registered in the High School, 110. At this rate, Los Angeles would have 32,000 students in her High School.

The graduates were as follows: J. Brooks Blaisdell, Roberta K. Borden, Helen B. De Camp, Irene T. De Camp, Ruth Eakin, Lloyd D. Elliott, Charles H. Healy, Mark B. Hickcox, C. Negro Steals Watering Trough; Menaces Owner; Hanged by Mob.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW ORLEANS, June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Will Bradford, a negro, was taken from deputies by an armed mob and hanged near Hickory, Miss., tonight. Bradford had stolen a watering trough owned by John May. The trough was worth not more than $5. When May and his son tried to recover it, the negro showed fight. May and his son took his revolver away, but he produced another from inside his shirt and escaped. He sent word he would kill whoever came after him. C. G. Weatherford and R. A. Armstrong were sworn in as deputies and found the negro asleep, a rifle by his side. On their way back they met the mob.

THE POLITICAL WATCHTOWER.

Sixty Democrats held a bear garden at Blanchard Hall last night in an effort to organize a City Committee and prepare for the municipal campaign. The meeting was held in order to give freedom to the debate, as Joe Simons was announced as being ready to "tear loose."

At a late hour, after a speech from Adam Dixon Warner had been evaded, the committee decided to authorize its chairman to appoint a committee of eleven members to consider whether it is advisable for the Democrats to back a candidate or to indorse one of two already announced—Alexander or Mushet. Many administration Democrats attended the meeting believing that it was the purpose to indorse Mushet, but when this was not proposed, there was no open opposition to the committee, which was moved by Joseph H. Call.

The committee also authorized, on motion of James Hanley, a Committee of Eleven to start a movement for a freeholders' charter convention. Hanley said imported experts are not needed—which was a crack at Lissner's $5000 herd, recently engaged in New York.

The purpose of the meeting was submerged under a flood of other things, however, and Lissner and the Board of Public Utilities were grilled for two hours.

W. F. Moore (anciently known as "Windy") even went so far as to move that the Mayor and the Council remove the Lissner board, but a point of order that this was outside the scope of the call was sustained, though everybody agreed that it ought to be done.

"Bobby" Loucks declared that the Mayor is culpable because he hasn't the backbone to remove the Lissner "oligarchy." Loucks called the Googoos "novices" (witness the Mayor) and declared the charter amendments had permitted Wall street to grab the control of public utilities in Los Angeles.

Joe Call complained of the high taxes of the Alexander-Lissner administration and its failure to make progress either in harbor improvement or a municipal railroad, and joined in condemning the Lissner rate-fixing department and its imported experts.

There was so much enthusiasm that Chairman Hill appointed everybody present a member of his City Central Committee and invited each to name two more members. "We will have a committee of 300 within two weeks," said he.

T. L. Winder, another wheel horse, made a "put your shoulder to the wheel" speech and urged that the Democrats put a new crowd in the City Hall. He, too, agreed that the Lissner board ought to be removed and that the Democrats ought to indorse and vote for Mushet.

Will D. Gould lifted his voice for Uncle Aleck. He reminded the committee that it must have something better to offer if it gets in the game with candidates. He also reminded the committee that it must be "something better than the last Democrat, who was kicked out of office." This hit at the Harper regime brought some groans.

Milton K. Young, "always a regular," re-announced his regularity and took a few flings at Alexander and the Lissner board.

Richmond $30,000 Plant had made four attempts to speak and when Dr. Hill ignored him for the fifth time, "Windy" Moore made such a fuss that Plant was promised next chance. When it came, Plant defended the administration and startled everybody by saying he had been put out of the Council because it was known he wouldn't favor increased telephone rates. This is a new version of the Plant episode.

The event of the evening was the speech of "Joe" Simons, who committed crimes against the English language in his denunciation of the Lissner board and the Mayor. He declared the Mayor could end the Lissner influence in fifteen minutes if he would by removing the board.

"It's no use to blow smoke and run into it," said Joe, in tones that cracked the plaster. "This is the worst administration I have known in twenty years."

Prof. T. H. Kirk, who was named a committeeman though he lives in South Pasadena, opposed any party alignment at all in municipal politics and incidentally gave Simons and Loucks a dressing.

During all this discussion there were the usual interruptions and altercations by real old-fashioned Democrats, though there was not a breach of the peace. The aggressiveness of all indicates that Dr. Hill's committee will be interesting if not effective during the coming campaign, at least.

A new political organization, which declares that its object will be the opposition of Lissnerism, sprang into being Friday night. It is the Cherokee Club, non-partisan, and was formed at a banquet held at the Hollenbeck Hotel. Twenty-eight persons were present.

The organizers confided themselves last night to launching their ship and the meeting was a private one. But after adjournment the announcement was made that another meeting will take place, probably next Friday night, at the Hollenbeck Hotel, when some things will be said. This is to be an open affair.

The officers of the club are: Scott G. Turner, president; M. L. Orcutt, first vice-president; R. P. Curts, second vice-president; J. M. Lampert, recording secretary.

It was hinted last night that there may be some candidates mentioned later in the game.

Councilman Miles Gregory is to reach home this morning from a month's absence in the East. Before he left and since, too, there has been much interest in his probable candidacy for Mayor. An announcement from him on the subject will relieve three persons much—Alexander and Mushet and Harriman of San Gabriel. Gregory has a large following that will be just as anxious, no doubt to hear his final judgment in the municipal race. His entrance will mean inroads on both the vote of Alexander and Mushet, but probably heavier on the former, especially if Lissner is to give comfort to Gregory, as is thought probable.

Mushet clubs, large and small, are being started in many precincts and it is expected that early in July Mushet headquarters, under the management of a committee of his supporters, will be opened and the perfecting of primary election organization pushed. Evidences point to the fact that Mushet is in the race in dead earnest and that he will be better provided with generals in the field than he was two years ago, when he made his first race for Mayor. There is a particularly strong support for him in Wilmington and San Pedro, where there is loud protest against the Alexander way of doing things.

Job Harriman tells me that he intends to register soon and thus become a valid resident of Los Angeles. He says he has been living in the city several months, but saw no necessity for hurrying up his registration. Of course if Job has lived here several months he ought to be as eligible to office as any one else who has lived here thirty years or more.

Lissner is in a new feud. Not satisfied with picking a fight with the Good Government organization, because it indorsed Uncle Aleck months ago, he has sought to break up the League of Justice again. Lissner always opposed City Clerk Handley when he was secretary of that organization. Now he is "agin" Alan I. Warren, Handley's successor. But he has struck different metal, for Warren is making it a business to camp on Lissner's trail and fight at the drop of the gauntlet. Warren is now fighting on the rates and on the public utility vagaries of the little boss.

The Good Government organization's attempt to discipline all city employees through the trial of E. W. Hevle, charged with pernicious political activity, has proved a boomerang. The organization got a judgment from the commission, punishing Hevle, but it has been nullified by the decision of City Attorney Shenk that the new charter has taken the power to dismiss from the commission. But George Baker Anderson need not be discouraged. This opens the doors wider to the G.G.O. political machine, which Anderson and S. C. Graham are running, for they may now deal with immunity with all the department heads without fear of any higher authority.

GIRLS PLAY IN ROLES OF MEN.

GRASSY IS SETTING SCHOOL DRAMA HAS.

Maids of the Senior Class Entertain on the Lawn in Rear of Establishment—Piece Written by Vice-Principal of the Institution Especially for the Occasion.

As one of their commencement events, the members of the senior class of the Girls' Collegiate School, West Adams and Hoover streets, last night presented a play on the lawn in the rear garden. The audience was seated in camp chairs underneath hundreds of swaying Japanese lanterns, while the porch of the Casa de Rosas, one of the school buildings, served for a stage.

There was an attendance exceeding 600 persons and the young ladies were given round after round of applause for their acting and were showered with bouquets of flowers.

The piece presented, which was entitled, "The Distinguished Guest," was written especially for the actresses by Miss Grace Atherton Dennen, the vice-principal. The girls played all of the masculine roles as well as the feminine, and there was a part of every member of the class.

The setting of the play is a young ladies' college and the story revolves around an attempt on the part of some of the students to secure secret information and put it in the hands of two reporters, that it may be printed and they may boast of the achievement to "John Quincy Bowers," a rich and eccentric old man who is a visitor and who was about to make the school a donation, but suddenly changes his mind, saying that the girls could do nothing but wear pretty clothes and eat candy. The news which they seek, and which he is eagerly awaiting, is some word bearing on the recent Peary polar expedition.

Lieut. Sefton, a popular young officer who had some part in the expedition, is tricked into "letting the cat out of the bag." He accuses others of betraying a trust and general complications result.

The leading parts, those of Adele Gray, th little gray squirrel, and Lieut. Sefton, were played by Miss Storey and Miss Esther Love, respectively. Miss Mabel Brisley impersonated the eccentric benefactor, which was a humorous role, as was that of the "squirrel" aunt, Miss Lavina Gray, carried out by Miss Catherine Smith. The acting of all the young ladies showed careful preparation. They are the Misses Esther Love, Harriet Gould, Elizabeth Currier, Doris Hudson, Margaret Smith, Margaret McKay, Mabel Brisley, Bessie Storey, Catherine Smith, Gladys Conger, Marian Haley, Henrietta Hunt, Martha Hunt, Marie Nichols Doris, Hutchins, Viola Hamilton, Gladys Jones, Ramona Richards, Llewellyn Jones, Alice Dodge, Martha Beman, Audrey Vaughn, Marie Langlow, Margaret Martin, Ethelyn Johnson, Elsie Hall, Ruth Buford, Ethel Vanderberg, Elsie Baruch, Marguerite McLane and Dorothy Kate Johnston.

The graduating exercises will be held tomorrow night at the Ebel Clubhouse.

FEDERALS CAPTURE REAL REDS' NEST.

Insurrectos, Hemmed in on All Sides, Surrender.

For Six Hundred Dollars, Desert Socialist Cause.

Commonwealth Below Border Is a Lost Hope.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CALEXICO, June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Sixty Mexicali insurrectos, all that remained of a Magonista warrior band numbering 600 two months ago, surrended this town today to Federal forces under command of Rodolfo Gallego. When Mexicali was first taken by the socialistic insurrectos, operating under instructions from the Magon Junta at Los Angeles, Gallego sympathized with their cause thinking them to be sincere, not socialists and anarchists. But when he learned their true type, Gallego appealed to A. F. Andrade, general manager of the Lower California Railroad, as an old friend, to help exterminate the reds. Andrade responded to the appeal personally and assisted Gallego by furnishing funds to secure arms and provisions to use in driving them out.

Gallego recruited a force of seventy-five picked men, with the aid furnished by Andrade and Aurelio Sandoval, who secured the cooperation of the Mexican government. Gallego then proceeded to surround the town. The insurrectos, finding themselves menaced on all sides by Gallego's forces and their supplies cut off, decided to evacuate Mexicali, surrendering all their arms and ammunition to Gallego, who is now acting as military commander of the town, keeping order and protecting lives and property until such time as the government sends its forces to take charge. Gallego has also closed all saloons.

The insurrectos laid down their arms for the insignificant consideration of $600 and marched over the border into Calexico. With their leader, Flores Magon, in jail in Los Angeles, the so-called "Liberales," who hoped to establish a socialistic commonwealth in Lower California, have lost heart.

Telephone messages were sent to the authorities of El Centro and other towns in Imperial county to see that the wandering band does not stop.

Steps have already been taken to repair the damage wrought by the "Liberales" since they took Mexicali last January. Workmen were sent out to reconstruct the burned bridge of the Inter-California Railroad; so that a large crop of sugar beets may be moved to refineries. Telegraph lines, cut by Stanley Williams, who was killed in the battle of Mexicali, are being restrung.

TAKES POISON IN FIELD.

Lifeless Body of Man, Who Escaped From Sanatorium at Altadena is Found South of Boyle Heights.

Arthur Peterson, 34 years of age, was found lifeless at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon under some pepper trees in a hay field near Soto street, between Hollenbeck avenue and Ninth street. He had killed himself with poison and his preparations for death had been so thorough that it was not until late last night that his body was identified.

Peterson, was a brother of Fred H. Peterson, employed by J. B. Rowe, a jeweler at No. 215 North Spring street. For the last two years, the young man had been an inmate of a sanatorium at Altadena, suffering from some mental disorder. He escaped from the institution yesterday and made his way to the lonely hay field, where he was found dead later in the day.

Before taking the fatal draught, Peterson cut from his clothes everything by which he might have been identified, overlooking only the laundry mark on his handerchief. He had written a long letter, but before dying he tore this into hundreds of pieces which he scattered to the winds. Patrolman Phillips of the East Side Station pieced enough of the fragments togethre to make out that the letter was a rambling message in which ehe writer bade farewell to some on he called "darling." The body was removed to the morgue of Pierce Bros.

HURTS WOMAN, RUNS AWAY.

Mrs. Martha Hopkins of No. 808 West Eleventh street, aged 65, while stepping off a University car in front of No. 1728 West Eleventh street, last evening, was knocked down by a motorcycle and severely injured. She was taken to the Receiving Hospital, where it was found that she had sustained concussion of the brain, beside severe contusions and abrasions at the back of the head. The motorcyclist who ran her down escaped after the accident and the police were unable, last night, to obtain either his name or number.

POMONA NOTES.

POMONA, June 17.—As a result of the fire which destroyed the Pomona Tavern, the City Council is contemplating the purchase of 1000 feet of additional fire hose, which will be kept in reserve for emergencies like Wednesday's fire, when there was not as sufficient an amount of hose to fight the fire as was necessary.

The Council will also order gate valves on all the outlets of the new fire hydrants and with the new hose and these secondary valves on hydrants the city will be well equipped for fire fighting. The high pressure water system works entirely satisfactorily.

DOCTOR REFUSED TO SIGN.

Young Santa Barbara Man Who Died of Tuberculosis Refused Burial Until After Autopsy.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA BARBARA, June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The burial of Alfred Moore, son of Mrs. Gustaf Pilling of this city, was delayed today because the death certificate presented by Dr. R. F. Winchester did not state the cause of death. Moore, who was 26 years of age, died Thursday after an illness of several months during which time he was not attended by a physician, his mother being a follower of Christian Science and it is said would not call in a doctor.

When the young man passed away all arrangements were made for the funeral, the hour being set and the minister engaged, but this morning when an application was made for a burial permit the health authorities would not grant it, the death certificate stating "I am unable to determine the cause of death without an examination of the body."

Coroner Ruiz decided to let the funeral services proceed but ordered that the bady be taken to an undertaker's for autopsy. This was held late today and the verdict was that the young man died from tuberculosis. The body was then taken to the cemetery for burial.

LIEUTENANT RESIGNS.

As a result of continuous strife in the ranks of the sixth division of the Naval Militia, Lieut. W. C. Day has tendered his resignation to the Adjutant-General. His action followed a visit of Lieut. A. H. Woodbine, U. S. S. Marblehead, to this city to determine the cause reported unsettled conditions in the division.

Since the departure of Lieut. Woodment and now Lieut. Day says he will mnts and now Lieut. Day says h will ask to have his resignation withdrawn as he does not want to quit the service under fire. It is said other sensational steps are to be taken, one of which will be the court-martial of Ensign Gray on a charge of refusing to obey an order promulgated by Lieut. Day, his superior officer.

CASA VERDUGO.

CASA VERDUGO, June 17.—The annual banquet of the alumni of the School of Music, U.S.C., was held at Pepper Tree Inn, Thursday, June 15, at 2 o'clock, the guests of honor being the graduates of 1911 and the faculty. Upon assembling they repaired to the roof garden, where routine business was transacted, after which adjournment was ordered to the pretty dining-room, where a delicious repast was served. Two handsomely spread tables extending the length of the room were decorated with asparagus plumosus and pansies, and a boutonniere of the same lovely flowers was laid at each plate. The room was a bower of asparagus plumosus and Shasta daisies. After doing justice to the appetizing menu and enjoying the merry conversation and bright speeches, the party ended.

A. Hough and wife of Denver, Colo., have moved into the pretty bungalow at No. 7 Melrose avenue and will make Casa Verdugo their home.

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

Pasadena.

LOVING BONDS TIE TOWNS TOGETHER.

Many Visitors Entertained at Santa Monica.

Auto Trip and Pleasures of the Sea Enjoyed.

Old Oak, Landmark of Early Days, Is to Go.

[Office of The Times, 26 S. Raymond Avenue.]

PASADENA, June 18.—The bond of brotherly love between Pasadena and Santa Monica has now blossomed into full boom and the two high-class residential suburbs are tied together in an embrace which promises to be of mutual benefit to both communities. Some time ago the bud of affection was started and, from time to time, it has been expanding. Yesterday was the moment for the blossoming.

The occasion was the visit of a special trainload of Pasadena boosters who went to Santa Monica to assist in the festivities attendant on the opening of the summer season at the beach and particularly in the celebration of the opening of the big Fraser Pier.

The Pasadenans, when they arrived at the beach at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, were met at the Pacific Electric station by a half hundred automobiles and were taken for a ride through the residential section of Santa Monica, including the Palisades, Santa Monica Canyon and Brentwood Park, and shown the proposed boulevard which is soon to connect Santa Monica and Pasadena. The Pasadenans were shown a coming swell residential section which seems likely to rival the beautiful Orange Grove avenue, famed as millionaire row.

Following the ride the visitors were given free tickets to everything on the pike and anywhere else where there were amusements, including a ride on the big roller coaster, a dip in the surf, dancing in the new pavilion and other amusements intended to be especially attractive to Pasadenans. In conclusion it might be said that the attractions were sufficiently attractive to cause the visitors to return to their homes with loud words of praise for Santa Monica.

GOOD RACING.

The regular Saturday-afternoon driving matinee of the Pasadena Driving Club was given yesterday afternoon at Tournament Park before a good-sized crowd of horsemen. I. C. Mosher's bay gelding, "Steve Bailey," won the 2:15 trot in two straight heats, and Mosher was happy.

Two weeks ago he lost to Durfee's "Don Pronto," which was not entered in yesterday's events. Mosher's "Fostena," a pretty brown filly, also won the three-minute trot in two straight heats.

No less proud was Charley Winters of Alhambra, whose brown gelding, "Alarich," won the 2:40 trot. "Alarich," a beautiful horse, was entered in a race with seven other horses. He gives promise of being a coming trotter of no mean ability. One of the happiest horsemen in Southern California last night was Louis N. Merrit, whose "Dick" finally won a race. "Dick" is a good, steady trotter and has held his own in all of the matinees this season, but never before has he been able to win a race. He was entered yesterday in a special trot against "Debutant," Sam Watkins's brown mare, and won the second and third heats.

The results of the races were: Race No. 1, three-minute trot, best two in three:

Fostena, br.f. (Mosher)	1	1
Bobby Boy, b.g. (Moorehead)	2	2
Bonnie (b.m. (Dubbs)	3	3
Alhambra, br.s (Winters)	4	4
Time 2:39, 2:29.
The 2:40 trot, best two in three:
Alarich, b.g. (Winter)	1	3	2	1
Jack, bk.g. (Spalding)	3	2	1	2
Dena C., bskn.m. (Cuthbert)	2	4	3	3
Time 2:33, 2:33½, 2:35, 2:33.
The 2:30 trot, best two in three:
Santa Paula Belle, b.m. (Berry)	1	1
St. Patrick, br.s. (Schneider)	3	2
Happy Clay, b.g. (Nesmith)	2	3
Time 2:31, 2:37½.
The 2:15 pace, best two in three:
Steve Bailey, s.g. (Mosher)	1	1
Isabella, s.m. (Wilson)	2	2
Dolly Zombro, b.m. (Whitney)	3	3
Time 2:15, 2:18.
Special trot, best two in three:
Dick, b.g. (Merritt)	2	1	1
Debutant, b.m. (Watkins)	1	2	2
Time 2:23¾, 2:29, 2:22.

The next driving matinee will be held on the afternoon of the 30th inst., when Pasadena will entertain the doctors who will be in Los Angeles holding the annual convention of the American Medical Association. There will also be a Roman chariot race which will be run for a prize of $1000.

WILLETT RESIGNS.

Charles J. Willett, who has been president of the Pasadena Hospital Association the last seven years, yesterday afternoon handed his resignation to the directors, giving as a reason that he is contemplating an extended vacation. Dr. Stehman and Mrs. A. M. Merwin have been appointed as a committee to select a successor for Mr. Willett. The friends of H. H. Klamroth have presented his name for that position more as an honor than anything else. Klamroth has been secretary of the association since its beginning.

OLD LANDMARK TO GO.

The old oak tree which now stands at the intersection of South Orange Grove avenue and West California street, an old landmark known to almost every one who has ever visited Pasadena, is scheduled to be numbered among the by-gones. The old tree was at the height of its beauty and sturdiness when the first settlers visited the ground on which Pasadena is now located. It is recorded that the first white men to visit the mesa, [illegible] ly the swellest of the swell sections of this city of millionaires, camped under the "old oak tree." The fir[illegible] schoolhouse was built beneath [illegible] shade and likewise the first church [illegible] Pasadena was organized under [illegible] "old oak tree." In [illegible] history of early California the tr[illegible] a prominent part and is ment[illegible] a number of times. A cou[illegible]s ago the tree was noticed to show signs of decay. It is located directly in the middle of the street intersection and because of the hard pavement which sheds the water away from the tree the roots of the sturdy oak received no moisture, consequently, although existing in Pasadena, it is evidently dying from want of a drink of water. A year ago famous tree doctors tried to safe the live of the old oak. They worked on it for a couple of months. They dug out all the decayed parts and filled the holes with cement, but the old tree continued to gradually die. It is now announced that it will be dug up bodily to make way for the extensive improvements under way on South Orange Grove avenue.

PIONEERS MEET.

The annual meeting of the Pasadena Pioneers' Association was held yesterday afternoon, at the beautiful home of J. A. Blumve in South Pasadena. The meeting was a sad one, owing to the absence of Mrs. Arturo Bandini and William T. Clapp, both of whom died within the past two weeks. Both Mr. Clapp and Mrs. Bandini were charter members of the association and attended every meeting in their life times. Appropriate addresses were made yesterday by J. W. Wood, Charles W. Bell and Mr. Townsend. Following an out-of-doors luncheon or picnic the afternoon was spent telling stories of old times.

RELIGIOUS SERVICES.

A proposition is on foot to change the name of the First Universalist Church to the Church of the Golden Rule. The matter will come before the members of the congregation soon. The reason given for the change is that all who may want to join the church or work with it will then feel that they are not bound by the formality of the Universalist Church.

The annual children's day exercises of the First Congregational Church will be held this morning.

At the Pasadena Presbyterian Church tonight there will be a report of the work done at the recent State convention of the Christian Endeavor at Santa Ana. At the morning services the pastor, Rev. Robert Freeman, will speak on "St. Augustine's Text."

At the First Universalist Church this afternoon, Benjamin Fay Mills will lecture, on "Walt Whitman."

John W. Pepper, a merchant of Memphis, will delived an address before the men's meeting of the Y.M.C.A. in Library Park this afternoon.

Herbert C. Emery, ticket agent of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, this city, yesterday, stole a march on his friends by going to San Diego and marrying Miss Louise Romer. The bride is a native of San Diego and has all her days resided there with her parents. Her brother has just recently been ordained a Catholic priest in St. Louis and the wedding ceremony was to have been detained until he had time to get to San Diego, but Emery went to San Diego yesterday morning and it is supposed that to wait a month seemed like a life time, so the wedding ceremony was performed forthwith.

Whittier.

PIONEER DROPS DEAD IN LOFT.

HEART DISEASE CAUSES DEATH OF RICH MAN.

Victim of Attack Came to Whittier Twenty-five Years Ago and Made a Fortune in the Orange and Lemon Business—Charity Workers Form Organization.

WHITTIER, June 17.—Tailor W. Mendenhall, a wealthy rancher and pioneer of this place, dropped dead in the loft of his barn at his home on South Painter avenue, this afternoon, while overseeing the storing of some hay.

Mr. Mendenhall was in the loft giving instructions as to the storing of some hay, when he became faint, complaining of the closeness of the air. He started to sit down on a ball of hay to rest and fell forward on the floor dead. Death was due to heart failure.

Mr. Mendenhall was a pioneer of Whittier, coming here with the Quakers in 1887, when the town was nothing but a barley field. He entered into farming and amassed a small fortune in the orange and lemon business.

The deceased was well-known throughout Southern California. He leaves a widow and four children: Mrs. S. W. Barton, Samuel P. Mendenhall, Oscar T. Mendenhall and Mrs. John T. Kirkwood, all of Whittier.

CHARITY WORKERS.

A number of philanthropic citizens met at the public library this afternoon for the purpose of taking the initiatory steps toward effecting a civic organization to help unfortunate families.

The organization will be made up of representatives from the several churches, secret orders and clubs of the city and will have a competent corps of officers with headquarters centrally located. It will be non-sectarian and the work will be among the poor, caring for unfortunate girls and providing beds for homeless men who come into the city.

Heretofore, men who have wandered into the city, "broke," and in search of work, have loafed around the streets till late at night and then, for want of a place to sleep have asked the police to lock them in the City Jail where they could enjoy a warm, dry bed.

No fewer than twenty-five such men have been taken in in a single month by Deputy Marshal Donaghu and Constable Way, during the winter season. Many of these men have found places to work and have made good citizens.

The object of the organization is to furnish beds for such men, free of cost, and providing work for them, thereby making a good citizen of what might be called a "common bum."

AVALON.

AVALON, June 17.—Declaring that they will continue to solicit on the streets of Avalon as long as they own property, W. W. Riner, J. H. McLane and Mrs. N. B. Grey still continue to solicit patronage from guests who arrive upon the regular steamers. The test case between the Freeholders Improvement Association and W. M. Gill of the Hotel Catalina is billed to come up Monday, June 19, Department No. 1 of the Superior Court. No action is being taken by the Freeholders until a decision is rendered in the test case.

MILLION DOLLAR PIER DEDICATED.

Banquet, Ball and Speeches Mark Its Completion.

Scores of Attractions on Its Broad Floor.

Builder Felicitated on His Pluck and Energy.

OCEAN PARK, June 17.—Today proved to be a big day at Ocean Park. The occasion was the formal dedication of the new pleasure pier, which extends into the ocean for a distance of 1000 feet, occupying the entire 300-foot space between Marine street and Pier avenue.

The exercises opened at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when headed by the Donatelli Italian band, Mayor Dudley and city officials and officers and committees representing the Chamber of Commerce, welcomed the guests as they arrived by trolley car. These included large delegations from the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, Pasadena Board of Trade and commercial and civic organizations of nearby cities, who had gone to the beach as the invited guests of the seaside commercial organization.

The visitors were shown the sights of the pier, treated to an automobile ride over the broad walk along the ocean front and the oiled boulevards of Santa Monica to the Palisades and Brentwood, and in the evening were the guests at a banquet tendered at the casino. Here were toasts to the health and success of A. R. Fraser, builder of the pier, who was felicitated upon the joyful completion of a gigantic enterprise that promises so much for the permanent stability and future development of the Santa Monica Bay beaches as the playground of Los Angeles and the interior cities and intermountain lands during the summer months and for the winter visitors from the North and East, when those lands are encased in snow and ice.

Last night the band played on the new pier for the first time, and when darkness had enveloped the bay, at a given signal the entire conception was instantaneously converted into a blaze of electric light. Daylight was for the once discounted, the glamour of thousands of incandescent bulbs and many arcs shedding brilliant and many-colored rays from one end of the pier to the other.

During the night the busy workers had labored incessantly adding the finishing touches to the several structures. The electricians had completed their connections, the carpenters had torn down the tall scaffolding, and the asphalt paving gang had given the pier's floor a new and smooth coating. But there remained much to do, and there is still much to be done. The painters and decorators worked over time and were followed by large forces employed in the removal of the debris.

The pier was ready for the informal opening last night; but as a matter of fact, many of the concessions and amusements were in a state of unpreparedness. Their goods had but recently arrived, and while waiting for the roofs of their houses to go on or for the paint to dry, they had not the opportunity for the proper display of their wares or the artistic arrangement of the several attractions. But these deficiencies can and will be supplied. All that is required is a little time.

There is on the pier practically every known device in the amusement and diversion line from the baby incubator, creche and hospital to the society swirl, the booth devoted to archery or the roller coaster. There are the Japanese with Oriental emporiums representing everything Nipponese. There are the pretty girls in tights who do engaging stunts in the huge tank of water. Lodge men discover new and unheard of mysteries in the third degree. Cafes provide for the relief of the inner man, while the thirst founts appeal to those who might anticipate a drought. A wave motor motes at a prominent place; a mountain roll is to roll at the pier's deep water end; a roller coaster coasts along the full length of the structure; a joy wheel wheels joy into dejected spirits; and a revolving cafe is to make real revolutions. Many of these things are completed and in operation. Others are in process of construction, while plans have been accepted and work is soon to be started on still others.

Work on this gigantic pier and its numerous and diversified attractions which are to cost in the aggregate probably more than a million dollars, was started September 1 of last year. The idea of the pier had birth in the brain of A. R. Fraser, who has financed the proposition from its inception, and in carrying out his plans he has been assisted by A. W. Layne, who has been in charge of all construction work. The building operations seemed slow at first, as the foundations had to be laid before any showing could be made. The entire conception being located over the bounding billows it was necessary first of all to provide a pier that would withstand the ravages of the teredo as well as the force of the waves and the action of the water. This was accomplished by moulding and driving more than a thousand concrete piles. Each of these is reinforced with bars of steel. Each pile was seasoned for forty days after being cast, before being jetted hydraulically into the sandy bottom of the sea. As the normal depth of water at the deep sea end o fthe pier is about twenty feet, long artificial trees of generous dimensions were required, and each stone stick weighing many tons became a problem in the handling. Special derricks had to be built with which to lift them from the casting forms and deposit them at the designated place in the pier.

The pier contains 300,000 square feet of floor space, being 300 feet in width by 1000 feet long. The entire north side is occupied by a scenic railway that has a full mile of trackage. Beyond this and extending still farther into the sea is to be built the mountain roll, which will require other hundreds of concrete piles.

At the extreme west end of the pier is the dance hall, which, so far as is known at the beach, is the largest Terpsichorean temple in the world. It has a floor space 238x170 feet with an uninterrupted circular dance surface 125x185 feet. It was here that the great dedication ball was held last night, the grand march being headed by Mrs. Earl Fraser on the arm of Mayor Dudley. Behind them were the visiting delegations from near-by cities, and city officials of Santa Monica and Venice. These were followed by hundreds of other merry dancers, representing the beach cities and other towns, who had assembled to participate in the opening of the unique amusement feature of the West.

Tomorrow will mark the opening of the beautiful Starland Theater, built on the pier by Messrs. Clune, Whitlock & Boland. This pretty playhouse, which has a seating capacity of more than 1000, represents an outlay of more than $25,000. The management will stage the Pantages attractions at the beach, with opening performance Monday.

One of the enjoyable features in connection with the new pleasure pier is the facility provided for pleasure boating. On the south side of the structure, where the water is deep, commodious boat landings have been provided. Here a fleet of gasoline launches will be maintained, the flagship of the fleet having already arrived, prepared to take pleasure parties on cruises to the marine gardens, fishing excursions to the banks off shore, or picnic parties to points along shore or to the islands.

The pier management promises the commencement of work within a few days on the building of the revolving cafe, which is to be of steel and glass. It will be an immense affair, the entire structure turning four times on its axis during each hour of the twenty-four.

Every precaution has been made to prevent destruction of the buildings by fire, a battery of chemicals being located on the pier with a company of fire-fighters always on duty.

Long Beach.

STREET PLANS MAY GO THROUGH.

LONG BEACH OBJECTORS FINALLY GET TOGETHER.

Four Previous Efforts Resulting in Failure but There Seems no Chance of a Hitch in the Present Programme—Methodist Pastor Announces Subject of Sermon.

LONG BEACH, June 17. — After four attempts to agree upon a proper width to open American avenue from Ocean avenue through the bluff to the beach had met with failure and after two of the disgusted property owners despairing of securing a street had made all arrangements to improve their holdings with reinforced concrete apartment houses, all of the warring elements suddenly got together and last night petitioned the Council to again take the matter up and order the street opened a width of eighty-four feet and a preliminary ordinance of this intention was started upon its passage.

But two opposed the latest project, E. A. Eastman and J. F. Heartwell, who have plans drawn for apartment houses on lots through which the thoroughfare will run. E. A. Eastman said that before final action was taken his building would be well under construction and the property cost would be more, and Mr. Heartwell advanced the same objection.

The advocates of the street assured them they would be reimbursed for any damage sustained, and this assurance quieted them. Council was also guaranteed the cost of advertising should any protest carry and the initial work was, therefore, started.

The proposed improvement will be paid for by a district between Pine and Alamitos avenues and extending as far north to Anaheim street. Opening this street will give a through boulevard from Los Angeles to the ocean tide line.

WHARF RATES.

The ordinance fixing rates for the municipal wharf was taken up by the City Council last night, amended to coincide with the Los Angeles and San Francisco rates and finally adopted. Some objection was made to the time limit of seventy-two hours for the removal of freight from the wharf, but after discussion it was decided to allow this provision to remain unchanged for the present.

INSURANCE PICNIC.

For the fifth consecutive year the officers and employees of the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company of Los Angeles gave their annual picnic at the beach today, 200 coming down in special cars. Some of them returned home this evening, but the majority remained over until tonight. The principal feature of the day was the dinner at Hotel Virginia and the dance, which followed, music being furnished by the municipal band, which returned last night from Salt Lake City. Nearly 200 of the visitors also enjoyed a dip in the surf. Among the guests were several general agents of the company from various parts of the country, who have been in Los Angeles attending the convention of insurance agents.

NOT ON PROGRAMME.

A feature not down on the programme of the annual class rally of the Long Beach High School last night was the presentation to Bert Dodd, a sophomore, of a handsome silver and gold loving cup by the Council and business men for his recent mile record of 4:37 at Berkeley. The cup is appropriately engraved with Dodd's name and the place and running time of his Pacific Coast record mile at Berkeley. Dodd made a short but sincere speech, thanking the donors.

NEWS BRIEFS.

The use of the auditorium has been granted the Iowa Association for their annual picnic on August 12, although it is probable the society will prefer Bixby Park, where they picnicked last year. The building will also be reserved for the Hamburger picnic on July 8.

The Westminster property on the beach, west of the pier, which has been in litigation for some years, changed hands again today, G. W. Liscomb and George W. Hughes purchasing the holdings of W. E. Harris, which W. L. Porterfield can redeem up to March 1 of next year by the payment of $65,000 in addition to $65,000 already provided for on the north half.

Secretary Camp, some days ago received for the Chamber of Commerce from Fred Bixby, one full-grown and active coyote, which Camp was anxious to place in Pacific Park as the nucleus of a zoo. He was refused the privilege, however, and last night the coyote broke his bonds and left for parts unknown.

Merle C. Green, a pressman, aged 17, this morning had his hand caught in a press and the fingers so badly mangled that amputation of the ends was necessary. He had reached into the press to pull out some cards.

Monrovia.

GREAT FACTORY A POSSIBILITY.

TIRE COMPANY WOULD LOCATE PLANT IN MONROVIA.

Formal Proposition Made to the Board of Trade Involves the Statement That Four Hundred Men and Women Will Be Given Employment from the Beginning.

MONROVIA, June 17.—A proposition to the Board of Trade last night by the Savage Tire Company, capitalized at $1,000,000, and incorporated under California laws, may foreshadow a long advance in the reliability and scope of self-propelled vehicles of all classes. A. W. Savage, inventor of an alleged non-skid, non-puncturable tire, and organizer of the manufacturing company, asked that Monrovia, through the medium of its Board of Trade, contribute a five-acre site on either the Pacific Electric or the Southern Pacific Railway line for the initial factory, which will employ 400 men and women. The output of this concern is estimated at 100 tires per day. A private committee of the Board of Trade has already obtained options on several tracts complying with specifications.

In his choice of location for the genetical manufactory, Mr. Savage, now a resident and orchardist of Duarte, is undoubtedly influenced by sentimental considerations, yet he is a man of wide experience and repute in the technical world, and has proved to his own and to his associates' satisfaction that a low building and taxation cost, together with relatively low cost of living for employees will more than compensate for the lesser freight rates on raw material possibly obtainable in larger commercial centers. As the Southern Pacific dominates the area specified as a suitable location for the factory, it may be taken for granted that the rate officials of that corporation have been consulted.

In the matter of stock, no public subscription is asked or apparently desired. It seems to be a close corporation, with those who are in so well assured of the safety of their investment as to want to retain ownership. The local company is the "holding company," and all others will be subsidiary.

Mr. Savage stated at the Board of Trade meeting last night, that as soon as the matter of site was settled work upon the factory buildings would be started.

The Alumni Association of Monrovia High School held its annual session in the Women's Clubhouse this evening. Walter F. Dunn made the address of welcome to the class of '11, and Lewis P. Black, president of the class, responded. Jack Conable of the class of '09 was elected president for the ensuing year. After the serving of a collation the members danced gaily until 12 o'clock.

VAST SUM PAID TO VETERANS.

Old Soldiers Receive More Tha One Hundred and Fifty Th Dollars for the Quarter.

SOLDIERS' HOME, June 17.—With the closing of the pension office this evening, it is learned—through the courtesy of Chief Clerk Roland Moore—the last draft to pensioners from the home on furlough shall have been mailed and the books will show a disbursement for the quarter ended June 4 of approximately $150,000—being $20,000 in excess of that paid for the last previous quarter. The amount of $95,619.55 was paid in cash at the "line-up" on Thursday; drafts totaling $44,695.64 were forwarded to absent members yesterday, and the last mail today will convey drafts totaling the balance of nearly $10,000 to pensioners on furlough.

Following pension payment 1 members are thus far added to the furlough list, with leave for thirty ninety days each; and any number are enjoying passes of from five to ten days each. The advantage of the latter form of leave is found in the fact that the holder, if "tired out," or for any other reason, may return within the next twenty-four hours if he so decides, without excuse. furlough he must have some reasonable excuse for returning before expiration of his "leave."

REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

Glennon, with the aid of a few Indians, were engaged in rounding up a scattered herd of cattle, which insurrectos had driven from Foster's ranch, when Mexican troops to the number of one hundred suddenly surprised them and shot them down in cold blood without the least chance to protect themselves. Capt. Gonzales, according to the report, who commanded the troops, returned to Ensenada and reported to Gov. Vega what he had done.

Both Dr. Foster and Glennon had resided in Lower California for a number of years. The idea that a gunboat or possibly one or more torpedo boats would be sent to Ensenada originated this morning among the navy men when orders were received directing the torpedo boats Truxton, Hull and Hopkins to remain here under fire and be ready to sail at any moment. The boats had been fired up to leave at 9 o'clock for Mare Island. However, the counter-order is believed by members of their crews to indicate they will be held in readiness to send to Mexican waters in case the Vicksburg is not ordered there.

WIRELESS PLAN.

Electricians H. E. Morin and G. S. Whittan, attached to the cruiser West Virginia, now here, have invented an apparatus to send wireless messages from aeroplanes. Naval authorities have put such faith in the invention that they will give it an experimental tryout at the Mare Island navy yard when the cruiser goes to that place next month.

The experiments will be conducted under the direction of Lieut. R. M. Farwell of the navy. The inventors are reticent regarding the mechanism of their apparatus, which, they maintain, overcomes the disadvantage of weight and bulk, which have baffled many who have tried the same experiment.

CLUBHOUSE NEARS COMPLETION.

Handsome Home of the El Centro Country Club Will be Ready for Occupancy Next Month.

EL CENTRO, June 17.—The handsome new home of the El Centro Country Club, at the northwest corner of Holt avenue and Sixth street, will soon be completed and the club expects to occupy it the first part of July. The building is of hollow tile, two stories, and has wide porches. Its first floor is divided into living room, billiard room, dining room, library, kitchen, quarters for steward and help, and a locker room with two baths. The second floor has eight sleeping rooms and two baths with showers. The building is to be handsomely furnished and the furniture is due to arrive next week. The club has fifty members, and many of these will make the new building their home. No formal function will occur when the house is opened, but early in the fall a brilliant reception will be given. The building and furnishings represent an outlay of about $7500.

FIREMEN TO CONTEST.

The El Centro volunteer firemen will participate in the firemen's tournament at the Brawley Cantaloupe Fiesta on July 3 and 4. The local firemen are to meet next Monday night to select the men for team work and to begin systematic drills for greater efficiency. El Centro's fire department is the best equipped of any in Imperial Valley.

PLANS FOR CAMPAIGN.

The general committee in charge of the campaign for the Imperial Irrigation District will meet in the Masonic Hall at El Centro, Saturday, to outline plans for the three weeks of campaign before the election on this proposition. But few public meetings will be held and the committee will rely mainly on a mail campaign to get facts and figures before the voters. With such a large showing of signatures on the petitions asking for the election it is belieed that but little opposition will develop.

STRICT LIQUOR ORDINANCE.

At midnight tonight El Centro's new liquor ordinance goes into effect. It prohibits the selling of drinks containing any percentage of alcohol. The only exceptions made to this strict prohibition are that it shall not apply to any person serving or dispensing liquors at his own home to guests as an act of hospitality, when such home is not a place of public resort, and when no money or thing of value is received in return for such liquor; any persons selling alcohol for scientific purposes or to be used in the arts, and any persons selling or distributing wine for sacramental purposes only.

INSPECTS DAIRIES.

Dr. G. E. Tucker, health officer for Riverside, has been inspecting Imperial Valley dairies this week, in order to ascertain their sanitary condition. This valley is developing a large business in sending out milk and cream to the cities of Southern California, and the matter of good sanitation arises. Dr. Tucker believes there is room for improvement in some of the valley dairies.

FOR AUTOISTS.

Fred Fuller will give a barbecue on Saturday evening at the Central garage to the autoists of Imperial Valley. Mr. Fuller is interested in the Los Angeles-Phoenix auto route through Imperial Valley and will endeavor at this barbecue to stir up general enthusiasm for the forthcoming road race and to secure funds for a local purse for the first car in the race that enters El Centro.

SPEND QUARTER MILLION.

Amount Recommended For Street Improvements in Colton—Plan For City to Pay For Crossings.

COLTON, June 17.—Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars to be expended here for street improvements is what ambitious residents are recommending. Of this the Advisory Board of nine citizens, recently appointed by the City Trustees, suggests that $50,000 be made a bond issue by the city for the paving of street intersections and alley crossings and $10,000 be spent for a road outfit including a steam roller.

If the proposition is received favorably at a mass meeting to be called soon, an election will then be held and the bond issue submitted to vote. The property owners are to pay for paving the streets according to frontage, the city merely taking care of the intersections.

Ventura.

BEAN GROWERS WILL CONVENE.

MEETING PLANNED AT VENTURA FOR NEXT MONTH.

City and Chamber of Commerce Will Co-operate to Make It One of the Most Interesting Events of the Season—Will Vote on More Courthouse Bonds.

VENTURA, June 17.—This city is preparing for big doings on July 1, when the Lima Bean Growers Association will hold its first annual gathering in this city to prepare for the campaign for the coming year. The gathering is in the nature of a celebration, too, to rejoice over the success of the organiaztion, and lima bean growers from all over the country are expected to be present. After the regular business session the bean men will disport themselves and enjoy the day as best they know how.

The city will aid in this and make it a regular lima bean day and the Chamber of Commerce last night named a Reception Committee, which will also act as a Committee of Arrangements to prepare for the advent of the bean men and their families. The following citizens compose the committee: Messrs. Dixon, Hobson, Canfield, Barnes and Mercer. The Columbia Park Club boys band will furnish the music. There will be feasting and dancing and games of various kinds, and besides, the merchants have decided to fall in line and make it a regular old-fashioned bargain day.

BOND ELECTION.

An election has been called by the Board of Supervisors to vote $150,000 of bonds, the money to go towards the completion of the new Courthouse, which is to cost about $185,000 in all. The election will be held on August 1. Though the county tried on a former occasion to vote Courthouse bonds at the same time bridge and culvert bonds were voted, the effort failed. Then the Supervisors levied a special tax of $80,000 and went ahead with its Courthouse plans and work is now being prosecuted. Recently the country has appropriated $50,000 towards the building of the Rincon beach boulevard, but in order to do this it is found necessary to raise the balance of the needed Courthouse funds by a bond election.

NEWS BRIEFS.

The Southern Pacific, in conjunction with the city, is now engaged in putting in the concrete culvert under its tract. The road will run through this culvert.

The fruit growers of the county will meet in Santa Paula on the 29th inst. The meeting will be one of decided interest to fruit men and a large attendance is expected.

FORMER ESCONDIDO MAN SHOT.

Killed by a Mexican in Yuma, Ariz., Following a Quarrel Over a Trifling Matter.

ESCONDIDO, June 17.—Word has been received here of the killing in Yuma, Ariz., of Ben P. Brown, formerly of this city, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brown, at one time lessors of Hotel Escondido.

Brown and a Mexican are said to have quarreled in a saloon over some trivial matter, the result being that the Mexican was put out of the place. The following morning, Brown, while on his way to work, stooped over to pet a dog, and was then shot from behind by the Mexican with whom he had quarreled the previous evening. Death was instantaneous. He leaves a sister, Mrs. Fannie Waters of Chicago, and mother, Mrs. M. E. Brown of Detroit, Mich.

PERRIS.

PERRIS, June 17.—The Santa Fe surveyors are surveying for an open Sugar Company. The track will run to the center of the land between the buildings arranged on either side. R. S. Bulla, vice-president and engineer, has also had the land surveyed and track on the land of the Southwestern marked out for the building site. Dell G. Crandall, manager for the Lapp-Gifford Company, has secured a contract for boring a twelve-inch well. As soon as water is obtained, work on the foundations will be started. This will open up a new industry for Perris.

NEWS BRIEFS.

All mail matter passing through the postoffice during the month of May had to be counted and weighed. The results show a large and rapidly-growing business, compared with other towns in the county.

The apportionment of school money has been made and the Perris Union High School receives $904 against $800 last year. The average daily attendance this year was forty-five, against thirty-six the year preceding.

On motion of Dist.-Atty. Evans in the Superior Court today, the case against Antenacio Ledesma, charged with having abducted the fourteen-year-old daughter of John Wells of Casa Blanca, was dismissed. Ledesma was tried by a jury two weeks ago, the jury disagreeing as to his guilt. He was prosecuted by the District Attorney and Senator M. Estudillo, and defended by Albert Trujillo, a young lawyer of San Bernardino. COTTON CROP IS LARGER.

Imperial Valley Planters Expect to Double the Production of Last Year—Watermelons Shipped.

IMPERIAL, June 17.—There are a number of cotton planters still planting cotton, as the weather conditions are favorable, while the supply of water for irrigating is increased. It is estimated, from the reports given by the various water companies of Imperial Valley, that 17,000 acres thus far have been planted to cotton.

With weather conditions in the Valley so ideal, prospects for a greater yield per acre this year than last are encouraging. Prominent cotton planters throughout Imperial Valley give as a conservative estimate, 9000 bales of cotton for this season's crop, which is 50 per cent. more than that of last season.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Dr. A. G. Toperhaman and A. Davidan were the first Imperial men to ship watermelons to Los Angeles.

The splendid spring weather and climatic conditions have encouraged the extensive planting of a large acreage to milo maize, and there is every prospect of a large feed production of milo maize this season. Stock has been so successfully and profitably fed that a large number of cattle and sheep are being brought into the Valley from Arizona and other points.

Nels Jacobson has raised thirty acres of Mediterranean wheat on his ranch near Imperial, and the harvest shows thirty sacks of grain, each sack weighing 120 pounds. Mediterranean wheat sells at $2 per hundred.

ASSESSOR'S ASTUTE METHOD.

He Devises a Plan to Compel the Payment of Taxes on Water Stock.

EL CENTRO, June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] County Assessor Wiley M. Weaver is making out papers on which to seize water stock on unpatented lands for which claimants refuse to pay taxes on possessory rights and in one or two cases steps in this line have brought about payment of taxes.

A number of claimants refuse to make payment of taxes for possessory rights, Mr. Weaver declaring that to date he has collected about 60 per cent of such taxes. Where claimants say they will not pay, he is resorting to this expedient to force collections.

In case of continued refusal to make payments Mr. Weaver declares his intention to sell stock, though he is not taking summary action in cases where claimants express intention to make payment at an early date.

STANTON.

STANTON, June 17.—The newly-elected Trustees of this newly-formed city met this week for the first time. They passed a straight prohibition ordinance, which will prevent saloons, and adopted the County Jail for town offenders. Concerning the sewer matter, which really brought the city into being, the board passed an ordinance which provides that "It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to receive, take or use, or cause to be received, taken or used, any sewage, sewer water, or water taken from any sewer for purposes of irrigation, or for any other purpose, or to irrigate or cause or permit to be irrigated any land with sewage, sewer water or water taken from any sewer, or to deposit or discharge or cause or permit to be deposited or discharged sewage, sewer water or water taken from any sewer, upon any premises in the city of Stanton."

CLASSES IN HOT FIGHT.

Freshmen and Sophomores of Anaheim High School Have Scrimmage After Banner is Hauled Aloft.

ANAHEIM June 17—There was excitment yesterday afternoon at the Anaheim high school campus when the sophomore class flaunted its 1913 pennant at the top of the high school flagpole in honor of the closing day of the school. The minute the freshmen saw the white pennant, there was a near riot. Quickly a freshman attempted to tear the pennant down, and for an hour a hot fight existed between the two classes, and two brothers were fighting against one another. Prof. Walker appeared on the scene at this time and stopped hostilities.

The Anaheim High School commencement exercises were held last evening at the High School auditorium. Prof. Tully Knowles, of the University of Southern California, delivered the principal address.

CALEXICO.

CALEXICO, June 16.—The Imperial Valley Oil and Cotton Company has decided to rebuild the cotton gin that was burned here several months ago. The seventy-five-horse-power gasoline engine that was saved at the time of the fire will be replaced by a 100-horse-power engine. The gin will be erected in time to handle cotton early in the fall.

Beet harvest on the Fritz Kloke place has begun. This is the first sugar beet crop on a commercial scale ever grown in Imperial Valley. The beets will be sent to the factory at Glendale, Ariz., where the large acreage on the Cudahy ranch, across the line in Mexico, will also be handled.

Mrs. Otis B. Tout, the only Imperial Valley representative in The Times contest, is making a personal canvass of this valley by means of an automobile, and is meeting with great encouragement.

TERRA BELLA.

TERRA BELLA, June 14.—Terra Bella Presbyterians have purchased three excellently situated lots in the Terra Bella townsite, at the corner of Third and Camphor streets, and this fall there is to be built upon them a fine church.

Rev. Elmer E. Fix, formerly of the southern part of this State, is the pastor in charge at the present time, and it is hoped that this fall he will accept the Terra Bella church as a permanent charge.

Work has started upon the addition to the Terra Bella Hotel, one of the most modern and best appointed hostelries in the Southern San Joaquin, the addition to provide for twenty new rooms. A feature of the addition will be a provision for a large number of outdoor sleeping apartments, which will be especially delightful for the cool, breezy evenings which always follow the heat of the summer days.

Superior Judge of San Bernardino County Denies Suspension of Injunction Pending Appeal.

SAN BERNARDINO, June 17.—Superior Judge Bledsoe today formally signed the findings in the Colton cement dust case. He denies the defendant's application that its prescriptive right be determined in terms not of the amount of finished product, but of the amount of cement dust falling upon the plaintiff's property, and also denies the motion for an order, suspending the operation of the injunction pending the result of the final appeal.

Despite this decision the corporation wins a sixty days stay of execution, and the court reserves jurisdiction, the decree expressly providing that should a method be found whereby the cement mills can be operated without the escape of dust the defendants may apply for a modification of the decree, if such be necessary to test or make use of such new methods.

FALLS TWENTY-EIGHT STORIES.

Workman Plunges 450 Feet to Death From New York Skyscraper. Leaves Arm 26 Floors High.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Pitching 450 feet downward while hundreds on the sidewalks and in windows of neighboring buildings watched with horror, William Anderson, a workman, fell to his death into Wall street yesterday from the twenty-eighth story of the new Bankers' Trust Company building.

Probably a thousand people saw him topple from a scaffolding on the south of the giant skyscraper between Broad and Wall streets, saw him fighting desperately to regain his balance as he reeled slowly outward from the narrow platform of boards, saw his effort fail, and watched him plunge downward, turning over and over, to the protecting screen over the sidewalk.

The workman's body bounded from the screen into the center of the street, a shapeless mass. As he flashed past the twenty-sixth floor his coat sleeve caught on another scaffold. It remained there with his left arm in it.

CHEMISTS ENTERTAINED.

Visit the Plant of the Portland Cement Company at Riverside, Where They Are Dined and Edified.

Thirty members of the Southern California section of the American Chemical Society left this city yesterday for Riverside. They were met at Pedley by Prof. J. H. Norton, who conducted them to the State Citrus Experiment Station at Riverside. There the chemists found much to interest them in the various fertilizer and crop experiments carried out on an extensive scale, and affording valuable data for the guidance of the practical citrus grower.

F. T. Griffith, ont of the Los Angeles representatives, and Assistant Manager Holliday of the Riverside Portland Cement Company then took the party to the Glenwood Hotel, where a luncheon was served, after which they boarded a special car for the cement plant.

The cement company is conducting experiments on a practical scale to eliminate by electrical methods the dust which issues from stacks, which has given rise to expensive lawsuits at other cement plants. These experiments are in charge of Walter Schmidt, chemical engineer of Los Angeles.

ASTHMA.

Secrets of Marvellous Cures Exposed.

After a quarter of a century's research and careful study Dr. Owens discovered that Asthma is curable only by treating each individual case with precise discrimination of the cause. You must not confound his method of treatment with that of the nostrum peddlers who distribute free trial bottles of liquid impossibilities guaranteed to cure all cases regardless of cause.

Your skilled family physician will tell you that Asthma may be caused by disease of the Heart, Liver, Lungs, Kidney, etc., and that the claim of the vendors of a one remedy cure all nostrum is as absurd and insincere as would be a one medicine cure for typhoid fever and all heart, liver, kidney and lung complaints. How simple if true. A sample bottle for each specific complaint, as a cure and protector, and an inducer to give your faithful old family doctor a long and much needed rest. These cure-all commodities are compounded primarily to deceive and secondarily to enrich the vendor. It is not for lack of skill that your family physician has not treated your Asthma with curative results. His time and energy have been devoted to other special lines more to his liking, hence his pre-eminent success. Dr. Owens' treatment is of the same discriminating care that your physician bestows upon you in dangerous acute ailments, his method is scientific and rational, he eliminates Asthma and "Asthma cure," individualizes every case and removes the cause and complications which produce and maintain the disease. If after a careful examination he discovers your case is incurable on account of organic complications, he tells you so, and if curable the beneficial effect of his treatment will be apparent almost immediately. Testimonials may be seen at the office.

An interview will cost you nothing. Office hours, 10 to 4.

Talks On Teeth
By Rex Dental Co.
(Incorporated)

Good Teeth
Come First

Good teeth are absolutely essential to the well groomed man or woman.

Even the well kept nails must take second place, for they are not so much in evidence as the teeth.

The eyes may not be good, the features may be irregular. These are as nature made them, and must remain as they are, but not so the teeth.

If nature has failed on them, we can correct the omission and supply a perfect set, beautiful, "dazzling," and as useful as beautiful, for ours, placed in the mouth by our famous method, are close rivals of nature's teeth in looks and satisfactory service.

They are as solid as a rock.

No plates, no ordinary bridge work, nothing about these teeth to suggest the "false teeth" which so many people are wearing because they haven't heard of the Rex Dental Company's method.

Ten thousand people have thrown away their partial plates, which are continually wobbling around in their mouths, had their so-called "bridges" taken out, and are using the Rex Dental Company's new method just as successfully as though they had been grown in the gums.

Do you want proofs?

We can furnish them from patients in all parts of the country, perhaps from some in your own locality.

We make a fair and square proposal to those who have lost teeth, but have still a few left in the gums. It is this:

Come and find out from us about the work we do. Let us examine your teeth, and don't think you must spend any money just because you come for this investigation. There is no obligation of any sort attached to the visit.

We can't tell what we can do for you unless we can see your teeth and show you what can be done.

Good teeth are a necessity, poor teeth an offense to you and to your friends.

If you are not near enough to call, send for our 40-page beautifully illustrated book, which describes the Rex Dental Company's Alveolar Method (teeth without plates). We send it free of any charge. It is a great book on the teeth, the reading of which makes people come to see us, no matter how far away they may be.

SILKS

The silk question is a serious one to many Los Angeles shoppers. The reason is, they continue to buy silks in the old way from the retailer who receives them from the jobber, the jobber from the commission house who receives them from the manufacturer, so the goods are six months old or more before they reach the retail counter. If you care to have new silks, wide silks, dependable silks, pure silks at first cost, eliminating all uncertainty, buy from us. We make them in Los Angeles.

This is SILK INSURANCE.

SUCCESS IN TREATING SKIN TROUBLES

A Remarkable Record of Itching, Burning, Disfiguring Eruptions Completely Eradicated.

Those who have suffered long and hopelessly from eczemas, rashes, itchings and irritations of the skin and scalp, and who have lost faith in all manner of treatment, may learn what Cuticura soap and Cuticura ointment have done for other skin-sufferers, by reading the following remarkable condensed testimonials.

Mrs. Wm. Hunt, 259 Fairmount Ave., Newark, N. J.: Whole body a mass of raw, torturing eczema. Agony was beyond words. Hair all fell out and ears seemed ready to drop off. Clothing would stick to bleeding flesh. Hoped death would soon end fearful suffering. Cuticura remedies cooled the itching, bleeding flesh at once and soon cured her.

Mrs. M. C. Maitland, Jasper, Ont.: Itchy rash came out on her baby's head when but three months old. It spread over entire body. Put mittens on him to prevent tearing skin. Reduced to a skeleton. One bath with Cuticura soap and application of Cuticura ointment soothed him to sleep. One lot of each cured him. Thinks child would have died but for Cuticura soap and ointment.

Frank Gridley, 325 E. 43rd st., New York: In twenty-four hours he became raw from head to foot with a dreadful burning itch. Suffered agonies and could not lie down or sit up. Cuticura soap and Cuticura ointment cured him in a single day.

Mrs. Delaware Barrett, 611 King st., Wilmington, Del.: Had a breaking out all over her body. When scratched it would bleed and become very sore. She could scarcely sleep, as the itching was worse at night. Used Cuticura soap and ointment three weeks and trouble disappeared.

Mrs. H. E. Householder, 2004 Wilhelm st., Baltimore: Her baby had itching, torturing eczema. Nose and eyes nothing but sores. Had one doctor's bill after another, but it did no good. Two cakes of Cuticura soap and one box of Cuticura ointment cured her.

Hale Bordwell, Tipton, Ia.: Itching eczema from birth until 55. Found no relief. Boils formed as big as walnuts. Was in frightful condition and could hardly work. Used Cuticura remedies eight months and is cured.

Although Cuticura soap and ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a liberal sample of each, with 32-page booklet on the skin, will be sent, post-free, on application to "Cuticura," Dept. D, Boston.

MOTORMAN DIVIDES THE PUBLIC INTO SIX SIMPLE CLASSES.

Controller-handler of a City Car Tells of the Troubles of the Joyrideless Human Being on the Front Platform With Some Others—Passengers Urge Him to Ram a Wagon That Obstructs the Track.

BY E. G. WILKE.

Motorman, Los Angeles Railway.

WE MOTORMEN enjoy none of the thrills of the joy rider. We are regulated by schedule. It is well to remember this, for the general public regards the motorman as a juggernaut.

When I have told the story of one day's experience on the front of a trolley car, you will see that the man at the controller is patient and long-suffering. He is human, which some persons will be loth to believe. He has a terror of taking human life or maiming even a dog or a chicken. He is neither reckless nor stupid nor cold-blooded.

If at the end of the day's run he can tuck his feet under the supper table and say, "Thank God, I haven't run into anybody today," his heart is light and his conscience clear. The petty annoyances are forgotten. The woman who glared at him because he didn't stop where she wanted to get off when she hadn't told him; the man with the grouch who threatened to report him for letting him off too soon when he told him to stop there, and the driver of a pipe wagon who deliberately held him up when he was in a hurry, become merged in the general incidents of an average day.

These things don't stick in a motorman's mind, for they happen every hour. But at the time, believe me, the motorman would like to tell the woman who stared at him, the man with the grouch and the driver just what he thinks of them.

TYPES OF PERSONS.

You can divide the public into six classes—reckless, indifferent, selfish, thoughtless, grouchy and courteous. The one that sticks longest in the mind is the courteous—the man or woman with the sunny smile, the hearty "good morning" or the pleasant "thank you."

Now, mind you, I am not picking flaws in the public. Society is made up of all classes. Each class has its own troubles, but I'll put it to you if it is not aggravating in a case like this:

On these pay-as-you-enter cars passengers are taken on only at the rear platform. Well, a woman was standing at the intersection as I pulled up today. I opened the gate to let off fares. She walked briskly to the front end to get on and I requested her to go to the rear. She paid no attention to me, but reached for the hand rail. Of course as all the fares were off, I closed the gate. It closes pneumatically and with more or less of a bang which, of course, is no fault of mine.

The woman blushed red with anger and marched stiffly to the rear end and got on. She took a seat back of me, and when the opportunity occurred I took the trouble to explain to her why passengers are not permitted to get on the front end. And this is what I got:

"You might have told me and not slammed the gate in my face."

Once on one of the old style cars as I slowed down to stop at an intersection, a woman got up and walked to the steps, and instead of stopping on the platform, began to descend. She had reached the last step before I could lay a detaining hand on her arm.

"Wait until the car stops, lady," I said.

"I wasn't going to get off," she retorted, sharply.

I couldn't resist saying, "It looked to me very much as if you were."

She waited on the step until the car stopped, then turned and looked daggers at me.

LABORER'S RETORT.

Things like these you would think would sour a motorman's temper, but I'll wager that you can't find a bunch of men jollier than we are off duty.

And that is probably because a motorman gets to know human nature and to make allowances for other person's foibles.

We hear many a thing that a newspaper man could turn into good reading. For instance a laboring man got on my car. The rule is on the gate cars that passengers must not stand on the rear platform, but after paying their fare, they walk inside or take a seat in the front end.

Well, this man stood on the rear platform after giving up his fare, and as more passengers got on the conductor asked him to step up. He moved up, and at the next stop more got on, and there was another request to step up.

Finally the laboring man turned to the conductor and said:

"I paid me nickel to stop steppin', and be golly I ain't goin' to keep steppin'. I'll let the car do that."

Another man could have made a row by an ill-natured remark, but the laboring man's retort struck me as so funny that I chuckled over it for several blocks. And I want to tell you that it helped me to keep my temper when the pipe dagon driver pulled in ahead of me and kept the track for three blocks.

This was in the business section, where we run on thirty-second time. He not only held me up, but a dozen cars back of me. It threw us all late, and the consequence was that, in order to keep the regulation distance between cars after the driver gave me the track, I had to pass passengers up, and if you have ever been passed you will know what some of them remarked about me and the company in particular.

EXASPERATING DRIVER.

Now there is one thing about that pipe wagon the public does not appreciate. Several pipes projected beyond the tail of the wagon. If the driver had halted suddenly my car might have been rammed and passengers standing up injured, for he did not consider the car was heavily loaded and the track wet, making a quick stop impossible.

But I kept saying, like the laboring man, "I paid me nickel to stop steppin'," and it kept my temper down.

Just to show you how some men regard a thing like this, I will tell an incident that happened in the case of the driver of another wagon. I was late and had a loaded car. The driver crawled along, paying no attention to the gong. There were several men standing around me and their sympathy was all with me. Passengers in a hurry grew restless and there were mutterings of discontent.

Finally one of the men said to me: "Ram him, old man, and we'll swear you couldn't help it."

I believe they would have done it too, but of course, no motorman will do that. I have seen an apparently respectable business man strike another man for jostling him, and when you analyze us all we are built pretty much alike. A motorman, however, learns self-repression. If he sometimes loses his temper you can put it down that it is the result of an accumulation of annoyances and not a single one.

There is one thing about the motorman. He is a good soldier. He obeys orders. The law is that passengers must not talk to him, and it is a good law. You can't serve two masters. A motorman can't keep his mind on his duties and what a passenger is saying to him. There are some men he would like to talk with because they say something worth hearing, and it is because of the ordinance posted up in front of him that he keeps his mouth shut. But it is responsible for the man who wants to talk with him thinking he is a crank.

GATE PUZZLES THEM.

Of course you can't always keep your mouth shut. Passengers will ask questions, and if you don't give them the information, they take a dislike to you. Some of them will refuse to ride on your car. I have known motormen to be passed up for that reason.

Now these gates on the P-a-y-e cars were a puzzle to lots of passengers. They didn't understand how they were worked. Some thought the buzzer did it. There is a push button above every other seat in the cars, and one man told me that he had pushed the button a dozen times and the danged gate hadn't opened. Another man was carried past his getting-off place because he thought the gate opened automatically when the car stopped.

But these things are mere incidents. What really get on the motorman's nerve are the automobilists. They come shooting along and dodge in front of the car, taking chances that raises the hair on your head.

It's my opinion that if before men are allowed to drive an automobile they had to serve as a motorman for six months, there would be few reckless drivers. A motorman learns caution. He has to look out for everybody—man, woman, child, automobile, motorcycles, bicycles, pushcarts, lunch wagons, dogs and vehicles of all kinds.

It is an error to think that a trolley car has the right of way. The only reason a motorman does not turn out

Farm Wit Wins.

RUBE DOUBLES ON LOS ANGELES SHARPERS AND FLEECES THEM.

With His Mind Clear as a Bell from the Wholesome Methods of Living and Made Keen by Elemental Combats With Nature He Is More Than a Match for the Skinner in Town—Plucked Ones Explain.

RUBE, long looked upon by the city sports as their legitimate prey, is coming to his own. Gradually into the intellects of the sure-thing sports, gamblers, thimble riggers and touts for various games and concerns of chance is creeping the knowledge that the worm has turned and that no more is the man from the ranch and farm the sucker and "fall guy" for every catch penny scheme that may be incubated in the exotic minds of the city sharps.

As surely as the sun rises the man from the country has become so sophisticated that he is turning the tables on his city brethren and, bringing with him as he does a mind clear as a bell from his method of living and sharpened by elemental combats with nature, he is more than a match for the perfervid brain of the city sharper whose method of life, while it makes for a sudden and brilliant flash of shrewdness, fails as a rule at the critical point or is hampered and biased by his continued contact with artificial things.

Time was and not so very long ago when a ranchman from the interior of the State or a cattleman from Arizona or New Mexico was the synonym for greenness and unsophistication. His advent on Spring or Main street was an occasion for a gala day for the sharpers who infest these two thoroughfares. They immediately began their painless extraction of the victim's money. He would as a rule leave Los Angeles poorer but wiser within a few days, while the fleecers would revel with his hard-earned money.

Now the gentle ranchman who, as a rule has an automobile, telephones, and electric lights in his "farm house," has taken a hand himself in the game and when he comes for his annual outing to Los Angeles he is primed wth shrewdness and care and while seemingly just as willing to make a bet or take a chance as ever, he knows how the cards are lying and perhaps has a few marked ones himself, as he has through countless lessons learned that the only way to fight the devil is with fire.

SUNBURNS AND DICE.

The other day a tall sunburned young man walked up to a large cigar stand in Los Angeles where three-quarters of the profits of the place come from games of chance, dice, etc. He was well dressed, but his hands and face spoke of the outdoors and of long stretches of sunlit plains.

He watched the dice shaking with interest for a while, and then, when asked to take a hand readily agreed.

The gilded youth who loaf around the place drew near and expected to see the "rube" separated from his bank roll, or at least the roll "nicked."

The game proceeded and with wonderful luck the greenhorn won. He kept up the good work steadily and the cigar man was in agony. Finally the clerk, who was well posted in many schemes to beat him, caught a peculiar handling of the dice by the greenhorn and suddenly seized his hand as he was about to shake the dice box.

The greenhorn looked up, smiling, and displayed the single dice which he had held between his second and third finger continually with a certain number always uppermost. His scheme was to hold the dice between his fingers while shaking the remaining dice in the box and then relinquish it just as he tipped the box to display the dice. The one dice always fell with a certain number uppermost and this one surety with his nine other even chances had won for the greenhorn about $65 worth of good Havana cigars. There was no recourse, and the greenhorn, with a broad grin on his face, walked out of the cigar store carrying his winter's supply of cigars.

Another incident of where the worm had turned and the fleecers were fleeced occurred in the lobby of one of the big downtown hotels.

It is a place where the upper-crust of the sporting circles hold forth, and it is as easy to get a bet on anything from a needle to an anchor from the gilded youth who loaf in the place as it is to breathe.

BRONZED MAN FOOLS 'EM.

A tall, bronzed man with a wide sombrero was talking to some chance acquaintances. He had displayed a large roll of money and was plainly out for a good time. He brought about a discussion as to the spelling of a certain word. He was positive that he could spell it right and offered to make a small bet that his spelling was correct. In a moment there was a neat little bet made by several of the bystanders, and the city room of The Times was called on the 'phone to settle the matter. The young stranger lost and willingly paid over his cash.

In a few moments, while the conversation was still on orthography, he spelled a word in a manner that was glaringly wrong. He was corrected in it, and with the air of a man who may make a mistake once, but is positive that he now is right, he immediately offered to take on all bets that he was right this time. Immediately, the gilded youths crowded around him and placed their money.

"The only stipulation I make, gentlemen," said the countryman, "is that I hold the stakes. I am the one most interested." This was agreed to and again The Times was called and the stranger again proven wrong. He laughed and turned over the roll of money to the lobby idlers and with his hat pulled down over his eyes walked away seemingly a disgusted man. The bill on the outside of the roll was a good one, but the inside of the roll was tissue paper.

Police statistics show that the imposter with a new scheme for separating the unwary from their cash comes from the country in the majority of the new cases. If he has a new scheme he is invariably from the country. From wide reading and a great deal of idle time in which his mind is not otherwise occupied, although his body is, he arrives at a new point in reasoning out a scheme, a point that the city man has not reached and therefore is not protected is so great that it cannot be overcome by tenacity of purpose and hard work. These are now, always have been and forever will be the most essential requisites for the attainment of all things worth while. No man knows what he can do until he tries. Persistent and well directed efforts not only make for growth and development but they invariably bring to the worker things that the idler can never possess. Nature, which makes no duplicates, has given every man powers peculiar to himself, and your success or failure depends upon the use or non-use of the forces residing within you. The worker progresses, prospers and lives, and the shirker retrogrades, dwells in poverty and dies. Which will you be? If the former, and you do not know just what line of activity to follow, Times "Liners" can be of material assistance in the matter.

These busy little ads point the way to the things you want, and they exploit many wealth-creating opportunities.

A few cents is often all that it costs to get splendid results in large money-making ventures through The Times classified advertisements, and salaried men and women can increase their income and gradually build up a creditable business by buying, selling and trading through the medium of Times "Liners."

The interesting and readable "Liner" section of The Times also saves time and trouble to persons in search of rooms, board, flats, apartments, houses, help or situations, and it puts you in touch with persons who have what you want or want what you have.

Month after month, year in and year out, The Times prints more advertising than any other paper in the world. It regularly prints more "Liners" than the four other Los Angeles papers combined, and twice as many as its nearest local competitor.

Jack, properly filled into an application blank for membership in the Produce Exchange, never created the slightest discussion, being properly submitted by John Huber and signed by E. B. Rivers and several other well-known dealers who supposed that Jack was all right. The membership Committee, taking this as O. K., quietly passed on Jack, and, without question, that party, little known, but supposedly coming up to requirements, was admitted.

He, or rather she, for it is a lady burro, will be presented tomorrow morning to take her place among the commanders of the vegetable brigade and the egg commissioners, who dictate the size which pullets' eggs must be to sell right, as well as the price of cheese. Maude S. will be the first burro ever smuggled into full membership of a great mercantile organization, and her right to a seat on the Exchange may be questioned by Secretary B. A. Holmes.

Maude entered the limelight of publicity at the recent Santa Cruz jinks of the produce men of the State. Her handsome face and sylph-like figure made her admired of all Los Angeles produce dealers, and in their minds was bred a kidnaping scheme. Just after the great burro race Maude was loaded into an auto and whirled over to the Seabreeze Hotel, where she remained incognito until it was time to take a train for home.

By bribing the Pullman conductor, the fair debutante was slipped into the coaches and there installed in a compartment assigned E. B. Rivers. Solicitous friends managed to hold Maude's biting mouth and kicking legs while she was gently placed in the bed intended for Rivers, strapped there and nicely covered up. Later in the evening she was released and chased up and down between the berths under a gauntlet of slippers, finally to arrive here the following morning and receive conveyance in another auto to the Los Angeles public market.

Her most recent effort to show her appreciation for the manner in which she has been cared for lies in her desire to join her friends and assist them in picking out letters of proper size to be used in labeling cold storage products. When it becomes fully known that M. S. Jack is really Maude S. she will undoubtedly be tendered a royal welcome. Maude will be the first burro member of the Exchange, as well as the first lady to be considered eligible to that august body. Being a special protege of John Huber, he will stand sponsor for her initiation.

LXXIV.

Among the Men Who Make Things.

One of the pleasant pictures of a recent journey in the oriental suburbs of California, was the reception given to Gen. Harrison Gray Otis at the annual convention of the National Association of Manufacturers. The convention met in New York, holding its sessions in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. The first morning the delegates listened to the report of the president, a paper tense with earnestness, strong in the eloquence of a practical man, progressive in tone and very decided in its convictions. At its close Gen. Otis, sitting quietly in the audience, and his presence known to very few of the delegates, was called to the platform.

As he came in view of the convention, a skirmish fire of hand-clapping announced that he was recognized. This swelled into volleys of applause as he reached the platform. The ovation gathered power as it went on. Men began cheering, and by the time the general faced his audience, the delegates were standing, waving handkerchiefs, shouting and calling for more cheers—a continuous welcome, enthusiastic, sympathetic and whole-hearted, that lasted for five minutes. Then some man shouted:

"This is all before his introduction. What'll we do for him when he is presented?"

Well, when the president introduced him formally, they did it all over again.

Then the general addressed the delegates. He spoke about fifteen minutes, holding his audience in rapt attention. And his speech, which was a model of concentrated discussion of the relations of the paymaster and the wage earner, labor troubles and their solution, was the most temperate, quiet, fair and conciliatory talk heard at the convention. It was a simple and a just plea for better understanding, for fair dealing, for right and justice to all—for liberty under law—one of the best speeches I ever heard the general make. And it closed with a splendid make, and it closed with a splendid apostrophe to the rights of the free worker in a free land, the right of a man to earn his bread at his own work, and to eat it without fear of persecution, of maiming or death.

Deborah Among the Princes.

There was another interesting figure at this convention. A woman delegate sat in her place among the other manufacturers—Mrs. Harvis. And much I wondered as I looked, what she manufactured. She is the head of one of the largest—maybe the greatest, I am not sure—plants in her line in the country. A pleasant voice, an attractive face, a most lady-like and refined manner, as she sat among the men. Bonnet trimmings? I wondered. Slippers, for mothers? For use in the homes where there are boys? Ribbons, magnetic hammers, that stick to the tacks and miss the thumbs of female house carpenters and jobbers? Raisin seeders? Beefsteak tenders? Sewing machines, possibly? Some sort of thing that women use?

She manufactures, anvils, young man. That's what. From the dainty little toy on the jeweler's table to the mighty sort of a thing on which they forged the Dolphin's anchor. That's what Mrs. Harris manufactures, something that will stand generations of pounding. Just like a woman. Something that wears out the hammers that beat it. Just like a woman. Something that keeps its own poise and retains its own shape, while the things that are brought to it are made to assume new forms under the clanging and ringing hammers. Just like a woman. Something that has to be set just right when it is first placed, because it's so mighty hard to lift it and move it from its chosen position. Just like a woman. Something that warms to the iron when it is white hot and plastic, and spurns it when it grows black and cold, unyielding and unresponsive. Just like a woman. Something the voice of which, clear and springing and cheery, is awakened under the hammering blows of fate—a voice that is always inspiring with its infection of the good cheer of industry. Just as a woman sings at her swing or beside the cradle. Something that always holds the most prominent place in the shop; that is in demand when a little rivet is to be fastened to a little boy's toy wagon, or a point tempered on a mighty breaking plow. Just like a woman's work in the home. Something whose position in the shop is respected as though it were a throne. Everything that comes in or goes out must go around it. Whoever heard of moving the anvil to let a buggy wheel or a six-cylinder automobile get past? Something that doesn't have to be insured, because it is indestructible—fire or cyclone or earthquake assail it in vain. The fire goes out, cold as greenland; the cyclone passes by, utterly winded, and the earthquake is never equal to a shiver again. And there stands the old anvil—the same old anvil, right where it was, waiting for some man to come along and build a fireproof shop around it, and start up a transient forge beside it. And where there is no cannon in the village, the anvil it is that booms patriotic defiance to all the world or monarchies, and salutes "Old Glory" when he unfurls his splendor to the caresses of the free winds and the golden sunshine.

Who else but a woman should manufacture the anvils of the United States?

What They Get, They Hold.

And she also manufactures vises. Things that hold what they once catch hold of. Just like a woman. Tiny vises that clasp a band of gold as softly as somebody's fingers twine about your own, my son. And hold it just as firmly, without seeming to have hold of it at all. And don't you realize that they have, unless you try to pull yourself away. And great vises that hold the big bar of steel for the finishing touches of the file. Vises that daintily hold a bit of satinwood for the tiny teeth of the scroll saw, or the big plank for the bite of the crosscut, or the soothing of the plane. Vises that don't appear to do any active work themselves, but somehow or other appear to take hold of every job that comes into the shop. Just like a woman. Did you every try to do anything about the house, man, that she didn't try to take it out of your hands, or at least hold it her own way and insist on "helping" (which by feminine interpretations is "doing it all her own way") before you got through? That's why she tries to nail two lath together with an eight-penny nail by laying them upon her hobbled knees, and cries because you laugh at her when she finds out her mistake.

Anvils and vises! And a woman manufactures them, better than any man in America. Surest thing you know.

The Worn-out Things.

In very old blacksmith shop you will see scattered about the anvil block a lot of old hammers, rusty with disuse, and deformed by hard work and years of hammering hot iron on the breast of the anvil. Lop-sided things they are. The most optimistic woman that ever tried it couldn't crack a hickory nut in the palm of her hand with one of them. The tempered face worn away long ago; the soft iron curled around the edges like celery tips. The most useless things in the shop.

The smithies of history are littered with just such hammers, broken surges of iron that have beaten themselves out of temper and symmetry and usefulness against the cliff of the anvil. Wasted emblems of vain knockers of the generations. Every one of them has stood "against" something. Against the voyage of Columbus. Against George Stephenson and his locomotive. Against the English Bible. Against the steamship. Against the Atlantic cable. Against the Declaration of Independence. Against the emancipation proclamation. Against the automobile. Against good roads. Against the Panama Canal. Against woman suffrage. "Agin the government."

Knorkers and Boosters.

Every useless hammer rusting in the old shop, dating back to a big one marked in Egyptian hieroglyphics—Against Hebrew emancipation. Rameses down to the little ones cheerfully knocking everything that is moving toward today—the waste of the ages is the accumulation of the things that were "agin it." The most dishonorable part of the harness is the "breeching." The extremes of civilization are marked by the bullet that speeds forward and the boomerang that shoots backward. The Dead Sea is the saltiest thing on earth, just because it stands still and Lot's wife was saltier than the dead sea just because she looked back.

Aunty—remember Lot's wife. Freshen yourself up and get into the procession if you have to ride in the hearse.

THREE BRANKRUPTS PETITION.

Two Voluntary and One Involuntary Filed Yesterday—Realty Man and Dye Works Included.

Earl W. Peck, a real estate dealer of this city, filed a bankruptcy petition in the United States District Court yesterday. His debts amount to $10,245, almost exclusively borrowed money, and his assets, $2650, all of which he holds to be exempt.

A petition asking that Charles A. Folsom be declared a bankrupt was filed by Haas, Baruch & Co., Western Wholesale Drug Company, and R. L. Craig, alleging that Folsom is indebted to them in various amounts. It is alleged that Folsom committed an act of bankruptcy in allowing one of his other creditors to take judgment against him.

Batchelder Bros., dyers and cleaners, filed a petition in bankruptcy. Their assets are scheduled at $27,572.85, and their liabilities $21,583. The assets consist mostly of machinery, wagons and other personal property used in the conduct of the business.

French conquest. During the passing of this rebel army the street crowds cheered continuously, but no shooting was indulged in. Late that afternoon two drunken rebels tried to ride into one of the large stores, but were prevented and later a squad of well-mounted rebels was detailed to catch and shoot the offenders in case of resistance. This little incident did much to quiet the fears of many in the city, for considerable uneasiness was felt by all classes as night approached. For weeks we had dreaded the entrance by force of these same rebels and we could not be sure, now they were within the city, that they would respect the peace compact. The night passed quietly, however, and great thankfulness was felt by all that we were to escape the rioting and looting through which Torreon passed.

"Each member of the rebel band wore a rosette or bow of the new national colors; some wore sashes across their shoulders; others had their hats decorated with wide pieces of ribbon; all wore somewhere on their persons a small medallion of Guadalupe, the patron saint of Mexico. Many of the peon rebels wore stuck in their hats a peacock feather. Rebels were in evidence everywhere. They rode in every available coche; they overflowed the plaza benches; they swarmed about the street venders of soda water, ice cream, sweet buns and candy; they stood about in bunches laughing and chatting with friends and relatives; and it seemed to me I never saw so many people enjoying themselves to such an extent in an innocent way. True there was some drunkenness, but not much, considering the number of men and the circumstances. Their cup of happiness seemed full, on the second night, when one of the city bands entered the music stand of the Plaza Principal and began a stirring national air—for every Mexican has in his heart, no matter whatever else it harbors, wicked or otherwise, a great love for music.

"At the end of a popular medley the rebels that thronged the plaza to its limits shouted and cheered until the band had to give an encore of the same piece once and yet again before the tired musicians were allowed to rest. Watching this gay spectacle from a balcony overlooking the plaza, one lost sight of all the realities of this mimic war that has lasted six months, cost so many lives and resulted in the destruction of so much property; the lights twinkling through the trees of the little plaza, the gay music and the picturesquely-garbed soldiers of fortune seemed like a scene from an opera."

TO RAISE WRECKED SHIP.

Lo Angeles Man Invents Bag to Be Put Under and Pumped Full of Air.

Capt. Joseph Grant, a submarine engineer and deep sea diver, living at No. 4218 South Olive street, has invented a device which he believes will practically revolutionize the present method of raising wrecked vessels. A flexible specially-prepared canvas bag and air is all that is used to do the work. The bag is attached to a sunken vessel and pumped up with air. The air pressure brings the ship to the surface and keeps it afloat, according to Grant's theory.

With a pontoon only two feet long and four inches in diameter, Grant is able to raise a model five feet long, weighing 150 pounds, air being supplied by the mouth. The model used for the experiment is made of iron, wood and lead, and sinks as soon as it is placed in the water.

Grant believes any sunken vessel can be raised by his method and with his invention in two days. He believes he could raise the Maine in its entirety in ten days.

For the purpose of giving more practical demonstrations of the invention Grant, who is assisted in his work by his son, Joseph Grant, Jr., is having a boat forty feet long built, and proposes to sink and then raise it off Long Beach.

Grant and his son are also the inventors of a submarine which they say can be pierced by cannon balls, but will not sink or get put out of commission. They are now working on a device intended to keep vessels from sinking. The elder Grant has invented a flexible compartment which expands by air pressure as soon as a vessel is struck and broken in.

KILLS GOOSE; WANTS EGG.

City Sues For Rent of Saloon on Municipal Property License of Which Is Revoked.

The Police Commission killed a goose which was laying golden eggs worth $275 a month to the city when it revoked the license of the Reception bar last October.

Previous to that time the Los Angeles Brewing Company had been paying the monthly rental for the barroom, but as soon as the saloon was put out of business, it refused to further liquidate.

The municipality is now seeking to compel the brewery to pay up $1650 for back rent. The case will come before Judge Conrey tomorrow on the motion of the plaintiff to strike out most of the defendant's answer.

The brewery leased in 1907 for saloon purposes, the premises at No. 214-16 North Spring street and No. 213 North Main street from the owners, the Harris Newmark Company, Kaspare Cohn and M. A. Newmark.

In February, 1910, the city purchased the property, together with other premises, as a site for a new City Hall. It then began to collect the rent. The brewery paid up without protest until the Police Commission revoked the license. Its defense is that the city rescinded the contract by the action of the commission.

VETERAN AT REST.

The remains of Robert Leach, a well-known resident of Edendale, who died at his home on Tuesday, was buried in Forest Lawn Cemetery Thursday. The services were conducted by Rev. S. J. Mead. Leach was a native of Pennsylvania, and moved to California six years ago. He was 74 years of age, and leaves a widow and six children. He was a member of the Fifty-eighth Pennsylvania Infantry in the Civil War.

FRANCISCO TO REFORM.

Upon his promise to go to work, the failure to provide a case against Lawrence D. Wood, which was to have been heard yesterday before Justice Forbes, was continued until July 13. WHICH?

It is now claimed in behalf of the seniors at Barnard College (female) that every one of them can do a good job at darning socks. Whether this is a threat or promise we don't know.

BOTH CLAIM THE HONOR.

The chief query as to the shooting of the millionaire clubman, W. E. D. Stokes, is which of the two chorus girls accused did the actual shooting. Both claim the alleged honor. If they cannot agree they might try it all over again.

THE PROCESS OF ELIMINATION.

By one fell sweep of his tongue, William Jennings Bryan has eliminated Harmon, Wilson, Clark, Dix, Foss, or Underwood or anybody else for party leader in 1912. The Peerless One is fast becoming a joke in American politics. He is shrinking so rapidly that soon there will be nothing left but a reminiscence and a bad taste.

WILD MUSTARD.

Here it is mid-June, and the fields have not yet lost the joy of the wild mustard. In California a man may be poor in purse and yet possess himself of the gold in the fields. The ivory of wild raspberry vines, the ruby of the Indian paint brushes and the treasure of the wild mustard offer their wealth unto all.

UNFORTUNATES.

A lady who was taken before a lunacy board in this city Friday proved that she was not insane, but only short of cash. She had worried herself into hysteria because her husband sent her no funds. We venture to say that the asylums are full of women who might have been saved by having their husbands sent to the whipping post or to the penitentiary.

OPIUM TREATY SIGNED.

The Anglo-Chinese agreement, providing for the reduction and final extinction of the opium trade in China, has been signed in Peking and it takes effect at once. The Chinese government has been waging a war for five years to stamp out the traffic. Those who are shaping the destiny of the Flowery Kingdom appreciate the seriousness of the menace. The new agreement is intended to wipe out the trade within the coming six years.

WHAT RATS COST.

It has been estimated that $180,000,000 worth of property is destroyed in the United States each year by rats. These are the figures of Charles M. Frey, the rat exterminator of the Department of Agriculture. The three cities of the world which suffer most are Pittsburgh, New York and St. Petersburg. These figures give some idea of the commercial importance of rat extermination, to say nothing of the sanitary reasons for abolishing the pests. The rat is the best carrier of bubonic plague, smallpox and several other diseases which afflict mankind.

SHALL WE TRUST THEM?

The Independent is printing a series of articles about the world's twelve present-day "major prophets." It nearly always happens that a man with the leisure and disposition to inform his mind or one who takes the pains to make some original expression about life will have for an audience a large number of persons of less culture or less initiative. A thinker is quick to assume that what is true to him must be a rule by which the world is run. We can read with respect what the twelve modern prophets think or feel to be true about universal problems, but only what comes within the range of our own experience can ever be really true for ourselves. The joy of the prophet to us must always cease at the point that his vision eludes us. As far as his revelation is our own is it natural and to be desired. Let them blaze the trail straight to the heart of God, but they cannot tread it for us. In the end we shall all take the steps of our own ascension.

THE POMERENE PERSON.

Speaking to the "hupper 'ouse" in Washington a few days ago, Senator Pomerene made use of the following unpatriotic and wholly unnecessary words:

"Speaking for myself," he said, "I think it is high time that the American people should understand whether the Stars and Stripes are to be the emblem of their power and authority, or whether that emblem shall be the oil barrel or the tobacco tag."

That's no way for a United States Senator to talk. Pomerene well knows that this country will never consent to a tobacco tag for a flag. Or for an oil barrel, either, as far as that goes. He knows as well as anybody that the bright banner which Betsy Ross made from wintry stars and summer rainbows is good enough for the American people, and that they will stick to it as long as there is a man left.

But what use to be facetious? There is no way in the world to handle a fellow like Pomerene other than to brand him as the ultimate jackass and the windy grand-stander that he surely must be. His talk is worthy of no one but a soap box orator.

There should be some way to keep these silly asses out of the Senate and the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States. The legislative body of the national government was designed to be a serious and a useful institution. It costs money to run it. A mountebank is as much out of place there as a pig in a parlor.

"HARD LOSERS."

An abusive and malicious contemporary, the Express—owned and edited by E. T. Earl, hypocrite, rebater, bogus-philanthropist and welcher—now seeking to apologize for dynamiters, has added to its collection of choice English the phrase "hard loser," which ever and again with wearisome iteration and a "plentiful lack of wit," it applies to The Times, out of its unfailing malice and perennial chagrin.

There is a species of loss which The Times—unlike its contumelious contemporary—has never been called upon to endure. It has never during its many years of existence lost its patronage. It never has sought to prostitute a noble religious organization to base political purposes or to its own selfish aggrandizement. It has never, like its befouled contemporary, the Earl, stood sponsor for a bribe-taking "Purity Squad," sent out to prey upon procuresses and panderers; it never has employed a Busse, stained with a confession of graft, to spy upon its neighbors and do dirty work for the most damnable ends. It never has failed to make good its pledges. Nor has it ever forfeited the good opinion of the community by waddling on every side of every question, and, while attempting to be all things to all men, succeeded only in being nothing to anybody. Nobody says of The Times what everybody says of its disgruntled evening contemporary—

"Look as I blow this feather from my face
And as the air blows it to me again,
Obeying with my wind when I do blow,
And yielding to another when he blows,
Commanded always by the greater gust."

The Times counts its independence as among the most valued of its valuable assets. It regrets with mock sorrow that its critic permits itself to indulge in unprovoked and unwarranted flings. The Times entertains a spirit of kindly feeling towards all journalists—even such malicious beach-combers of newspaperdom as have been washed by the adverse waves of fortune into the sanctum of its contemporary. The Times therefore ventures to hope that the bottle of vitriolized ink which the editors of its contemporary use when they write about The Times will be thrown out of the window, and that its contemporary will ascend to a higher level of journalism, and hereafter speak of The Times in such terms of courteous deference as are due from an inferior to a superior.

The Times admits that in some respects it is a "hard loser." It was hard to lose the twenty loyal men whose lives were spilled into the air by the dynamite bomb that destroyed the Times Building. The loss of its material property, great as it was, was never mourned by the proprietors of The Times. They were too busily engaged in the business of rehabilitation to find time for regrets. But the loss of their faithful employees was hard to bear, and time does not diminish the bitterness nor ameliorate the sorrow of it.

Political losses, such as the nomination of Johnson, the election of Works, and the enactment of a lot of fool laws by the late Legislature, are losses of the entire community, and The Times takes its one-quarter millionth part thereof not "hardly," but with philosophical composure. The courts will wipe some of the unconstitutional laws from the statute book. Some of them will be dead letters and will never be enforced, and the next Legislature will probably repeal the remainder. As for the initiative, the referendum and the recall, it will be time enough for The Times to mourn over their adoption after the election. Possibly they may not be adopted.

The Times, in its relation to public measures, is neither a "hard loser" nor a boastful winner. It is not, like the Express, saturated and inodorous with the sanctimonious personality of a self-righteous rebater. It does not, like its contemporary, "bend the pregnant hinges of the knee that thrift may follow fawning." It opposes or favors men or measures as in its opinion the best interests of the people of the country demand. It condemns pharisees. It supports the able and patriotic administration of President Taft in most particulars. It differs from him with respect to reciprocity and the withdrawal of Alaska coal lands. It opposed the nomination of Hiram Johnson, the incendiary promoter of criminal hatred. It hopes that he will yet do something to redeem the series of self-sufficient blunders that have thus far marked his occupancy of the gubernatorial chair, for after all he is a half-Republican, and like Byron's Corsair, "he links one virtue with a thousand crimes."

There is, if we may venture to gently chide our cross-grained evening contemporary, too much "sour" in its milk of human kindness, too much of a disposition to mount a stone wall and bay at the moon, and yelp—

"I am Sir Oracle,
And when I ope my lips let no dog bark."

Let it be modest, courteous and conciliatory like The Times [huh!]—and try and equalize conditions, not by dragging others down, but by lifting itself out of the mud in which it at times evinces a porcine disposition to wallow.

THE LOWER COLORADO RIVER.

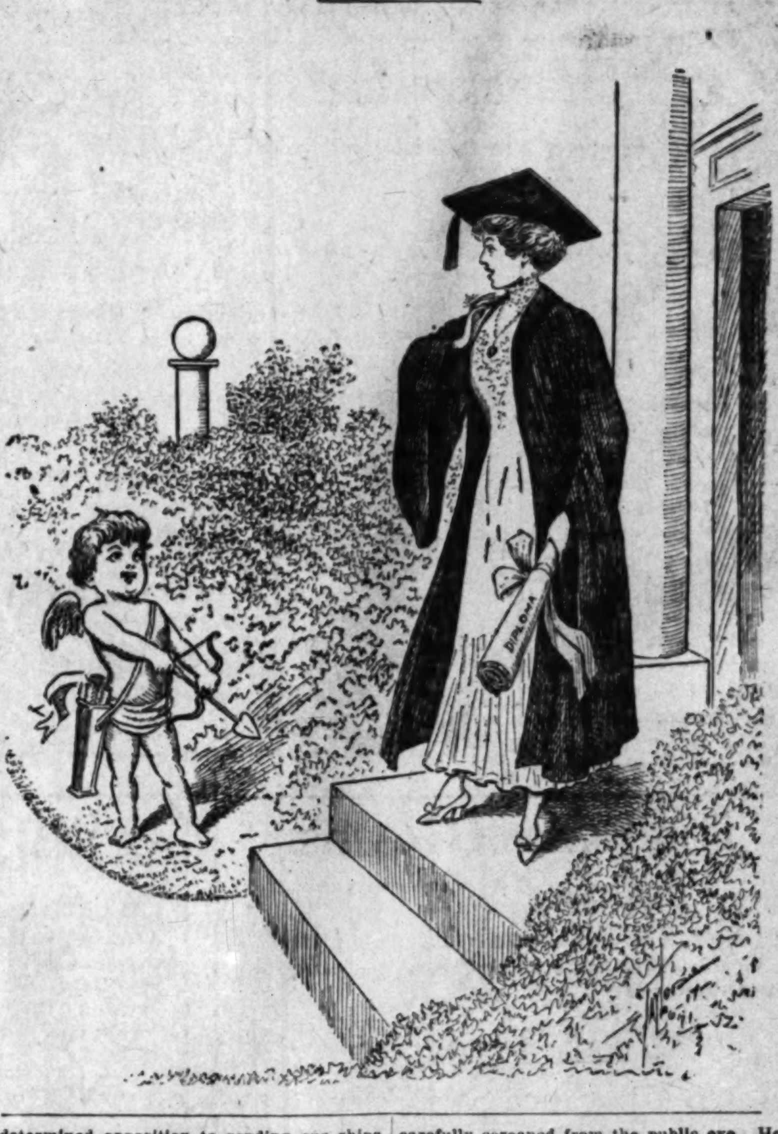
On Page 4, Part VI of today's issue is begun an interesting official report printed under the head of, "Struggling With a Tortuous and Troublesome River"—the Rio Colorado of the West. The report (which is finished on page 12) is a compendium of timely and authoritative facts relating to a difficult situation, affecting an important region, including the Imperial Valley, and will be read with interest. One slight transposition is pointed out here. The last paragraph in the second column of page 5 should be treated as the closing paragraph of the entire matter.

THE RECALL AND FLEAS.

Montesquieu says: "There is no liberty if the power of judging be not separated from the legislative and executive powers. If it were joined to the legislative power authority over the life and liberty of citizens would be arbitrary; for the judge would be the legislator. If it were joined to the executive authority, the judge would have the power of a tyrant."

If the recall should be extended to the Federal government, what might be the result? A law must be interpreted not by what has been done under it, but by what may be done under it. If the recall had existed in Washington's day he would have been removed from the Presidency because of his refusal to empty the treasury of the young nation into that of the Jacobin party then in power in France, and because of his determined opposition to sending our ships and troops to the aid of France in her war with other nations. His principle of "friendship for all nations, entangling alliances with none" would have been voted down and he been deposed by a people frenzied to aid France of the guillotine in return for the aid given to us by France of Louis XVI.

What!--So Soon?



If the recall had existed in the first months of Lincoln's administration that wise and patriotic statesman might have been voted out of office by 20,000,000 people who would have followed the lead of Horace Greeley and said to the southern States, "Wayward sisters, depart in peace."

The adoption of the initiative, the referendum and the recall means the placing of the power of enacting, administering and judicially interpreting the laws in the hands of mass meetings and it does not mean anything else.

Suppose—to illustrate—that the people should, by means of the initiative, enact an amendment to the civil code of California abolishing all laws for the collection of debts and should proceed to use the recall to remove from the bench any and all judges who would not declare such law to be constitutional? The illustration is not far-fetched, for the debtors greatly exceed the creditors in number. The entire structure of business, of credit and of wealth-getting would tumble about our ears and a chaos of civil government would prevail. Suppose that, by means of the initiative, a law should be enacted confiscating to the State all property owned by individuals in excess of a sum named, and providing for a distribution among all citizens of the excess.

Of course it may be assumed that the intelligent voters of California would never favor unjust laws? But who knows? When the waves of popular prejudice and passion run high, who can say what bark will be wrecked?

If the voters should adopt these fads of populism they would in the end illustrate the proverb that "he who lies down with dogs will get up with fleas."

EGOISTS GREAT AND SMALL.

Older than the discovery of fire, more persistent than the flea or the mosquito, as hard to eradicate as black scale or Bermuda grass, is the self-complacent egoist. Who has not seen him with his "Keep off the Grass" sign stamped upon his marble brow? He has no peccadilloes in himself for others to pick to pieces, so enjoys himself in jumping upon the frailties of less favored mortals. As a natural dictator, he loves to use a bludgeon on the opinions of those who failed to first of all obtain his royal sanction to express themselves. Being on all sides encircled by himself, he does not understand any one person or any one thing; he is blinded by self-concentration. He has no real interest in anything but his own exemplary being, and so is very wrathful with all those who do not take a studious interest in his advertised excellencies.

By carefully impressing those around him with his own immaculate conception of himself, he often manages to become for a time a political leader. In time, however, his overadvertised importance brings about the inevitable reaction and he wakes up one fine morning to discover that some special speech of his or some blatantly-expressed opinion has been quietly ignored by the press and the people at large. Then he is likely to become a Timon of Athens and jump from one extreme of opinion to the other.

The smaller egoist is not so cock-sure of himself as his big superior. He is immaculate, of couse! but replaces self-confidence with hypocrisy. His virtuous reputation is more cheaply bought, and depends on his ability for "condoning sins he is inclined to, by damning those he has no mind to." To him the existence of evil is of less importance than the appearance of it. In the words of Thoreau, "He considers not what is truly respectable, but what is respected." He parades musty virtues in the parlor and leaves the kitchen unswept, and would cover up, if he could, every smallpox and scarlet fever sign with his special brand of whitewash. In civic affairs he would allow evil to flourish, as long as the sight of it was carefully screened from the public eye. He would brand any other method as "toying with vice."

So the game of make-believe will go merrily on and people who are in the habit of calling a spade a spade—or, should occasion demand it, "a bloody shovel"—will be greeted by hysterical shrieking from this smaller type of egoist.

FOUR—THAT'S ALL.

Our worst fears have come to pass. Only four American women are to be admitted to the coronation of King George of England. Only four American persons of what has long been called, erroneously enough, "the opposite sex" will have the sublime privilege of seeing with their own eyes the crown placed on Queen Mary's royal head.

The threat that has hung for weeks like a black pall over us is at last to be realized. The Damoclean sword has fallen; the hair upon which it hung has been cut. "'Raus mit 'em" is the vulgar and brutal cry that echoes and re-echoes through the fog-wrapped streets of London. Uncounted American women who have crossed the big pond with wardrobes and jewels of priceless value are to be shut out in the cold and can now see the show only as Jim Jeffries and Jack Johnson may see it—from the curb or through a window.

Of course the American-born women who have married British noblemen will get in, but we cannot count them to be Americans. They are really more English than the English themselves; they would as lief be found in Patagonia as in America. They are persons who have proudly parted with their native nasal twang and now say "awsk" and "fawncy" and words like that.

Alas, of what avail shall it be that milady now returns to New York, Milwaukee, Oshkosh and our other cities, saying that she "has been to the coronation?" Won't all the neighbors know that she was a mere buttinsky who passed unnoticed and unknown?

UNCLE WALT.

The Poet Philosopher.

Beneath this stone there lies at rest a man who always did his best. The gods ordained that he should move along a lowly, humble groove. For him there was no wealth or fame, he bore no proud ancestral name, no palace doors for him swung wide, but in his hut he lived and died. His years were many and his toil brought riches from the stubborn soil, but all that wealth to them was brought who owned the land whereon he wrought. He fashioned lumber and the boards made shelter for the languid lords. He fed the cows and herded swine that other men might nobly dine. From break of dawn till close of day he toiled along his weary way, and took his earnings in his hand to fatten those who owned the land. His feet were seamed with bramble scars, that others might have motor cars. This strip of ground is his reward; 'twas given by his overlord; it's six feet long and two feet wide, and here they brought him when he died. To labor hard for fifty years, endure the burdens and the tears, to have no grateful hours of rest, to toil, and bend, and do your best, to grind, and moil and delve and slave, and at the last to get—a grave! Poor souls that in the darkness grope, and weave and spin and have no hope!

PUBLIC SERVICE: City Hall and Courts.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

Expert Miller, discussing his telephone rates before the City Club yesterday, was besieged with questions by the members, who hadn't learned much.

Police Judge Chambers yesterday upheld the ordinance by which smoke is tested with a ruled card and the first conviction followed. It will be appealed.

Local lawyers are usurping poetic licenses and are forming the habit of coming into court with their pleadings couched in verse.

Seventeen years after their marriage, three children having been born, the marriage of first cousins, which was celebrated in Kansas, was annulled yesterday.

LISSNER RATES UNDER A QUIZ.

CITY CLUB MEMBERS TRY INQUIRY ON EXPERT MILLER.

Unsatisfactory Discussion of Local Situation Results in Fusillade of Ominous Questions—Rates Wonderfully Low, Says Miller, in Speech to Justify Increase.

"Psychology rather than engineering" determined the Los Angeles telephone rates, according to the explanation of Kempter B. Miller, Chicago expert, to the City Club members yesterday.

Miller discussed "The Telephone Situation in Los Angeles." It was an abstract treatment dealing in history, old statistics and a few facts about the increased rates proposed by the Lissner utilities board on Miller's advice. Lissner presided at the City Club as he does at the Board of Public Utilities. The address of Miller seemed under suppression of the real things that the members of the club wanted to know.

In fact, the address seemed to create the belief that it was prepared to evade the facts, rather than present them, and at its conclusion Miller's offer to answer questions brought him and Lissner more trouble than had been counted on. Miller proved the less reticent of the two on most matters.

The pitch of everything was turned to the theory that the present and past rates have been too low, and that ever hence they must grow higher. Miller said the telephone world wondered at it as much as it did of the tremendous telephone development here in the past decade, unequalled in the whole country.

"Los Angeles has been getting as good service as it could expect for the rates it has been paying," quoth Miller of Chicago. He followed this with his statement that he had fixed the rates as a matter of "psychology rather than engineering."

Lissner asked him to say how the rates compare with other cities, and Miller said they were lower than any.

Lissner did everything to justify the increase in the Home company's rates of $174,000 annually, advised by Miller and approved by Lissner's board. In spite of the fact that the temper of the club seemed irritated by this, it was persevered in to the end.

Miller stood the "quiz" well except once. A. F. Southwick asked him if the salaries of the officials of the companies were an important item in fixing rates. He said they were important but he did not think they could be criticised justly, but if at all, on account of their lowness. Southwick asked him what the salary of the president of the Pacific Company is. Miller declined to tell. He said he got these items in confidence.

David Evans asked if the people must pay the rates why they should not have all the figures as well as a few. "Why should any part of the figures be kept secret?" he asked.

Miller said he had obtained the figures for the City Attorney in the Pacific Company's suit and that he would not reveal them while that suit is undisposed of by the court. The answer seemed to further irritate the unenlightened members and Lissner hastened to assure them that Miller had the full permission of the utilities department to reveal anything he wanted to.

A little later former Councilman Dromgold rose to ask if Miller thought the intercommunication of the two systems here is feasible and physically possible. Lissner intervened with the remark that he was just about to explain this. He made Dromgold sit down. Last year's expert, Sloan, had given him "cold comfort" on this question, Lissner said, and this year the utilities board is dickering with Miller for an expert report on the question but hasn't closed the bargain. Lissner told Dromgold pertly that Miller gets paid for his advice.

"You and I are not engineers nor electricians," said Dromgold, "and I merely wanted to know if Mr. Miller believes intercommunication is physically possible."

"Absolutely," said Miller. "It is physically possible but whether it is legally and commercially is another question."

If there is necessity for Miller's employment after this statement, it will be for legal or commercial advice, the auditors inferred. Lissner will tend to that.

Other questions intended to drag facts or figures out of the discussion came from Fred Warner and E. J. Fleming. Warner brought out the fact that "obsolescence" was a part of the telephone depreciation and Fleming that climate in Los Angeles has the effect of minimizing maintenance.

Pressed for valuation figures of the two plants Miller said he valued the Pacific plant at $5300,000, which was $800,000 increase over last year, and the Home company a "slightly less" though its appraisement last year was over $5,000,000. He said the Pacific had made vastly more improvement than the Home.

Lissner explained that no "independent" inventory of the Home company had been made because "things were up in the air," due to the Pacific company's injunction suit, and that the utilities board was ready to stand by its work of last year. He said the board wouldn't be fit to hold office if it wasn't as ready to do justice to the companies as well as the people, and grant increases.

The first protest on the telephone rates was filed yesterday. It is from F. A. Schott, head of the Schott Accounting and Engineering Company. He says the ordinary residence phone may be maintained for $1 a month, and the one-party business phone for $2.50 and "still afford a handsome profit to the concern supplying such service."

LEGAL PAPERS WRIT IN POESY.

PLEADINGS AND PRAYERS NOW MADE OUT IN VERSE.

Woes of Married Life Incite Attorneys to Appeal to Muse Which Court Will Read Tomorrow in the Case of Two Women Being Sued by Their Spouses.

That commercialism has destroyed all sense of the finer arts is impliedly denied by lawyers by breaking into verse. The muses have been busy of late, and the barristers are now coming into court with their pleadings and prayers in rhyme.

The latest poet-lawyer to arise above the horizon is E. M. Barnes of San Francisco. Tomorrow Judge Monroe will read poetic pleas for relief for two women who are being sued by their spouses for severance of the marriage bonds.

In a notice to the opposing attorneys that tomorrow he will move the court to allow $200 attorney's fees and the wife $20 a month alimony in the suit of Christian B. Rice against Mary E. Rice, the counsellor thus expresses the wife's sentiments:

"You've often heard the story of love's dismembered chain—
The tale is gray and hoary—it I must tell again.
To tell it I'm compelled to hire
  A man of law's sheep skin,
With outstretched arms who do aspire
  To all our surplus 'tin.'
These men are wild and wooley, when asked to work for fun;
The 'stuff' for one I crave you truly, so he can load his gun."

Similar relief is asked in the suit of O. C. Pettibone against Nina N. Pettibone. Her feelings are thus given expression:

"My hands are tied and pockets torn because the law's decree
That all the 'dough' we both have earned shall be community;
All my estate therein courts hold is but expectancy—
When I try to enter a lawyer's fold,
  I'm up a limbless tree."

The lawyer seems to be strong on history, too. His prayer to the court to open a default in the Pettibone case follows.

"Now comes defendant herein and moves to set aside a default herein, and that she may be allowed to appear and defend this suit. She is advised that an answer setting forth her defense that the honorable, the Chancellor, may judge therefrom if it would be an idle act to open said default, should accompany this motion.

"She is advised that since King Edward III empowered the Court of Equity to throw its protecting arms around the rights of married women that the strict rules of procedure will not be strenuously adhered to against them. She further shows to the honorable court that by her affidavit on file herein she is and always has been unable to employ counsel to prepare said answer."

HER PLEA WINS.

WIFE OBTAINS DIVORCE.

The marriage of C. C. Pitzer and Eva Finch, first cousins, was annulled yesterday by Judge Arnot, presiding over extra court session No. 2, at the request of both parties. The only difference was as to whom the decree should be granted.

They were married in Howard City, Kan., in 1894. Shewa s 18 years old and he was 24. The laws of that State prohibit marriages within such a close degree of consanguinity.

According to the story Pitzer told, they have arranged so that she was to have been given fictitious parents in the application for the license, if the official should examine carefully into the relationship.

They came to this State two years after their marriage. All went well until 1908. Meantime three children had been born. The couple then had some differences and he left her. She prepared to sue for a divorce, and he anticipated her by beginning proceedings for annullment.

She filed a cross-complaint, alleging that she was entitled to the decree, as she had been an innocent party to the wedding, which was in violation of the Kansas statutes.

The judge found that her contention was correct, and the annullment was made on her pleading. She was given the custody of the children, and Pitzer must pay her $50 a month for their support.

INCORPORATIONS.

INCORORATINOS. Articles of incorporation were filed yesterday by the Alberta Incubator Manufacturing Company. Directors, A. K. Martell, C. L. McKesson and H. M. Shanklin; capital stock, $250,000, subscribed, $3. National Home & Town Builders; directors, A. F. Clark, E. E. Raysdall and James J. Slavin; capital stock, $2,000,000. Monte Cristo Consolidated Mines Corporation, directors, B. F. Taylor, W. J. Bell, Fuller Delby and S. T. Johnson, capital stock, $600,000; subscribed $2003.

RIVALS ROW.

Thomas H. B. Varney yesterday filed suit for the purpose of having an injunction issued against Ed Herwick to keep him from putting his signs on the sides of certain buildings in Ocean Park, and for $500 damages. Varney is a billboard contractor. He declares that he rented the walls of the buildings and placed valuable signs on them. He says that Herwick, who is a sign painter, came along, defaced the signs and placed others on the buildings.

The Inferior Courts.

SCIENCE RULES IN SMOKE TEST.

POLICE JUDGE UPHOLDS THE NEW ORDINANCE.

By Optical Illusion White Card Marked With Small Black Squares and Placed Fifty Feet from Observer Assumes Color of Densest Smoke Allowed Within the City.

H. Wyatt, a representative of the Los Angeles Gas & Electric Corporation, was found guilty yesterday in the Police Court of having violated the smoke ordinance. Sentence will be pronounced tomorrow morning.

Several times in the past the officers of various large companies have been made to answer to similar charges but not until yesterday was a conviction obtained.

The company demurred to the test given by the Health Board of the smoke issuing from the company's furnaces at the Aliso street plant, but was overruled. The test, which is a unique one, was upheld by Police Judge Chambers and Wyatt was then found guilty.

The test consists in an observer placing a specially marked card about fifty feet from him and then comparing the apparent color of the card with the smoke. If the smoke is darker than the card appears to be and remains so for more than five minutes in any one hour the ordinance is declared to have been violated.

The card test is used in New York, Washington, D. C., and Rochester, N. Y., and the Los Angeles ordinance recently drafted follows the same lines.

The Los Angeles Gas & Electric Corporation will appeal the case to the higher court to get a definite ruling on the test.

As explained by Assistant City Prosecutor Nimmo, the test depends upon an optical illusion.

The card used in testing the smoke at the company's Aliso street plant is a copy of the ones used in the eastern cities. It is of white cardboard, 5x8 inches. On the card lines are drawn with black ink so that the card when ready for the test is checked. The lines are about one twenty-fifth of an inch wide and the squares made by other lines crossing at right angles are about nine-twenty-fifths of an inch square.

When placed at a distance of from forty-five to fifty feet from the observer, the card looks gray and is the official color of the densest smoke allowed to pour from chimneys inside the city limits.

GIVES THEM TIME.

FIRE ESCAPE CASES GO OVER.

After giving a short talk on the value of the ordinance requiring fire escapes on all lodging houses of certain sizes, Police Judge Frederickson yesterday continued the cases against Mrs. E. Dickerson, Mrs. D. Fuller, J. Fearnly, A. L. Nelson, L. A. Ross, F. E. Brown and O. F. Bates.

"The city has grown from a small town into a large city and the ordinance is necessary to insure safety to persons living in lodging houses and apartments," Judge Frederickson said. "It is true that it requires a large outlay to fit the building with them, but it is also true that the revenue has greatly increased."

Frank Walker, whose case had been pending several weeks, was fined $25 and the other was held in abeyance, while Walker appealed to the higher court.

The numerous cases against T. Welsendanger were passed to be reset.

Lewis Goes North.

J. N. Lewis, who is wanted in San Francisco to answer to a charge of having obtained about $1100 by means of bogus drafts, was ordered remanded to the custody of a San Francisco police officer by Police Judge Ross yesterday. His case was then stricken from the blotter of the Police Courts.

THE NEW CONGRESSMAN.

Joke Played on a Green Member From a Middle-Western State by Champ Clark.

One of the favorite stories told in the House restaurant is still going the rounds and is usually related for the benefit of some new member, says the Washington correspondent of the Brooklyn Eagle. It concerns a very verdant Congressman, who was sent to Washington during the last session from a Middle Western State to fill out an unexpired term. He arrived when the House was going through a busy session. He spent the entire first day sitting in his seat, from noon until nearly 6 o'clock. The next day he was in his place promptly when the House met. When it got to be 2 o'clock he appeared to be getting uneasy and finally leaned over and whispered to a fellow-member:

"When does the House adjourn for lunch? I didn't get any yesterday and I can't go from breakfast to dinner."

"We don't adjourn for lunch," said the colleague. "We work right through until 5 or 6 o'clock. When you want to go out to lunch you have to get permission from the Speaker."

The new Congressman was bashful and self-conscious, and Uncle Joe Cannon, who was then Speaker, looked very stern and forbidding. But finally his hunger overcame his timidity and he ventured up the steps leading to the Speaker's chair.

"Please may I go to lunch?" whispered the new member.

"What!" said Uncle Joe, staring at him.

"I said I would like to get some lunch, if I may go out now."

"Oh," said Uncle Joe. "I didn't hear what you said. You are a Democrat, aren't you?"

The new member nodded.

"Well, you must go and see Mr. Clark, the Democratic leader, about that."

The new member hunted up Champ Clark and repeated his request. Mr. Clark looked at him thoughtfully, took out his watch, and said:

"You may go to lunch now and you may have one hour."

The new member thanked Clark and hurried out to get a taxicab to convey him to the hotel district. He did not know that there was a House restaurant downstairs. Try as he would, he could not get back to the Capitol within the hour and, hesitatingly, he reported to Mr. Clark that he was three minutes late.

"It's all right this time," said Clark, solemnly, "but don't let it occur again."

The next day the new member again received an hour's leave from Mr. Clark. When he appeared the third day to make his request the Missouri man was getting a little tired of the joke.

"My friend," he said, "why don't you go to some fellow member and find out the customs of the House? You don't have to come to me or anybody else to get permission to eat. You can go downstairs in the restaurant whenever you feel like it."

The new member's jaw dropped, he blushed, and then started out to hunt up the man who originally sent him to Uncle Joe.

The Cause.

LABORITE SENTENCED FOR BURGLARY TELLS COURT UNION IS RESPONSIBLE.

THAT the labor union of which he was a member and which caused him to go on a strike is responsible for him becoming a thief, was the admission made by Glenn Burdette Blood, alias Sherwin, as he stood before Judge Willis yesterday to be sentenced for burglary.

Leaving honest employment to follow the cry of the striking ironworkers and their well-paid walking delegates, Blood found himself without funds, and stole the tools of men who were industriously free and continued their labors.

That he followed a false prophet and that he would better make up his mind that he had received no call from the high heavens to be the arbiter between capital and labor, is the advice given him by the jurist.

Blood was gathered in by the police when they rounded up a gang of pickets who were violating the law. They found incriminating evidence on him. He was questioned and admitted that he was a burglar.

"The court is sorry to see a young man of your character and apparent dispcsitien in trouble of this kind," said Judge Willis in sentencing him to two and a half years in Folsom. "You have served a term in a reformatory and in State's prison. Notwithstanding this fact you sought and found employment when you were released, and seem to have been endeavoring to lead an industrious life up to the time when, according to your statement, you went on a strike, was arrested for picketing, and the offense of which you have been convicted was by that reason discovered.

"You are not a man of sufficient talents to regulate the economic differences between capital and labor. You endeavored to do so by assisting in a strike and have failed, and are here as a result of your failure. I am going to give you a short term by reason of the fact that you seem willing to work, but I do this with the earnest advice that when you come out of prison you immediately seek employment and let organized labor settle its own differences with capital, and don't try to adjust them yourself.

"If you follow my advice you may yet become an honest and respected citizen of this State, but if you neglect to work on account of some fancied grievance, you will be urged again into a life of crime, and soon find yourself in similar trouble, and the next time the chances are that you will have to suffer a long term of imprisonment.

"Take the advice of the court, perform honest labor, attend strictly to your own business, and you will avoid trouble of this or similar character in the future."

SMUGGLING RING HIT HARD BLOW.

Members of Woo Wai Gang Are in Custody.

Two Are Wealthy Merchants of San Francisco.

Others Agents for Chinese Business Men.

What the government officials here think is the final blow to an extensive scheme of smuggling Chinese laborers into the United States was consummated yesterday in San Francisco by the arrest of Wong Yee, Woo Wai, Wong Chung, Wong Wing Sai and Mar Gick.

This followed their indictment in this city by the Federal grand jury, on two counts, one charging them with attempt to bribe Chinese inspectors Conklin and Weddell, of San Diego, and the second alleging that they smuggled Chinese laborers across the Mexican border into this territory, in violation of the Chinese Exclusion Act.

The men belong to what has for several years been known on the Pacific Coast as the Woo Wai gang, several members, including Woo Wai himself, now being at liberty on $6000 bail each, on previous indictments.

The additional indictments follow the others, and it is understood the trial will be held before Judge Wellborn and a jury in the United States District Court in October. According to the present programme, the indicted men will be brought to Los Angeles early in the week, to plead and have bail fixed by the court.

Woo Wai and Wong Yee are Chinese merchants in San Francisco, members of the famous Six Companies, and wealthy, much of the money, it is alleged, being accumulated through the pecuniary rewards offered by contraband trade. Wong Chung is a member of the Sue Wing Company, doing business at Oakland. Wong Wing Sai also resides in Oakland, where he represents, government authorities say, Chinese merchants in San Francisco.

SEPARATE WIDELY.

The operations of the gang covered many points in Southern California. By means of trusted Chinese, agents they were able to carry on the business almost without opposition. The first blow was struck several months ago, when Woo Wai and several of his operators were indicted and arrested on charges of smuggling. The bribery allegations have been fixed upon them since.

In all of the operations of the immigration officers working out of Los Angeles, as far south as San Diego and north to San Francisco, none has given so much trouble as the Woo Wai conspirators. It has been found almost impossible heretofore to obtain convincing evidence against them. The indictments now returned mark the end of a chase for evidence that has covered almost a thousand miles and touches nearly every city south of San Francisco.

It is alleged that Woo Wai and Wong Yee, the leaders, had in their employ scores of ignorant Chinese and Mexicans. Some acted as active agents in securing Chinese laborers in Mexico, while others were guides to parties making their way secretly north from San Diego and other points along the border to Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Agents were located at San Bernardino, Santa Bárbara and other points along the Southern Pacific Railway, where they met the workers with laborers in charge. The alleged bribery charge against the defendants occurred at San Bernardino, and the money they paid government agents to allow them to pass unchallenged is in the safe of United States District Attorney McCormick, as evidence when the trial is held.

PROOF CONCLUSIVE.

It is stated by Immigration Agent Charles T. Connell, in charge of the local office, that the proof of the guilt of every man indicted is conclusive; that the matter was not presented to the grand jury until every possible proof of guilt was secured. He is optimistic as to the result. Several Mexicans who were used to guide Chinese laborers through Southern California are in jail, and their evidence will be obtained.

TO VOTE ON SEWER BONDS.

Lindsay Would Incur Big Debt to Care for a Municipal Problem. Success of Issue Sure.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

LINDSAY, June 17.—At the last meeting of the City Trustees a special ordinance was passed fixing Monday, June 26, as the date for the election on sewer and water bonds. It is proposed to incur a bonded indebtedness of $75,000 for the construction of an outfall sewer system and disposal works, with site for the latter, and a further $55,000 for the purchase of the existing plant, an excellent one, of the Lindsay Water and Gas Company, and extension of same.

It is thought that both propositions will pass without any opposition to speak of.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Will Green and his father, Dr. I. S. Green, went up with Mr. Sophy a few days ago to see some land in the Patterson tract, Patterson, Stanislaus county. Mr. Green bought forty acres at $200 per acre, and has already left Lindsay to look after his new property. He intends to get the land into condition for alfalfa next fall.

W. M. Harris has bought from J. B. Houghton, through the Lindsay and Valley Land Company, forty acres of alfalfa land in the River View tract southwest of town. This land has been under grain before.

The Lindsay and Valley Land Company has also sold to parties from Upland 320 acres of the famous Brundage ranch, beyond Springville. This is one of the finest mountain ranches in the State; it has upon it five living springs, and is also traversed by the north fork of the Tule River. It has an abundance of all sorts of fruit, apples, pears, peaches, etc., of the very finest quality.

According to Hon. Ollie M. James, Congress will be in session all summer, and he says he would not be surprised if it remained in session until November. As most of the Democratic members of the House come from the South the majority can stand a Washington summer better than the Republicans.

Fashion Note.

Some time ago, at the urgent request of several of my young lady acquaintances, I printed minute directions for making an umbrella cover over into a hobble skirt—or a hobble skirt over into an umbrella cover—I forget which.

But now that the harem skirt has come in, I am afraid this advice is of little benefit to the fair sex. So I grasp this opportunity of saying that a very handsome and stylish pair of harem trousers can be made by using two of last season's hobble skirts.

This feat in feminine economy can be accomplished by taking two hobble skirts and sewing the flaps of the placquet of each together, and shirring a lavender ribbon around the waist.

I would add that there is no use in trying to get into a jupe-culotte from the bottom; it can't be done. You must enter them (just as a man enters his pants) from the top—one leg in each of the hobble skirts.

Then draw the lavender shirr-ribbon and fasten securely. This last is very important.

P.S.—It might be added that when one dresses in harem trousers, there is no particular advantage in wearing hip-reducing corsets. Harem trousers will make you look large around the hips anyway.

Authors' Privacies.

To judge from the literary monthlies and the book pages of our newspapers, one would think that an author was some very superior type of human being—a sort of supernatural freak, gifted by the gods and blessed by high heaven and with gifts not accorded ordinary individuals.

It is bad enough to have to hear the news every time some author of a best-seller goes to Europe, or delivers a lecture, or returns to America. But one could bear this if all the details of the private lives of these people were not lugged forth and passed out to the public.

An author is no better than any other man who makes his living through questionable practices. But the publishers seem to think that if some New England schoolmarm has written a book, the public cannot sleep until it has found out how many eggs she eats for breakfast, or during what hours she serves tea, or whether she likes to play golf or not. The newspapers are full of such exciting items as these:

"Mrs. Frumpy Words, the noted English authoress of 'Marriage a la Carte,' was visited by a reporter in her palatial home at Hackborough-on-the-Punk. She informed our correspondent that she always takes two lumps of sugar in her tea, and a little lemon. She has always had an aversion to cream in her afternoon beverage."

"Mr. George Purr McClutchem, the popular and well-known author, whose latest book, 'The Goo-Goo Girl,' has recently come from the press of Scribler's Sons, is a great lover of ping-pong, and never goes to bed without eating a large dish of milk toast. It is this pabulum, he assures us, that gives him inspiration for his passionate novels."

"Mr. Sloppert W. Chamber, the author of that famous series of shop-girl romances, 'Boudoirs I Have Met,' never rises before 11 a.m., and always tops off his luncheon with Italian vermouth. Mr. Chamber is partial to blue cravats, and went fishing last Sunday morning."

"Thompson Ernest-Seton, the most famous nature faker of our fair land, and author of that juvenile classic, 'Cotton Bunny-Tail,' (which, after his uncle's will, was changed to 'Tail Bunny-Cotton,') admits that he prefers his eggs poached, and has a particular antipathy for rhubarb pie. He writes all his masterpieces with a soft pencil on cream-colored paper."

"Harry McGraft, in a recent interview, admitted reluctantly, that he very often takes a walk before breakfast, and that he does his best work in the evening between the hours of 6:45 and 9:15 o'clock."

"Kate Douglass Spriggins has been suffering during the past week with a slight attack of indigestion. Her physicians think she will be able to resume her literary endeavors by Tuesday. This may delay the publication of her new book, 'Aunt Maria's Turnips,' but it will be all the more welcome for the delay."

"Francis Berry Helliott, whose great American novel, 'The Human Nightshirt,' has set the literary world agog, spent his childhood in the quiet retreat of Tarrytown-on-the-Hudson."

"E. Merson Huff, the virile author of '4-11-44,' intends to take a trip of a fortnight in the Catskills next summer."

"Anne Warmer was seen, a short time ago, at an auto race. On being questioned by a newspaper correspondent, she responded in her characteristic manner: 'Isn't it grand?'"

"Anthony Soap always folds his napkin after eating, no matter where he is. This is one of the idiosyncracies of genius."

"L. Inner Grin never divulges the secret of her whereabouts. She manicures bi-weekly."

And so on, and so forth, et cetera, etc. THE LANCER.

CANYON LAND CONTEST.

The register and receiver of the Land Office yesterday heard the evidence in the contest filed by Gwendolin Nettleship, against the desert land entry of William Eckhardt, involving 160 acres in Santa Monica Canyon. Eckhardt filed his claim June 12, 1907, and the contest was instituted January 20, 1911. It is alleged by the contestant that Eckhardt never established his actual residence on the land, but abandoned it, and on the day of entry went to San Pedro, where he has been since.

AND CHEST

Mlle. Merlyn, America's great authority on Health and Beauty Culture, advises deep breathing each morning and night, massaging the parts with Melrose Beauty Cream each night, and each morning bathe the parts with cold salt water. Take White's Vaucaire Galega Tablets four times a day, drink water freely, and within a very reasonable time excellent results will be noticed. It is essential that you take the Vaucaire remedy that contains the GENUINE IMPORTED GALEGA, such as Williard White Company's does, and to be on the safe side ask for this brand. Take no substitutes, as they are worthless and a waste of time.

The tablets are more of a food than a medicine and are perfectly harmless. Easy to take.

WOMAN COMES TO RESCUE OF "RED."

SOCIALISTS SCRAPE POCKETS TO FIND BAIL.

Search Abandoned When Only One Bondsman Is Found and President of Junta Hustled Back to Jail. Reads Paper While Friends Worry Over His Release.

The local Socialist colony put in a strenuous time yesterday, trying to secure a bond of $5000 for the release of Ricardo Flores Magon, president of the Los Angeles Junta.

Job Harriman, the Socialist candidate for Mayor, who gets his mail in San Gabriel while running for Chief Executive of this city, was early on the job, but the inexorable mandate of Assistant United States District Attorney Frank Stewart that the statutes insisted that two bondsmen, each worth twice the amount of the bond, must qualify before Magon would be let out, made him all sorts of trouble.

The first to offer themselves as a financial sacrifice for Magon were Mrs. Aurelia J. Corker, a member of the local Socialist Defense Committee, and C. K. Broneer, secretary of the Socialist Campaign Committee. Mrs. Corker lives at No. 237 North Figueroa street, and Broneer is in business on Main street.

When it came to sizing up the financial girth of the parties, Mrs. Corker measured up all right, but Broneer was a bit shy. He could not qualify. Pending their examination Magon, who had been brought over to the Federal building by the government officer, sat reading a newspaper, evidently the least interested of all.

Mrs. Corker was asked why no effort was made to secure the liberty of Enrique Flores Magon, Librado Rivera and Anselmo L. Figueroa, the last named editor of "Regeneration," and she replied that the Socialists were moving slowly, trying to get one man out of jail at a time and would reach the others as soon as possible.

After scouring the city for another bondsman, who would be willing to take a chance on Magon to the extent of $5000, the search was abandoned for the day, and the "Red" hustled back to jail. Another effort will be made tomorrow morning to complete the bond.

A Novelty.

At a store which always has something new to show, I observed a "recipe file" which struck me as particularly handy. It was a pretty leatherette cabinet, divided into compartments with a regular leather file system (in small,) and a place for each kind of recipe. The compartments were partly filled, and there were additional cards for recipes gathered from time to time.

Shakespeare Section Banquets.

The Shakespeare alumnae of the Wednesday Morning Club held their annual banquet and reception to graduates at the clubhouse on Friday, tables being laid for forty members.

The classes of 1904, '05 and '07 acted as hostesses, and included Mmes. Allison Barlow, J. B. Liversidge, F. M. Nicholl, C. S. Goodrich, E. B. Pitkin, L. V. J. Kimball, J. W. Fuller, F. M. Sharp and M. A. Pierce.

The tables were set in the form of a Maltese cross, and baskets of pink and white sweet peas or carnations carried out the color scheme, the place cards being adorned with tiny baskets of sweet peas.

Mrs. O. L. Robertson, president of the alumnae, introduced the toast mistress, Mrs. C. S. Goodrich, vice-president, who made many happy hits as she presented the speakers. Mrs. Frank Caldwell, a graduate of the first class, led out with a toast to "Lady Macbeth," leading character in the first play the class studied. Mrs. C. P. Dorland, who was the first leader of the section, toasted the children of Shakespeare and extended hearty greeting to the baby class of the alumnae, which includes Dr. D. L. Davidson, Miss Helen Meigs and Mmes. L. S. Bullard, I. O. Bachelder and J. W. Lyall.

Mrs. H. C. Gower told in an inimitable way how Katherine the Shrew was not tamed at all, and Mrs. D. L. Davidson responded to "The Fools of Shakespeare." Mrs. F. M. Nichell compared the flowers of Shakespeare with those of California, gracefully concluding her remarks by presenting a basket filled with purple and gold pansies, the club colors, to the president, who responded with appreciative words and thanked the members for their loyal support.

Other toasts were "Portia," by Mrs. Allison Barlow; "The Heroes of Shakespeare," by Mrs. H. E. Brett, and "The Daughters of King Lear," by Mrs. E. B. Pitkin.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Miss Anna Pierce, president; Miss Helen Meigs, vice-president; Dr. D. L. Davidson, recording secretary; Mrs. E. B. Pitkin, corresponding secretary; Mrs. L. S. Bullard, treasurer.

They will gather in the morning, have a basket lunch and a platform meeting, and the day is expected to be one of unusual pleasure. Eastlake Park was never so beautiful as it is now.

Search for Remedies for Nature's Mistakes.

BY ROSE L. ELLERBE.

Nature makes grave mistakes sometimes, at least so it seems to finite eyes. When a beautiful, sunny-hearted child is given to a mother who is unworthy of the name; when a fine, sturdy baby is born to a father who refuses recognition or support, we cannot help feeling that a mistake has been made. And when homes where a child would be welcomeed with a passion of joy, where every comfort and advantage would be provided remain childless, while a two-by-four shack or a tenement-house swarms with hungry, half-clothed children, we again marvel at the ways of Providence.

To remedy these mistakes of nature, we now have child-placing organizations. The science of child placing may not as yet be equal to the original plan of putting a child into a home—but if theories work out it will at least always place the right child in the right home.

CAREFUL INVESTIGATION.

The Children's Home Society of California follows a system in placing children which is as perfect perhaps as any system dealing with human beings can be. When a child is presented for the society's consideration the case is looked into as carefully as is possible without legal investigation. The child is kept and cared for at the home, which is located at Twenty-fifth and Griffith avenue, until it can be suitably placed with private parties. Whenever possible, adoption is provided. Persons desiring to take a child from this home must file application blanks answering a series of searching questions and giving at least three references. The references are first written to or questioned. If the replies are satisfactory, the superintendent of the Home, or one of his agents, personally visits the home and learns all he can by observation regarding the character and surroundings of the proposed foster parents. A child cannot be legally adopted until the expiration of a test year, during which it is the ward of the society and is visited and looked after. Even after the completion of adoption, it is the aim of the society to keep an eye upon its children, and should circumstances make it necessary, legal action is taken.

A NURSERY SCENE.

With all this care, a large number of first placements do not result in permanent homes. Often a child is tried in more than one family before the right place is found. During the past year the Home Society of California has handled 427 children. Of these more than 300 have been placed in homes and ninety-four adopted. There are now eighteen babies from 2 weeks to 2 years old in the big, sunny nursery. Here a little tot may be seen taking its first steps, and there a beautiful child stands up in its crib, extending welcoming hands to every comer. Most of the babies look plump and content; but there are white-faced little creatures whose tiny, bony, clutching hands speak volumes regarding the scanty nourishment and hardship which they have experienced. Two cute little negro kiddies may be seen sleeping peacefully in one crib. A number of the older boys and girls go to school and play about the large yard.

Under the new powers given the State Board of Charities and Corrections, all child-placing agencies must secure permits from this board and it is also authorized to require reports and to make rules and regulations for all persons, organizations or societies engaged in placing children in homes. Hitherto any irresponsible party who chose to do so might gather children up and find places for them without question. Several agencies are now withdrawing from the field.

SOCIETIES CONSOLIDATING.

The Children's Home Finding Society, which has maintained offices in this city and in Berkeley, is about to be consolidated with the Children's Home Society, thus making this organization the chief agency under Protestant control in the State. It has complied with all the requirements of the board and received the board's permit and approval. Dr. Slingerland of the Russell Sage Foundation, who recently spent several months in this State, looking into its institutions for the care of dependent children, especially commended the Children's Home Society and its methods. He pronounced the plan of placing dependent children in private families, when properly carried out, to be the most effective and economical solution of the problem of caring for them, and this is generally the opinion of other expert sociologists. As there are now in this State about ten thousand children who are being cared for out of State funds and by charitable contributions, the subject is one requiring serious consideration.

Frank Lewis, secretary of the Children's Home Society, states that many children now become public charges because parents and relatives shirk their responsibilities, our present laws making this easy.

BENEFITS ALL CONCERNED.

The placing of a homeless child in a good home, with foster parents who will love it and bring it up with the care bestowed upon their own blood, is a deed of blessing to the child, to the foster parents and to the community. Its performance is too vital a matter to be left in irresponsible hands. It is well that the State has at last taken cognizance of this fact. At present the Children's Home Society is the most thoroughly equipped and most successful child-placing system in the State. It has placed more children in permanent homes than any other one institution, and has more homes offered for children than it can supply; since, for adoption, the child must meet the requirements of the proposed parents in sex, age, appearance, nationality, history, etc., and the home offered must also fit the needs of the particular child.

INSPECT CANYON ROAD CHANGES.

PERMANENT WORK BEING DONE BY ABLE FORCE.

County Supervisors Co-operate With Citizens in Making Permanent Improvements on a Highway Which Has Wonderful Beauty and Is Essential Commercial Artery.

AZUSA, June 15.—Through the courtesy of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Follows, the Azusa correspondent has just had the pleasure of a trip through the San Gabriel Canyon with the County Supervisors. The party consisted of C. D. Maning, Supervor of the First District; S. A. Butler, of the Third District; C. J. Nellis, of the Fourth District; W. T. Barker, road foreman; W. R. Powell, J. W. Calvert and Augustus Meier, representing the citizens of Azusa; the Scribbleress, and Mr. Follows, the Fidus Achates, "to whom trouble is a pleasure."

The object of the trip was the inspection of the improvements recently made on the canyon road, and the consideration of the advisability of appropriating more funds for further work. For something like eight years it has been the policy of the Supervisors to duplicate every contribution given by the citizens of Azusa and the owners of the canyon resorts for the improvement of the canyon road. Last fall they gave $1500. For several weeks now Foreman Barker has had a force of men at work and as the fund is about exhausted and he desired the inspection of the Supervisors in order that if the work of the past is satisfactory and the plans for future work approved, the additional appropriation, partially promised before, might be made before he disbanded his men.

Every year during high water more or less damage is done to the road, and temporary repairs are constantly being made. The great flood of December 31, 1909, was a benefit, as it completely changed the bed of the river and rendered it possible to make the road in a better place. Three things Mr. Barker has had constantly in mind in this permanent work, viz.: To keep the road to the right of the river whenever possible, to raise the road above the river bed wherever possible, and to cut out crossings. There are some ten crossings less than there were seven years ago, and two less than last year. What Mr. Barker particularly desires to do now is to connect the grades of previous years with those made last year, and thus at least four more crossings will be saved.

During the past four years the Supervisors have appropriated some $4000 for this work. It has been their policy that all the funds which they give shall be expended on work below the forks of the river, and upon work that shall be permanent rather than upon yearly repairs.

It is impossible to exaggerate the expressions of all the Supervisors present on this trip regarding their satisfaction with the work already accomplished, or their desire to continue the generous policy of the past. They feel that it is both feasible and desirable to have a road to this great playground of nature which will be good for many years to come, and which can be enjoyed equally by the tourist and the permanent resident of California. They do not think it advisable to attempt to do this all at once, but there is no doubt that gradually there will be constructed through this mighty gorge a great scenic highway, which shall be surpassed by none in the United States, at least, for durability and grandeur.

Two of the Supervisors were detained by a meeting from taking this trip, but all five will meet Monday to determine just what shall be done.

H. W. O'Melveny had expected to join the Supervisors, but business prevented. The party took several side trips, one of which was to The Crag, the home of Mr. O'Melveny, where they received a royal welcome from Ben Lee, the general care-taker.

Some marvelous gastronomic feats were performed by the crowd. These began with a wonderful luncheon at the road camp, continued through dinner and breakfast at Follows' Resort and continued with luncheon the next day at Rincon.

Kiss Love Goodnight.

The day falls dead. Faint stars, like ghosts in white,
Kiss Love goodnight.
Brief was the journey down the golden years;
Why give the roses, that are dead, thy tears?—
Kiss Love goodnight.
The hills of heaven, or the depths in sight;
Kiss Love goodnight.
Regret is vain and all life's sorrows seem Like formless shadows in a dying dream—
Kiss Love goodnight.
Is not the darkness sweeter than the light?
Kiss Love goodnight.
Leave me with lilies leaning to his breast;
Sleep comes with healing hand and whispers "Rest!"
Kiss Love goodnight.

Cooking Contest.

CLAMS, CRABS, LOBSTERS, OYSTERS, AND OTHER SUCCULENT SHELL FISH.

Dainty Dishes for Luncheon and Dinner—Fine Assortment of Excellent Spanish Recipes to Appear Next Sunday—Award of Prizes to Contributors to Fish Symposium—First Call for Pie and Pudding Free-for-All.

PRIZE AWARDS FISH RECIPES.

First, $5, Mrs. G. L. Kendrick, San Dimas; fish pointers.

Second, $3, Margaret A. Burgess, No. 121 North Hill street; fish a la California.

Third, $1, Mrs. V. B. de Mars, Florence; cold boiled fish, sauce tartare.

HIS succulency, the oyster, is a little out of season just now, so long as we insist upon spelling "June" without an "r," but the forthcoming Cook Book No. 4 is for all time, so, bivalve, the accompanying fine collection of ways of preparing oysters might as well appear now as at any time. There also are many other excellent succulencies, such as crab, lobster, shrimp and scallops, appetizing recipes for which aid in making this a notable addition to the cook book.

Many fine contributions have been received for the chapter of Spanish dishes, which will be set forth in all their charm next Sunday.

Next, the chef would like to see what his large company of capable cooks has to offer in the way of pies and puddings. Southern California is a long way from the Great American Pie Belt of New England, but there is a little pie belt in every home hereabouts and we all want to see the belt grow larger. Puddings are quite as popular as pies under the belt, and it is hoped that they will not be overlooked in the pie haste—let there also be a hasty-pudding class.

Pretty soon, now, we shall have the hygienic-food chapter — vegetarian cookery and the like, such as has the approval of such authorities as Dr. Brook of the "Care of the Body" department of The Times Sunday Magazine. This should be a valuable part of the new cook book. Recipes may be sent in at any time.

We shall have a chapter on jams, jellies and marmalades, and, as the canning season is upon us, it might be well to send in contributions now; they will appear within a few weeks.

Remember to write legibly, one recipe to a page, on one side of the paper, as briefly as possible. Address The Chef, The Times Branch Office, No. 116 South Broadway.

Have pan ready on which is spread brown paper, and as fast as mussels are cooked spread out on paper, but be sure to keep pan in warm place, until all mussels are cooked, when all can be turned upon warm platter, ready to serve. At serving time, place each half grapefruit on mat of ivy or geranium leaves, or any green.

TRUE BEAUTY WITHOUT POWDERS OR COSMETICS

(From Art in Dress.)

"Much harm is often done with the too free use of powders and cosmetics," says Mme. Ferri, authority on beauty, "and when women learn to know the true value of a good lotion much of this will be prevented.

"Nothing equals a simple, inexpensive lotion made by dissolving a small original package of mayatone in eight ounces of witch hazel. This should be freely rubbed into the skin every day.

"After a short time using the mayatone lotion the skin grows clear and velvety and blackheads, pimples and other blemishes are permanently removed, and the complexion takes on that rich embellishment which is the hallmark of true beauty. Many women use this lotion to prevent tan, sunburn or freckles."

STORIES OF FAMOUS POEMS.

"SONG OF THE CORNISH MEN."

(The Trelawny Ballad.)

Robert Stephen Hawker.

A good sword and a trusty hand!
 A merry heart and true!
King James's men shall understand
 What Cornish lads can do.

And have they fixed the where and when?
 And shall Trelawny die?
Here's twenty thousand Cornish men
 Will know the reason why!

Outspake their captain, brave and bold,
 A merry wight was he—
"If London's Tower were Michael's hold,
 We'll set Trelawny free!
"We'll cross the Tamar land to land,
 The Severn is no stay—
With one and all, and hand in hand,
 And who shall bid us nay?

"And when we come to London wall—
 A pleasant sight to view—
Come forth! come forth, ye cowards all,
 To better men than you!

"Trelawny he's in keep and hold,
 Trelawny he may die;
But here's twenty thousand Cornish bold,
 Will know the reason why!"

It has been close to a century since the Trelawny ballad, generally known by the title, "And Shall Trelawny Die" or "Song of the Cornish Men," first made its appearance, and brought out a discussion that covered a number of years. It is usually credited to Robert Stephen Hawker, but there has been written a great amount of comment as to whether the ballad was altogether Hawker's, or whether he worked on some traditional verses. The indisputable facts of the case, as far as they are known at present, are as follows:

The poem made its first appearance in the "Royal Davenport Telegraph and Plymouth Chronicle," England, in the issue of that paper for September 2, 1286. The poem was headed: "Ballad written at the time one of the Trelawny family was committed to the Tower, during the reign of James II. The circumstances described in it are historically true."

Though the ballad was printed anoymously, the name of the writer was ascertained by the distinguished Cornish antiquary, Mr. Davies Gilbert, and being greatly struck with the verses, he printed off some fifty copies, in broadside form, at his private press at Eastborne. Very few of these broadsides seem to have survived, but from one of them is transcribed the following heading, with all its eccentricities of punctuation, etc.:

"And Shall Trelawny Die?"

"The Strong Sensation excited throughout England, by that decisive act of Bigotry, Tyranny and Imprudence on the part of King James the second, by which he committed the Seven Bishops to the Tower, was in no district more manifestly displayed than in Cornwall; notwithstanding the part taken by that county in the preceding Civil War. This was probably in a great degree, occasioned by sympathy with a most respected Cornish Gentleman, then Bishop of Bristol; as appears, from the following Song, restored, modernized and improved by Robert Stephen (sic) Hawker, Esq., of Whitstone. This song is said to have resounded in every House, in every High Way, and in every Street."

Mr. Gilbert also communicated the ballad to the "Gentleman's Magazine" for November, 1827, where it was published anoymously and attracted the notice of Sir Walter Scott. In 1838 Mr. Gilbert printed it in his "Parochial History of Cornwall," from which an extract containing the verses was given in Chambers's "Book of Days," 1864.

In 1832, Mr. Hawker, who had been ordained in 1829, published a small volume of poems called "Records of the Western Shore," in which he inserted the ballad under the title of "The Song of the Western Men," and publicly avowed himself to be the author. Mr. Hawker's explanation was as follows:

"With the exception of the chorus contained in the last two lines, this song was written by me in the year 1825—I publish it here merely to state that it was an early composition of my own. The two lines above mentioned, formed, I believe, the burthen of the song, and are all that I can recover."

The song was subsequently published in "Ecclesia" and other collections of Mr. Hawker's poems. In "Cornish Ballads," 1869, the explanation was considerably amplified and ran as follows:

Note—With the exception of the choral lines:

(And shall Trelawny die?
Here's twenty thousand Cornishmen

which have been, ever since the imprisonment by James the Second of the seven bishops (one of them Sir John Trelawny,) a popular proverb throughout Cornwall, the whole of this song was composed by me in the year 1825. I wrote it under a stag-horned oak in Sir Bevile's walk in Stowe Wood. It was sent by me anonymously to a Plymouth paper, and there it attracted the notice of Mr. Davies Gilbert, who reprinted it at his private press at East Bourne, under the avowed impression that it was the original ballad.

"It had the good fortune to win the eulogy of Sir Walter Scott, who also deemed it to be the ancient song. It was praised under the same persuasion by Lord Macauley and by Mr. Dickens, who inserted it at first as of genuine antiquity in his "Household Words," but which afterward acknowledged its actual paternity in the same publication."

It will be seen that Mr. Hawker's memory failed him in one or two important particulars, but the main facts, namely, that the ballad was his own composition, with the exception of the refrain, was, one would have thought, established beyond further dispute. There were, however, "doubting Thomases" who still called for the ancient refrain. But the honesty and veracity of Hawker were conclusively proved by Mr. John Latimer, who, in a letter to the 'Athenaeum' of November 21, 1891, quoted a contribution to the "Bristol Journal" of July 21, 1772, entitled "Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman at Savannah la Mar to his Friend in Kingston, Monday, April 27,' describing the reception of the Governor, Sir William Trelawny, when on tour through Jamaica. The relevant passage is as follows:

"About a century and a half ago upon some particular state commotions, one of Sir William's ancestors was, on wrong suspicion of the government, sent to the Tower of London, and it was declared in Cornwall that he was to suffer death. The great attachment of the people in general of that country was then, as now, so affectionately strong to the ancient family of Trelawny that the population of the county had the following lines published in several places at London, viz.:

'And must Trelawny die?
And shall Trelawny die?
We've thirty thousand Cornish
Will know the reason why?'

"This and some other circum so intimidated at that time some the greatest personages then at the helm of English national affairs Sir William Trelawny's ancestor soon set at liberty and soon arrived at Trelawny Castle

Porterville.

LOCAL society is more than usually interested in the wedding of Albert G. Bryant and Miss Ethel Wallace, which was celebrated at the home of the bride in Visalia last evening.

The wedding was a simple one and was witnessed by but a few of the intimate friends of the bride and groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace are on a honeymoon journey in the Yosemite and they will be at home to their friends in this city after July 15. Mr. Bryant is a prominent realty dealer of this city and was the pastor of the Congregational Church of Porterville when the congregation achieved a State-wide renown by the construction of one of the few institutional churches in this State.

It flowed for a short time, throwing out about 100 barrels of fluid and again sanded up over 100 feet in the hole. The No. 2 is down 4220 feet and waiting for pipe. The No. 3 will be cemented off in about three weeks. The No. 4 has had the water shut off and will be drilled into the oil sand as soon as the casing can be secured and put in the hole.

The Pluto Oil Company in the Devils Den resumed drilling yesterday morning after a shut down on account of casing trouble. The shoe on the 8¼ inch casing became pinched and had to be replaced.

The British California Company on 16, 20-15, is down 3100 feet in 8¼ inch casing.

The Canadian Coalinga well on 14, 20-15, is down 1900 feet in ten inch casing. Jack Cyphers and Jim Walp have the contract for drilling this hole.

The Vancouver Coalinga, on 8, 21-15 is down over 1800 feet in the 12½ inch casing.

The Wilcox Oil Company's well on 12, 20-15, is down 3100 feet in ten inch Diamond Etna casing, one of the longest strings in the field. Bill Garrigan is the superintendent.

The Security well on 8, 20-15, was put on the pump about ten days ago and is easily producing between 200 and 250 barrels per day. The water trouble has been done away with and the hole straightened. Howard Lefever is the superintendent and deserves a great deal of credit for making a producer out of the hole that was almost considered worthless a few months ago.

The Azores well, in the south field, is down over 3800 feet and into a light sandy formation which Manager Robertson believes to be water sand. After passing through the black sulphur sand a hard shell was drilled through and into this sand. This will not be tested and they will keep on drilling.

ALLEGED BLANKET-SMUGGLER.

Among the indictments returned by the Federal grand jury is one against Dr. James A. Jackson of San Diego, who, it is alleged, has been engaged in the business of smuggling valuable blankets across the Mexican line into the United States. IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The most trying, the most absorbing, the most delightful of all the year are these last days of school, filled with preparations for commencement, with senior, junior and faculty receptions, with plays and programmes.

One more week and it will all be over and some will have forever left High School life behind.

The class play, on Friday at L. A. High was the event of greatest moment at that institution, as it was the culmination of long and earnest study and was without doubt the most ambitious piece of dramatic work ever undertaken there. Miss Beatrice Hurlburt made a very pretty Virginia Cravel, Albert Amet was an nlimitable Eliphalet Hopper, Col. Carvel was well represented by Harcourt Blades, Harold Crowell made a fine Stephen Brice, and many of the other leading roles were excellently played. The cast of characters was as follows: Col. Carvel, Harcourt Blades; Judge Whipple, Walter Brewer; Stephen Brice, Harold Crowell; Clarence Colfax, Albert Condron; Carl Richter, Joe Hodges; Eliphalet Hopper, Albert Amet; Tom Catherwood, Edwin Holly; George Catherwood, Kenneth Carey; Maurice Renault, Leo Julian; Jack Brinsmade, Ernest Eaton; Bert Russell, Harry Dunn; Mr Carter, Edwin Haas; Josephus, Fred Hollins; Ephum, Ernest Kessler; Virginia Carvel, Beatrice Hurlburt; Mrs. Brice, Grace Hasemeier; Mrs. Colfax, Myrl Colby; Puss Russell, Lillian Perdue; Anne Brinsmade, Edith Ross; Maude Catherwood, Lela Lewis; Sue Stanton, Dora Rogers; Elily, Blanche Rogers; Eugenie Renault, Mary Parkinson; Isabel Cluyme, Ruth Houck; Nancy, Lucile Curtis; Auctioneer, August Mayer; soldiers, Charles Burger, Paul Kevan, Kenneth Carey. The stage setting, the costumes and the management of the play were extraordinarily free from defects and the large audience was most interested and attentive. The musical programme in accompaniment was by the L. A. H. orchestra under the direction of Miss Verna C. Blythe. It comprised: Overture, "Orpheus" (Offenbach;) (a) "Innocence" (Moret;) (b) Gavotte, (Mebden;) "Songs of the Nation," (Lampe;) "March Militaire" (Schubert;) "Grand Galop Militaire, (Bohn.) The staff of the play was as follows: Donald Z. Albright, manager-in-chief; Davis Newman, stage manager; Henry Pattingill, electrician; Frank Smith, head usher; Charles Beach, tickets. Miss Jane Butt of L.A.H. faculty had charge of the training of the students for the play and deserve great credit for the perfection of the production.

The Phrenocosmian Society programme on Wednesday at Los Angeles was as follows: Transaction of business; scenes from The Merchant of Venice; Scenes from The Taming of the Shrew (by tenth year students.)

The commencement programme of the Los Angeles High School is one of great excellence, comprising many topics of timely interest and music of a high grade. Commencement will take place on Wednesday evening at Temple Auditorium at 8 o'clock. The following programme will be given: Overture, "Poet and Peasant" (Suppe,) Los Angeles High School orchestra; "The Call of the City," August G. Mayer, Jr.; "The Rank and File," Mabel Gertrude Henry; (a) Prelude in G Minor (Rachmaninoff,) (b) "Rustle of Spring" (Sindig,) E. Ruth Hinkelman; "Woman's Civic Duties," Leonora V. All About Panama Canal.

It is the custom at Polytechnic High School to select a subject for commencement around which all essays and addresses are grouped. The subject selected this year is that of the "Panama Canal." The programme will be presented as follows: Overture, "Semeramide" (Rossini,) Polytechnic High School Orchestra; "China's Interest in the Opening of the Canal," Alice Rogers; "The Neutralization of the Canal," James Francis; Vocal Solo, "The Little Red Lark," Alicia Needham, Helen Mack; "World's Fairs as a Means of Education," Mary La Hane; "The Panama Canal and Immigration on the Pacific Coast," Philip Morgan; String Quartette, (a) "Serenade" (Pierne,) (b) "Canzonetta," Victor Herbert, Pryor Moore, Grace McCormick, Vera Johnson, Walter Potter; Address, James A. Literary Hollywood.

This was publication week at Hollywood. Hollywood has charge of the publication of the Debating Annual of the Debating and Oratorical League of Southern California, this year, Charles Peters being editor-in-chief, and Benjamin Potter, managing editor. The annual contains a full account of the debates held this year with pictures of the debaters and a brief of the championship debate held between Polytechnic and Hollywood high schools.. The boys have been highly complimented on the fine appearance of the Annual.

Another publication which appeared during the week at Hollywood High, was the school annual, the Poinsettia. The book is dedicated to the athletic coach, Mr. Webster. The book does credit to its staff, which is composed of: Editor, Karl Wagner; assistant editor, Esther Fry; manager, Leslie Somers; assistant manager, Gordon Stephens; art editor, Ruth Hoegee; assistant art editor, Evelyn Perrin; athletic editor, Meredith Goodwin; assistant athletic editor, Lloyd Darcie; josh editor, Murray Morgan; assistant josh editor, Beverly Randolph; debate, Vada Reynolds; entertainment, Frances Dorsey; music, Harold Shu; alumni, Eva Linton; calendar, Lillian Grasse; exchanges, Willis La Mott.

At the Friday Assembly in Hollywood, Dr. Snyder presented baseball Hs to the members of the baseball team—Eugene Valdez, Frank Pitcher, Will Malin, Hermann Alber, Meredith Spencer, Jay Nofziger, Arthur Alber, Leslie Somers, Fred Coultas, Charles McKinley and James Candie. James Candie was also presented with a white sweater for having attained the highest batting average during the season.

At the meeting of the board of control of Hollywood Student Body, on Thursday last, the new by-laws were adopted, and Gordon Stevens was elected manager of the cafeteria for the next year, and Meredith Goodwin, manager of the book exchange.

Manual Arts Will Debate.

The Manual Arts Debating Club was organized for the purpose of training students for next year's interscholastic debates. Great interest is shown in the work, and it is anticipated that Manual will take honors next year, which will open the eyes of her contemporaries.

Politics, always strong at Manual Arts, is again absorbing the attention of the active ones in that institution. Nomination petitions are in for student body elections, and the entire school is stirred. The nominations are: For president, Earl Johnson and Gerald Ryder; vice-president, Taisy Darling, Fern Weidler and Calla Mathison; secretary, Marjorie Fulton, Britton McConnell and Ethel Rosin.

On Wednesday, June 13, at assembly, Clara B. Clarck entertained the Manual Arts students with readings from Shakespeare and a realistic description of a boat race on Lake Saranac. Miss Augusta Lamb gave an address to the girls upon the subject of what the Legal Aid Society does for the unfortunate.

Gardner-street School.

Last Thursday afternoon was programme day at the Gardner-street school, Hollywood. The school was decorated with ferns and yellow flowers, making a charming appearance. The programme given by the pupils was as follows: Music by school orchestra; first-grade boys, "The Soldier Boy" (wearing soldier caps;) girls, dancing and song; fourth grade boys, sailor song in costume; fifth and sixth-grade boys, military figures; folk dancing by fifth and sixth-grade girls. There was an exhibition of work in the departments of drawing, manual work, sewing, sloyd and basketry. Mr. Bettinger addressed the visitors. A meeting of the Parent-Teachers' Association of that district followed. The year's work of this organization has consisted of emergency work and Christmas gifts for one of the schools which needed help, renting of a piano and furnishing pictures for the school.

Notes.

There was an interesting girls' meeting at Polytechnic on Friday, the programme formulated for last week taking place.

The girls of the domestic science department of Polytechnic gave a luncheon to their mothers and a few other friends on Friday, under direction of Miss Owen. There will be twenty graduates in this department.

The glee clubs of Hollywood High School gave a spread and final jollification on Friday night in the cafeteria of the school.

Principal Lillard and Mr. Palmer of Gardena are on the N.E.A. programme to discuss agricultural subjects.

Percy E. Rowell of Gardena Agricultural High School has recently been honored by the adoption of his newly-published book on general science as a State text-book. This "New General Science Outline," as it is entitled, fills a genuine want, in that it gives to the beginning student in science a glimpse of science, which enables him to select the particular branch for which he believes himself best fitted. Taking a little of astronomy, meteorology, geology, botany, chemistry, physics, he can select what best suits him and avoid thus making mistakes which may lose for him many years of valuable time.

HEREABOUTS.

The longest cantaloupe train in the world was made up at Brawley several days ago, according to Paul von Neindorff, San Francisco broker, who is at the Alexandria and who has been one of the heavy packers of the melon in Imperial Valley this season. This monster train contained 141 cars, was pulled by two locomotives, and was nearly a mile and a half long. At Imperial Junction this great train was broken into several sections and dispatched in that manner to various eastern points. With Neindorff was Peter P. Hovley, one of the extensive growers of melons, who for one week's shipments received more than $1000 in a single check. Discussion of the cantaloupe situation revealed the fact that Los Angeles has been made the dumping ground for all the poor stock in the valley, while the better melons were shipped East. "There were only two or three perfect grades of fruit shipped into this city in the past two weeks," declared Von Neindorff. "This has caused the growers a greater loss than they can estimate in a superficial way. In the first place, the inferior melons have created a prejudice against them and have lowered the standard of the packers. They have caused prices to go as low as 50 cents a standard crate on the Los Angeles market. For extra fancy melons the price has been down to $1, where it should at no time in the season have gone to less than $2 and would have remained there had only fancy melons been shipped here. Stepping into one of the large retail groceries of the downtown section, we opened five crates of supposedly fancy melons which had brought nearly the top price. Most of the melons in these crates were soft and were not fit for fancy trade. They killed the demand from the grocer on that pack. Local prices create prices in the East and this has caused the declines in eastern markets. Some of the growers will realize little more than the shipping charges because they have acted in a foolhardy manner and have killed the goose that was bringing home the golden eggs. If the growers and packers would sacrifice the inferior melons, throw them to the dump and keep up prices in that way on the good stock, their revenue would be doubled." At the conclusion of the melon season, Von Neindorff, accompanied by his wife, will leave for a five months' tour of Europe.

Charles A. Smith, London, registered at the Angelus during the week and immediately began inquiries about the fruits and other products of the soil of Southern California. Smith is in the commission business in the world metropolis and has come here to establish local shipping connections, as well as to ascertain the ins and outs of the fruit business. "The English people consume annually approximately $12,000,000 worth of oranges alone and about $2,500,000 of lemons," he said. "Of apples they consume about $10,000,000 worth, and all of these fruits are imported from other countries. It is only in the past ten years that California oranges, lemons and grapefruit have become known in England. In order to find a ready market at the higher prices which are demanded over Mediterranean citrus fruits the California products must be extra fancy. At the present time California oranges sell at about 10 cents apiece, American value, while Mediterranean fruit is worth about half that figure. In order, therefore, to compete, it is essential for the local product to be of extra fine quality. There is no doubt but what the California fruit is superior. Grapefruit is not a very well-known fruit in ordinary homes of England and is looked upon as a luxury for only the rich. Very few California lemons are used, most of the English trade being in Spanish, Italian and Messina lemons. There is a big field for California citrus and what is most needed is an advertising campaign to broadly establish the merits of the fruit. At present about fifty cars of oranges a year are sold in London from California. Ten cars would comprise all the shipments of grapefruit received. Very many American apples are eaten in London. Most of them come from Canada and about a hundred cars from California. Pears are also imported from this State and the Bartlett of California is looked upon as the acme of fruit delicacies during the winter months." Smith will investigate systematically the local packing plants and orchards, after which he will proceed to the Watsonville district to look into apple shipping.

Charles L. Brown, known from the Atlantic to the Pacific as one of the best boosters the West Coast has had, is staying at the Angelus. Brown is a thorough believer in universal advertising of the Pacific Coast and not of an individual community at the expense of the others. "Knocking each other has kept many a city from growing as fast as it should grow," he said. "If all the cities were to combine and wage a systematic campaign of publicity through the East, advertising the entire Pacific Coast, the number of people coming here might be increased five times. Brown at present is at the head of a publicity company of British Columbia and is registered from Vancouver. He has lectured at various places on his present tour on the value of concerted effort as opposed to scattered effort in bringing results in publicity campaigns for widespread territory.

FAST MAIL DELIVERY.

Arrangement in Force With Santa Fe and Southern Pacific to Become Effective on Salt Lake.

The postmaster announced yesterday that the arrangement in operation for some time on the fast mail trains of the Santa Fe and Southern Pacific railways for facilitating the delivery of late mail to business men in Los Angeles will go into effect July 1 on the Salt Lake Limited, arriving daily at 2:30 p.m. By this arrangement letters brought to Los Angeles will be delivered to patrons by carrier the afternoon of arrival.

It involves the sorting of the Los Angeles mail by the railway postal clerks, making it up in packages ready for immediate delivery to the city carriers, instead of having it taken in bulk to the central office here, where it is sorted by experts, making it necessary to deliver such mail the morning following its arrival here.

By the new deal, it will be possible for Los Angeles merchants to receive mail one afternoon and get an answer started the same day, which was impossible under the old rule. It is expected that the carriers will be able to start from the postoffice before 3 o'clock with all of the letter mail reaching the city by the Salt Lake Limited, half an hour after it reaches the depot.

OLD FOLKS ENTERTAINED.

A large company of young people from the Grand View Presbyterian Church paid a visit to the Hollenbeck Home on Friday afternoon and entertained the old folks with an interesting and amusing programme. It was given under the title of "The Young Ladies' Single Blessedness Debating Society," and was highly appreciated by the inmates of the home. They say they are still laughing, and wish to express their thanks for the pleasure given them.

WHEN YOUR HAIR IS DRY AND DUSTY

From New York Herald.

Mme. Theo doesn't believe in washing the head too often. Said she: "Too much wetting makes the hair coarse and brittle and in time it loses its color and becomes thin from use of too much soap and water.

"There is nothing so good as brushing the head with therox when the hair is dry and dusty. Try this if you want abundant, glossy hair: Mix four ounces of powered orris root with four ounces of therox; keep this mixture in a sifter-top can and sprinkle a little of the powder evenly upon the head; then brush thoroughly through the hair two or three times a wek. Therox keeps the hair beautifully lustrous, light and fluffy, and encourages its growth.

"This is an excellent cleansing shampoo in the summertime, particularly grateful and satisfying after automobiling, driving, tennis, or other outdoor pastime."

Famous in a Day for the Beauty of Her Hands and Arms.

A Free Prescription That Does Its Work Over Night—You Can Prepare It At Your Own Home.

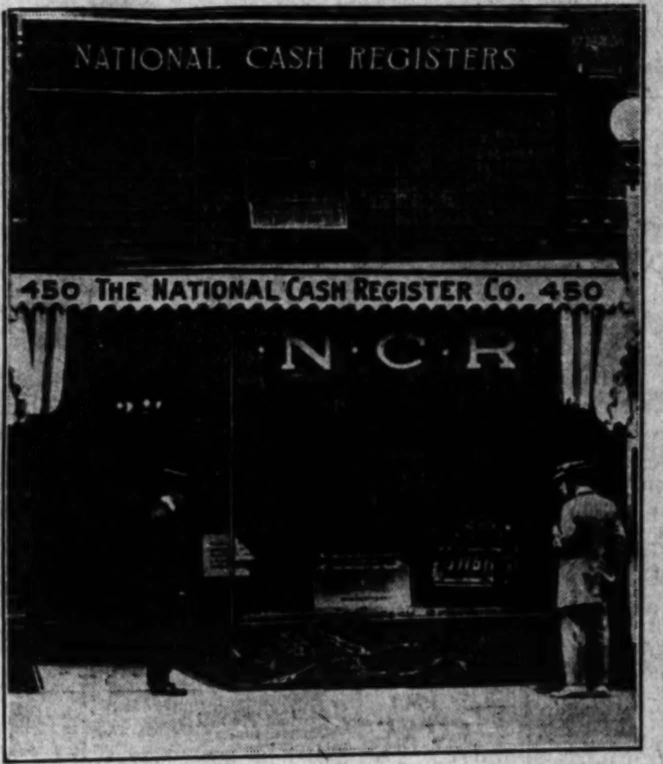
"It's my own discovery, and it takes just one night to get such marvelous results," answers Miss Grace Benson, when her friends ask her about the marvelous change in the appearance of her hands and arms. "You can do the same thing if you will take my advice," she says. "I feel it my duty to tell every woman what this monderful prescription did for me. Just think of it, it did all this in a night! It affords me a world of pleasure to tell any one else just how such remarkable results were brought about. I give you absolutely free, the identical prescription which has removed every defect from my hands and arms. You can form no idea of the marvelous change it will make in just one application. The prescription, which can be prepared at your own home, is as follows: Go to any drug store and buy an empty two-ounce bottle and also a one-ounce bottle of Kulux Compound. Pour the entire bottle of Kulux into the two-ounce bottle, add quarter ounce of witch hazel and fill with water. Mix this at home, then you know that it is the genuine article. Apply night and morning. The first application will astonish you. It makes the skin transparent, removes all discolorations, such as tan, sun spots, freckles and coarse pores, roughness and wrinkles, and in fact, every blemish the hands and arms are heir to. It also produces a marvelous effect on the neck and shoulders. If the neck is discolored from being exposed to the sun or from wearing high collars, this prescription will immediately relieve that condition. No matter how rough and ungainly the hands and arms, or what abuses they have had through hard work and exposure to the sun and wind, this prescription will work a wonderful transformation in 12 hours at the most. Thousands of women are using this prescription with just the same results that I have had."

National Cash Register Co. Maintains Complete Branch Office in Los Angeles

Progressive Methods and Care of Customers Keeps Dayton Company in Front Rank of Important Outside Industries Represented Here.

Few people in Los Angeles realize how many big manufacturing companies throughout the country maintain a branch office and distributing force in this city.

Foremost among the out of town manufacturers who appreciate the importance of maintaining a complete branch in Los Angeles is The National Cash Register Company, of Dayton, Ohio.



Photograph of Present N. C. R. Branch Office, 450 S. Spring Street

Their Los Angeles office, located at No. 450 S. Spring st., is in the very heart of the downtown business district, and its novel and attractive windows are a familiar sight to the citizens of Los Angeles.

But the outside appearance of the office hardly does justice to the importance of the business that is done inside, and the completeness of the arrangements for taking care of customers furnishes an example worth studying.

The first thing which strikes the eye of the visitor upon entering is the large number of machines carried in stock. One or more of each type of register manufactured by the Company are in sight of the visitor. Registers practical and profitable for every kind of store or business are kept on hand.

Here are found machines selling for $25.00 which do more for the merchant than registers which a few years ago sold for four times that. Here also will be found samples of the highest priced machines made by the Company, the largest being practically nine cash registers in one, built so that nine clerks can be provided each with an individual cash drawer, and the opportunity to have his individual record kept daily before the eyes of the proprietor.

Few companies of any kind in the world take the care of their users or customers as does The National Cash Register Company. They have inspectors in the Los Angeles office at all times who have had years of factory experience.

These mechanical inspectors are ready at all times to render the best service to owners of National Cash Registers. Inquiry brought out the fact that while they are seldom called upon, the prompt and efficient service they give is appreciated by every N. C. R. user in and around the city.

The Supply Department maintained in Los Angeles is as complete as though it were right at the factory. Supplies and stationery used in connection with the use of every type of register, are kept in stock, so every merchant who uses a National Cash Register in Los Angeles or vicinity has the same excellent service. He is close to the same kind of expert help and attention should he need it, as though he were located within a block of the factory in Dayton.

Health and Beauty Queries

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN

Mrs. Cora F.: Even though your husband objects so strongly to your using face powder, it is your duty to look as youthful and charming as possible; try this lotion, and although it will beautify your face much better than powder, he can never detect any evidence of a powdered look. Get 4 ounces of spurmax at any drug store; dissolve it in one-half pint hot water, then add two teaspoonfuls glycerine. Apply this lotion to your face, neck and arms, rubbing gently until dry, and it will lend a most wholesome, natural, charming tone to your skin. It will whiten and clear your complexion and take away that shiny, sallow look. I find it excellent for removing freckles and skin pimples; it also affords the skin splendid protection against the sun and wind, and will not rub off easily like powder does when you wear a veil.

Daisy L.: Scanty, thin, short hair can be fluffed up and made to appear abundant without the aid of false hair. Try shampooing your hair with a teaspoonful of canthrox dissolved in a cup of hot water, rinsing afterwards with clear water. This shampoo produces a rich, creamy lather that cleanses the hair and scalp as no other shampoo will. It makes the hair beautifully lustrous, soft and fluffy. It dries very quickly and after using it you will find your hair easy to do up, and will stay in place without the aid of a net or veil, and look nice much longer than ever before. You will no longer be bothered with dandruff and itching scalp. You can get a canthrox shampoo at any first-class hairdresser's or buy the canthrox at your druggist's and do your own shampooing. Never shampoo with soap. The alkali streaks, bleaches and eats the very life out of the hair, making it dull and lifeless.

S. M.: To purify the blood, tone up the system, sharpen the appetite, and get new life and strength, there is nothing like taking a good tonic. If you will go to any drug store and get one-half pint alcohol and one ounce kardene and mix them together, then add one-half cup sugar and boiling water to make a full quart, you will have one of the best tonics known to medical science. It is inexpensive and by taking a tablespoonful before each meal, you will soon get rid of your pimples and liver blotches and your sallow skin will take on the tint of perfect health. This excellent tonic has a most beneficial effect upon the complexion and will brace you up from that "played out" feeling.

Nancy: Don't worry even if your eyes do seem to be weaker and losing their color. You can easily make them strong and just as clear, bright, sparkling and full of color as ever by putting in each eye twice daily a few drops of a simple tonic made by dissolving an ounce of cystos in a pint of cold water. This tonic is very strengthening and soothing to tired, weak, inflamed eyes, and you will find by using it regularly you will never have cause to complain of not having beautiful, charming eyes.

Irene: Unless you want your face covered with unsightly hairs, you had better stop using those greasy creams at once. If you want a good, dependable, greaseless complexion beautifier, make it yourself as follows: Stir together two teaspoonfuls glycerine, one ounce almozoin and one-half pint cold water. Let stand a few hours before using. You will find this fine for massaging as it removes thoroughly all pore dirt. There is nothing like it for removing and preventing blackheads, wrinkles, skin roughness and enlarged pores. This cream-jelly will make your skin clear, smooth, fresh-looking and plump. As a complexion beautifier, you will want nothing better.

"Worried" (and others): Yes, I am glad to repeat the flesh-reducing formula which has given such splendid results in relieving so many of their burdensome fat. Get four ounces of parnotis at any drug store; dissolve it in one and one-half pints hot water and when cool, strain out the sediment and take a tablespoonful of the liquid before each meal. This remedy is harmless, and cuts down fat rapidly without the inconveniences of dieting and exercising. It has accomplished excellent results where other remedies failed.

Ada (also Eva): I am glad to repeat the formula of that wonderful remedy for hair and scalp troubles. Mix together one-half pint alcohol, one-half pint cold water and one ounce quinzoin. This tonic is noted for its remarkable hair-growing properties as well as for stopping falling hair and destroying dandruff. I have known many people that were practically bald, who by using this tonic regularly twice a week on their scalps soon had as luxuriant and fine hair as any one could desire. It checks scalp irritation instantly and makes the hair glossy, fluffy and free from stickiness. Many high class hairdressers and barbers use this tonic exclusively and with excellent results.

Maude: The troublesome hairs of which you speak can be quickly removed by applying plain delatone. Get an ounce of delatone from your druggist and with a little mix some water to form a paste. Spread on hairy surface and in two or three minutes rub off and wash the skin. You will have to pay a dollar an ounce for delatone, but it is worth it, as it rarely requires the second application.

Salt River Valley Melon Growers' Association has begun shipment of watermelons to all parts of the Southwest, and Secretary Osmundson is now in Los Angeles, making arrangement for the marketing of the earlier Phoenix melon crop in Southern California. Most of the watermelons, however, will be sold at different points throughout Arizona on a basis of $20 a ton on the cars in Phoenix. The Phoenix Canteloupe Growers' Association, a separate organization, has contracted for the sale of the crop of this vicinity to the Gibson Fruit Company of Chicago, which is also handling much of the Imperial Valley crop now going to market. Local canteloupes have been planted late, with the definite intention of following the Imperial crop.

IRRIGATION NOTES.

A party of California farmers has settled upon 4000 acres of land, six miles south of Casa Grande, and will secure water for irrigation by pumping from the underground stream of the Santa Cruz River. The land is very rich and is thickly covered with mesquite. As a rule, water is secured in that locality at a depth of not over forty feet.

Two miles south of the famous Casa Grande ruins, a large expanse of land is being reclaimed by means of gasoline pumping plants, covering ground which was cultivated by the ancients and which seems to have been levelled by human agency for the benefit of the farmers who have lately placed their homesteads upon it. Much of this land around the old ruins can be irrigated from the Gila River, but the canal service for a score of years past has been of a most unsatisfactory nature, not utilizing the ordinary flow of the river, and wholly useless in times of drouth.

OIL SEEPAGE FOUND.

Oil seepage has been discovered in an old well near Kelvin and oil sand in a prospect on a copper claim owned by J. J. Sullivan of Phoenix. The prospect has been examined by J. B. McGill, said to be a California oil expert, and upon his advice a drift is being run into the sand, where oil fumes are so strong that men can work only a few minutes at a time. A drill is to be installed at a favorable point and the ground prospected properly. Near Riverside, within a short distance from Kelvin, a few years ago a group of Florence men spent much money in sinking an oil well to about 2000 feet of depth. Oil of paraffine base was found in several strata of sand within the last few hundred feet of the bore, but the drill finally dropped into a cavern filled with salt water. There is not the slightest doubt that paraffine oil exists in the hills along the Gila, but the men who know the most about it have not the funds with which to prospect. A find of commercial oil in that locality would be of immense value, as fuel costs are very high in the mines of central and southern Arizona.

HAIL KILLS YOUNG GOATS.
STORM DAMAGE IN ARIZONA.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

BISBEE (Ariz.) June 15.—The first rains of the summer season came with a dash early in the week, doing much good within this city in clearing away rubbish in the low-lying sections, as well as laying the dust, which had become distressing in the extreme. No floods came down the canyons as had been feared, and the storm drains with which Bisbee has so abundantly provided herself carried all the water. Several picnics and baseball games were broken up and a camp of regular soldiery at Douglas had to be changed to higher ground, owing to the formation of a small river that began to flow through the encampment in the late hours of the night. The only material damage reported was the killing by hail of about 190 young goats, the property of Jack Fredericks, grazed near the Country Cub below Bisbee.

About $20,000 has been deposited in the Bisbee postal savings bank which was opened for business May 1. This city already is very near the top in point of importance in postal savings, a fact probably due to the large percentage of foreign miners, mainly Italian and Slavonian, who have no faith in banks not guaranteed by the government.

In a competitive shoot lately held between the rifle clubs of Bisbee and Tacoma, Wash., the local organization was the loser with a score of 786, compared with 814 of the Northwestern club.

HELD FOR EMBEZZLEMENT.

M. Naskanishi, who was arrested several days ago on a charge of embezzlement, was given a preliminary hearing yesterday before Justice Summerfield and held to answer to the Superior Court. The prosecuting witness, a Japanese by the name of Motsumoto, took the stand and testified that because he could not speak English he had allowed the defendant to conduct a business affair for him and had entrusted him with a check for $150, which was subsequently cashed. He said he never received the money.

against. He drops into the city ostentatiously wearing his country clothes and with the air of an honest young man who is thoroughly in earnest.

The city men who are busy in the rush of things are interested with his scheme and in the parlance of the street "fall" for it readily.

HAS FUN WITH BLOODS.

The other day a sterling appearing young man was loitering in one of the high-class downtown buffets and soon struck up an acquaintance with a number of the high-flying young bloods. He was a good talker and acknowledged with a wide grin that he was from the country. The conversation drifted around to betting and to unique methods of raising the wind.

The young man said that he could walk out into the street for half an hour and raise a purse of $10 to $16 without begging, borrowing, stealing or using any of the usual methods for raising money.

Bets of sums ranging from $5 to $50 were made and the stranger covered all of them, leaving the barkeeper as stakeholder. The young bloods went with the stranger. He walked into a Main-street pawnshop and nearly caused "His Uncle" to drop dead when he offered to pawn his perfectly good $10 bill for $8.

The pawnbroker, recognizing some of the young bloods and thinking that it was a sporting matter, accommodated the young man. The young man received his $8 and his pawn ticket and again sallied forth.

This time he walked into another buffet of the gilded class, where he said that he knew the barkeeper. He walked up to the barkeeper and, leaning over the bar, said:

"Say, Bill, I am hard up and will you buy this pawn ticket which calls for $10 cash, from me for $8?"

The barkeep blinked his eyes several times and did a little figuring and then opened his cash register, tossed $8 on the counter, accepting the pawn ticket for $10.

The crowd of young bloods walked out of the buffet in a dazed frame of mind. The stranger stalked back to the original buffet where the stakes were deposited, and followed by the crestfallen young men, tossed the $8 which he had secured from the pawnbroker on the counter and immediately followed this with the $8 which he had received from the barkeeper, making the required total of $16. He carelessly scooped in his bets and walked away.

A few years ago during the heyday of the Ascot racetrack and later during the best days at Santa Anita track it was not the gilded youth from the city who pored over his dope sheets half of the night who made the killings. It was not even the professional gambler, as they as a rule left Los Angeles at the close of the racing season with empty pockets, but it was the absolute stranger in the city, the man who had to ask the bell boy in his hotel where to get a street car to go to the track who copped the big ones.

GRANGERS "CLEANED" HIM.

A Seattle bookmaker came to Los Angeles and opened his book at Santa Anita. He had a roll of $20,000 and hoped by judicious manipulation to double or treble this roll in the course of the season. at the end of the racing season he sought out a few friends in Los Angeles and borrowed enough to get back East.

He told a friend how it happened.

"I was cleaned," he said, "by the simplest bunch of grangers who ever went up against a book. Honest, some of them could not read or write, but they knew horses. I knew that they could not read or write to any extent as I at one time said that I would pay off the bets according to the decision of the two sporting editors of the bigger Los Angeles papers. The letters they wrote to these gentlemen required a week's work to decipher. They were right, however, and I lost."

The first granger to come to me and place a bet knew the trainer for a big horseman and had a direct tip. He had between two and three hundred dollars to work on.

"He made a $100 parlay on a horse with me at 2 to 1 in the next race and his horse won. He was $300 ahead. In the next race he had another 2 to 1 on his $300 winnings and cleaned up $900, and in the next race he played a 4 to 1 shot and put up his $900 winnings and his horse won again and he cleaned me for $4500. This was all in one afternoon at the Santa Anita track and the way I felt made me think of the long wharf as a jumping off place. Three times in that season I was up against this same game. The green horn who knew horses would not pay the slightest attention to the usual run of tipsters and squalid 'info,' but would get a tip from headquarters and the result is that I had to borrow money enough to go East."

BOOKMAKER "NICKED."

George Rose, the master bookmaker of the Santa Anita track, was "nicked" one day for $12,000 by a traveling salesman who stopped at the Alexandria. The traveling salesman is, as a rule, the source of a great deal of revenue of the bookmakers at the tracks, but this man had direct information from an owner whom he had met on the California Limited coming West. He bet his money at the prevailing odds and when at the close of the day Rose found himself owing the traveling salesman $12,000, he said many strange things.

Now $12,000 real money is hard to produce away out at a race track and Rose gave the fellow his check. The fellow accepted the check, but refused to give over his tickets and stuck as close to Rose as a Scottish burr until Rose started for the Alexandria. The traveling salesman was right at his elbow and when he arrived at the hotel he was asked by the salesman to step to the cashier of the hotel and O. K. the check in her presence. Rose, who is always as good as his word, recognized the type of man and accommodated him. The cashier of the Alexandria can always produce several thousands of dollars at any hour of the day, but a wad of $12,000 at one single rap was a trifle strenuous. So a consultation was held with the result that Rose called in a little assistance and turned over to the salesman his $12,000 in hard money.

"That fellow will not come back," said Rose. "He is the type of man who is afraid of betting and has made this one killing on direct information from an owner. No, he will invest his $12,000 and there is no chance of getting even a portion of it back."

This is the story that almost all professional gamblers are now telling. The very set or class of those who were once the butt of every common city wayfarer's joke has profited by experience; has felt the shame and odium attached to the reputation of being an easy constant loser and when men of this class now take a chance with chance—

They win.

And the professional goes to pawn his watch and chain for breakfast money, while the visitor from the provinces buys himself an automobile with his winnings.

Sims Ely, mining man and politician of Phoenix, is passing a few days at the Alexandria.

MOTORMAN DIVIDES PUBLIC.

for the general public is that it requires a wrecking crew to put the car back on the track.

But other things even up the life of a man on the front platform. There is a fascination about the work. You become an adept in avoiding accidents. You can turn off the current with one hand, put on the air with the other and ring the bell with your teeth.

READING THE MIND.

There are times when your car needs humoring. You become an accurate judge of distance. You can read the minds of pedestrians. That old man, for instance, is going to hesitate before he quite reaches the track, and that woman will dart out from the curb, pause between the rails, start back and then go forward. If she clears the track it's providence.

And that reminds me of an exasperating case of a woman who was wheeling an invalid's chair. I rang the bell when I saw she was going to endeavor to cross in front of the car, but she kept right on; never turned her head. I slapped on the brakes and missed her by a narrow margin, for the rails were wet. I suppose I glared at her for taking such a chance, but she turned and smiled at me. And it was that sort of a smile that gets on a man's nerve—supercilious.

Yes, sir, this life is not wildly exhilarating, but it is good and clean. And if a motorman wants to learn he can broaden his education by studying human nature, and absorbing the good ideas passengers will let drop in his hearing.

It's not a prosaic profession. You never know what is going to turn up, and as I have said, if there are annoyances, there are also plenty of bright touches that make the smiles chase away your frowns.

Right in your busiest season when you have the least time to spare, you are most likely to take diarrhoea and lose several days' time, unless you have Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy at hand and take a dose on the first appearance of the disease. For sale by all dealers.—[Adv.

JOBBERS MUST WAIT FOR RATE DECISION

PHYSICAL VALUATION OF RAILROADS IS A FACTOR.

State Commission Reads an Opinion Into a State Law—Trains of More Than Four Cars Must Have Two Brakemen—Colonist Rates Referred to Committee.

Those who have watched with keen interest the ten-year campaign made by the jobbers in Los Angeles to secure equitable freight rates to the San Joaquin Valley are scarcely in the mood to appreciate the announcement that a final decision may not be expected in the case now pending before the State Board of Railroad Commissioners within two or three years. Already the case has been long on the docket and hearings have dragged for several weeks, with only the San Francisco interests so far heard. The commissioners expect to come here the 26th inst. to hear the local jobbers testify, and then hearings are to be held in Stockton, Fresno and Bakersfield and perhaps one or two other places.

Now comes an unofficial statement from the board that the decision, when rendered in this case, will not be final. The last session of the Legislature authorized the State board to make a physical valuation of the railroads. The appropriation for this purpose is available July 1, at which time it is assumed the board will begin spending the money. No engineer has yet been employed to make the valuation. It cost the State of Washington $200,000 and two years' time to ascertain the physical value of the railroads in that State, and there are many more miles of railroad in California than in Washington. Getting back to the effect on the San Joaquin Valley rate case, the chairman of the board is credited with saying that the physical valuation will determine largely what the railroads should be allowed to charge for carrying freight and passengers, and that until the report is made as to physical valuation no final decision in the rate case will be made. Meanwhile the jobbers of Los Angeles are concerned as to the $15,000,000 annual business in the San Joaquin Valley.

The Railroad Commissioners have interpreted a puzzling section of the full-crew bill passed by the last Legislature. The clause relates to the employment of two brakemen for every train with four or more passenger cars. The railroads construed this to mean cars for carrying passengers and not mail, baggage or express cars. But the Railroad Commissioners have declared that the law was not intended the way it reads, and that the railroads must accept it as the lawmakers intended to have it. In other words, any passenger train having more than four cars of any and every kind must have two brakemen. The order affects many trains, particularly on the branch lines.

Colonist Rates This Fall.

No definite action wa taken concerning the one-way fall colonist rates to Pacific coast points at the meeting of the Transcontinental Passenger Association at Salt Lake last week. Assistant Passenger Traffic Manager Byrne of the Santa Fe returned from Salt Lake last night.

"There is no change in the situation," said Byrne last night. "Some of the lines interested in the colonist rates did not have representatives present at the meeting with authority to act on the colonist rate proposition so the matter was referred to a committee that is to meet in Chicago soon and pass on the rates. I believe that the same rates that were in effect last year will be put in again this year and that the sale period will be the same as it was last year, September 15 to October 15."

New Highway to Venice.

The Los Angeles Pacific and residents of the territory affected have completed plans for a new direct highway road from Palms to Venice, which avoids the now frequent crossing of the trolley tracks. The new road will eventually be extended to Los Angeles, connecting with extended Pico street. The new highway will be of the boulevard type with a thirty foot roadway on either side of the trolley line tracks. The right of way has been secured for the six miles from Palms to Venice. The highway is one mile shorter than the Washington boulevard route. The proposed extension from Palms to Los Angeles will run past the transforming station, the packing house and across the Cricket Club grounds to the end of Tico street. There will be but one railroad crossing where the highway crosses the Los Angeles Pacific line to Sawtelle.

Hollywood Backs a Trip.

The Hollywood Board of Trade has arranged for an excursion over the new "Triangle Trolley Trip, of Pacific Electric, including stops at Santa Ana, Huntington Beach, San Pedro and Point Firmin. The excursion will be run next Thursday.

Delegates to Catalina.

A party consisting of thirty-one delegates from Atlanta, Ga., to the Sunday-school convention took the trip to Catalina Island. The party arrived yesterday morning on the Salt Lake Railroad and went direct to San Pedro harbor for the ocean trip.

POLITICAL TIPS.

Gov. Harmon of Ohio, who wants the Democratic Presidential nomination, is to have about his hardest opposition right in his home city of Cincinnati. There has recently been organized there one of the largest Democratic clubs in the country, which will work against his nomination. Harmon's supporters look upon Champ Clark as his only real rival. "We are not afraid of Gov. Wilson nor of Gov. Marshall of Indiana," they say. Lieut.-Gov. Nichols is in direct charge of the Harmon campaign and is making arangements for the formation of Harmon clubs throughout the West, South and Southwest.

A new factor is being brought forward in the contest for the Democratic Presidential nomination. Gov. Harmon's friends have been comparing the achievements of the Ohio Legislature, which has just adjourned, with the work of the New Jersey Legislature, and they naturally find that the Ohio body has made a much better record in regard to the passage of progressive measures. And this is an argument for nominating Harmon.

Gen. Charles H. Grosvenor, the "sage of Athens," for many years a member of Congress, and such a famous political prognosticator that he was known as "old figgers," is boosting Taft's Presidential chances in 1912.

"If the national election were held right now," said the General, "and Taft and Harmon were opposing candidates before the people, Mr. Taft would win in Ohio and the union, hands down. Mr. Taft will have no difficulty in beating Harmon in Ohio and elsewhere in 1912.

It now appears that John J. Mahon, the leader of the regular Democratic organization in Baltimore, and all his lieutenants down the line, are in favor of the nomination of Senator Gorman for the Governorship of Maryland. On the other hand former Gov. Frank Brown has made a formal announcement of his candidacy for the nomination. His experience in the office, and his record of achievement will be made features in his campaign. State Senator Blair Lee of Montgomery also has gubernatorial aspirations, and has opened headquarters in Baltimore. Gov. Crothers has thus far declined to state whether he will be a candidate for renomination, but, if not, his support will probably be given to State Senator Lee. Several other names are likely to be presented for the consideration of the delegates.

Senator Jonathan Bourne of Oregon, whose term expires in 1913, proposes to put his popularity to a severe test, as he announces that while he will be a candidate for re-election he proposes to conduct no campaign, make no speeches, send out no literatre, solicit no votes, spend no money and, generally, to let the voters do as they see fit. The Senator's object is to promote an object lesson in pure popular government. If he sticks to his announced determination it must be feared that it is he who will receive the lesson.

Speaker Champ Clark says he wants the Democratic national convention held in Kansas City, Mo., and has no second choice. This does not please Baltimore, which seeks the convention.

The New York Legislature is evidently not much in favor of the commission form of government for cities, as it has turned down a proposed new commission charter for Buffalo which contained the initiative, referendum and recall.

Ex-Congressman Frank O. Lowden of Oregon, Ill., is receiving invitations to become a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor of Illinois. The movement is said to be engineered by friends of Senator Cullom who will look to Frank L. Smith of Dwight for a second choice. Mr. Lowden's refusal to run for re-election to Congress last fall on account of ill health was supposed to mean his retirement from politics. He has now recovered, however, and there is nothing to prevent his again taking an interest in the political game.

West Virginia politicians are waking up to the fact that the light electoral votes of their State may be an important factor in the next national election. The landslide of last November to the Democracy, when 35 per cent. of the Republican voters remained away from the polls and allowed the Democrats to elect four out of five of its Congressmen and two Democratic United States Senators, has filled the Democratic hosts with confidence, some of their leaders contending that it was the natural drift back toward the Democratic party. The Republican leaders are not inclined to believe that the voters are doing the pendulum stunts, and they assert confidently that those who left the party last year will come back into the fold in 1912 after witnessing the damage wrought to the Republican craft by a Democratic Legislature. They realize that if they can carry the normal Republican vote there is no danger of a repetition of the Democratic victory of last year.

HAIR REMOVERS ARE DANGEROUS

Physicians Say: "Don't Use Poisonous Depilatories."

The extravagant claims recently made by unscrupulous manufacturers of hair removers in sensational advertisements unquestionably justify physicians in cautioning the public against the use of this class of depilatories. How many people have been enticed into using these dangerous preparations, with consequent injury to themselves, cannot be estimated, but only guessed at.

The preparations above referred to are invariably in the form of creamy pastes, which are to be spread upon the skin to remain until they dry. These contain Sulphide of Barium, an insoluble chemical, which cannot be dissolved; therefore cannot be absorbed by the skin. The very fact that you are told to leave these pasty compounds on the skin until they dry and cake and then lift off with a knife is proof positive that they are not absorbed. If they are, why do they still remain on the skin? The most they can possibly do is to remove the surface hair, which in consequence will reappear stronger and thicker after each removal.

There is only one logical and scientific way to remove hair, and that is by means of a liquid containing soluble ingredients which can be absorbed by the skin. DeMiracle, known all the world over as the only real superfluous hair remover, is just such a preparation. It is easily and quickly absorbed and after you have used it you will note there is nothing left on the skin. It leaves the skin free from irritation, and what is more to the point, it is absolutely non-poisonous; therefore, it will not produce eczema or blood poisoning. Remember, no matter what claims are made to the contrary, no poisonous, pasty compound or so-called "liquid cure" ever did or ever will kill a single hair root, and we can prove it.

Beware of the fake free advertisers and others who by wording of their advertisements, try to give the impression that newspapers and other reputable publications indorse their worthless preparations. Don't be deceived by them. DeMiracle is the only preparation which is so indorsed.

DeMiracle is sold at all good stores.

No honest dealer will offer you a substitute on which he makes more profit.

We will send you a 52-page booklet containing full information concerning this remarkable treatment, as well as testimonials of prominent physicians, surgeons, dermatologists, medical journals and the principal magazines and newspapers. You should read this booklet before you try anything. Write to the DeMiracle Chemical Co., Dept. G28, 1905 Park ave., New York, simply saying you want this booklet, and it will be mailed sealed, at once.

Note—All readers of this paper who are afflicted with superfluous hair growths are strongly advised to write for information concerning this wonderful method, which is indorsed the world over by eminent authorities who have made a lifelong study of the subject.

CAVALIERI NOW FEARS TO FACE AMERICANS, YET IS RE-SIGNED BY RUSSELL FOR BOSTON OPERA

Story of Lucille Marcell, Girl Who Went Abroad, Studied, Struggled, Suffered---and Triumphed.

BY A "TIMES" CORRESPONDENT.

Henry Russell
Lucille Marcell
Lina Cavalieri

World Figures in Twentieth Century Grand Opera.

Lucille Marcell is the American heroine of Strauss's "Elektra." The crowd took her horses from her carriage and pulled her home after each performance. She is coming home, and expects the American public to judge her merely as an artist, and explains the attitude of the Viennese toward herself and Weingartner, the composer, who also goes to the Boston Opera. Her story of privations, temptations and final winning-out in Europe is a human document.

PARIS, June 1.—"I dare not face Americans. They are too hard on me!" she faltered, mopping her beautiful eyes and nose. We were surprised.

Did you ever see a goddess weep?

We had come to be present at a historical event—the resigning of Lina Cavalieri with the Boston Opera.

Instead, the diva wept; and Henry Russell asked for a glass of water. The bijou apartment swarmed with quiet servitors. He raised the glass to his lips; he set it down untouched There was a swish of cambric in 'he hallway. All was over.

Virginal white and green, the Avenue du Bois in its spring garb of marronier blooms. Cream velvet and lace, the upholstery of the diva's limousine. Blue serge, with filmy blouse and flowing jabot, the plain-tailor moulding the divine form. Cavalieri is fresher, sweeter and more glowing in young beauty of a morning, than with all the aids of lights and make-up.

"Rue de la Paix . . ." she said. These great artistes are overwhelmed, the dressmaker, jeweler, furrier, modiste wear them out. We respected her pain.

I turned to Henry Russell.

"I hope to sign her yet," he said. "In her roles she makes the most beautiful stage picture in the world today."

'What of the moral point of view?" I asked.

"It is the only one that does not exist, he answered. "An eminent French critic has said: 'The highest point to which an individual can rise is a conception of the beautiful.' I think that covers the Cavalieri question. If on the stage she gives us a conception of the beautiful, she does us good. If her private actions have been criticised, the fault is with the American press and public. They have given great publicity to one or two incidents in the life of Cavalieri, incidents paralleled in the lives of many great artistes without attracting the slightest attention. I will not say that all artistes are bad—or that all who are not artistes are good; in the lowest forms of vice there is no trace of a sense of the beautiful. But I think that the morals of an artiste are so apart from the beauty which her art creates, that only stupid people pay attention to them."

"Will America believe this?" I asked.

"Yes," said Henry Russell.

He is a tempest of energy in a frail body, a dreamy dilettante plunging into the world's battle. Slender, smooth-faced, dark, meticulous in dress, he is the most nervous man I ever saw—yet deftly directing that same nervousness to serve as motive-force. Dainty order is his handmaiden. Again he raised the glass, again set it down untasted to dictate, a letter in Italian. The smooth-haired girl-secretary brought checks to sign. He wet his lips. A cable. The French secretary whispers. A caller is disposed of, a date at the Cafe du Nord booked. The French secretary brings pass books of opera and opera-comique. The Italian stands with a list. The American secretary seems to be master of the hour. He whispers of an appointment in the Rue de la Paix to sign a famous orchestra-conductor from Vienna.

With a sigh, the frail, dark young man at last took a sip at the glass of water and slipped into the waiting automobile.

"Are Americans so enamoured of beauty?" I asked, as we rolled through the one-time Avenue of the Empress.

"It is as important for a singer to be beautiful as to sing well," he answered; "and no public in the world demands it more than the Americans."

"I thought that their highest admiration was Sembrich?"

Henry Russell laughed gently.

"The great mass of the American people are young, fresh and full of vitality enough to love beauty. They have not got to the point of mummified appreciation where the personal appearance of the artiste is indifferent. The singer who is beautiful has already made her way 60 per cent. with Americans, before she opens her mouth. Now, besides being an excellent artiste, I maintain that no other prima-donna in the world can look so beautiful as Cavalieri in her special roles—Thais, Tosca, Manon Lescaut . . ."

"But will there not be a general blast against her? Cavalieri herself seems to fear it . . ."

"She has no need to fear. I should be disappoineed in any Bostonian who, in a matter to be judged entirely across the footlights, should take a pre-judge attitude toward private social relations."

"But Parnell, a man of proved integrity in his professional life, was ruined when certain of his private relations became public."

"Yes, but that was in England, where they have always tried to kill thought, art and beauty. It is in their blood. But there is also this to be said: Parnell posed as a leader of the social organization. But artistes in an operahouse have no such pretension. An institution devoted to the development of the beautiful has nothing to do with anything but beauty."

"But the Salome affair," I said.

"Yes, an absurd business, outrageous; but, note, the objection was to the stage picture, or, rather, its subject matter, not the private life of the artiste. Cavalieri has never made a questionable stage picture—on the contrary."

Russell's face lit up. We were passing the salon.

"People go to see a beautiful picture hanging in the salon. Look you, here is my exact thought. Take a beautiful painting in the salon. Nobody can attempt to judge, or care to judge, that picture by the morals of the man who painted it. Have you ever known such an instance? Does the most moral art collector, buying his Zeims, care a rap that Zeims ran off with the Duchess of Tuscany? My aim in opera is to paint as beautiful a stage picture as I can—and the Boston Opera is noted for some that I have done. I put it to the American public whether as an artist I should be justified in refusing one of the most lovely figures for my picture because that figure is or is not morally equal to the standards of the city in which she happens, not to live, but merely to pay a visit?"

We had arrived at the hotel. Descending from the automobile, Russell turned and smiled:

"Why look beneath the beautiful presentment?" he asked gently. "Why probe the artistic temperament? Each singer takes it that the world is built for her alone. If she sings out of tune, it is the orchestra. If she is not a success, it is the director. If she has a cold, it is draughts in the back of the stage. Everything untoward is caused by malignant exterior forces. On the other hand, everything that is agreeable or successful is due entirely, unconditionally and fundamentally to her personal genius. I accept the charming creatures in that spirit—and find them delightful. Who was it said that the only thing interesting is the mask that one wears?"

While Henry Russell was upstairs signing the famous orchestra conductor from Vienna, I was permitted to hear an American girl artiste judge the Cavalieri imbroglio in the hotel parlor. Miss Lucille Marcell—who also goes to the Boston Opera—is the more competent to speak of these matters because she herself suffered from public curiosity at the height of her triumph in Strauss's "Elektra."

Miss Marcell is a New York, or, more exactly, a Harlem girl, who has become famous abroad without having been once heard in her native land.

Coming to Paris as a student on a very small allowance, she rose superior to every privation and temptation that can assail the beautiful young girl in pursuit of art abroad.

"I have suffered what no other girl has suffered," she said "I have lived in Paris on $40 per month for mother and myself."

"Including tuition?" I asked, astonished.

"I never paid tuition," she said, simply. "Mother and I lived in one tiny room of a little hotel in the Rue Lafayette. Mother is with me still; she travels with me. The first two years were very hard. I could have had it all different if I had been—different. Many girls go wrong here. Yes, from lack of means. It is terrible. With certain compromises, all promises to become easy."

"Does it?"

"Yes, for some; but I have seen three beautiful girls just go to the devil. They did not even succeed as singers. They grew lazy. They are down and out."

"While others succeed without compromises?"

"Yes, because they have character, will power—and very beautiful voices. Also, they have good looks. There is no use blinking at it, one must either have good looks and a very fine voice, or else be a raving beauty and have a fairly good voice. Only in Germany can the prima donna ignore her looks. All this is dangerous. The beautiful girl is always in danger, and fifty times more so when she goes in for opera. If she has the character to succeed, much should be forgiven her."

"Like Cavalieri?" I suggested. She seemed not to hear.

"For two years I really struggled," she continued. "Then Carre engaged me for the Opera-Comique. I was there a year, singing Mallika in "Lakme" with Bessie Abott. I am a dramatic soprano, but began as a mezzo. I got $60 per month, and was rich—the Opera-Comique furnishes costumes, everything . . . I had not much chance to sing; my French was not good enough; but Carre was like a brother, kept me on and let me study. He understood. He knew that I was decent . . ."

"Certain compromises are not necessary at the Opera-Comique?"

"There is no truth in that, anywhere. I never sang before an opera director who gave me the slightest offense. Regularly, they said: 'I can offer you so and so much;' and I replied, 'I cannot accept it; it is not enough.' I was at the Opera-Comique a year when Jean de Reszke heard me."

"What did he say?"

"He said that I must go and study with him. Of course, I was dying to accept; but how could I? So I told him frankly: 'I dare not give up the Opera-Comique because I get $60 per month, which keeps myself and mother.' 'My child,' he answered, 'give it up, and I will advance you $60 per month.' "

Tears stood in her eyes.

"I owe everything to De Reszke. I had three lessons every day for four years."

"But this tuition business is extraordinary," I said. "Had you not better put in a warning, lest other girls count on it?"

"All my teachers always gave me free lessons, the moment they heard my voice," answered Marcell, blushing.

"Did you not have to sign notes, or something?"

"Not even a verbal promise. But I kept the accounts; and I shall pay them all, but De Reszke first. He was my god."

"Has he done as much for other American girls?"

"He has done it for a lot. I never saw a man like him."

"And it was, after all, not Paris but Vienna where you made your success?" I said.

"Yes; after studying with De Reszke four years—which makes seven in Paris—I got an engagement in St. Petersburg. It was then that I sang for the Esarina—it was in all the American papers. Then I went to Vienna and created Elektra, which was my real beginning. Such is my very simple biography."

"You created Elektra. Your taste, then, is modern?"

"No, I love Verdi and Mozart. I do not hate modern. I like Tosca and Faust—they have been my successes; and I am no Wagner singer. The only role of Strauss I ever sang was Elektra. It made me renowned. I cannot say that I do not like it. It interested me; and it was a great chance, an occasion. Otherwise, I might have been obliged to mount step by step. So I took that part—which is terrific! There is not a Wagner part like it. But, in my heart, I love Mozart and Gluck and Verdi. Why sacrifice a beautiful voice for a thing that does you harm? A part like Elektra does you more harm than good, if not to the voice, then to the physique."

"What is your routine?"

"I practice in the morning. I eat and drink what I please, but I must be in bed by 10 p.m. every night when not singing. I love home life. I love children, and wish that I had some."

"What would you do with them?"

"I would stay up after 10 p.m., if necessary. I would even give up my voice for them; but it is not necessary. Louise Homer has twice had twins."

"Has the public a right to know them?"

"No, that is a sealed book. Many artistes are decent women. Why should their lives become public?"

"Does the average artiste mind?"

"I do not like it," said Marcell, "And I stopped it when they began in Vienna. The public cannot judge the private nature of the artiste. The artiste and the average person are differently made. And giving more to the public than does the average person, the artiste has the right to be judged by a different measure."

"Do you mind—explaining?" I asked timidly.

"Everybody adored me in Vienna. I have nothing to conceal. There was nothing to be ashamed of in falling in love with a married man. I was the sensation. They took the horses out of my carriage after each performance of 'Elektra.' Crowds stood under my window. My apartment was full of flowers. I could have done anything, it was beautiful, grand, it was Marcell! . . . Then I fell in love with Weingartner; and Weingartner fell in love with me; and the trouble commenced."

"How?" I asked.

"The public thought they had a right to poke into artistes' private lives."

"The Vienna public is, then, like the American?"

"It is worse. There is no comparison."

"They condemned you?"

"Oh, no."

"They criticized you?"

"Why, no. They thought it charming, delightful, and wished to participate. The papers were full of talk that I just hated. They wanted to know the details of our happiness. I was shocked; I kept quiet. But when the Vienna papers went too far, I showed them that I was an American girl. I had a brilliant engagement, with $46,000 a year in my contract. I sued those papers; and they were obliged to print columns of retractions, excuses and apologies. Then I went to my director and said: 'Here is my contract. I do not wish to belong to this company any more. I signed to be judged as an artiste ——"

Her indignation was composed and worthy.

"Weingartner found you an ideal interpreter. You delighted in his genius as composer and conductor. And the public ——"

"Everybody knows that I adore that man's art."

"You deny the right of the public to bring any question of private life into art?"

"Yes, so long as you are a decent woman."

"What is a decent woman?"

"So long as you love one man and one man only, and sacrifice your life to his art, you are a docent woman ——"

"And you expect that the American public will judge you as an artiste?"

"I expect it confidently," was her solemn answer.

Mestayer, Tutor.

Frank Egan, for the first time since his coming to Los Angeles, has been vacationizing, and his place at his school in the Hamburger Majestic Theater building has been supplied by Harry Mestayer.

Mr. Mestayer has been giving some especially interesting talks to the pupils, and his tutelage has the stamp of authority, since he has not only played a greater variety of roles, in all probability, than any actor of his years in America, but he has as well the dignity of ancestral worth, as his father was one of the greatest character actors of his time.

Mr. Mestayer's practical assets have been further increased by his finely-successful roles in the East this year. Here, too, he has had wide divergence of experience, having scored a great success in the deeply serious "Penalty," another with Henry Kolker in "The Great Name," a hit of another line in Joseph Howard's musical comedy, "Love and Politics," and finally a triumph in "The Fox," which company he entered in Chicago shortly after the piece was put on there.

Mr. Egan rejoined the school the latter part of the week. His short vacation period was spent at Catalina, fishing with Edgar Selwyn.

Mr. Egan avers that the plans for the broadening of the school's work next season go on apace.

The Week.

"BROKEN IDOL," VIA HARTMAN'S.

REPETITIONS BY THE DRAMATIC STOCK COMPANIES.

Vaudeville Bills at the Empress, Orpheum, Pantages, Hyman and College Theaters Promise Diverse Round of Variety Entertainment This Week.

B. C. Whitney's musical farcicality, "A Broken Idol," will be given its first production in the West, and for the first time by a stock company, by the Hartman company at the Grand this afternoon.

Otis Harlan recently starred in the East in "A Broken Idol," and it is said to be one of the best of the present-day musical farces.

The scenes are laid in New York and Long Island, the first act taking place on Mott street, during a celebration of the Chinese new year, while the second act passes at the home of Silas Pugsley, a retired merchant.

There is no particular plot to "A Broken Idol," although it is more or less the story of a hen pecked husband, an English lord, who is hunting a fortune, and a quack doctor, who has been commissioned to line up a fortune in the form of a nice looking and wealthy young girl.

Among the song numbers of the play are: "A Little China Doll," "Marie," "What Makes the World Go Round," "Spring Time" and "Am I Right?" besides a number of the newest hits put into the production. The work of the Hartman chorus should be particularly attractive in "A Broken Idol," especially the elaborate French number.

on local stages during the coming week.

Broken Idol" are almost evenly divided between Percy Bronson, as the fortune-hunting Lord Dunby; Robert Leonard, as Silas Pugsley, the retired merchant with political ambitions, and Roscoe Arbuckle, as "Doc Whatt?" Lou Chaney will have the character of J. Ely Muddleford, in search of bugs, while Marta Golden is cast as his masterly wife, Lucretia Muddleford. Myrtle Dingwall will be seen and heard in the role of Marion Pugsley, while Frances White will play Mlle. Marie de Deau, from the Follies Beregere, Paris.

Following "A Broken Idol," the Hartman company will present "The Gingerbread Man."

"Merely Mary Ann," Israel Zangwill's radiant comedy of the "lady slavey," has proved such a success again in the hands of Lewis S. Stone and the Belasco stock company that it will be repeated for one more week, beginning tomorrow evening. This is a remarkable record for any play, as this is the fourth time it has been given in Los Angeles, and the third time by a stock company. The principal reason for its popularity in the present interpretation, of course, is the unfailing freshness and charm of Marjorie Rambeau's delineation of the title part, in which she has more than repeated her success of last year. All suspicion that her big hit in this role might have been due to the customary warm welcome given a new leading woman has been dispelled. The vital, humanizing quality she imparts to every scene makes the pathetic figure absolutely irresistible in its simple sincerity. Whether she is blacking the shoes in the first act, or presiding over her drawing-room in the last, she is always natural, easy and charming. Mr. Stone as Launcelot offers an interesting study of the Englishman whose pride of caste will permit him to lead astray the friendless girl but will not permit him to marry her. An interesting coincidence occurs in this regard, in that Mr. Stone, in the next Belasco offering, "The House Next Door," will play the part of another very different character who becomes involved in the British prejudice regarding family and race. In "Merely Mary Ann" the entire Belasco cast appears to good advantage. Richard Vivian as the tune-writing business man, Ida Lewis as the landlady, and Roberta Arnold's giggle which is rapidly becoming a sort of civic institution, have been commented upon especially favorably. "The House Next Door" will be given next wek, so this will be absolutely the final presentation of "Merely Mary Ann."

Richard Bennett's characterization of the French adventurer in "Pierre of the Plains" promises to become as regular and popular an annual event as the Tournament of Roses and Christmas Day. Such big houses have greeted his appearance for the last week at the Burbank in this play of the untamed West, that Manager Morosco has decided to repeat the favorite for the second week of Mr. Bennett's engagement. This is the third time that this star has played this part in Los Angeles in special engagements with stock companies, and the ensuing week will be the fifth week for the piece in three years, and still the demand for seats for the virile Selwyn-Parker drama keeps up. It is more than likely that the coming week will be the last appearance of Pierre in Los Angeles, however, as even should Mr. Bennett's starring contract with Liebler and Company permit of his return here next year, Pierre will be given a vacation. Four successive years is too much to ask of any play. Aside from Mr. Bennett's own performance, the Burbank company has won unstinted praise for its uniformly excellent work in the supporting cast. David M. Hartford as the vengeful trailer who matches wits and strength with Pierre, is in one of his best assignments. The fight to the death between the two is one of the most realistic and thrilling affrays ever seen on the stage. Frederick Gilbert, who has just returned from Chicago where he played in "The Fox," is back in the cast. David Landau, Willis Marks, H. S. Duffield, Mable Morrison, Charles Ruggles, Howard Scott and all the other Burbankers are very much at home in the familiar piece. This will be the last week of "Pierre." It will be followed by James Montgomery's new play, "Jimmy, Jr." in which Richard Bennett will appear as the lively and resourceful son of a millionaire who is involved in a political battle.

The feature of the new bill opening at the Empress Theater tomorrow afternoon will be Albers's troupe of polar bears, one of the biggest animal acts on the vaudeville stage. Albers has ten beautiful white animals, and the amount of intelligence they display in going through their clever performance makes them one of the remarkable acts. It is the desire of the management to present each week an act that will be an especial attraction for the children, and while the polar bears have always proved a treat for the little folks, they are also an extremely entertaining and interesting feature for the grown-ups. They have been trained to a very high degree and in their big cage on the stage they present a very picturesque sight.

Second in importance on the new bill is the Barrows-Lancaster company in their military playlet, "Tactics." For two years this sketch has been considered a model, and is still being presented by the original players. "Tactics" has the elements of a Civil War drama boiled down into a twenty-minute tabloid. There is the same pretty love story of the southern girl and the northern man and the same happy ending. They meet and their fathers meet, only to discover that they have met before on the field at Gettysburg. Then the Civil War is reopened and Gettysburg is refought, only with dishes and bric-a-brac for weapons, and with chairs, tables and what-not doing duty as "positions," "ambuses" and the like.

A notable attraction of the new bill is also to be found in comedienne Patrice, who is known by reason of her years on the legitimate stage and her successful engagements in vaudeville. With her associate players she is presenting her most successful playlet, "The Lobbyist." This is a tale of political life of the national capital, involving a young western Congressman and a woman lobbyist set by "the interests" to capture his vote for certain venal measures, no matter what methods she may find necessary.

Others on the new bill are Mueller and Mueleir, "somewhat different" songsters, Mile. Ani Hill in a pretty and skilful exhibition of feminine athletics, and the Musical Bentleys, playing on the marimba, an instrument very similar to the xylophone. Exclusive of these acts will be the new comedy motion pictures.

Beginning Monday the Orpheum will enter upon its final week in its present theater. One week from Monday the new Orpheum will be inaugurated.

Heading the aggregation is Joseph Hart's latest dramatic offering, "The Little Stranger." This is a drama of the race course, along a different angle. Three chaps play it; one expects a "little stranger" at his own home, and comes to place a bet that will give the visitor a nest egg. Of course, the nag he plays runs last, but the sympathetic participants do not let him know this. Instead, they see that he "wins," and he and the little stranger are made happy.

Bowers, Walter and Crooker, "the three rubes," are one of the biggest comedy hits in vaudeville. They are acrobats, tumblers, fiddlers and dancers, and in all these varied ways, they entertain with interpolation of the richest sort of rough comedy. Made up as typical rubes, they illustrate the sports enjoyed by the boys down on the farm, when the latter turn loose for a "high old time." Skill is depicted, and though they seem uncouth and loutish, their work is anything but crude.

Hal Forde, corralled through the Orpheum's foreign alliances, is England's typical "Swagger" comedian. His songs have the tang of the 'alls, and his clothes the swell touch of the Strand. He will be found entertaining and unusual.

The Fie Armanis are also a foreign act, directly imported. They will produce "A Night in Naples," and in the picturesque costumes of that land, give excerpts from operas, songs of the peasantry, and the like. The act is away from the usual ensemble operatic acts.

Howard Hickman and Bessie Barriscale, in "The Wrong Road" remain another week, as do Tom Waters at the piano, Robledillo on the slack wire, and Henie Stockbridge and Charlotte Buisseret, in "The Fiddle and the Beau." In connection with the daylight pictures, they complete the bill.

George Primrose, the famous minstrel man, creator of dances and leader in the realm of burnt cork for thirty-five years, is the prominent feature of the new Pantages bill, which comes to Los Angeles Monday afternoon. He brings with him his Dancing Boys, who are nearly as clever as their veteran teacher. Primrose is one of the handful of living representatives of real minstrelsy who have outlived the old-fashioned blackface shows and gone into vaudeville. His school of dancing has produced more topliners in its class than any other. His act is a condensation of the best features of a minstrel show, with its lively dancing and ragtime songs. The soft-shoe dancing especially is promised as a unique feature. Tallman, a pool and billiard expert, who is billed as a champion, will give an interesting demonstration of a great variety of plain and fancy shots. In addition to running down the fifteen balls without a miss, he will perform a number of freak stunts with the cue and ivories. Grif, the English comedian who is a ventriloquist, mimic and juggler, will bring his unusual line of comedy entertainment, including a satire on juggling and an Englishman's description of a baseball game. Schrode and Chappelle, who have made a specialty of comedy sketches in the past, will this season bring a new playlet, "During One's Life," which is a combination of comedy, tears and morals. The three Burns sisters will have the musical attraction of the show in a vocal, piano and 'cello offering. The Dumond Duo of Italian musicians will bring a melodious novelty. There will be a new set of motion pictures to put a period to the show.

A show replete with novelty acts, singing and talking, with several strong dancing numbers thrown in, will be presented at the Hyman for the coming week. This bill should appeal to lovers of novelty and variety.

The skit presented by Ray and Ray, clever man and woman, is one that will possibly be the feature act. It is full of comedy, singing, talking and dancing. Both occupy a high position in vaudeville.

Ward and Manning, another team, present a singing and dancing act, but not in any way conflicting with the act just mentioned. And in their way, they too are a big feature. A great many teams sing and dance, but there are few before the public today that present as refined an act as th[illegible] two boys. In their "double" they show many steps that they certainly must have originated, for no other team in the business is doing the same.

A distinctive novelty, and one that will excite laughter, is Schubert, the "frog man," in a novelty contortion act. There is not one trick that is repulsive and his work is all done with marked ease.

Miss Margaurite Roth will present for the first time in vaudeville a series of songs which will undoubtedly meet with approval. Miss Roth has a high, clear soprano voice, with range and flexibility. She is doubtless destined to become a favorite with vaudeville audiences in Southern California, for here they accept a high-class singer with possibly a greater degree of pleasure than any other place in the United States.

Three exclusive first run pictures will be presented. These pictures can be seen at no other place of amusement. The Hyman orchestra in a series of new arrangements, just received from the East, will as usual do their part toward entertaining the audience.

A programme of most entertaining nature will be put on at the College, starting Monday.

Ballard and Alberta, a singing, dancing and talking act, make their first appearance here, coming from a big theater in San Francisco. Mr. Ballard is a very clever performer and is ably assisted by Miss Alberta. She has good appearance and a high singing voice. As a team their skit is up-to-date, and full of enjoyable comedy.

Ted White, singer of popular songs, should make a hit with the College audience. As a talker he has many good stories and presents them in the most pleasing manner.

Miss Estelle Bird will make her first appearance in vaudeville. She has a high, clear voice, full of melody. Miss Bird will sing many selections of classical sort in her usual manner.

The first run pictures at the College are of the exclusive variety, and can be seen at no other place of amusement.

Lillian May Lancaster's orchestra can be depended upon for a series of the latest selections.

At Luna Park.

Luna Park will begin its second week today, under the management of the Thompson-Snow Amusement Company. More than 75,000 patrons were present at the big pleasure grounds during the week.

Thompson's scenic railroad—"Nemo's Trip to Slumberland"—is now running and its trains afford ample facilities to visitors. What landscape gardeners, scenic artists and ingenious engineers have to offer has been incorporated into "Nemo's Trip."

"Shooting the rapids," replica of the Coney Island device for the insurance of thrills, will be open today and no doubt will supply unlimited fun.

As novelty is to be the rule established by Luna Park's new managers, there will be weekly changes of the free attractions, and as a headliner of importance there will be introduced today Mlle. Nordi, one of the best of the young and beautiful sopranos that France has recently sent to America. She will sing to the accompaniment of Prof. Frank Gregory's band, her selections being both classic and popular.

Mme. Schell's educated lions, one of the main free shows, form one of the strongest attractions.

Dollar a Word.

"Does that long-haired Mr. Slingsby get much money from his writings?"

"Very little, I fancy. He got a dollar a word not long ago, however."

"Mercy! How was that?"

"Why, a man owned him $2. Slingsby wrote 'please remit' on the bill and the man sent him the money.—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.

LONG CONTRACT FOR BEHYMER.

IN CHARGE OF AUDITORIUM FOR THREE YEARS.

Grand Opera Season on Large Scale and Lower Concert Prices Promised—Interest in Turnvere[illegible] Musical Programmes, Portentious and Varied Affairs.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

The Auditorium is dedicated, for the next three years anyway, to music and kindred arts.

At a meeting this week the Auditorium Company made L. E. Behymer manager for that period, his contract to begin at the expiration of the Shubert contract in the late summer—and thus the house seems to be taken care of, and at the same time the meritorious and high-class attractions, which, in their kind, appear to play exclusively under Mr. Behymer's management, and which in the past have sometimes suffered from improper or out-of-the-way housing, will get an enclosure worthy of their kind.

Both the Auditorium Company and Mr. Behymer are to be congratulated.

The various Behymer attractions, heretofore sprinkled all over the town, from Simpson Auditorium to Blanchard Hall, will now be confined under one roof, and all the stellar melody events will take place there.

Of especial interest to the public is the manager's announcement that his certainty of the Auditorium signifies the keeping of a pair of promises he has long wished to make:

Cheaper prices at the concerts of world-famous singers;

The visit of at least one genuinely big grand opera company each season.

Mr. Behymer will leave about July 1 for a two-months tour of Chicago, Boston, New York, Philadelphia and other eastern centers. Already lengthy correspondence has been entered into with both the Chicago and Metropolitan companies, and if six weeks can be secured in the West, it means two weeks in Los Angeles.

For over four months the manager has been in correspondence with no less personages than the directors of the Paris opera, who propose to send a company of famous French singers to Havana and the City of Mexico—and if business seems to warrant, to New Orleans, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Denver.

The contagion of the "Philharmonic" habit has enabled Manager Behymer to purchase wholesale and broadcast next year.

In previous issues I have noted our progressive local artists who are to tour coastwise and inland next season under the "L.E.B." banner, hence now I will only set down the names of distinguished foreign visitors.

TWO PHOTOS OF MARJORIE HAMILTON, THE FAMOUS "CALENDAR GIRL," SHOWING HER REDUCTION OF 37 LBS. IN FIVE WEEKS.

Miss Hamilton's health was at one time miserable on account of burdensome flesh, which had developed rapidly. She was weak and tired all the time; unable to sleep nights or digest her food; she repeatedly used all treatments and methods of flesh reduction known to medical science. Violent exercises, starvation diets and worthless drugs, also external stuff to rub on her body, were all of no benefit. So, realizing that if she desired to longer continue as the star in her profession, and be longer sought after by art calendar houses of America and Europe, she must do something quick to prevent the enemy fat from destroying her beauty, she studied on an entirely original and different plan, and after repeated efforts and many failures, made what she considers a wonderful scientific discovery, by means of which she has perfected a treatment which actually reduces the weight in a remarkably short time, and adds to the strength and health of the individual with every pound taken off. Miss Hamilton also made a great study of the system employed by the Japanese, who remain through life slender and vigorous, and it is said she has a treatment similar to theirs.

This woman's remarkable success has amazed her friends, who stand aghast in astonishment, marveling at this young woman's wonderful skill. Her method is so simple, y and adm may red their own at the r With —any m

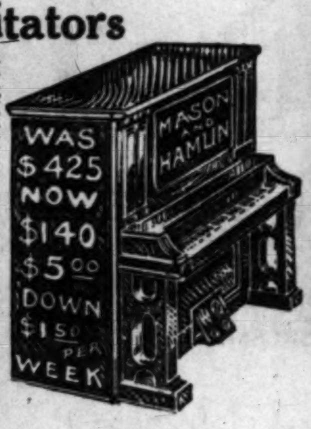
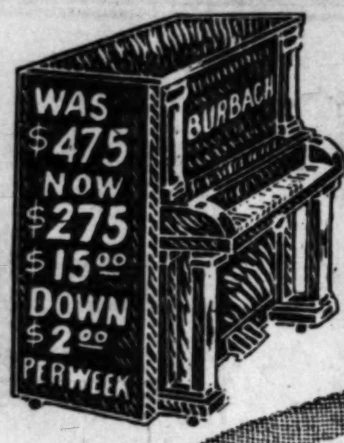
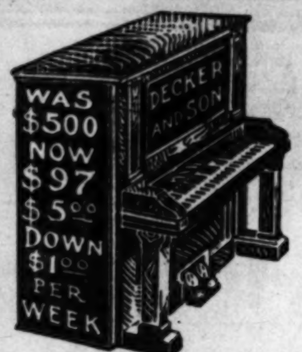
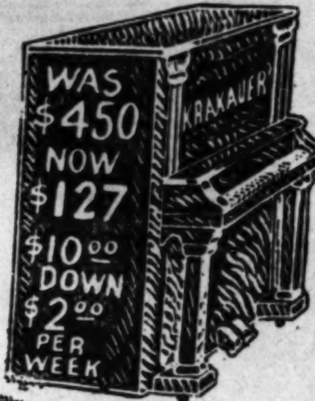
Look Out for Eilers Imitators

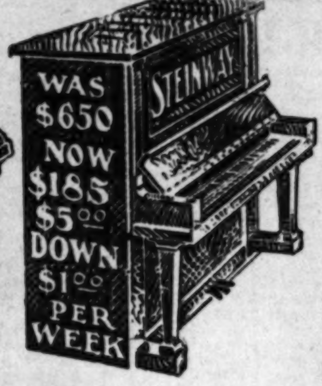
The man who seeks to imitate a more successful competitor, who seeks to defraud you into the belief that you are dealing with a responsible concern when you enter his store, is little better than the counterfeiter who imitates good coin and seeks to pass it upon the unsuspecting public. And in view of the fact that this sale of ours is so closely imitated, it behooves you to make sure that you get into the right store at 244 South Broadway. Ask for Eilers. Ask also to look at every one of the hundreds of magnificent trustee's pianos which Eilers, and only Eilers is offering! Eilers is now the world's largest piano house. The Eilers guarantee on a piano is as good as a government bond. Ask your banker.











Easiest Terms

You can name your own terms on any piano in this sale. Magnificent uprights, elegant baby grands, player pianos of marvelous accuracy, can all be had on the easiest terms that have ever been quoted in California. Act now! Do not delay! Pay any amount you wish and take your piano.

The Trustee Himself Is Here

He has come all the way from the head offices of the Piano Manufacturer Association at Steinway Hall, Chicago, to take personal charge of this great Trustee Sale and to effect a final settlement at once. The manufacturers who had consigned goods to Brown & Company are emphatic in their demand that every piano and player piano shall be turned at once into cash or interest bearing paper and the trustee proposes to see that their demands are carried out to the letter. He has slashed and cut even the reduced prices which we were offering, until now it is possible to save 30 or 40 per cent. of the piano prices which were formerly in effect during this great Trustee Sale and which have caused such wide spread consternation among other Southern California music dealers. Three days more will end the greatest piano sale in the history of Los Angeles. Make sure that you get the benefit of the innumerable, marvelous piano bargains that the sale contains.

Every Piano and Player Piano Must Go at Once, Regardless of Loss

FREE! Music Lessons

The Trustee himself makes this offer. To every purchaser of a piano during the final days of this sale there will be given a certificate which will be good for a complete musical education at the Bach School of Music. Do not neglect this wonderful opportunity to get a full course of piano instruction absolutely without charge.

Think of seeing Chickering, Knabe, Steinway, these three aristocrats of the piano world, all on one floor and all offered at prices that make it now an easy matter for you to own whichever instrument most appeals to you. There are dozens of other almost equally famous makes, pianos that ordinarily sell for $500 and $600. Now offered at $112, $126, $139 and $167.
All of the best player pianos and piano players are represented. We can sell you a $350 Cecilian Piano Player for $50 on your own terms. We can sell you any other kind at the same proportionate reduction in price. Is it any wonder that buyers for other Southern California music dealers are crowding the store and snapping up these wonderful bargains? Name your own terms, buy your piano for your own price. The pianos must be sold if we have to sell them for $40 apiece.

A Wonderful Offer

We will make it an object to you to pay cash for these pianos, but if you are unable to do that, bring $50 and choose your instrument. If that is too much, bring $20, or bring $10, or bring $5. Every instrument in this store has got to go at once. If you are unable to pay any more, simply pay the cartage and take them away. Use them free for a couple of months. They must be moved out of here at once.

Sierra Madre.

THE most important social event of the week was the linen shower given by the Modern Priscillas at the home of Miss Lottie Humphries Thursday in honor of Miss Hilda Blumer, whose marriage to William Larned Thatcher of Nordhoff, Cal., takes place June 27. The many gifts were carefully packed in a much-ornamented trunk. Much fun and laughter greeted the unpacking. The decorations were in hearts. Most delicious refreshments were served, among which was a large fortune cake in which was concealed a coin, ring and thimble, thereby telling the fate of those who drew them. Miss Humphries was assisted by Misses Dorothy Brown, Marjorie Rice and Dorothy Humphries. The out-of-town guests invited were: Mrs. Philip Blumer of Eagle Rock and Misses Lulu Bixby, Walford and Scott of Pasadena.

Mrs. S. C. Davis, Mrs. Mary Davis Goodfellow and Claude Davis were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Morrow of Los Angeles, Tuesday night.

The title is "Urashima," and was written by Mrs. William Anderson of Ocean Park, who is drilling the children who are to take part. The play is allegorical, being founded on a Japanese myth. Duarte.

THE most brilliant event of the week in the foothill residence district of Duarte was the garden party given Monday evening on the beautiful grounds that surround the country home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Allen Munro.

The moonlit scene was one of rare beauty and the shadows cast by the giant oaks were lightened by the use of many electric lights softly shaded with pretty Japanese lanterns.

The guests, who numbered fully two hundred and fifty, many of whom came from the adjacent foothill towns, were graciously welcomed by the patrons and patronesses, Mr. and Mrs. J. Allen Munro, Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Bliss, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Wicks and Mrs. Alice Lewis Castello. A gay galaxy of young maids attired in dainty summer frocks presided in the outdoor refreshment parlors, where frozen dainties and assorted cakes were dispensed. The fete was given under the auspices of the Parent-Teacher Association and was one of the most enjoyable functions of the season.

The members of the Five Hundred Club held their fortnightly meeting Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander B. Down. The twelve members who have spent so many happy evenings together during the past season were delightfully entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Down at supper, following the evening spent over the game of their choice.

Thursday afternoon Miss Estella Wilson, a charming bride-to-be, was given a shower by Miss Ethel Moore at her home, between the hours of 2 and 5 o'clock. The guests were the maids and matrons of the younger set, and their good wishes for the prospective bride found expression in attractive material form, for Miss Wilson was the recipient of many beautiful gifts. Unique and amusing entertainment was provided by the efforts of each guest to create wardrobes out of tissue paper for a miniature bride. Later a collation was served in tempting fashion.

Miss Van Osdell and her class of music scholars were charmingly entertained Friday afternoon by Mrs. Alexander B. Down. The large living-rooms were decorated with choice cut flowers and ferns and all the appointments were handsomely carried out. There were a large number of guests present to enjoy the excellent musical programme, which was participated in by the Misses Van Osdell, Frances Bliss, Pauline Munro, Amelia Brown, Leona Blaine, Alice Handyside, Vera and Doris Down and Masters Harold Shute and Howard Bliss. Arthur Deane of New York was the guest of honor and contributed several numbers to the programme. The hostess also rendered several solos, to the evident delight of the guests.

The young ladies of the Duarte chapter of the Delta Gamma Sorority were the guests of Miss Nellie Wilson yesterday at the home of her parents on Mountain View avenue. She was assisted in receiving and entertaining by her sister, Miss Alice Wilson. The beautiful roses and ferns that were used to adorn the rooms were from their gardens and added much to the setting. Needlework, music and four-o'clock tea were the popular diversions.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Carter had as their Sunday guests Mrs. Frank Brelsford and Miss Burns of Monrovia, in whose honor they gave a pleasant dinner party.

Tropico.

ONE of the most enjoyable social functions that has occurred in Tropico for some time was the party given in honor of the graduating class of the Union High School and the faculty. The entertainment was given in the G.A.R. Hall, on Glendale avenue, and was presided over by Mmes. E. R. Ellias, C. O. Pulliam, Andrew Stevenson, A. P. Stone, E. U. Emery, E. M. McClure, E. D. Goode, Alexander Mitchell, M. O. Ryan and Mary Rehart, mothers of the class members. The hall was beautifully decorated for the occasion by the hostesses, and at 6:30 o'clock all gathered around the dining-tables and partook of an appetizing turkey dinner, such as the Tropico-Glendale ladies have the reputation of preparing. Fun and jollity reigned; toasts were given, Dwight Stevenson acting as toastmaster, and were responded to by Fay Stone, George Mitchell, Granville McClure, Sol Rehart, Emma Pulliam, Grace Grady, Evelyn Ryan, Owen Emery and Pearl Goode. Short talks were given by the teachers, after which the young people enjoyed to the full the beautiful dance floor of the hall, while the elders indulged in the pastime of cards. The members of the graduating class who were honored are: Misses Gertrude Ward, Elva Spencer, Emma Pulliam, Lucille Parker, Grace Grady, Ruth Farrell, Emily Ellias, Pearl Goode, Leeta McCoy, Myrtle Pulliam, Evelyn Ryan, and Ina Verry; Messrs. The church was beautifully decorated with garlands of flowers and greenery, and a goodly number of friends assembled there to do honor to the young lady, who is highly esteemed by all who have the pleasure of her acquaintance. The evening was delightfully spent in conversation and extending congratulations to Miss Angel on her possessing such an angelic disposition that she could still smile after beholding and enduring such a "heavy shower." Refreshments were served at a late hour, and the evening was pronounced by all present as one to be cherished in memory.

Exhibition of Miniatures.

Leta Horlocker and Laura M. D. Mitchell, who have been contemplating gathering together a collection of miniatures of Los Angeles painters and exhibiting them in Blanchard Hall, have finally decided not to hold the exhibition till fall. By that time they hope to have a much larger number of contributions than they can possibly arrange for now.

All painters of miniatures are requested to communicate with Laura M. D. Mitchell, whose address is No. 307 South Fourth street, Alhambra.

On Monday evening last the reception of the Palette Club of the School of Art and Design, was attended by 200 guests. Hector Alliot gave a talk to the club on their present subject of study, "Early California."

Charles Percy Austin will start an out door sketching class, which will work in the Arroyo Seco opposite Sycamore Grove on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday afternoons, beginning on June 20. The class will be in session from 2 till 5 o'clock.

ART NOTES.

Mrs. Lillian G. Ferguson of Hollywood sails for Holland on the 24th of June. She will personally conduct a party of painters who will sketch the quaint scenes and visit the art galleries of Holland. She returns in October, when she will hold an exhibition of her European sketches.

Laura M. D. Mitchell will sketch at our Pacific beaches during the summer months. She will discontinue her afternoons of teaching in Blanchard Hall, but will resume her classes in the fall.

Dr. W. T. McArthur, the lecturer on anatomy in the School of Art and Design, offers a prize of $25 for the best composition sketch on the subject of "Early California." Only members of the Palette Club may compete. The award will be made next winter.

The annual exhibition of the work of the students of the College of Fine Arts, Garvanza, is now being held. A more extended notice will be given in Art and Artists next Sunday.

The date of the exhibition of work by the students of the Los Angeles School of Art and Design has not yet been decided on, but the show will doubtless take place very soon.

Our portrait painters are all busy these days. Joseph Greenbaum has just finished portraits of Mrs. T. P. Newton and Mrs. Julia Gleason; Helma Heynsen Jahn's latest portrait is that of a well-known ecclesiastic; Robert Wagner is working on the portrait of a young boy; James E. McBurney has finished portraits of Mrs. G. B. Foster, and a young girl, Dorothy Parsons.

Leta Horlocker will go east during the summer; Elizabeth Waggoner will spend some time on the coast just north of San Francisco.

After some months of hard work in Topanga Canyon, William Wendt has returned to Los Angeles with a full portfolio.

An interesting picture to be seen at Kanst's is "Tobias and the Angel," artist unknown. The picture is painted on copper, and is in the style of Andrea del Sarto or the Bologne school. It is a gem.

BOOK NEWS.

According to "The Outlook," Count Tolstoi left behind him, in a more or less finished state, two hitherto unpublished dramas, three short novels, one of which dates from his best literary period, and a large amount of interesting matter which was included in the first drafts of his sketches and novels, but which was subsequently stricken out. The dramas are entitled "A Learned Woman" and "A Living Corpse." The latter is to be put on the stage of the Fine Arts Theater in Moscow next winter, and arrangements have been made for its production in the principal cities of Western Europe. The stories are "Tikhon and Malanie," "Father Sergie" and "Hadji Murad," a tale of the Caucasus.

Paris was aroused recently by a fanciful novel dealing with the return of Jesus to the modern world; and now Germany is discussing Hauptmann's first novel, in which the leading character is a pseudo-Messiah. The title in English is "The Fool in Christ," and a translation will be published in the fall. It is not generaly known that Hauptmann was a sculptor before he became known as a dramatist. His most important prose play, "The Weavers," has just been republished.

The one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Harriet Beecher Stowe occurred on June 14. Apropos of this event, a new biography of the author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," written by her son, Charles Edward Stowe and her grandson, Lyman Beecher Stowe, has just been published by Houghton Mifflin Company. Instead of following the ordinary biographical method, the authors have told the story of Mrs. Stowe's dramatic career as though she were the heroine of a novel.

It is said that H. G. Wells has turned from the fields of business and politics, as exploited in "Topo-Bungay," and "The New Machiavelli," and, in the new novel upon which he is now at work, (entitled "Marjorie,") will concern himself with the problems of household economy.

"The Glory of Clementina" is the title of W. J. Locke's new novel—now running in the Saturday Evening Post "Dr. Quixtus," as was incorrectly stated in our last issue. The story is Post, and in August will be published in book form.

Frederick W. Taylor, who originated, and for thirty years has been developing, scientific management, has completed the revision of the proofs of his new book which the Harpers are to publish soon. Mr. Taylor's previous book was called "The Principles of Scientific Management," and covers the subject for the general reader. The new book is to be more technical in style.

It is welcome news that a new book by J. M. Barrie may be expected in the autumn. It is now nearly ten years since Mr. Barrie definitely turned aside from the making of books to the making of plays. Some time ago a rumor was afloat that Mr. Barrie was thinking of telling the world what happened when Wendy grew up, and it is likely that this will be the subject of his coming book.

Arrangements for the dramatization of David Graham Phillips's last two novels, "White Magic" and "The Grain of Dust," have been made. It is likely that both plays will appear upon the New York stage during the early winter season.

"The Autobiography of Henry M. Stanley," published in this country by Houghton Mifflin Company, is now to be brought out in the Japanese language, there already having been French and German translations.

The choir of the First M. E. Church under the direction of Carl Bronson, will be heard. Soloists from this group are Mrs. Leo I. Stadden, soprano; Mrs. Nell McCune, contralto; Joseph Marple, tenor, and Edward Ruenitz, bass, with Will Ellis at the organ.

Los Angeles Choral.

The second performance of the Los Angeles Choral Society, under the auspices of the American Guild of Organists took place last Monday evening in St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral, under the direction of Ernest Douglas.

Soloists were Miss E. M. Lacey, soprano; Mrs. Emma Elaine Fischer, mezzo-soprano; Master Eugene Storm, contralto; William A. Benjamin, tenor, and F. M. Saunders, baritone.

Percy Shaul-Hallet, as usual, was at the organ.

The first part of the "Elijah" constituted the musical material of the evening, and a clean-cut, intelligent, forceful and highly artistic performance was given under Mr. Douglas's baton.

DeNubila Orchestra.

The DeNubila orchestra, at Levy's has been attracting much attention during the past week by its excellent renditions.

Particularly prominent among the players is Miss Lucia Mulieri, young harpiste who was heard here with the Lambardi and Bevani opera companies, and who possesses tone, technique and delightful musical temperament. Her solos get warm encores.

F. M. DeNubila, and Pasquale DeNubila, his brother, are both excellent violinists, and their fine and resonant string tone does much to give brilliance to the ensembles.

The orchestra contains two violins, harp, 'cello, double-bass, piano and clarinet, but no brass instruments.

The DeNubila brothers are hard-working young Angelenos who have played at the Potter, Santa Barbara, and the Green, Pasadena, for several seasons.

Woodmansee.

An interesting programme is promised by three local artists, Mr. France Woodmansee, pianist; Mrs. W. N. Tiffany, soprano, and Mr. Axel Eiconsen, 'cellist, for Thursday evening, June 29, at the Ebell auditorium. Postponement of this concert has been made from an earlier date which had been previously announced.

Ginsburg Getting There.

Ralph Ginsburg, Arnold Krauss's former violin pupil, noted, by The Times musical department as a young virtuoso of great promise, is making splendid progress in Europe.

Ginsburg is at present studying with Alexander Petschnikoff, celebrated virtuoso, and recently played a Christian Sinding sonata for that composer himself.

Sinding was very highly impressed wit hthe young man's ability, and predicted a roseate future for him.

More recently he played for Arthur Abel, Berlin correspondent and critic of the Musical Courier, who could not speak in sufficient praise of the boy's exquisite, opulent tone.

The Logan Academy.

The regular semi-monthly recital by pupils of the Logan Academy, at No. 2206 South Figueroa street, took place last Friday evening. A large audience was in attendance, and the renditions were of first-class order throughout, reflecting able tuition and clever ability on the part of the students.

A programme of great worth is anticipated. Several members of the faculty will take part.

Brahms Quintette.

Public interest continues to follow the Brams Quintette in its public rehearsals. The last of these semi-official summer affairs was given Friday afternoon in Blanchard Hall. The principal numbers were the Serenading suite in D for strings, by Beethoven, and the Brahms piano quintette in C Minor. Mrs. Henry Wiltse, soprano, presented a group of songs by Cowen, Adams and Lange.

Von Stein Faculty.

Members of the faculty of the Von Stein Academy entertained with a splendid concert programme at Gamut Auditorium last Tuesday evening.

Miss Christine Battelle, in her piano performances, demonstrated brilliant technique and great interpretative sense. Miss Alyce Cullyford, also of the piano faculty, charmed with her playing.

WOMEN'S WORK, WOMEN'S CLUBS

BY SYDNEY FORD.

Mrs. Thomas B. Stowell (center of first row) and her Sunday-school class of college girls who meet in Liberal Arts building, U.S.C., every Sabbath morning.

THE report has gone forth that the Friday Morning Club has played with politics so much that it has scorched its fingers and created discord among its members to such an extent that the attendance has fallen off, disruption, "dry rot" and all sorts of dire results are imminent, and the club is going to the "demnition bow-wows," so to speak, as it were.

I have been a steady attendant at the club sessions and I must confess that the meager attendance complained of by the club critic had escaped my attention. I have never yet been able to arrive there early enough to secure a seat with the "wall flowers," so I didn't have to remove my hat, as those choice locations are invariably filled long before the gavel falls. I observed at the last session, when the programme was presented by the club's own members and consequently none of the glamour of outside talent attracted, that the audience stretched from the platform to the doors and the gallery caught the overflow.

I also observed that, "among those present," were women from Hollywood—a large delegation—from Glendale, from Sierra Madre and from several other outside towns who had thought it worth while to travel miles on trolley cars to be present. I understand that the number of incoming members has at all times through the year overtopped the resignations.

The fact that the president-elect, Mrs. David Chambers McCann, is a pronounced and active suffragist, and that her vice-president, Mrs. Charles Farwell Edson, is another, doubtless gives the impression that the Friday Mornings are out-and-out suffragists. Whether they will carry their politics into the administration of affairs, remains to be seen.

In reply to the question as to the political policy of the club under her jurisdiction, Mrs. McCann states that whereas she has not yet consulted with the board of directors, she can definitely and positively say that the same progressive and educational methods for which the club has always stood will be adhered to, and politics will not play a part.

"The suffrage question will be settled by the time the club opens in October, anyhow," she says, "election will be over and out of the way."

That was a naive and, possibly, a non-committal way of putting it, but as to the reported run-down condition of the club—nonsense!

Some Summer Reading.

It was Fiction Day at the Friday Morning Club yesterday and Mrs. George H. Wadleigh, Miss Laura Grover Smith and Mrs. Thomas A. Box reviewed recent books and timed their papers so accurately that there was a period at the close which was excellently occupied by Mrs. Anstruther Davidson, chairman of the Literature Committee, and Miss E. C. McCullough, president of the Hollywood Club.

Mrs. Wadleigh's paper concerned George Meredith—Celt and Saxon, and she gave notice at once that she should pronounce Celt with a soft C instead of a hard K. Her paper was excellent in its delineation of Meredith's work She was followed by Miss Smith, who gave a most charming review of "The Broad Highway."

Mrs. Thomas A. Box dealt with the novels of that remarkable young Englishman, Arnold Bennett, who, after working some ten years for recognition, has arrived and is producing books at the rate of one every sixty days—and the astonishing thing is that they are not only readable but remarkable, even though produced in such a wholesale fashion. Mrs. Box said that a local dealer told her that last month he sold 250 of Bennett's books in this city—and imagine the library calls on top of that. This gives you some idea of how very popular this author is. His psychological perception is like a powerful X-ray turned on the life of the very middle portion of the English middle class.

"You cannot afford to skip in reading Bennett's books," warned the reviewer. "If you do, you'll surely miss a delightful bit, his books do not permit hurried reading. He deals with two sorts of people who, to his mind, are very much alike—men and women—and he divides his plots into two classes—things that might and do happen, and things that might, and do not happen."

Arnold is hailed as the Dickens of this century and as one of the five great fiction writers to be counted on the fingers of one hand.

Mrs. Ella H. Durley of Iowa City, a prominent club woman of the Middle West and author of the book, "My Soldier Lady," in answer to "The Lady of the Decoration," was a guest of Mrs. J. E. Cowles at the Friday Morning Club yesterday.

Each and All Club.

The Golden Rod Chapter of the Each and All Club will be entertained on Wednesday from 10 to 4 o'clock in South Park, by Mrs. Wells, president of the club. It will be visitors' day and a number of interesting contests have been arranged for the entertainment of guests. A cordial invitation is extended to all friends of the club.

Honors Fall to Women.

"You cannot take up a list of honors without finding names of women," remarked the president of Cornell University, the other day, as he announced that two young women graduates carried off the highest honors in that institution where, of the 6000 students enrolled, but 400 are women. In a class of forty-seven from one department of the university, four out of the ten honor roll graduates, were women.

Coming nearer home, we read that it is a girl who wins the highest scholastic record at Occidental College, not only for this year but for any previous year in the history of the institution, which covers a period of almost a quarter of a century. It is interesting to note also that her second in the competition for honors is a girl, and that of the half-dozen seniors who were placed on the honor roll for 1910-1911, all but one are girls, and four out of five honor students in the junior class are girls, while both the salutatory and valedictory of the graduating class, which numbered twenty-two, of whom one-half were young women, were delivered by the gentler sex.

At the University of Southern California a woman, Margaret J. E. Bowen, was awarded the honors in the College of Liberal Arts.

Verily the co-eds are going some!

College J.O.C. Class.

Among the many and diversified activities of college life at the University of Southern California, the J.O.C. class of young women who have assembled each Sunday morning in the East Hall of the Liberal Arts building, at 9:30, throughout the college year, has been one of the most flourishing organizations among the young women of the university. The purpose of the class is to provide opportunity for devotional Bible study for students who are away from home.

Mrs. Thomas B. Stowell, wife of Dr. Stowell of the education department of U. S. C., has been the teacher of this Sunday morning class for the past two years. Mrs. Stowell is a deep Bible student herself and her intimate knowledge of the young women and the perplexities of college life has endeared her to every member of the J.O.C. class. The course of study for the past college year has been that following the early Old Testament times, and for next year the plan is to continue this line of study.

Several enjoyable social functions have been provided by this class during the year, in conjunction with the companion class of "We Boys," which is under the instruction of Dr. Stowell and meets simultaneously with the J.O.C. in another part of the building. Recently the two classes participated in their annual picnic at Hermosa Beach, where they were entertained at the seaside home of Dr. and Mrs. Stowell.

On June 27 the national organization of J.O.C. will hold its annual convention at Long Beach. Several strong speakers are expected to be present and a discussion of the look out work of different classes represented or reported will be a feature of this gathering. The university J.O.C. will send a large representation to the convention. Miss Pearl H. Wrisley is president of this organization; Miss Della Canfield, vice-president; Miss Kathleen Kelly, secretary; Miss Glady Hill, treasurer and Miss Gertrude Van Aken, pianist.

In this connection, it is interesting to recall the fact that the J.O.C. organization was founded by Mrs. Ada C. Bryant, who, years ago, formed the class in the First Methodist Church here. So successful was the movement in interesting the young women of the Sunday-school that it has rapidly spread all over the United States and in Sunday-schools of all denominations, some 110 classes, besides six junior classes having been formed.

What the initials stand for, none but the members know, and there have been many guesses as to the signification of the letters "J.O.C."

The story is told of a little boy in Santa Barbara, who, after intently studying the personnel of the J.O.C. in his particular Sunday-school, went home and told his mother he had discovered the meaning of the mysterious letters. "It means 'Jesus's Own Class,' I know," said the little fellow, "because the girls in that class act like they belonged to Him."

Could there have been a finer compliment?

Daughters Celebrate Coronation.

The ball and entertainment to take place on June 22 at Goldberg-Bosley assembly rooms, in honor of the coronation of King George and Queen Mary, promises to be very brilliant, as a great number of well-known people have signified their intention to be present. A committee of prominent men will assist in welcoming the guests and lending their dignity to this project of the Daughters of the Empire, who have the affair in hand. The programmes are works of art, and will be fitting souvenirs of the occasion. This is a celebration in which Americans are joining with their British-born friends who have made this great country their home.

They Queered the Car.

The other day, just as everyone was going home to dinner and in haste to get there, the electric power on one of the hill lines gave out, and the car came to a standstill. Among the passengers were two young women who showed their impatience by fidgeting around and asking all sorts of useless questions of the conductor and fellow-sufferers.

"How long will we have to wait here?" they finally demanded of the motorman, who was sitting calmly on the front seat waiting for the flow of juice.

"Don't know—may be an hour," was his laconic reply.

"Let's walk," said the impatient maidens, and forthwith they left the stranded car and started up the hill. They proceeded less than a block when the car, having received the necessary "juice," overtook them. They waved frantically to the conductor, and he accommodatingly halted at the next crossing, and they came on board and resumed their seats. He gave the signal to start, but the car refused to budge. Stalled again.

After lingering for a few minutes the young women left in disgust, and they had no sooner reached the pavement than, presto, the lights blazed up again and away went the car. This time the frantic appeals of the wayfarers were disregarded, and the car sped on its winding way to the discomfiture of the pedestrians and the great glee of the passengers.

The Battle of Bunker Hill.

The anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill was appropriately observed yesterday by the D.A.R. at the Ebell Clubhouse with an entertainment and reception. Judge H. C. Dillon was the orator and delivered a masterly address. Mrs. Grant Goucher sang suitable songs and Mrs. A. H. Hannen of Cleveland, O., brought greetings from the Western Reserve Chapter, and Mrs. French of Buffalo, N. Y., brought a message from her local organization.

At the conclusion of the programme a reception was tendered the incoming officers of the chapter, Mrs. Enoch Pepper, regent; Mrs. Harry Purdon, vice-regent; Mrs. William Riddle, recording secretary; Mrs. Gideon C. Moody, corresponding secretary; Mrs Theodore Davis, treasurer; Mrs. Henry Bean, registrar; Mrs. Leon H. Hurtt, historian, and Mmes. Mary Banning, Spencer Shimmin, Arthur Levitt and J. H. Peckham, directors.

Glendale Club.

The literary section of the Tuesday Afternoon Club of Glendale presented the clever one-act comedy, "The Emergency Club," at the last session before a very large audience. The cast of characters included Mmes F. W. Gee, F. L. Church, T. Mertens, P. S. McNutt, Ralph Meeker, F. Grosvenor and Miss Margaret Hawken.

The officers elected for the coming year are Mrs. A. W. Tower, president; Mrs. C. S. McNutt, vice-president; Mrs. Frank Grosvenor, secretary; Mrs. Clarence Newcomb, treasurer, and Mrs. C. C. Campbell, director, in addition to the old board of directors.

Kappa Alpha Theta.

Mrs. Homer Laughlin, Jr., of No. 666 West Twenty-eighth street kept open house on Saturday, her guests being members of the various committees who are arranging the details for the coming national convention of the Kappa Alpha Theta college women's fraternity to be held at Hotel Maryland July 11-14.

Thirty women spent the day in perfecting plans for the elaborate scheme of entertainment to be offered the visitors. A feature will be a sunset supper and California pageant to be held on the grounds of Hotel Raymond. Mrs. Frank Cattern is arranging this and has secured the assistance of professionals in the important parts of the pageant, which will require over 100 trained people.

On Thursday, July 13, automobiles will convey all the delegates to Los Angeles, where the following college women will keep open house: Mmes. Homer Laughlin, Jr., Lee Phillips and Misses Ida Lindley, Helen Spalding, Sada Johnson and Hazel White Cliff Dwellers Congregate.

The California Chapter of the Cliff Dwellers was tendered a delightful reception last Thursday at the Long Beach home of Mrs. J. P. Curtis. The affair was in honor of Mrs. E. J. Eaton of No. 2419 South Flower street, who leaves soon for a European trip. Mrs. W. B. Julian of Long Beach entertained the company with several humorous recitations, and the following women acted as hostesses: Mmes. J. P. Curtis, George Barndollar, Martin, C. A. White, A. M. Lipsey, Stracham, Poor and Miss Morrison.

Among the guests present were Mrs. P. L. Harper of Lincoln, Neb.; Mrs. I. Wook of York, Neb.; Mrs. S. E. Hurd of Denver, Colo.; Mmes. A. S. Blake, Charles Dudley and S. H. Kinsley of Colorado Springs; Mmes. J. Craig, D. W. Cate, H. Aylesworth, W. O. Kale, R. H. Gossom, W. H. Shilling, Charles Taylor, P. S. MacNee and Miss Hadlow of Long Beach; Mmes. F. D. McDowell and L. P. Sherman of Los Angeles.

Los Angeles members present included Mmes. W. E. Riddle, A. J. Eaton, Charles Green, H. C. Terrill, J. M. Gale, E. W. Goodwin, George Currier, Harry Forsythe, F. E. Smith, D. M. Cate, Miller, T. J. Day and Misses M. E. Elliott and J. Dryden.

Rosecrans Club's Plans.

The Board of Directors of the Rosecrans Club met at the home of the president, Mrs. M. E. Coleman, last week for the purpose of planning sectional work for the coming year along philanthropic lines and enlarging their scope of study. The next meeting will be on July 12 at Echo Park, where a picnic luncheon will be served and a programme given. The directors of this club are Mmes. Alice A. Fitch, Aleene Anderson, Addie Johnson, Sarah A. Morris, M. A. Stratton and Mary K. Hilliker.

Kate Shelley, the Iowa heroine of school reader classics, is said to be dying. Thirty years ago, at the age of 16, she made her way for several miles in a terrible storm and saved a Northwestern train with 200 passengers from going through a wrecked bridge. The Iowa Legislature presented her with $5000, with which she purchased a home near Boone, and she has been given employment by the State.

ITERATURE—BOOK REVIEWS.

By Willard Huntington Wright.

Mary Johnston,
author of "The Long Roll."

Laren is but a glorified literary authoress of yesterday. In "Bawbee Jock" we encounter one of those old familiar tales which twenty-five years ago, flooded the bookstalls, their paper covers displaying some ravishingly beautiful heiress in the villainous clutches of a gent in silk hat and frock coat. To be sure, "Bawbee Jock" is better written, and in some places more smoothly conceived, than those olden yarns of love and despair; but on the whole there is not a great deal of difference. The same claptrap, the same crude methods of developing situations, the same hyperbolic descriptions of feminine beauty, the same sweet insistence on the noble principles of bourgeois platitudes, the same enormous riches rolling through the pages, the same disguised heiresses, the same conveniently sprained ankles, the same noble, self-sacrificing males, the same foolish misunderstandings and amatory near-tragedies, and the same happy ending, with the hero and heroine in each others arms, each implanting upon the other's lips the chaste and joyous ante-nuptial buss, all are to be found in this story of the impecunious highlander and the superhumanly beautiful heiress in disguise who becomes his wife.

ARTIFICIALLY COLORED.

IN "Panther's Cub," by the Castles, we hit the lowest possible wallow of popular pishmince. The only object of a book of this kind is to disannex the unintelligent members of human society from $1.18, via the department stores. I once intimated that the Williamsons were the most insane and atrocious scriveners in the present-day literary sweatshop. But after glancing over "Panther's Cub" I am inclined to think that, after all, the Williamsons will have to take second place.

There is an interesting psychology about books of this kind. Wherein they become popular is difficult to point out. An analysis of their appeal leads one nowhere. Characters are conceived without the slightest hint of verisimilitude: they are merely figures in the flat—cardboard puppets of two dimensions. The dialogue is stilted, unnatural, and decorated with foreign words and phrases which bear but little resemblance to the language from which they are presumably taken. The plots of these books are but variations of the same mechanical structure which serves for every other book of like nature. You have no doubt as to the outcome—you have read it all before. It has not even the merit of suspense. As a matter of fact, the plot seems to be merely an excuse for the authors to display their knowledge of foreign travel.

The present story moves about among the different European cities without any particular reason, except that the Castles wish to convince the reader, by descriptions, that they have traveled extensively. There is only one ground on which the popularity of such books can be accounted for, and that is the inherent snobbery of the lower order of the American intelligence. It seems to be the delight of our Mabels and Gladyses to move in imagination among the capitals of Europe, to rub elbows with people whom the author tells us are cultured—generally they are related to royalty—to sniff the refined improprieties of the upper circles, to wallow in an atmosphere of steam-heated luxury, and to sense that smothered and correct sexual appeal which marks the love portions of such books.

To the matinee-vaudeville girl, I recommend this new book of the Castles', as one of the most typical of its class. To the intelligent—and even the semi-intelligent—I issue a warning to avoid it.

REDEEMED BY LOVE.

BARBARA OF THE SNOWS. By Henry Irving Green. Moffat, Yard & Co., New York. (Price $1.20.)

A NOVEL of safe and sane mediocrity, with neither noticeable merits or demerits, may be found in "Barbara of the Snows." It relates in a commonplace manner how a man of great wealth, who has chosen to walk the primrose path, gets into a physical argument with a member of his club, leaves him presumably dead, and flies to the wilds of Canada.

Enter Barbara, charming lady!

From now on all the league rules for such stories are rigidly adhered to by the author. The lady's sweet and benevolent influence upon the fugitive debauche (who, by the way, cannot get hold of any of his fortune without revealing himself,) works liberal wonders. She saves him from himself—I believe this is the correct phrase—and in the end, of course, he regains his former joys of wealth and position, to say nothing of the added joys of matrimony.

IMAGINARY DIALOGUES.

DIMINUTIVE DRAMAS. By Maurice Baring. Houghton, Mifflin Company, New York. (Price $1.25.)

MAURICE BARING'S "Diminutive Dramas" are provocative of a cultured tee-hee, rather than a vulgar guffaw; they are amusing rather than funny. The book contains a series of brief and pungent dialogues between such famous historical characters as Henry VIII and Catherine Parr, Calpurnia and her guests at a dinner party, Jason and Medea, Socrates and Xantippe. Baring's humor, if quiet, is rich, and displays considerable historical information. The book is decidedly not designed for the reader of popular novels; it requires considerable reading of a better class of literature in order to appreciate the contents; it presupposes a certain amount of historical and literary knowledge concerning such people as Pious Aeneas, Lucullus, Euripides, Ariadne, Agamemnon and Caligula.

One chapter in particular, in imitation of the symbology of Maeterlinck, is especially amusing. I quote a sample:

The clown—I am warming you with my poker. It is good to be warm. It is so cold in the street. It never used to be so cold. It is foggy. The fog makes me hungry and thirsty. I am so hungry that I would like to eat a sausage.

The pantaloon—I am so hungry that I would like to eat many sausages, first one and then another. I could eat six saugae.s

The clown—Let us go and take some sausages. There are some sausages hanging in that shop. I cannot see them through the fog, but I know there are some sausages there.

The pantaloon—I can see the sausages. They are all huddled together like pigeons.

The cloyn—They are close together like little wood pigeons. I like sausages. But before we go I will warm the policeman. He is so cold.

The pantaloon—It is not on his beat.

(The clown rubs the policeman with his poker.)

The policeman—When you do that I feel as if this had happened before. I feel as if I were in a strange room full of doors and lighted candles. I do not like the feeling.

LITERARY GOSSIP.

Octave Thanet recently expressed herself to some Chicago friends on woman's suffrage and the servant question. "The militant suffragettes," she said, "will probably get what they want; they need it more than we do. But the situation in Colorado is sufficient for me—if not a worse political condition than before the woman had the vote, certainly not a better. And as for woman wanting a hand in the 'housekeeping' of the nation, look what she has done with her own housekeeping—look at the servant problem."

" 'But isn't it the working girl who most needs the vote?' was asked.

"The working girl!" she fairly exploded. "What the working girl is perishing for is not votes but common or garden sense. If she had it she wouldn't risk her soul and her body in unsanitary, underpaid, crowded trades in which she does one thing over and over, learning nothing that will ever help her or fit her to be a wife and a mother; when she has only to go to the nearest intelligence office to find good wages, good food, all the hot water she wants; and every opportunity to learn what will help her all her life long. Where we are idiots, is that we have not made this plain to her long ago."

Ford Madox Hueffer tells an anecdote about Bernard Shaw which has also been told of Whistler. "When he first came to London," says Mr. Hueffer, "like every poor young man he possessed no presentable garments at all save a suit of dress clothes. In this state he received an invitation from some gentleman high in the political world. This gentleman was careful to add a postcript begging Mr. Shaw not to dress. He accordingly pawned or sold all the articles of clothing in his possession, including his evening suit, and with the proceeds he purchased a decent suit of black resembling, as he put it, that of a Wesleyan minister. Upon his going up the staircase, the first person he perceived, was Mr. Balfour in evening dress; the second was Mr. Wyndham, in evening dress; and immediately he was introduced into a dazzling hall that was one sea of white shirtfronts, relieved by black swallow-tails. I think Mr. Shaw does not 'dress' at all nowadays."

Although he has ample leisure during the day, Jeffery Farnol says he does his best work at night. It is now disclosed that some parts of "The Broad Highway" were written in the house in Englewood, N. J., where Mr. Farnol lived during his several years residence in the United States. Now it is from an upper chamber in a comfortable cottage of Kent, Eng., that he burns the midnight gas, for Farnol is hard at work on a new novel of the period of "The Broad Highway," but with its scene laid principally in London.

John Galsworthy was born at Coombe, in Surrey, in 1867. He was educated at Harrow and at Oxford, graduating in New College there in 1899, with an Honour (M. A.) degree in law. In 1890 he was called to the london bar, but, disliking the profession, he practiced very little indeed. At 28, he took to writing, publishing his first novel, "Jocelyn," in 1899, and "Villa Rubein" in 1900. Since then he has published something every year—his last novel, "The Patrician," appearing early this spring, following the publication, in this country of "Justice." Mr. Galesworthy is married, is not entirely dependent on his pen, spends the greater part of each year in Devonshire, the rest in London.

Leonard Merrick, who has begun to come into his own in America with the publication of "Conrad in Quest of His Youth," is about 47 years of age, and married, and, according to himself, his recreations consist of 'music, reading other people's novels and seeing other people's plays." Mr. Merrick spends most of his time in France.

Kate Douglas Wiggin sailed from New York recently on the Lusitania to make her annual spring visit to England. Mrs. Wiggin's latest story, "Mother Carey's Chickens," which is running serially in one of the popular magazines, is listed for early fall publication.

Owen Johnson, author of "The Tennessee Shad" and other Lawrenceville books, is spending the summer in the Berkshires preparatory to a long trip to the West.

After a sojourn of several months in her native country, Anne Warner has sailed for England, where she says she will live in the future. For nearly two years previous to her visit to her hold home in St. Paul, Anne Warner resided in Germany, where her daughter was being educated.

E. Phillips Oppenheim, the English novelist, arrived in this country last month, almost simultaneously with the publication of his latest novel, "The Moving Finger."

Joseph C. Lincoln, who has recently returned from Jamaica, is at work upon the concluding chapters of his new novel, which will appear shortly under the title of "The Woman-Haters."

Dr. and Mrs. Rinehart (Mary Roberts Rinehart, the novelist,) with their two young sons, who have been abroad since last October, have recently returned to their Pittsburgh home.

Miss Lillian Whiting has recently completed a book on "The Brownings: Their Life and Art," in which she will utilize some new material supplied by their son, Barrett Browning.

SAVE YOUR HAIR—EASIER TO DO THIS THAN GROW NEW HAIR

Dandruff, Itching Scalp and Falling Hair Stopped.

There is one place where baldheaded men shine, and that is in the front row seats of the theatre. If these baldheaded people had used Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy in their earlier days they would not be so conspicuous now. This preparation does not plant new hair, but it does strengthen weak, dying hair, and not only brightens dull, parched hair, but gradually restores the color to faded or gray hair. It is a clean, wholesome hair dressing, which can be used daily with perfect safety.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is sold under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

KIND HEARTS—GOOD DEEDS.

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

Seldom have the newspapers reported a more pathetic occurrence than the attempt of Rev. Cecil Marrack of San Francisco, who was fatally injured in an automobile accident on June 4, to telephone his last words to his wife, after he had been told that his injuries were fatal, says the San Francisco News Letter. "Be brave Frances, there has been an automobile accident and I have been hurt," said the dying rector of St. Stephens. Frightfully injured as he was the clergyman's courage triumphed over his agony and he succeeded in conveying his death message to his wife, who did not realize the full significance of his words till she reached Ross and found him dead.

On her anxious way to the bedside of her stricken husband Mrs. Marrack met a clergyman who confronted her with the hope that the accident was slight.

"Tell him this news and it will cheer him," said the minister, and he related how a young man whom Mr. Marrack had aided to find a place, had given his employers full satisfaction and been promted; also how a widow whom Mr. Marrack had helped in a similar way was doing well.

The good tidings never reached the ears of the benevolent rector, for even as the news was being told he was in extremis.

At the suggestion of Mayor Gaynor of New York a citizens fund is being gathered for a sane Fourth celebration in that city. About $7000 has already been contributed. Mrs. Russel Sage sent a check for $500 as an expression of her belief in a "safe and sane" Fourth. Sheriff Shea, in inclosing his contribution, took occasion to commend Mayor Gaynor's idea of celebrating the national holiday. Many other contributors have expressed their appreciation of the movement.

The colleges and other educational institutions are still receiving handsome gifts. Brown University announces the bequest of $85,000 by the will of Dr. Oliver Henry Arnold, a prominent homeopathic physician of New York. Trinity College of Durham, N. C., announces gifts of $160,000 to the school in the form of a new dormitory to cost $50,000, given by James B. Duke, and a tract of fifty acres of campus land, given jointly by J. B. and B. N. Duke. Benjamin Duke also contributes $10,000 for campus improvements. The Duke gifts to Trinity have already amounted to about $2,000,000, and it is understood that another joint gift of $800,000 for an endowment fund is promised. Strathmore College has just received $200,000 from Miss Phoebe Ann Thorne of New York, which will be added to the endowment fund.

The automobile trade of New York gave an automobile ride to 5000 children from the orphan asylums of the city, a few days ago. This was the seventh Orphans' day of the local automobile trade and by a considerable margin the greatest ever held. There were more cars than ever before offered by charitably inclined owners and dealers and more "kiddies" to fill them. The arrangements were more complete and the event, as a spectacle to the public, more prolific of sympathetic thrills and cordial good wishes. In the description of the event, it is stated that every youngster carried a flag and was equipped with his loudest shouting voice in good working order.

A pathetic story is that of Harriet Tubman of Auburn, N. Y., the famous old negress who ran away out of slavery before the Civil War, and became the most noted "conductor of the underground railroad," piloting over 300 slaves to freedom. Some years ago, she gave her all to establish a home for aged colored men and women, and she was herself found ill and penniless and was taken to the Tubman Home to pass her few remaining years.

Dr. Clinton Helm of Rockford, Ill., aged 82 years, and dean of the medical profession in Illinois, made a remarkable rescue of his 3-year-old granddaughter, Eugenia McGlashan, who fell in Rock River from the pier at the summer home of the family. A stick in her hand extended above the water and guided the grandfather, who plunged in and swam ashore with her and then commenced work to revive the child.

A TALK TO BRIDES.

BY ELEANORE ROBERTSON.

The man wins his bride, but after marriage the bride is confronted with the task of winning her husband.

The man, of course, respects the girl whom he asks to become his wife. She is on his highest pinnacle of esteem and devotion.

After she has become his wife he respects her just the same, but somehow he treats her more like an ordinary human being than he did before. He is less deferential, less considerate, and sometimes it seems to her that he is positively uncivil. He ridicules her tastes and her ideas. He loses his temper and swears in her presence. Some men have even been known to swear at their wives!

The first thought of the indignant, humiliated little bride is that her husband is not the man she thought he was; that he is a boor and a brute, without inherent respect for womanhood.

That is a mistake, little bride. Your husband is the dear fellow you always thought him to be—at least in all probability he is. Unless your husband is a very exceptional man he is not naturally disrespectful to women. Considering that he is the man you loved well enough to marry, he is most likely the sort of man who has a deep reverence for you and all good women.

The fact of the matter is either that your husband needs a tongue lashing to make him behave yourself, or that your ideas actually deserve ridicule. In either case it is up to you, little bride, to fill the bill.

Maybe your beliefs are unfair, petty and narrow. Make them so broad, sensible and kind that they will evoke your husband's consideration. You know the sort of a fine, strong, womanly woman to whom all men take off their hats. Cultivate that kind of an individuality and you need not worry about retaining your husband's esteem. It will be yours till eternity.

Be particular about being yourself. Be the best that is in you; develop along your own lines of growth. Don't, in trying to please your husband, become a second edition of him. He may try to domineer over you; most men instinctively want to rule their wives. But the sort of a wife a man needs and loves and respects is a woman with a mind, and will and heart of her own.

Such a woman retains her husband's respect by force of character, as well as by her goodness—by might as well as by right. When the occasion arises she can hold her own. And, though her husband, like all men, hates the bossy, self-sufficient woman, he adores the woman who can hold her own. Possibly her permanent fascination to him is based on primal instincts; he feels that he never has or will be able to win her as completely as he would like to.

If you would keep your husband's esteem, work for it and be worthy of it. We get very little that's worth having in this world without paying the price for it.

If you would keep your husband's admiration, work for it. Be neat, tasteful and well gowned. Be youthful, normal and healthy. Above all, keep sweet; don't let the lines of discontent or unkindness creep into your face. A noble nature and a good disposition make a woman more beautiful and attractive than any perfection of feature or exquisite coloring of complexion.

If you would have your husband enjoy your society and take you out, make your company a pleasure to him. Be so bright and agreeable and companionable that he will want you with him. Be a little unselfish and enjoy the things he likes. Because you like opera and detest fishing is no reason that you cannot grow to like fishing. Tastes may be cultivated, you know. Fishing might be the best possible recreation for your nerves.

If you would have your husband sympathize with you, be deserving of his sympathy. Remember first that he is not so emotional as you are; try to realize that he is by nature and training self-contained and reticent. Don't expect him to understand you in your moods of feminine babyishness. Get over some of your useless emotionalism; don't pay so much attention to your feelings. Be a woman, as he is a man.

And then think of him a little. Remember that he is tired and tried in his work, just as you are in yours. Consider his welfare and comfort and feelings a little more than you do your own. If you do this, you will not need to worry about whether or not he is sympathizing with you. For you will have his sympathy and love.

Marriage is largely a matter of reciprocity—of giving in order to have, and of working for all we get. Success and happiness in marriage come not by chance, but because both husband and wife have earnestly hoped and worked for happiness. When one party to a marriage relation does her or his best to fulfill her or his marriage vows, the other party is likely to follow suit and the marriage will be a success. The bride who would have her husband be the right sort of husband can best achieve her aim by first being the right sort of wife. Unless he is a failure or a brute—and there are only a few of such men among thousands of good men—her husband will be aroused to the fact that he has a mighty good wife, and he will determine to try to be an equally good husband.

Give your husband a square deal if you want him to do the right thing by you.

ACTIVE WOMEN.

Miss Violet Joslyn of Omaha, for an essay upon the "Building of the Union Pacific Railroad," has been awarded the gold medal of the National Society of Colonial Daughters of Patriots and Founders for the best essay on American history. This is the sixth year the prize has been offered.

Miss Erna Weidenbaum of Taylor, Tex., has received three scholarships, one each from the State University, Southwestern University and the Polytechnic College. They were awarded for highest honors in the High School.

Miss Fannie Moulton McLane won the prize for the best play this year in the contest at Columbia University, to which professors, men and women students were all eligible. She is the daughter of the artist, Mrs. E. M. McLane, and has been writing plays for several years. The title of her prize play is "A Son of Gurth."

Eighty years of age and still enjoying college life, Mrs. Amy D. Winship of Racine will enter the University of Wisconsin next fall as the only octogenarian co-ed in the United States, and probably in the world. Mrs. Winship, who now is completing her second year in the arts course, at Ohio State University, was a personal friend of Abraham Lincoln.

OVER THE SEA.

Prof. Pictet of Geneva draws the inference from some interesting experiments he has made that life is being brought within the range of nature's constant forces. His experiments consisted of bringing back goldfish to life after they had been frozen at a very low temperature for months. Frogs, dogs and other animals, he claims, can stand freezing at an incredibly low temperature without dying.

Mme. Curie, codiscoverer with her late husband of radium, has been invited to come from Paris to America next year for the purpose of taking part in the International Chemical Congress, which is to be held in Washington. Last year the Chemical Society of America elected Mme. Curie an honorary member.

Edward, Prince of Wales, is a boy who, like many other boys, dislikes the company of little girls. They annoy him. When a visiting Princess is around, Queen Mary sometimes "calls down" the future King because he is not as polite to the feminine guest as he should be.

Mrs. Annie Besant, the famous theosophist and lecturer, is home in London from India. With her have come two Indian boy disciples whom she has taken under her guardianship. Somehow or other, through her occult investigations, Mrs. Besant has become convinced she can trace the origin of these boys back through no less than thirty-one "previous existences." Nor does she think the limit is stated even then. "Many more stretch behind all of us," she says, "but only these have been carefully looked up." But the span of these existences is not so bad, even at that. One lad, she assures the world, has clearly indicated former lives covering between 20,000 and 30,000 years.

Civil War in Richmond, Helped to Nurse the Con-

was proclaimed in Richmond, and a fresh influx of refugees from Norfolk claimed shelter there. When the spring opened, as the spring does open in Richmond, with a sudden glory of green leaves, magnolia blooms, and flowers among the grass, our spirits rose after the depression of the latter months. If only to shake off the atmosphere of doubts and fears engendered by the long winter of disaster and uncertainty, the coming activity of arms and welcome! I shall not attempt to describe the rapidity with which thrilling excitements succeeded each other in our experience in this house. The gathering of many troops around the town filled the streets with a continually moving panorama of war, and we spent our time in greeting, cheering, choking with sudden emotion, and quivering in anticipation of what was yet to follow.

We had finished several battle flags, and one of them was bestowed upon the "Washington Artillery" of New Orleans, a body of admirable soldiers who had wakened to enthusiasm the daughters of Virginia in proportion, I dare say, to the woe they had created among the daughters of Louisiana in bidding them good-by. One morning an orderly arrived to request that the ladies would be out upon the veranda at a given hour; and, punctual to the time fixed, the travel-stained battalion filed past our house.

These were no holiday soldiers. Their gold was tarnished and their scarlet faded by sun and wind and gallant service—they were veterans now on their way to the front, where the call of duty never failed to find the flower of Louisiana. As they came in line with us, the officers saluted with their swords, the band struck up "My Maryland," the tired soldiers sitting upon the caissons that dragged heavily through the muddy street set up a rousing cheer. And there in the midst of them, taking the April wind with daring color, was one flag, dipping low until it passed us! One must grow old and cold indeed before such things are forgotten.

We Hear of Farragut's Great Victory.

A few days later, on coming out of church—it is a curious fact that most of our exciting news spread over Richmond on Sunday, and just at that hour we heard of the crushing blow of the fall of New Orleans and the destruction of our iron-clads—(April 24, 1862.) My brother had just reported aboard one of those splendid ships, as yet unfinished. As the news came directly from our kinsman, Gen. Randolph, the Secretary of War, there was no doubting it; and while the rest of us broke into lamentation, Mr. Jules de St. Martin, the brother-in-law of Mr. Judah P. Benjamin, (the Secretary of State,) merely shrugged his shoulders, with a thoroughly characteristic gesture, making no remark.

"This must affect your interests," some one said to him inquiringly.

"I am ruined, voila tout!" was the rejoinder—and this was soon confirmed.

This debonair little gentleman was one of the greatest favorites of our war society in Richmond. His cheerfulness, his wit, his exquisite courtesy, made him friends everywhere; and although his nicety of dress, after the pattern of the boulevardier fini of Paris, was the subject of much wonderment to the populace when he first appeared upon the streets, it did not prevent him from joining the volunteers before Richmond when occasion called, and roughing it in the trenches like a veteran. His cheerful endurance of hardship during a freezing winter of camp life became a proverb in the army later in the siege.

For a time nothing was talked of but the capture of New Orleans. Of the midshipman, my brother, we heard that on the day previous to the taking of the forts (Jackson and St. Philip, which guarded the approach to New Orleans from the Gulf,) after several days' bombardment by the United States fleet under Flag-Officer Farragut, he had been sent in charge of ordnance and deserters to a Confederate vessel in the river; that Lieut. R——, a friend of his, on the way to report at Fort Jackson during the hot shelling, had invited the lad to accompany him by way of a pleasure trip; that while they were crossing the moat around Fort Jackson, in a canoe, and under heavy fire, a thirteen-inch mortar-shell had struck the water near, half filling their craft; and that, after watching the fire from this point for an hour, C—— had pulled back again alone, against the Mississippi current, under fire for a mile and a half of the way—passing an astonished alligator who had been hit on the head by a piece of shell and was dying under protest. Thus ended a trip alluded to by C—— twenty years later as an example of juvenile foolhardiness.

Aboard the steamship Star of the West next day, he and other midshipmen in charge of gold and silver coin from the mint and banks of New Orleans, and millions more of paper money, over which they were ordered to keep guard with drawn swords, hurried away from the doomed city, where the enemy's arrival was momentarily expected, and where the burning ships and steamers and bales of cotton along the levee made a huge crescent of fire. Keeping just ahead of the enemy's fleet, they reached Vicksburg, and thence went overland to Mobile, where their charge was given up in safety.

And now we come to the 31st of May, 1862, when the eyes of the whole continent turned to Richmond. On that day Johnston assaulted the Federals who had been advanced to Seven Pines (to within sight of the steeples of the Confederate capital.) In face of recent reverses, (Yorktown and Williamsburg,) we in Richmond had begun to feel like the prisoner of the Inquisition in Poe's story, cast into a dungeon of slowly contracting walls. With the sound of guns, therefore, in the direction of Seven Pines, every heart leaped as if deliverance were at hand. And yet—there was no joy in the wild pulsation, since those to whom we looked for succor were our own flesh and blood, barring the way to a foe of superior numbers, abundantly provided, as we were not, with all the equipments of modern warfare, and backed by a mighty nation as determined as ourselves to win. Hardly a family in the town whose father, son, or brother was not part and parcel of the defending army.

When on the afternoon of the 31st it became known that the engagement had begun, the women of Richmond were still going about their daily vocations quietly, giving no sign of the inward anguish of apprehension. There was enough to do now in preparation for the wounded; yet, as events proved, all that was done was not enough by half. Night brought a lull in the cannonading. People lay down dressed upon beds, but not to sleep, while the weary soldiers slept upon their arms.

Early next morning the whole town was on the street. Ambulances, litters, carts, every vehicle that the city could produce, went and came with a ghastly burden; those who could walk limped painfully home, in some cases so black with gunpowder they passed unrecognized. Women with pallid faces flitted bareheaded through the streets searching for their dead and wounded.

The churches were thrown open, many people visiting them for a sad communion service or brief time of prayer; the lecture rooms of various places of worship were crowded with ladies volunteering to sew, as fast as fingers could fly, the rough beds called for by the surgeons. Men too old or infirm to fight, went on horseback or afoot to meet the returning ambulances, and in some cases served as escort to their own dying sons.

The Streets One Vast Hospital.

By afternoon of the day following the battle, the streets were one vast hospital. To find shelter for the sufferers a number of unused buildings were thrown open.

I remember, especially, the St. Charles Hotel, a gloomy place, where two young girls went to look for a member of their family reported wounded. We had tramped in vain over pavements burning with the intensity of the sun, from one scene of horror to another, until our feet and brains alike seemed about to serve us no further. The cool of those vast dreary rooms of the St. Charles were refreshing, but such a spectacle! Men in every stage of mutilation lying on the bare boards, with perhaps a haversack or an army blanket beneath their heads—some dying, all suffering keenly, while waiting their turn to be attended to. To be there empty-handed and impotent nearly broke our hearts. We passed from one to the other, making such slight additions to their comfort as were possible, while looking in every upturned face in dread to find the object of our search. This sorrow, I may add, was spared, the youth arriving at home later with a slight fleshwound.

The condition of things at this and other improvised hospitals was improved next day by the offerings from many churches of pew-cushions, which, sewn together, served as comfortable beds; and for the remainder of the war their owners thanked God upon bare benches for every "misery missed" that was "mercy gained."

To supply food for the hospitals the contents of larders all over town were emptied into baskets; while cellars long sealed and cobwebbed, belonging to the old Virginia gentry who knew good Port and Madeira, were opened by the Ithuriel's spear of universal sympathy. There was not much going to bed that night, either; and I remember spending the greater part of it leaning from my window to seek the cool night air, while wondering as to the fate of those near to me. There was a summons to my mother about midnight. Two soldiers came to tell her of the wounding of one close of kin; but she was already on duty elsewhere, tireless and watchful as ever.

Up to that time the younger girls had been regarded as superfluities in hospital service; but on Monday two of us found a couple of rooms where fifteen wounded men lay upon pallets around the floor, and, on offering our services to the surgeons in charge, were proud to have them accepted and to be installed as responsible nurses, under direction of an older and more experienced woman. The constant activity our work entailed was a relief from the strained excitement of life after the battle of Seven Pines.

When the first flurry of distress was over the residents of those pretty houses standing back in gardens full of roses set their cooks to working, or, better still, went themselves into the kitchen, to compound delicious messes for the wounded, after the appetizing old Virginia recipes. Flitting about the streets in the direction of the hospitals were smiling white-jacketed negroes, carrying silver trays with dishes of fine porcelain under napkins of thick white damask, containing soups, creams, jellies, thin biscuit, eggs a la creme, boiled chicken, etc., surrounded by clusters of freshly gathered flowers. A year later we had cause to pine after these culinary glories when it came to measuring out, with sinking hearts, the merger portions of milk and food we could afford to give our charges.

As an instance, however, that quality in food was not always appreciated by the patients, my mother urged upon one of her sufferers (a gaunt and soft-voiced Carolinian from the "piney-woods district,") a delicately served trifle from some neighboring kitchen.

"Jes ez you say, old miss," was the weary answer; "I ain't a-contradictin' you. It mout be good for me, but my stomick's kinder sot agin it. There ain't but one thing I'm sorter yarnin' arter, an' that's a dish o' greens en bacon fat, with a few molarses poured onto it."

From our patients, when they could syllable the tale, we had accounts of the fury of the fight which were made none the less horrible by such assistance as imagination could give to the facts. I remember they told us of shot thrown from the enemy's batteries, that plowed their way through lines of flesh and blood before exploding in showers of musket-balls to do further havoc. Before these awful missiles, it was said, our men had fallen in swaths, the living closing over them to press forward in the charge.

It was at the end of one of these narrations that a piping voice came from a pallet in the corner: "They fit right smart, them Yanks did, I tell you!" and not to laugh was as much of an effort as it had just been not to cry.

Days of Death and Suffering.

From one scene of death and suffering to another we passed during those days of June. Under a withering heat that made the hours preceding dawn the only ones of the twenty-four endurable in point of temperature, and a shower bath the only form of diversion we had time or thought to indulge in, to go out-of-doors was sometimes worse than remaining in our wards.

Day by day we were called to our windows by the wailing dirge of a military band preceding a soldier's funeral. One could not number those sad pageants; the coffin crowned with cap and sword and gloves, the riderless horse following with the empty boots fixed in the stirrups of an army saddle; such soldiers as could be spared from the front marching after with arms reversed and crape-enfolded banners; the passers-by standing with bare, bent, heads.

Funerals less honored outwardly were continually occurring. Then and thereafter the green hillsides of lovely Hollywood were frequently upturned to find resting places for the heroic dead. So much taxed for time and for attendants were those who officiated that it was not unusual to perform the last rites for the departed at night. A solemn scene was that in the July moonlight, when, in the presence of the few who valued him most, we laid to rest one of my own nearest kinsmen, of whom in the old service of the United States, as in that of the Confederacy, it was said, "He was the spotless knight."

Spite of its melancholy uses, there was no more favorite walk in Richmond than Hollywood, a picturesquely beautiful spot, where high hills sink into velvet undulations, profusely shaded with holly, pine, and cedar, as well as by trees of deciduous foliage. In spring the banks of the stream that runs through the valley were enameled with wild flowers, and the thickets were full of May-blossom and dogwood. Mounting to the summit of the bluff, one may sit under the shade of some ample oak, to view the spires and roofs of the town, with the white colonade of the distant Capitol. Richmond, thus seen beneath her verdant foliage, "upon hills, girdled by hills," confirms what an old writer felt called to exclaim about it, "Verily, this city hath a pleasant seat."

On the right, below this point, flows the rushing yellow river, making ceaseless turmoil around islets of rock whose rifts are full of birch and willow, or leaping impetuously over the bowlders of granite that strew its bed. Old-time Richmond folk used to say that the sound of their favorite James (or, to be exact, "Jeems") went with them into foreign countries, during no matter how many years of absence, haunting them like a strain of sweetest music; nor would they permit a suggestion of superiority in the flavor of any other fluid to that of a draught of its amber waters. So blent with my own memories of war is the voice of that tireless river, that I seem to hear it yet, over the tramp of rusty battalions, the short imperious stroke of the alarm bell, the clash of passing bands, the gallop of eager horsemen, the roar of battle, the moan of hospitals, the stifled note of sorrow!

During all this time President Davis was a familiar and picturesque figure on the streets, walking through the Capitol square from his residence to the Executive office in the morning, not to return until late in the afternoon, or riding just before nightfall to visit one or another of the encampments near the city.

He was tall, erect, slender, and of a dignified and soldierly bearing, with clear-cut and high-bred features, and of a demeanor of stately courtesy to all. He was clad always in Confederate gray cloth, and wore a soft felt hat with wide brim. Afoot, his step was brisk, and firm; in the saddle he rode admirably and with a martial aspect. His early life had been spent in the military acamedy at West Point and upon the then northwestern frontier in the Black Hawk War, and he afterward greatly distinguished himself at Monterey and Buena Vista in Mexico; at the time when we knew him, everything in his appearance and manner was suggestive of such a training.

He was reported to feel quite out of place in the office of President with executive and administrative duties, in the midst of such a war; Gen. Lee spoke of him as the best of military advisers; his own inclination was to be with the army, and at the first the dismay of his staff officers, who within reach of Richmond, he was in the saddle and off for the spot—to the dismay of his staff-officers, who were expected to act as an escort on such occasions, and who never knew at what hour of the night or of the next day, they should get back tobed or to a meal.

When Lee Ordered Davis to the Rear.

The stories we were told of his adventures on such excursions were many, and sometimes amusing. For instance, when Gen. Lee had crossed the Chickahominy, President Davis, with several staff officers, overtook the column, and, with the Secretary of War and a few other non-combatants, forded the river just as the battle of Mechanicsville began, (June 26.) Gen. Lee, surrounded by members of his own staff and other officers, was found a few hundred yards north of the bridge, in the middle of the broad road, mounted and busily engaged in directing the attack then about to be made by a brigade sweeping in line over the fields to the east of the road and toward Ellerson's Mill, where in a few minutes a hot engagement commenced. Shot, from the enemy's guns out of sight, went whizzing overhead in quick succession, striking every moment nearer the group of horsemen in the road as the gunners improved their range.

Gen. Lee observed the President's approach, and was evidently annoyed at what he considered a foolhardy expedition of needless exposure of the head of the government, whose duties were elsewhere. He turned his back for a moment, until Col. Chilton had been dispatched at a gallop with the last direction to the commander of the attacking brigade; then, facing the cavalcade and looking like the god of war indignant, he exchanged with the President a salute, with the most frigid reserve of anything like welcome or cordiality. In an instant, and without allowance of opportunity for a word from the President, the general, looking not at him but at the assemblage at large, asked in a tone of irritation:

"Who are all this army of people, and what are they doing here?"

No one moved or spoke, but all eyes were upon the President; everybody perfectly understood that this was only an order for him to retire to a place of safety, and the roar of the guns, the rattling fire of musketry, and the bustle of a battle in progress, with troops continually arriving across the bridge to go into action, went on. The President twisted in his saddle, quite taken aback at such a greeting—the general regarding him now with glances of growing severity. After a painful pause the President said, deprecating: "It is not my army, general." "It certainly is not my army, Mr. President," was the prompt reply, "and this is no place for it"—in an accent of command.

Such a rebuff was a stunner to Mr. Davis, who, however, soon regained his serenity and answered:

"Well, general, if I withdraw, perhaps they will follow," and, raising his hat in another cold salute, he turned his horse's head to ride slowly toward his bridge—seeing, as he turned, a man killed immediately before him by a shot from a gun which at that moment got range of the road.

The President's own staff officers followed him, as did various others; but he presently drew rein in a stream, where the high bank and the bushes concealed him from Gen. Lee's repelling observation, and there remained while the battle raged. The Secretary of War had also made a show of withdrawing, but improved the opportunity afforded by rather a deep ditch on the roadside to attempt to conceal himself and his horse there for a time from Gen. Lee, who at that moment was more to be dreaded than the enemy's guns.

The Woful Tale of the Battle Summer.

When on the 25th of June the seven days' strike began, (the battles of Oak Grove, Mechanicsville, Gaines's Mill, Savage's Station, Frazier's Farm and Malvern Hill as a result of McClellan's change of base to the James River after the battle of Seven Pines, or Fair Oaks,) there was none of the excitement that had attended the battle of Seven Pines. People had shaken themselves down, as it were, to the grim reality of a fight that must be fought. "Let the war bleed, and let the mighty fall," was the spirit of their cry. It is not my purpose to deal with the history of those awful Seven Days. Mine only to speak of the other side of that canvas in which heroes of two armies were passing and repassing, as on some huge Homeric frieze, in the maneuvers of a strife that hung our land in mourning.

What I have said of Richmond before these battles will suffice for a picture of the summer's experience. When the tide of battle receded, what wrecked hopes it left to tell the tale of the Battle Summer! Victory was ours, but in hoy many homes was heard the voice of lamentation to drown the shouts of triumph! Many families, rich and poor alike, were bereaved of their dearest; and for many of the dead there was mourning by all the town.

No incident of the war, for instance, made a deeper impression than the fall in battle of Col. Munford's beautiful and brave young son, Ellis, whose body, laid across his own caisson, was carried that summer to his father's house at nightfall, where the family, unconscious of their loss, were sitting in cheerful talk around the portal. Another son of Richmond, whose death was keenly felt by everybody, received his mortal wound at the front of the first charge to break the enemy's line at Gaines's Mill. This was Lieut.-Col. Bradfute Warwick, a young hero who had won his spurs in service with Garibaldi.

Losses like these are irreparable in any community; and so, with lamentations in nearly every household, while the spirit along the lines continued unabated, it was a chastened "Thank God" that went up among us when we knew the siege of Richmond was over.

Turkish Bath Cures Rheumatism At Home

Costs But 2c a Bath, and the Body Is Rid of Uric Acid Poison, With Astonishing Rapidity.

Quickly Cures Kidney Trouble, Nervous Prostration and All Skin Diseases.

The Robinson Thermal or Turkish bath, taken at home, is becoming a rage. Those who have used the bath have been completely carried away with enthusiasm because of the astonishing results obtained.

Well-known physicians say that the Robinson Thermal Bath at home is about to become an almost universal conqueror of disease. This is not an exaggeration. Any man or woman can prove its results inside of 24 hours, in some cases thirty minutes.

In cases of rheumatism, especially, the uric acid poison is extracted from the system through the pores, almost as liquids are sucked up through a straw. Drugs merely smother the poison or ease the pain. They do not extract the poison from the body.

Anyone can now take Robinson Thermal baths at home and at a cost of only about 2 cents a bath. The only way to take these baths is by the use of the Robinson Thermal Bath Cabinet, which is a unique and marvelous invention.

The Robinson Thermal Bath Cabinets can now be seen and examined in Los Angeles at The Broadway Dept. Store.

Ask the dealer also for a copy of that great book, "The Philosophy of Health and Beauty." The regular price is $2.00, but you can get one free now for only a limited time.

If you cannot go yourself, just send your name and address to the Robinson Mnfg. Co., Suite 77, Snowflake Building, Toledo, Ohio, for full illustrated information, free.

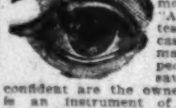
Remarkable Invention

An Instrument That Improves and Strengthens Eyesight

Spectacles May Be Abandoned.

This instrument which the inventor has patented, is called "Actina"—a trade-mark word.

In the treatment of eye diseases the inventor of "Actina" claims that there is no need for cutting or drugging the eye in treating most forms of disease. Cataracts, and other abnormal growths have been removed, and weakened vision improved or restored by this new and more humane method. "Actina" has been tested in thousands of cases and has effected marvelous results, many people testifying that it saved their eyesight. So confident are the owners that this device is an instrument of great merit, that they will give absolutely a free trial. They want everyone interested to make a thorough investigation and a personal test of "Actina." One will be sent on trial, postpaid, so that any person can give it a test.



They issue a book—a Treatise on Disease—which tells all about "Actina," the diseases it will remove, what others think of it, what marvelous results it has effected, and all about the responsibility of its owners—all will be sent absolutely free upon request. This book should be in the home of every family. Address Actina Appliance Co., Dept. 89R, 811 Walnut St., Kansas City, Mo.

COLORADO WOMANIST.

Mrs. Edward Thomas Taylor, Wife of Member from Glenwood Springs, Colorado is a Devoted Adherent of the Ballot and can Cite Reasons in Behalf of Votes for Women.

BY MARGARET B. DOWNING.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—"Since I came to Washington," said Mrs. Taylor, wife of the Representative at large from the Centennial State, "I have been astonished at the interest taken in me simply because I claim a State which has conferred the rights of the ballot on women. We women of Colorado take our privileges as a matter of course, and we no longer discuss the matter or think ourselves as in a way set apart or honored unduly. But in Washington the theme is rampant, either for or against, and I have talked suffrage more in the two winters that I have lived here than I would in twenty years at home. Everyone here is impressed by the importance of the question, whether he believes in its intrinsic worth or not. Having voted ever since Colorado conferred the right in 1893, I can give some opinions at first hand, I find the main objection as expressed by the 'antis' in Washington, male and female, is that voting makes women masculine and that soon they will all want to neglect their homes and go gadding about the country, running for office. If that were true even in isolated cases, it would form a solid argument against equal suffrage. But after more than eighteen years' experience, it cannot be proven that the wives and mothers and home keepers, generally, of Colorado have contracted nomadic habits or that they seek office except in the cases of bread winners, who would make the same effort for lucrative employment with or without the ballot.

"We make a boast of the high qualities of the woman of the Rockies and Colorado is in the foreground for such distinction. In a way, we are pioneer women and have helped to make our State's prosperity. We vote and ponder public questions for the ultimate good of our homes, our children, and our State, present and future. What I wish to emphasize is that the women of Colorado do vote which is more than can be said for the men. There are 30,000 more men than women in the Centennial State and yet the statistics of the last election show the feminine votes exceeded masculine ones from 43 to 51 per cent. We attend to our duties quietly and without ostentation and really all the fuss comes from outsiders who do not understand the conditions at all. Another feature is that married men attend to their civic duties more regularly than single ones, which proves that the wife is an aid to the performance of this sacred obligation. It is frequently stated that Colorado intends to withdraw the right of the ballot from women, that it has been found unsatisfactory and that the women themselves want to give back the privilege. Nothing is further from the truth.

"When Colorado was admitted to the Union, a clause in the Constitution said that the Legislature may confer the right to vote on women. The question was brought up and defeated about ten or twelve years after the State was admitted. In 1893 it was carried and women have voted on every question since that time. But about ten years, the Constitution was amended to meet certain objections about the right of foreigners to vote. Our State with many others had been so foolish as to grant a foreigner the privilege of voting as soon as he declared his intention to become a citizen. Consequently the foreign vote threatened to swamp matters and the issue was acute. The change regarding the status of foreigners was voted on by the people and had there been the least objection to women voting, it would have been challenged at the same time. But not a word was lodged against the privilege, so that this rumor must be placed against the over zealousness of the 'antis.' Certainly I never hear of it in Colorado. It seems only some eastern women who want to take the vote away, and not the men of Colorado.

"Colorado women take their civic duties seriously. I was much impressed when a prominent book seller of Denver told me that after the right to vote had been conferred on women he had sold fifteen times more volumes on political economy, political history, parliamentary law and these allied themes in six months than he had disposed of in ten years previous. We showed a determination to go to the bottom of things and we still maintain clubs which instruct the novice in her duties. It makes an intelligent and responsible lot of women to whom grave issues may be safely trusted."

Mrs. Taylor is a handsome and vigorous young woman to whom Washington life and the opportunity to study the essence of things political makes a powerful appeal. She has taken an interest in all the measures which will broaden her views and give her practical experience. Though essentially a home lover, she has preferred to reside at a hotel because of the opportunities presented of meeting the people who are making present history.

"I think," said Mrs. Taylor, "that a wife should be with her husband just as much as possible and I was determined that the exigencies of political life should not make me divide my life from my husband. The youngsters are so much better off than in a hotel and I have been hoping every week to hear the joyful news that the end of the extra session is in sight. It has been a hard battle to fight being away from so young a child as my little daughter. These warm days in Washington also make me think lovingly of the Rockies with their eternal snow and the cool breezes ever stirring. Our small city of 2500 inhabitants is a wonderful resort and if it were only more advertised it would be counted among the almost miraculous spas of the world. We have the natural hot mud baths and they work marvelous cures for many kinds of ailments. Unfortunately, however, the waters and the bath establishments are owned by a corporation of British capitalists and we know all about the misery of having an absentee landlord. We are perched right up in the heart of the high Rockies and we have always before us one of the most glorious panoramas which this earth contains. Our fruits and flowers are not to be described, and those who have tasted the vegetables of Colorado can testify to their tastefulness. Even potatoes raised in a soil rich in ore and in a climate always sunny, have a different flavor. We get fine meat, straight from the cattle ranges but the high prices have descended upon us, as it has the remainder of the world."

THRILLING START ON LAST LEG OF GREAT AQUEDUCT TO BE MADE BY CITY'S FORCES ON FIRST OF JULY.

One Hundred and Twenty Thousand Horse Power to be Available in Eighteen Months---Los Angeles to be Best-Equipped Industrial City in the World; Great Increase in Population in Adjacent Valleys.

THE "last leg" of the journey that Los Angeles undertook four years ago, to bring pure water from the Sierra Nevada Mountains and to provide abundant cheap power, is to be begun July 1, next.

That date will be the starting point for the finishing touches on the great project, to put in service the pellucid stream from the snowy mountain tops and the invisible grant that is expected to work domestic revolution in the city.

Eighteen months from this date is the period fixed for the completion of the greatest and boldest municipal project ever attempted by an American municipality.

December 31, 1912, is the goal post of the army now at work.

With that goal in sight, work is to begin at this end of the line on the most important features. The great power plants of the San Fernando, and the San Francisquito, are to be started and the two San Fernando reservoirs, already begun, are to be pushed. Out of the three power stations about 100,000 horse power is to be developed and transmitted a short distance to the city. And the lower San Fernando dam is to be the biggest of its kind in the world.

Imagination halts before the possibilities which electrical engineers find in the power features. They regard the power of the aqueduct as bringing one of the greatest domestic luxuries to a city that could be devised, and especially to a city which knows no severe winters, and an industrial opportunity not shared by any other American city.

INCREASED POPULATION.

Now stop a minute to think of the expansion this water and power mean for Los Angeles. Think of the teeming communities which will spring up, for instance, in the great San Fernando Valley, where great tracts of fertile lands are now being cut up and rapidly sold off.

When this water is ready for sale and distribution by the city, not one of the present big owners of large acreage will own or control these lands. They will all have been subdivided and passed to small owners—farmers, house-holders, actual settlers, all a great, industrious, productive population, tributary to Los Angeles.

Think of the increased business to Los Angeles merchants from this thrifty population—aside from the revenue to the city from the sale of water and power!

The Los Angeles county region now uses 90,000 horse power for all purposes. About 60 per cent. of it is eaten up by the transportation companies. The aqueduct is capable of developing 120,000 horse power, or one third more than is now used for all purposes.

Chief Engineer Scattergood estimates that the city may sell its power at 20 per cent. less than the present average rate for all purposes and still make enough to pay the interest and principal of the power debt and accumulate $700,000 a year besides!

DOMESTIC USES.

This means 5-cent current for domestic use, practically, and may mean less. It means that the poor man may use electric current not only for light but for all domestic uses. His wife may use it to run her sewing machine, or to operate a washer. Electricity will be cheap heat and it will be cheap fuel for cooking. It is already used for ironing and for a score of other household purposes. But it is the dream of using it—clean, instantly available and powerful, never tiring—for a household servant, for light and for fuel, for labor saving and comfort, that makes the electricians' dream alluring.

And that dream is to be realized December 31, 1912!

There are now 55,000 consumers of electricity in Los Angeles city, including all public street lights, but excluding the transportation companies. This great number will consume less than one-fifth of the 120,000 horse power that the aqueduct will produce. When it is regarded that the city is already using 90,000 horse power it will astonish to know that, beginning with the year 1913, the city is to have 210,000 horse power at its disposal. If the transportation companies are eliminated the people will have 150,000 horse power for general use. On its present basis the city will use but 30,000 of this amount. There will be 120,000 as a basis for expansion.

This expansion is to be double and rapid. It will be expansion in use and in numbers. Those who now use it will extend it to other purposes, largely domestic. And the rapid increase in population will cause the other expansion.

Los Angeles now may expand five times by increasing its use of current. Or it may absorb the excess by increasing five times in population without expanding the use. But as the two forms of expansion feed each other it is probable they will journey hand in hand to the maximum.

As 30,000 horse power is the quantity now in use, outside of transportation companies, the first work of the power department of the city, under the direction of E. F. Scattergood, is to provide that amount of power from the earliest construction. Whether the upper or lower station at San Francisquito Canyon will be first built depends on the policy soon to be adopted by the Board of Public Works and the Public Service Commission. But whichever it may be the power will come in eighteen months. It will fit the needs of its coming and back of it will be the possibility of developing 90,000 more from year to year as the city is ready to absorb it.

THE MONSTER PENSTOCKS.

Plans are being completed for the great penstocks that will carry the water of the aqueduct down 800 feet and this tremendous fall will generate the the power. This would be impossible without the aqueduct for there is no such water power available anywhere in the Southland. The big ditch conveying the Owens River waters 230 miles makes possible within forty miles of the city the largest power plant in the South. And when the water has turned out this energy, it passes on to another great drop at the lower San Francisquito and then to a final fall between the San Fernando reservoirs. It is purely an artificial condition and is one of the enginerring wonders of the bold scheme.

Not only is this a poor man's luxury, alluring to many tens of thousands in other places, but it is a boon to industry. The ample quantity insures the cheapest possible manufacturing and is to be just as alluring to the capitalists as to home seekers. It is possible with it to fill the space between Los Angeles and San Pedro with factories and supply them all with abundant power. It furnishes a basis for the most ideal industrial conditions. A factory area free from smoke and heat, dotted with residence districts free from soot and the usual grime of shop and furnace, is one of the sure results. All over the harbor region maritime commerce may be handled with the same invisible power and with the same comfort and cleanliness.

The mysterious giant of the mountains, harnessed, is to furnish a superior energy to the wizard city of the desert that her founder never dreamed of. And in doing so it is to demonstrate that necessity is still the mother of invention, for the whole transformation of home, industrial and municipal life is a collossal invention of the dreamers.

And all this is to begin its reality December 31, 1912.

That goal post is also to be the sure aim of the aqueduct project itself and the cold waters of the mountains are to be turned into the city mains on that day, or earlier. To do this, great steel siphons are in process of construction connecting the mountain tunnels, and the final stretch of open ditch is under way. All the aqueduct work so far has been remote from popular inspection and there is little actual knowledge of it. But now any citizen of Los Angeles who chooses to go to the head of the San Fernando Valley may see the beginning of final activity on this work. Two great reservoirs are under way.

One is the lower San Fernando. It will be formed by the largest earth dam in the world, a fill between points 140 feet high at the center of its core and containing 2,750,000 cubic yards. Behind it the water will stand at adepth of 130 feet. It is to have no core wall of stone or concrete, but the earth is to be puddled in order to give it consistency.

The outlet for this dam will be 1015 feet above sea level and through it the water will flow to the city 700 feet lower through a massive concrete conduit.

This reservoir will contain 20,000 acre feet of water, which means water one foot deep on an area of 20,000 acres. Its equivalent in gallons is 6,534,000,000.

Another illustration of its capacity is this: Los Angeles uses from forty millions to fifty-five million gallons of water daily. The summer consumption is above forty millions and at this rate the water in this single reservoir would run the city for 163 days, even if the Owens River and the Sierras went dry, a miracle beyond imagination.

UPPER SAN FERNANDO.

The upper San Fernando reservoir is to be begun six months hence, and it, too, is to have a puddled earth dam, not so high nor so wide as the lower one, but still containing 1,583,000 cubic yards. Behind its 100 feet of height 15,900 acre feet of water will be stored or enough additional to carry the city four months—that is in case the aqueduct got to leaking or got choked up.

But the aqueduct does not leak. William Mulholland has made sure of that, for he has had water in 49 miles of the concreted work and his tests show that the calculation of loss by seepage was rather extreme. It was estimated that out of every 433 second feet the seepage would amount to 33 feet. The tests justify knocking out one of the three—either one, for the same result.

One of the worries of the "big chief," as Mulholland has been called, has been fear that the concrete might not be all that was expected of it. But the water test, the most practical possible at this time, removes all his doubts. If the seepage is only about three feet with still water it will be less when the moving stream closes and makes impervious the bottom and sides with its sediment.

The home stretch of the aqueduct finds all of the tunnel work, except one and a half miles, done and this is the easiest kind. All the tunnel work undone is in the Grapevine and Little Lake divisions. At the north end there are about 75 miles of open ditch to be constructed and the usual rate of progress, five miles a month, does not need to be exceeded to complete this long before the goal post is reached.

The big unfinished work, besides the

The comparative table shows that the percentage saved will enable the average home builder to add an extra room, a screen porch, a garage or some other desired annex to the home for the price he figured on paying when the plans were drawn a year ago, or since that time.

According to J. T. Campbell, secretary of the Builders' Exchange, many people are taking advantage of the lower cost of most materials, and this assertion is substantiated by the building records which show a particular increase in the past few months in the number of homes, apartments and small store buildings.

It is therefore not from a lack of demand for material that prices are lower, but from other causes, chief of these the very active competition and at times the actual fighting between the big lumber producers, the mill men and others in the same line of business.

IN CONSTRUCTION LOS ANGELES LEADS

Many Notable Improvements Under Way.

Industrial Townsites Being Established.

Suburban Sites Offered New Establishments.

Many of the larger cities of the country show a falling off in construction. Not so with Los Angeles. Here building is going on at a rapid rate, each month showing a gratifying increase over the previous month. At the present time there are five skyscrapers in course of erection which will entail an expenditure of nearly $4,000,000. To these downtown improvements must be added the numerous family hotels and apartments which will cost over $1,000,000 when completed. New residence work keeps on apace, nearly $1,000,000 being invested in new homes monthly. Los Angeles is also growing industrially, many new townsites to the south and west of the city proper extending to the ocean being talked of for early establishment, where it is stated a number of industries now located in the heart of the city will establish new plants and draw with them other enterprises seeking locations. The movement southeastward is also strong, the town of Vernon offering large areas of excellent industrial sites well served by transportation facilities and carefully guarded against restrictions such as noise, dust, smoke, or the hum of industry and industrial prosperity.

Architects and builders report the following new work on the eve of commencement:

Morgan, Walls and Morgan have completed plans and are taking bids for the erection of a three-story brick building at No 2703 North Broadway for the Odd Fellows' Hall Association. There will be two store rooms on the first floor, lodge room and ante rooms on the second floor, and banquet room and regalia rooms on the third floor.

Eisen & Son have prepared plans for a two-story, fifteen-room brick residence to be built at Whittier for William Loftus. It will be Georgian in design. A two-story brick garage will also be erected. Also plans for a new plate glass and copper store front, mezzanine floor and fixtures for the Germain Seed Company, at No. 326 South Main street.

R. B. Young and Son are preparing plans for an addition and alterations to the frame school building at Fourth and Breed streets, owned by the Catholic diocese. The building will be raised and one story of reinforced concrete constructed beneath, providing four class rooms and two amusement rooms

Judson N. Davis is having plans drawn for a large three-story reinforced concrete storage warehouse to be constructed on Vermont avenue near Washington street.

A. Burnside Sturges has been commissioned to prepare plans for an eight-room brick addition to the Eleventh-street school, Long Beach.

Bender, manager of the National Trades School, No. 2212 West Seventh street. There will be three store rooms and 110 rooms in the building. Suites of two and three rooms will be provided, each with private bath, kitchen and wall beds. Foundation and first-story walls of concrete, reinforced concrete beams, brick walls above first story, pressed brick facing, plate and prism glass store fronts, fire escapes.

A. J. and D. J. Thomas have the contract at $4300 to build a two-story, eight-room frame residence on Vine street, near Larquier avenue, Hollywood, for W. M. Minter.

Architects Walker & Vawter have been commissioned to prepare plans for a frame church to be erected at Chula Vista for the Methodist congregation of that place. Cost about $10,000.

H. M. Patterson has prepared plans for a two-story frame rooming-house to be erected at Wilmington for J. E. Dawson of that city. It will contain twenty sleeping rooms, two large dining-rooms and bath. Also plans for a two-story and basement addition to the residence of E. K. Alpaugh at Sunny Slope.

J. C. Austin and W. C. Pennell are preparing plans for a one-story, twelve-room patio residence to be built at Santa Paula for Nathan Blanchard.

E. E. B. Meinardus has been instructed to prepare revised plans and specifications for a brick edifice for the German Evangelical Lutheran Trinity Church to be erected on the southwest corner of Eighteenth and Cherry streets. It will be Colonial Gothic in design, with two steeples, one 125 feet high and the other 86 feet high, each surmounted by a copper cross. The auditorium will have a seating capacity of 700 people. Vestry-room, sanctuary, pastor's study and choir-room are also provided. The entire interior will be finished in white enamel. There will be stained and art glass panels. A large pipe organ will be installed. Cost estimated between $40,000 and $45,000.

It wil contain sixty-five rooms, divided into two and three-room suites, with private baths and wall beds. Each apartment will have independent heating, hot water, electric light and gas service, so that tenants will pay only for the service they actually receive. Hot water circulating radiators, with gas burner attachment, will probably be used for heating. There will also be a refrigerator-room on each floor, with separate ice box for each apartment. On the ground floor wil be a lobby, 25x25 feet, and parlor and the basement will contain an amusement-room and billiard-room.

There will be six rooms on the main floor besides the kitchen and service quarters. On the second floor will be six bedrooms and three rooms for maids. There will be seven bathrooms, five of which will have tile floors and wainscot. Georgian design will prevail in the interior finish and decoration with painted woodwork in most of the rooms except dining-room which will have oak trim with paneled wainscot. Hardwood floors will be laid throughout.

Inyo Iron Deposits.

It is stated that representatives of one of the largest smelting syndicates in America have secured options on the extensive iron deposits at the head of Mountain Springs Canyon. In the early days of Darwin considerable quantities of this ore were used for fluxing purposes, their high grade iron content making them particularly desirable. It is understood that the new interests plan extensive developments if the deposits prove as valuable as estimated.

reservoirs and the power plants, is the siphon construction. Some progress has been made in this work, five having already been completed. Pipe siphons in Dove Springs and San Antonio canyons and concrete in Elsemere, Whitney and an unnamed canyon, are small links in the great chain.

RUSHING THE SIPHONS.

The Board of Public Works is now pushing the work on the siphons, and will adopt the bonus system for the workmen, which was used so successfully in the tunnel boring. The five largest siphons, one over a mile long, will require enough 11 foot diameter steel pipe, three-eighths of an inch thick, to make 90 trainloads and will cost the city $500,000. In prosecuting the siphon work three crews will be employed on each job in an effort to advance as rapidly as possible.

A MODEL FARM AND BUNGALOW.

AGRICULTURAL-HORTICULTURAL EXPERIMENT PLANT.

Investment Company Constructing Specimen Home in San Fernando Valley, Having Gardens and Trees and Stocked With Dairy Herd and Chickens.

A model farm costing $10,000 and intended to be a center for mutual study of local agricultural and horticultural conditions, is under construction on the Van Nuys-Lankershim properties by the Janss Investment Company, the general sales agents for the San Fernando Valley lands.

An eight-room bungalow, designed both for the comfort and use of a suburban land grower is under way. Settlers in the valley may share the comfort of this house and the welcome of its great fireplace, together with motorists who use the half-million-dollar boulevard and visitors who inspect the purchasable lands. Hospitality is to be extended to all who stop at the place.

The bungalow will be surrounded by lawns, ornamental trees, shrubs and flowers. At the rear is a garage, also barns where a small dairy herd will be kept, and chicken corrals. Fancy and utility poultry will be raised and exhibited.

Five acres will be devoted to varied fruits, berries, grains, vegetables for the house, and alfalfa. Experts will conduct this farm and show just what can be accomplished by proper management of a farm of its size. The books setting forth all expenditures, receipts and the gross and net annual profits will be open to the perusal of adjacent ranchers. The serices of experts will also be at the disposal of the inquisitive. The model farm lies along the boulevard and is convenient to the new electric car line.

RAMONA BOOMING AGAIN.

Eighty Acres Added to Tract, Original Six Hundred Acres Having Been Quickly Sold.

The announcement that eighty acres have been added to the original Ramona Acres tract by the Janss Investment Company has been productive of many purchasing demands within the last few days. Fabling and Hannigan, sales agents of the Janss company, as a result of the revived interest, disposed of the land, totaling $13,720 in value before the middle of the week.

The facts that Ramona Acres is only fifteen minutes from Los Angeles, that it commands a magnificent vista down the San Gabriel Valley, and that all improvements as well as church and educational facilities exist, brought a rapid closing out of the original 600 acres and the first annexed acres. The final eighty acres assimilated are expected to

STRUGGLING WITH A TORTUOUS AND TROUBLESOME RIVER.

Authentic Statement of Physical and Related Facts Appertaining to the Lower Colorado.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, June 8, 1911.—Herewith I send to The Times the official statement in full of physical and related facts appertaining to the Lower Colorado River, which accompanied the conference report of June 7, 1911, made to Secretary of the Interior Fisher, under authority of the President, and signed by the following members of the conference, all engineers except the last-named: F. H. Newell, chairman; W. L. Marshall, J. A. Ockerson, J. B. Lippincott, C. E. Grunsky, Harrison Gray Otis. This report was published in full in The Times on the 8th of June.

LOWER COLORADO RIVER.

ITS PHYSICAL SITUATION IN JUNE 1911.

For centuries the main flow of the Colorado River has been discharged directly into the Gulf of California, excepting only the year 1905-06, when it flowed temporarily into the depressed area in California known as the Cahullia or Salton Basin.

The Lower Colorado River has the usual characteristics of sedimentary streams, although some of the features of its regimen are accentuated, such as the percentage of sediment, the slope, the very fine material composing its bed and banks, and the extreme elevation of its delta above Salton Basin. The ratio of sediment to water is 1 to 363, while in the Mississippi River this ratio is 1 to 1500. The total annual volume of sediment amounts to 53 square miles one foot deep.

The material of the bed is so easily eroded that its elevation becomes a function of the stage, while no fixed relation between stage and volume of discharge can be traced. For instance, in June, 1904, at the Yuma gauge of 126.8, the discharge measured 50,000 second-feet, while at the same stage in December, 1908 the discharge was 12,000 second feet.

WATER MEASUREMENTS.

Records of stage have been kept continuously at Yuma since 1878. The lowest stage recorded to date was in October, 1879, when the gauge read 113.2 feet above the sea level.

The highest stage recorded was on February 26, 1891, when the gauge read 133.2 feet above the sea level. This gives the extreme range in stage at Yuma since gauge was established as twenty feet.

Regular discharge measurements were inaugurated by the United States Reclamation Service in 1903. Since that time, the lowest volume measured was on January 12, 1903, when the river carried but 2694 cubic feet per second, with gauge reading 116.8 feet.

The largest volume recorded was on June 24, 1909, when the flood reached 149,300 cubic feet per second, with gauge reading 130.7 feet.

The elevation of the low water bed at the discharge station at Yuma, on December 1, 1908, was 113.5 feet at the deepest part, while during the following great flood of 1909, the bed was scoured down to an elevation of 77.2 feet above sea level—a difference of some 36.3 feet. In this way, the stream readily adjusts itself to the volume which it is required to carry, if confined to a fixed channel.

The high water channel of the Colorado ranges from 800 to 3000 feet or more in width, and is quite shallow, while the low water channel is 500 to 1000 feet wide, and wanders over the whole range of the high water bed. The high-water bed is more or less obstructed with vegetation, which springs up in the interval betwen floods. The high-water bank, which lies along the concave side of the stream, is usually well defined and nearly vertical, 6 to 8 feet in height. The opposite bank is often quite indefinite.

The trees along the banks are in many cases buried in the deposits for several feet in depth, and the roots of smaller growth also extend well down. The upper adobe soil, from two to six feet thick, or sometimes even more, is filled with cracks, through which water readily finds its way.

No coarse sand or gravel is found on the low-water bars, which are composed very largely of fine silt.

The Colorado River for a distance of about twenty miles, beginning at a point about eight miles below Yuma, forms the boundary between the United States and Mexico. Its navigability was recognized in both the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo in 1848 and in the treaty with Mexico of 1853. Under the former neither country is to permit the execution of any works throughout that portion of the river which is common boundary that would interfere with the river's navigability. Under the latter treaty the free and uninterrupted passage of vessels and citizens of the United States is guaranteed through the river.

The navigation interests on the Colorado River below Yuma have been of no practical importance since the completion of the Southern Pacific Railroad to the river at Yuma in 1877.

THE RIVER DELTA.

The apex of the river delta is at Pilot Knob, about seven miles below Yuma. From an elevation of about 120 feet near this point the land slopes away toward the south, southwest and west. The fall of the country southerly is about two feet per mile in the general direction of the original course of the Colorado River. Toward Volcano Lake it is over 2.5 feet per mile for a distance of about thirty miles. Westerly along the general direction of the Alamo River (now the Imperial Canal) it averages over 2.6 feet for a distance of twenty miles, increasing gradually to about 5 feet per mile; thence northerly into the depressed area of Imperial Valley.

The fall from the river toward the high mesa at the easterly limit of the river's delta lands is about 3 feet per mile. The average flood slope of the Colorado River from Yuma to the head of tidewater, in a distance of eighty miles, is 1.6 feet.

The delta lands of the river form a barrier between the Gulf of California and the Salton Basin, closing against the base of the Cocopah Mountains at Volcano Lake, the rim of which has an elevation of about thirty-four feet, and the bed of which is about 17.5 feet above sea level.

The northerly rim of Volcano Lake is cut by the channel of New River, which is one of the outlets of the lake. The principal outlet is to the south through Hardy's Colorado.

The lowest points of the flat saddle at the north of Volcano Lake have the same general elevation as the rim of the lake, about 34 feet.

It is known from the observations of Dr. Wm. P. Blake, geologist, who was with the exploring parties seeking a railroad route to the Pacific Coast (in 1853) that preceding the middle of the last century the Colorado River at high stages repeatedly sent part of its flow over-bank at and near Pilot Knob, and that this water found its way in part to the Alamo River, in which it flowed into the Salton Basin.

It is known that in recent years overbank flow in large volume has taken place repeatedly at many points along the river's course and that such overbank flow has found its way to the various delta channels of the river. Some of this flow, as stated, reached Alamo River, some went by way of the Paredones River and Bayou Saiz, and also from branches of the Pescadero into the Volcano lake region, and thence into the New River toward the north, and into Hardy's Colorado toward the south. Some escaping from the river lower down, is carried by the Abejas River, and other feeders into the Pescadero and thence to Hardy's Colorado, and also into Volcano Lake at its southerly end.

READY TO DROP.

For a half century or more the Colorado River has been ready to drop from the ridge on which it is at present (partially) flowing, and in such event might have taken a course either westerly and northerly into Salton Basin, or southwesterly toward the southerly end of Volcano Lake.

This tendency of the Colorado River to change its course has been strongly resisted by nature, which has interposed obstacles to the erosion of pronounced channels away from the river during the limited annual overbank stage of the river. The annual inundations have resulted in promoting a dense growth of vegetation on the unusually fertile soils of the delta, particularly in and along the depressions which led away from the river bank, and which by reason of being slightly depressed areas, were the most regularly moistened portions of the delta areas. Low places under natural conditions, for some miles away from the river, were therefore covered with rank vegetation, notably with dense growths of arrow weed, wild hemp, willows and cottonweeds. A little more remote from the stream were mesquite thickets, and areas of higher ground occasionally inundated were covered with quelite and other plants. While large volumes of water could pass sluggishly through such dense bank-land vegetation the river found no opportunity to concentrate its overbank flow and to actually make the change of its course, as it readily did in 1905, when aided by a small artificial cut.

DRIFT DANGERS.

The river carries a large amount of drift. Where water becomes shoal, or where the flow is over ground covered with standing brush and trees, the drift lodges, log jams become serious obstructions to the free flow of water, and frequently are potent factors in choking up the high-water outlets of the stream.

The lower part of the Paredones was thus choked off during 1906. The river now flowing down the Abejas, is reported to spread out over mud flats on which the drift is accumulating several miles below the point, about twelve miles easterly from the northerly end of Volcano Lake, known as Campo Lino.

The height of land which separates the Gulf of California drainage basin from Salton Basin is not a pronounced ridge. It is a very flat area with some depressed places such as Laguna Nida, lying generally between the slightly higher bank lands of the delta channels, such as the feeders of the Pescadero, Bayou Sias next south of the Paredones, and the Paredones itself.

The surveys made under Mr. Ockerson's direction in 1910, and the surveys made at various times for a levee down the slope of the delta cone to the northward of Volcano Lake, indicate clearly that the ground's surface has a decided slope away from the Colorado River. At points near the south boundary line of Arizona this slope westerly away from the river may be noted at about three feet per mile.

EASTERN LEVEE.

On the east or left bank of the Colorado, there is a levee extending from Yuma to the south boundary line of Arizona, a distance of about twenty-five miles. This was constructed by the United States Reclamation Service as a part of the works of the Yuma project. On the opposite bank the levees constructed in 1906-07, in connection with the closure of the breaks from the Colorado to the Alamo extend southerly from Pilot Knob, paralleling the east bank levee for about seven miles; thence swinging off obliquely away from the river. Below Pilot Knob these levees are about 1500 feet apart.

After the flood of 1910 the left bank levee was breached by bank erosion at a point about twelve miles below Yuma. The record for stability will, however, compare favorably with similar structures on more stable streams, particularly when the close proximity of the levees to the river is taken into account.

One method of flood control, which has been carried out in a measure by the California Development Company, is the construction of a line of levees, which turns back from the river at a point about six miles below the international boundary line, and runs in a southwesterly direction. This levee is finished to a height of five feet above high water for a distance of fourteen miles. It is covered with gravel, and carries a railroad track upon it.

From the end of this levee there is an incomplete line of levee for a distance of about eleven miles farther. This levee was constructed in the spring of 1910, and it is deficient in both height and section.

There is a gap of ten miles to the west end of the Volcano Lake levee, which is about seven miles in length, and terminates at the high ground west of Volcano Lake. This latter levee is also too low to meet emergencies that might occur at any flood stage of the river. Where this levee crosses New River, flood gates with concrete abutments are provided, but have been rendered useless by a levee loop constructed around them by order of the Mexican government.

Had natural conditions remained undisturbed, it seems probable that the Colorado River for many years longer would have continued to flow directly to the Gulf of California.

The opportunity for the river to swing off to the west from its ridge was presented in 1905, when an open dredger cut, made under the concession given by the Mexican government to the Sociedad de Riego y Terrence da la Baja California (also known as the Sociedad de Yrrigacion y Terrence de la Baja California) was gradually enlarged by erosion, until in November and December of that year it was suddenly torn out to almost the full flood capacity of the river.

This cut had been made from the river to the Imperial canal at a point about four and one-half miles below the boundary line between California and Mexico. Its original length was about 3300 feet. All attempts to prevent the enlargement of this cut, which became an alarming feature during the river's high stage in the summer of 1905, had failed.

During the high-water period of the year 1906 the outpouring of the flood-flow of the Colorado River into the Alamo and New River country caused a submersion of large areas in Lower California and in Imperial Valley. Towns and adjacent large agricultural areas in Imperial Valley were seriously menaced by the rising flood. Very soon, however, the flow of the water in the depression known as New River extended the New River barranca upstream to and above Calexico, gullying out a gorge which was in some places a quarter of a mile wide and generally forty to eight feet in depth.

The upper end of the barranca is now about six miles south of the international boundary.

The course of the flood westerly from the Alamo to the New River in Lower California is marked by extensive erosions in the nature of channels, and by water holes along the line of the former Beltran and Garza sloughs, extending southerly for about three miles from the Alamo, near Alamo Mocho, to near what is now known as Cocopah on the Inter-California Railroad, and thence westward in a network of irregular channels toward New River at and above Pasqualito Bend.

DEVELOPMENT COMPANY AND MEXICO.

Before the fact was generally recognized that the Colorado River was about to make a change in its point of outfall by turning westerly into the Alamo, the California Development Company found itself in financial difficulties and had solicited a loan from the Southern Pacific Company. This loan was made, but with the understanding that the Southern Pacific was to have control of the expenditure of the money loaned, it being proposed as the first thing to be done to close the Lower Mexican heading, which had at that time, about June, 1905, not yet assumed the character of the main river channel.

As the location of the heading to be closed was in Mexico, it was arranged that all work done there should be in charge of the Mexican corporation, the Sociedad de Riego y Terrenos de la Baja California. After several futile attempts in the fall of 1905 to turn the river away from the lower Mexican heading, carefully considered preparations were made to close this heading during the low stage of the river following the 1906 high water.

This engineering feat of unusual magnitude and difficulty was accomplished at a cost claimed by the Southern Pacific Comany to have been about $1,500,000. Early in November 1906, the river had been put back into its proper channel. The engineer in charge of this work was Mr. H. T. Cory, who was operating under the immediate direction of Mr. Epes Randolph, who represented the Southern Pacific Company's interests. But about a month after the break through the river bank had been closed on Dec. 7th, 1906, an unusual high stage of the Colorado found a weak spot under the levee which had been constructed southward from the closure, and a few days thereafter the entire river was again flowing through a second break to the Alamo.

For a review of the situation at that time, reference should be had to the correspondence betwen the President and Mr. E. H. Harriman of the Southern Pacific Company, and other papers, as set forth in the President's message of January 12, 1907. This message, together with much information relating to the work done thereafter in turning the river a second time back into its proper course, will be found in the published account of the "Southern Pacific Imperial Valley Claim 'hearing' before a subcommittee of the Committee on Claims of the United States Senate, on S. 4170, Thursday, January 21, 1909."

The second break to the Alamo was successfully closed in February, 1907. The actual conduct of the work was again in charge of Mr. Cory, nominally acting as an employee and representative of the Mexican Irrigation Company, but really operating with funds advanced by the Southern Pacific Company through Mr. Epes Randolph, as agent of that company.

Because the work was located in Mexico it was necessary to thus operate through a Mexican concern.

IMPERIAL CANAL.

The Imperial Canal is a water diversion for irrigation from Colorado River in California. Its course is southerly from California into Mexico, paralleling Colorado River for a distance of about five miles; thence it swings westerly, lying at the southerly base of Pilot Knob, and of the sand hills southwesterly from Pilot Knob, reaching a greatest distance of about nine miles south of the boundary line, and again approaching to within a mile of the boundary in the fifty-third mile of its course, measured from the present concrete headgate at Pilot Knob.

The canal in California is owned by the California Development Company, a corporation organized under the laws of New Jersey on April 24, 1896. This company is the successor in interest to an earlier concern, the Colorado River Irrigation Company, which had failed for lack of adequate financial backing. The posting of a notice of the filing of a claim to a water right for the canal was made under the laws of California by C. N. Perry under date of April 25, 1899. This notice specified 10,000 second feet of water and was posted about one and one-quarter miles above the California boundary line.

A canal was constructed with its head about one hundred yards above the boundary line, and was connected with a canal constructed on Mexican territory, south of the boundary line, by the Mexican Irrigation Company, already named, all of whose stock was at that time owned or controlled by the California Development Company.

NEW RIVER COUNTRY.

It is understood that at that time no right had been granted by the Mexican government to conduct water through Mexico for use in whole or in part in California. To obviate the necessity of such a concession, the canal from the California line near the river was excavated across lands owned by the Mexican Irrigation Company, and was turned loose in the channel of the Alamo, in which the main flow, in part through lagoons and through thickets of mesquite, was to the lower Alamo and into what was formerly known as the new river country in California, now Imperial Valley.

Cuts were made through swamps and thickets where more channel capacity was desirable, and gradually the canal became a continuous open waterway.

After a few years, successful operations in Imperial Valley resulted in demands for water that exceeded the canal capacity. The head of the canal showed a tendency to fill up with silt. An open cut was made around the gate and later filled again.

In 1904, the California Development Company appealed to Congress for a recognition of its claim to water for irrigation from Colorado River. Nominally the Colorado River was recognized as a navigable stream, and there were, in fact, steamboats upon the river. Failing to get Congressional recognition of any rights to divert water from the river, a request was made to have the river declared non-navigable, and the matter was referred to the Engineer Corps of the United States army.

About the same time, the California Development Company, through its subsidiary Mexican corporation, applied to Mexico for a concession of water from the Colorado River, and, subject to certain conditions and restrictions, the right was granted to the Mexican corporation in June, 1904, to carry water diverted from the river in California through Mexico, and also to make a diversion from the river upon Mexican territory to the amount of 10,000 second-feet. The principal condition imposed was that as much of this water as might be required, not to exceed one-half thereof, should be held available for use on lands in Mexico.

Under this Mexican concession, a cut was made from the river to the canal at (just below) the California boundary line, but did not prove adequate to relieve the shortage of water in the canal. A second cut was made in October, 1904, about four and one-half miles farther down stream, and it was this cut which was thereafter enlarged and became for a short time, as already described, the main channel of the river.

The dam which was constructed across the Lower Mexican heading in the fall of 1906 is known as the Hind dam. This dam was not seriously damaged by the second break in December, 1906, and is still in service.

THE CLARKE DAM.

The work done along the Colorado subsequent to the second break, and prior to the time that the river broke over into the Abejas, includes a dam known as the Clarke dam, built of rock, gravel and earth, across the second break in the river bank; the completion of the Hind dam across the first break; a levee or rather the completion of a levee paralleling the river from a point at Pilot Knob near the international boundary downstream to the dam across the first break; the completion of a levee about 10.25 miles in length downstream from the Clarke dam, paralleling the river for three miles, thence swinging obliquely away from the river; a spur levee 8317 feet long, extending in a southwesterly direction from the south end of the Clarke dam; the completion of a secondary levee along the Imperial Canal from the concrete headgate in California to the lower heading; the construction of a number of cross levees from the main to secondary levee and from the main levee inland, and a system of tracks on levees and dams, and in the quarry at Pilot Knob.

To these works, which were constructed in connection with the closure of the second break; there were subsequently added an extension of the levee about ten miles farther toward Volcano Lake, and a levee about eight miles long from the base of Cerro Prieto in a northeasterly direction, located about a mile north of Volcano Lake. This last embankment closes New River and is intended to prevent Volcano Lake from overflowing toward the north into the New River country.

During the time that the river was making its change in 1905-06 from a course to the gulf to a course inland, there was some channel deterioration below the point where the old channel was abandoned, and for a year the lower delta areas were comparatively dry. When, therefore, the river was in flood in 1907, with more than its ordinary summer flow, an unusual proportion of the water found its way over-bank into the feeders of Pescadero River and other channels nearer the gulf. There was less than the ordinary amount of vegetation to check the flow of this water, with the result that pronounced channel erosion took place, notably in some of the feeders of Pescadero River and in the Abejas, and by 1908 it had become apparent that one of these high water channels would be cut back to the river. This happened in 1909.

THE ABEJAS.

The Abejas, which had been known for many years as a high water outlet, was enlarged by the outgoing water to full river dimensions, and the entire low water flow and most of the high water took a course westerly and southwesterly toward Volcano Lake and toward Hardy's, Colorado.

The break is in the right bank about twenty miles by river below the California-Mexican boundary line, and the water flowing through this channel finds its way down the Pescadero through Volcano Lake and the Hardy, thence to the junction of the Hardy with the Colorado. In its passage to the Hardy the silt is practically all eliminated, and this deposit is rapidly raising the foot of the steep slope with the result that a slope line may be developed not greatly in excess of the normal stream. During the summer of 1910 a shortage of water in the Imperial Canal developed, and this was attributed to the lowering of the bed of the river in consequence of the Abejas break. To remedy this difficulty and protect Imperial Valley from damage by floods, the following joint resolution of Congress, approved June 25, 1910, was passed:

"That the sum of $1,000,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury, not otherwise appropriated, to be expended by the President, for the purpose of protecting the lands and property in the Imperial Valley and elsewhere along the Colorado River within the limits of the United States: and the President is authorized to expend any portion of such money within the limits of the Republic of Mexico as he may deem proper in accordance with such agreements for the purpose as he may make with the Republic of Mexico."

An investigation of the conditions at the head of the Imperial Canal was made, under instructions from the Secretary of the Interior, by J. A. Ockerson, and it was definitely ascertained that the shortage of water was due mainly to the silting up of both the intake and the canal. Mr. Ockerson says:

OCKERSON'S REPORT.

"Two courses were open to remedy these defects. With proper appliances, the simplest plan would have been to dredge out the intake. Indeed, this should have been done immediately after the passage of the summer flood, and in all probability a disastrous shortage of water would have been averted. Or, the water could be raised to such an extent by means of a submerged dam, just below the intake, as to fill the canal without dredging.

"It seems that 1200 to 1800 second-feet are necessary to satisfy the demands of the area now under cultivation and to meet the requirements of the large herds of stock and for domestic use, as these are wholly dependent on the canal for their entire supply, as there are no wells; neither are there any storage tanks for use in tiding over an emergency, such as might come from a break in the canal, that would cut off the entire water supply for a time, and cause great suffering to the people and to live stock.

"In the latter part of July, the volume passing the head gates had dropped down to 746 second-feet, and the conditions became alarming. Only 395 second-feet reached Imperial Valley.

"The California Development Company secured a dredge with which to clear out the deposits in the intake, and also took steps to build a submerged dam, on which work was begun July 22. By August 23 a trestle was completed across the river, and rock dumped therein had raised the water surface two feet, and the water in the intake stood above the tops of the head gates, giving a flow down the canal of 1700 second-feet."

The Abejas is now an open, well-defined channel at least to a point some miles below Campo Lino, but its character below that point is not known with certainty. It is reported that between Campo Lino and Volcano Lake the water spreads out over broad mud deposits, and that the Abejas loses the character of a well-defined channel. Such a condition is recognized as possible, and it may be some years before the water will take a clearly defined route to an outfall either into the Volcano Lake or into the Hardy's Colorado.

LAKE FILLED.

The water delivered inland by the Abejas into the region of Volcano Lake far exceeds the amount that reached the lake under former conditions. Consequently the lake is filled by the river's summer flow to higher stages than formerly.

The levee at the north of the lake and the dam across New River prevent this water from flowing north into the Imperial Valley.

HERMOSA BEACH

Answers All Questions

IS HERMOSA BEACH SOME NEW PLACE?

Yes and no. HERMOSA BEACH is about seven years old. It is a highly developed and highly improved Beach-town with something like five hundred dwellings, stores, etc., a town with over 12 miles of asphalted streets, cement sidewalks, etc., yet a town that affords splendid investment opportunity, because prices have not been boomed up out-of-sight; There IS room, splendid room for NEW INVESTMENT.

DOES HERMOSA BEACH COMPARE FAVORABLY?

It has more miles of improved streets than any other town of its size in the country. It has a septic sewer-system. seven years in perfect operation, that prevents any deleterious matter from flowing into the Ocean. It has the most perfect drinking water in the State, by chemical analysis. It has just decided to build an up-to-date Ocean-walk over two miles long. It is a strictly up-to-date beach-home-town, but not a whooping-hurray beach-resort.

HAS HERMOSA BEACH NATURAL ADVANTAGES?

HERMOSA BEACH is just north of Redondo, on the Pacific Electric Railway, as well as on the Santa Fe. It's an easy, pleasant, quick trip from Los Angeles. It is so beautifully located bordering on a crescent-shaped beach and lying back against a gentle slope, that it could well rest on its oars, but it has added bountifully to what bountiful Nature has done for it, until it is one of the really prettiest Western towns. Come and see it.

WILL HERMOSA BEACH BE POPULAR?

If getting rich on investment will make buyers like a place, Yes. If the very choicest of neighbors will do it, Yes. If a beach that has never had a death from bathing, is popular, Yes. If cleanliness means anything in bathing, Yes. If health is a necessary attribute of satisfaction, Yes. If the right price and right terms on Real Estate stands for anything, Yes. If a progressive city-government helps, then again—Yes.

Any depression of the river bed throughout that part of the Colorado River from Pilot Knob southerly to the south boundary line of Arizona will be of direct benefit to the protection works which now prevent the river from going down the Alamo into Salton Basin. The greatest menace to these works, under conditions as they have prevailed since they were completed, is the unstable river bank. The menace becomes small if the flood stages can be kept below bank heights; it increases rapidly as flood depth on the river bank is increased.

The advantage which results from a depression of water surface, particularly at flood stage in that part of the Colorado River for some miles below Pilot Knob, is in some measure offset by the increased difficulty of supplying an adequate flow of water to Imperial Canal; also, by the increased difficulty of supplying water to lands now irrigated mainly by pumping in Arizona below Yuma; also, by the resulting menace to the stability of the Laguna Dam.

PROJECT OF 1910.

Surveys covering some thirty-five miles of the Colorado River, above and below the break, and also several miles of the Abejas River, were made in August and September, 1910, under Mr. Ockerson's direction.

An examination was also made of the Volcano Lake region, New River, Alamo and Hardy rivers, extending down the latter river to its junction with the Colorado.

As a result of these investigations, and a careful study of the physical situation, a project was developed providing for the closure of the Abejas River by means of a rock fill dam to divert the water to the Colorado, and about twenty-five miles of levee along the west bank of the Colorado River about 3000 feet from its westerly bends.

This project was approved by the President, the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner appointed by the Mexican government to pass on the work.

As the projected work is located in Mexican territory, it became necessary to secure the consent of the Mexican government before active operations could begin. As finally agreed upon, the terms provided that the work should be done by a Mexican corporation, and the Colorado River Land Company, owners of the land on which the proposed improvement is located, agreed to the use of its charter rights and powers to carry out the project, the cost thereof to be met by the United States.

While the project was submitted to the Secretary of the Interior on October 4, 1910, with a view to completing the works before the advent of high water, the diplomatic agreement was not consummated until early in January, 1911.

By this time the lower-water season had passed, and it was fully realized that the prosecution of the work in the face of inevitable flood conditions would greatly increase the difficulty of closing the Abejas, and failure to divert the water to the Colorado was more than probable.

It will be seen that the conference report sustains Engineer Ockerson, substantially, commending the river work done heretofore under his direction. The report was approved by the President, who has recommended to Congress a further appropriation of $1,000,000 to continue the work of trying to arrest the runaway Rio Colorado of the West.

The problem was further complicated by the political situation, the scene of operations being under the control of insurrectos, whose presence seriously disturbed labor conditions, alarmed the contractors on levee work, who suffered substantial losses of stock, equipment and subsistence stores through their depredations, and repeatedly interfered with the train service engaged in delivering rock to the Abejas dam.

THE WORK.

Active work was begun early in January, 1911, or as soon as diplomatic arrangements were concluded. Some seven and one-half miles of railway were built from a point on the railway line of the California Development Company fifteen miles below Hanlon's Heading to the Abejas River. The levee line was constructed some 24.6 miles long, beginning eleven miles below Hanlon's Heading, thence extending southward along the west bank of the Colorado River at a distance of about 3000 feet from the westerly bends, and terminating at a point about twenty miles above tide water.

The construction of the levee required some 613 acres of clearing and grubbing, and 1,277,984 cubic yards of earth work, 1300 men and 2100 animals were employed. The work was completed April 1, 1911, at a total cost of $432,434.76. The customs duties, payment of which are still pending, estimated at $20,000, should be added to above cost if not remitted.

The construction of the dam across the Abejas River was begun on January 21, 1911, when the track laying reached the river and the last bent of the trestle was driven on February 1, and the bed of the stream was blanketed with rock by February 5.

The equipment of cars, locomotives, steam shovels and pile drivers used was hired from the Southern Pacific Railway Company, with the exception of two small steam shovels and some minor equipment which were borrowed from the United States Reclamation Service.

FLOOD DAMAGE.

A succession of moderate floods resulted in several breaks as the work progressed, and greatly increased the cost of closure, but the dam, some 1500 feet long, and a top width of 20 feet, was finally completed on May 15, 1911. In fact, all of the projected work was completed as planned, except the levee protection.

The natural banks of the Abejas, at the south end of the dam, have an elevation of eighty-five feet above sea level, and as the project was based on the supposition that the closure would be made at low water, it was expected that the diversion into the Colorado would be made without overtopping the banks.

The water did flow down the Colorado for several weeks, but erosion of the bed did not keep pace with the increasing volume, and the water impounded by the dam rose to such height as to overflow the banks, and, following down along the new unpro-

STRUGGLING WITH A TORTUOUS AND TROUBLESOME RIVER.

Authentic Statement of Physical and Related Facts Appertaining to the Lower Colorado.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, June 8, 1911.—Herewith I send to The Times the official statement in full of physical and related facts appertaining to the Lower Colorado River, which accompanied the conference report of June 7, 1911, made to Secretary of the Interior Fisher, under authority of the President, and signed by the following members of the conference, all engineers except the last-named: F. H. Newell, chairman; W. L. Marshall, J. A. Ockerson, J. B. Lippincott, C. E. Grunsky, Harrison Gray Otis. This report was published in full in The Times on the 8th of June.

LOWER COLORADO RIVER.

ITS PHYSICAL SITUATION IN JUNE 1911.

For centuries the main flow of the Colorado River has been discharged directly into the Gulf of California, excepting only the year 1905-06, when it flowed temporarily into the depressed area in California known as the Cahuilla or Salton Basin.

The Lower Colorado River has the usual characteristics of sedimentary streams, although some of the features of its regimen are accentuated, such as the percentage of sediment, the slope, the very fine material composing its bed and banks, and the extreme elevation of its delta above Salton Basin. The ratio of sediment to water is 1 to 363, while in the Mississippi River this ratio is 1 to 1500. The total annual volume of sediment amounts to 53 square miles one foot deep.

The material of the bed is so easily eroded that its elevation becomes a function of the stage, while no fixed relation between stage and volume of discharge can be traced. For instance, in June, 1904, at the Yuma gauge of 126.8, the discharge measured 50,000 second-feet, while at the same stage in December, 1908 the discharge was 12,000 second feet.

WATER MEASUREMENTS.

Records of stage have been kept continuously at Yuma since 1878. The lowest stage recorded to date was in October, 1879, when the gauge read 113.2 feet above the sea level.

The highest stage recorded was on Febraury 26, 1891, when the gauge read 133.2 feet above the sea level. This gives the extreme range in stage at Yuma since gauge was established as twenty feet.

Regular discharge measurements were inaugurated by the United States Reclamation Service in 1903. Since that time, the lowest volume measured was on January 12, 1903, when the river carried but 2694 cubic feet per second, with gauge reading 114.8 feet.

The largest volume recorded was on June 24, 1909, when the flood reached 149,500 cubic feet per second, with gauge reading 130.7 feet.

The elevation of the low water bed at the discharge station at Yuma, on December 1, 1908, was 113.5 feet at the deepest part, while during the following great flood of 1909, the bed was scoured down to an elevation of 77.2 feet above sea level—a difference of some 36.3 feet. In this way, the stream readily adjusts itself to the volume which it is required to carry, if confined to a fixed channel.

The high water channel of the Colorado ranges from 800 to 3000 feet or more in width, and is quite shallow, while the low water channel is 500 to 1000 feet wide, and wanders over the whole range of the high water bed. The high-water bed is more or less obstructed with vegetation, which springs up in the interval betwen floods. The high-water bank, which lies along the concave side of the stream, is usually well defined and nearly vertical, 6 to 8 feet in height. The opposite bank is often quite indefinite.

The trees along the banks are in many cases buried in the deposits for several feet in depth, and the roots of smaller growth also extend well down. The upper adobe soil, from two to six feet thick, or sometimes even more, is filled with cracks, through which water readily finds its way.

No coarse sand or gravel is found on the low-water bars, which are composed very largely of fine silt.

The Colorado River for a distance of about twenty miles, beginning at a point about eight miles below Yuma, forms the boundary between the United States and Mexico. Its navigability was recognized in both the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo in 1848 and in the treaty with Mexico of 1853. Under the former neither country is to permit the execution of any works throughout that portion of the river which is common boundary that would interfere with the river's navigability. Under the latter treaty the free and uninterrupted passage of vessels and citizens of the United States is guaranteed through the river.

The navigation interests on the Colorado River below Yuma have been of no practical importance since the completion of the Southern Pacific Railroad to the river at Yuma in 1877.

THE RIVER DELTA.

The apex of the river delta is at Pilot Knob, about seven miles below Yuma. From an elevation of about 120 feet near this point the land slopes away toward the south, southwest and west. The fall of the country southerly is about two feet per mile in the general direction of the original course of the Colorado River. Toward Volcano Lake it is over 2.5 feet per mile for a distance of about thirty miles. Westerly along the general direction of the Alamo River (now the Imperial Canal) it averages over 3.6 feet for a distance of twenty miles, increasing gradually to about 5 feet per mile; thence northerly into the depressed area of Imperial Valley.

The fall from the river toward the high mesa at the easterly limit of the river's delta lands is about 2 feet per mile. The average flood slope of the Colorado River from Yuma to the head of tidewater, in a distance of eighty miles, is 1.6 feet.

The delta lands of the river form a barrier between the Gulf of California and the Salton Basin, closing against the base of the Cocopah Mountains at Volcano Lake, the rim of which has an elevation of about thirty-four feet, and the bed of which is about 17.5 feet above sea level.

The northerly rim of Volcano Lake is cut by the channel of New River, which is one of the outlets of the lake. The principal outlet is to the south through Hardy's Colorado.

The lowest points of the flat saddle at the north of Volcano Lake have the same general elevation as the rim of the lake, about 34 feet.

It is known from the observations of Mr. Wm. P. Blake, geologist, who was with the exploring parties seeking a railroad route to the Pacific Coast (in 1853) that preceding the middle of the last century the Colorado River at high stages repeatedly sent part of its flow over-bank at and near Pilot Knob, and that this water found its way in part to the Alamo River, in which it flowed into the Salton Basin.

It is known that in recent years overbank flow in large volume has taken place repeatedly at many points along the river's course and that such overbank flow has found its way to the various delta channels of the river. Some of this flow, as stated, reached Alamo River, some went by way of the Paredones River and Bayou Saiz, and also from branches of the Pescadero into the Volcano lake region, and thence into the New River toward the north, and into Hardy's Colorado toward the south. Some escaping from the river lower down, is carried by the Abejas River, and other feeders into the Pescadero and thence to Hardy's Colorado, and also into Volcano Lake at its southerly end.

READY TO DROP.

For a half century or more the Colorado River has been ready to drop from the ridge on which it is at present (partially) flowing, and in such event might have taken a course either westerly and northerly into Salton Basin, or southwesterly toward the southerly end of Volcano Lake.

This tendency of the Colorado River to change its course has been strongly resisted by nature, which has interposed obstacles to the erosion of pronounced channels away from the river during the limited annual overbank stage of the river. The annual inundations have resulted in promoting a dense growth of vegetation on the unusually fertile soils of the delta, particularly in and along the depressions which led away from the river bank, and which by reason of being slightly depressed areas, were the most regularly moistened portions of the delta areas. Low places under natural conditions, for some miles away from the river, were therefore covered with rank vegetation, notably with dense growths of arrow weed, wild hemp, willows and cottonweeds. A little more remote from the stream were mesquite thickets, and areas of higher ground occasionally inundated were covered with quelite and other plants. While large volumes of water could pass sluggishly through such dense 'bank-land vegetation the river found no opportunity to concentrate its overbank flow and to actually make the change of its course, as it readily did in 1905, when aided by a small artificial cut.

DRIFT DANGERS.

The river carries a large amount of drift. Where water becomes shoal, or where the flow is over ground covered with standing brush and trees, the drift lodges, log jams become serious obstructions to the free flow of water, and frequently are potent factors in choking up the high-water outlets of the stream.

The lower part of the Paredones was thus choked off during 1906. The river now flowing down the Abejas, is reported to spread out over mud flats on which the drift is accumulating several miles below the point, about twelve miles easterly from the northerly end of Volcano Lake, known as Campo Lino.

The height of land which separates the Gulf of California drainage basin from Salton Basin is not a pronounced ridge. It is a very flat area with some depressed places such as Laguna Nida, lying generally between the slightly higher bank lands of the delta channels, such as the feeders of the Pescadero, Bayou Sias next south of the Paredones, and the Paredones itself.

The surveys made under Mr. Ockerson's direction in 1910, and the surveys made at various times for a levee down the slope of the delta cone to the northward of Volcano Lake, indicate clearly that the ground's surface has a decided slope away from the Colorado River. At points near the south boundary line of Arizona this slope westerly away from the river may be noted at about three feet per mile.

EASTERN LEVEE.

On the east or left bank of the Colorado, there is a levee extending from Yuma to the south boundary line of Arizona, a distance of about twenty-five miles. This was constructed by the United States Reclamation Service as a part of the works of the Yuma project. On the opposite bank the levees constructed in 1906-07, in connection with the closure of the breaks from the Colorado to the Alamo extend southerly from Pilot Knob, paralleling the east bank levee for about seven miles; thence swinging off obliquely away from the river. Below Pilot Knob these levees are about 1500 feet apart.

After the flood of 1910 the left bank levee was breached by bank erosion at a point about twelve miles below Yuma. The record for stability will, however, compare favorably with similar structures on more stable streams, particularly when the close proximity of the levees to the river is taken into account.

One method of flood control, which has been carried out in a measure by the California Development Company, is the construction of a line of levees, which turns back from the river at a point about six miles below the international boundary line, and runs in a southwesterly direction. This levee is finished to a height of five feet above high water for a distance of fourteen miles. It is covered with gravel, and carries a railroad track upon it.

From the end of this levee there is an incomplete line of levees for a distance of about eleven miles farther. This levee was constructed in the spring of 1910, and it is deficient in both height and section.

There is a gap of ten miles to the west end of the Volcano Lake levee, which is about seven miles in length, and terminates at the high ground west of Volcano Lake. This latter levee is also too low to meet emergencies that might occur at any flood stage of the river. Where this levee crosses New River, flood gates with concrete abutments are provided, but have been rendered useless by a levee loop constructed around them by order of the Mexican government.

Had natural conditions remained undisturbed, it seems probable that the Colorado River for many years longer would have continued to flow directly to the Gulf of California.

The opportunity for the river to swing off to the west from its ridge was presented in 1905, when an open dredger cut, made under the concession given by the Mexican government to the Sociedad de Riego y Terrence da la Baja California (also known as the Sociedad de Yrrigacion y Terrence de la Baja California) was gradually enlarged by erosion, until in November and December of that year it was suddenly torn out to almost the full flood capacity of the river.

This cut had been made from the river to the Imperial canal at a point about four and one-half miles below the boundary line between California and Mexico. Its original length was about 3300 feet. All attempts to prevent the enlargement of this cut, which became an alarming feature during the river's high stage in the summer of 1905, had failed.

During the high-water period of the year 1906 the outpouring of the floodflow of the Colorado River into the Alamo and New River country caused a submersion of large areas in Lower California and in Imperial Valley. Towns and adjacent large agricultural areas in Imperial Valley were seriously menaced by the rising flood. Very soon, however, the flow of the water in the depression known as New River extended the New River barranca upstream to and above Calexico, gullying out a gorge which was in some places a quarter of a mile wide and generally forty to eight feet in depth.

The upper end of the barranca is now about six miles south of the international boundary.

The course of the flood westerly from the Alamo to the New River in Lower California is marked by extensive erosions in the nature of channels, and by water holes along the line of the former Beltran and Garza sloughs, extending southerly for about three miles from the Alamo, near Alamo Mocho, to near what is now known as Cocopah on the Inter-California Railroad, and thence westward in a network of irregular channels toward New River at and above Pasqualito Bend.

DEVELOPMENT COMPANY AND MEXICO.

Before the fact was generally recognized that the Colorado River was about to make a change in its point of outfall by turning westerly into the Alamo, the California Development Company found itself in financial difficulties and had solicited a loan from the Southern Pacific Company. This loan was made, but with the understanding that the Southern Pacific was to have control of the expenditure of the money loaned, it being proposed as the first thing to be done to close the Lower Mexican heading, which had at that time, about June, 1905, not yet assumed the character of the main river channel.

As the location of the heading to be closed was in Mexico, it was arranged that all work done there should be in charge of the Mexican corporation, the Sociedad de Riego y Terrenos de la Baja California. After several futile attempts in the fall of 1905 to turn the river away from the lower Mexican heading, carefully considered preparations were made to close this heading during the low stage of the river following the 1906 high water.

This engineering feat of unusual magnitude and difficulty was accomplished at a cost claimed by the Southern Pacific Comany to have been about $1,500,000. Early in November 1906, the river had been put back into its proper channel. The engineer in charge of this work was Mr. H. T. Cory, who was operating under the immediate direction of Mr. Epes Randolph, who represented the Southern Pacific Company's interests. But about a month after the break through the river bank had been closed on Dec. 7th, 1906, an unusual high stage of the Colorado found a weak spot under the levee which had been constructed southward from the closure, and a few days thereafter the entire river was again flowing through a second break to the Alamo.

For a review of the situation at that time, reference should be had to the correspondence betwen the President and Mr. E. H. Harriman of the Southern Pacific Company, and other papers, as set forth in the President's message of January 12, 1907. This message, together with much information relating to the work done thereafter in turning the river a second time back into its proper course, will be found in the published account of the "Southern Pacific Imperial Valley Claim 'hearing' before a subcommittee of the Committee on Claims of the United States Senate, on S. 4170, Thursday, January 21, 1909."

The second break to the Alamo was successfully closed in February, 1907. The actual conduct of the work was again in charge of Mr. Cory, nominally acting as an employee and representative of the Mexican Irrigation Company, but really operating with funds advanced by the Southern Pacific Company through Mr. Epes Randolph, as agent of that company.

Because the work was located in Mexico it was necessary to thus operate through a Mexican concern.

IMPERIAL CANAL.

The Imperial Canal is a water diversion for irrigation from Colorado River in California. Its course is southerly from California into Mexico, paralleling Colorado River for a distance of about five miles; thence it swings westerly, lying at the southerly base of Pilot Knob, and of the sand hills southwesterly from Pilot Knob, reaching a greatest distance of about nine miles south of the boundary line, and again approaching to within a mile of the boundary in the fifty-third mile of its course, measured from the present concrete headgate at Pilot Knob.

The canal in California is owned by the California Development Company, a corporation organized under the laws of New Jersey on April 24, 1896. This company is the successor in interest to an earlier concern, the Colorado River Irrigation Company, which had failed for lack of adequate financial backing. The posting of a notice of the filing of a claim to a water right for the canal was made under the laws of California by C. N. Perry under date of April 25, 1899. This notice specified 10,000 second feet of water and was posted about one and one-quarter miles above the California boundary line.

A canal was constructed with its head about one hundred yards above the boundary line, and was connected with a canal constructed on Mexican territory, south of the boundary line, by the Mexican Irrigation Company, already named, all of whose stock was at that time owned or controlled by the California Development Company.

NEW RIVER COUNTRY.

It is understood that at that time no right had been granted by the Mexican government to conduct water through Mexico for use in whole or in part in California. To obviate the necessity of such a concession, the canal from the California line near the river was excavated across lands owned by the Mexican Irrigation Company, and was turned loose in the channel of the Alamo, in which the main flow, in part through lagoons and through thickets of mesquite, was to the lower Alamo and into what was formerly known as the new river country in California, now Imperial Valley.

Cuts were made through swamps and thickets where more channel capacity was desirable, and gradually the canal became a continuous open waterway.

After a few years, successful operations in Imperial Valley resulted in demands for water that exceeded the canal capacity. The head of the canal showed a tendency to fill up with silt. An open cut was made around the gate and later filled again.

In 1904, the California Development Company appealed to Congress for a recognition of its claim to water for irrigation from Colorado River. Nominally the Colorado River was recognized as a navigable stream, and there were, in fact, steamboats upon the river. Failing to get Congressional recognition of any rights to divert water from the river, a request was made to have the river declared non-navigable, and the matter was referred to the Engineer Corps of the United States army.

About the same time, the California Development Company, through its subsidiary Mexican corporation, applied to Mexico for a concession of water from the Colorado River, and, subject to certain conditions and restrictions, the right was granted to the Mexican corporation in June, 1904, to carry water diverted from the river in California through Mexico, and also to make a diversion from the river upon Mexican territory to the amount of 10,000 second-feet. The principal condition imposed was that as much of this water as might be required, not to exceed one-half thereof, should be held available for use on lands in Mexico.

Under this Mexican concession, a cut was made from the river to the canal at (just below) the California boundary line, but did not prove adequate to relieve the shortage of water in the canal. A second cut was made in October, 1904, about four and one-half miles farther down stream, and it was this cut which was thereafter enlarged and became for a short time, as already described, the main channel of the river.

The dam which was constructed across the Lower Mexican heading in the fall of 1906 is known as the Hind dam. This dam was not seriously damaged by the second break in December, 1906, and is still in service.

THE CLARKE DAM.

The work done along the Colorado subsequent to the second break, and prior to the time that the river broke over into the Abejas, includes a dam known as the Clarke dam, built of rock, gravel and earth, across the second break in the river bank; the completion of the Hind dam across the first break; a levee or rather the completion of a levee paralleling the river from a point at Pilot Knob near the international boundary downstream to the dam across the first break; the completion of a levee about 10.25 miles in length downstream from the Clarke dam, paralleling the river for three miles, thence swinging obliquely away from the river; a spur levee 8317 feet long, extending in a southwesterly direction from the south end of the Clarke dam; the completion of a secondary levee along the Imperial Canal from the concrete headgate in California to the lower heading; the construction of a number of cross levees from the main to secondary levee and from the main levee inland, and a system of tracks on levees and dams, and in the quarry at Pilot Knob.

To these works, which were constructed in connection with the closure of the second break, there were subsequently added an extension of the levee about ten miles farther toward Volcano Lake, and a levee about eight miles long from the base of Cerro Prieto in a northeasterly direction, located about a mile north of Volcano Lake. This last embankment closes New River and is intended to prevent Volcano Lake from overflowing toward the north into the New River country.

During the time that the river was making its change in 1905-06 from a course to the gulf to a course inland, there was some channel deterioration below the point where the old channel was abandoned, and for a year the lower delta areas were comparatively dry. When, therefore, the river was in flood in 1907, with more than its ordinary summer flow, an unusual proportion of the water found its way over-bank into the feeders of Pescadero River and other channels nearer the gulf. There was less than the ordinary amount of vegetation to check the flow of this water, with the result that pronounced channel erosion took place, notably in some of the feeders of Pescadero River and in the Abejas, and by 1908 it had become apparent that one of these high water channels would be cut back to the river. This happened in 1909.

THE ABEJAS.

The Abejas, which had been known for many years as a high water outlet, was enlarged by the outgoing water to full river dimensions, and the entire low water flow and most of the high water took a course westerly and southwesterly toward Volcano Lake and toward Hardy's, Colorado.

The break is in the right bank about twenty miles by river below the California-Mexican boundary line, and the water flowing through this channel finds its way down the Pescadero through Volcano Lake and the Hardy, thence to the junction of the Hardy with the Colorado. In its passage to the Hardy the silt is practically all eliminated, and this deposit is rapidly raising the foot of the steep slope with the result that a slope line may be developed not greatly in excess of the normal stream. During the summer of 1910 a shortage of water in the Imperial Canal developed, and this was attributed to the lowering of the bed of the river in consequence of the Abejas break. To remedy this difficulty and protect Imperial Valley from damage by floods, the following joint resolution of Congress, approved June 25, 1910, was passed:

"That the sum of $1,000,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury, not otherwise appropriated, to be expended by the President, for the purpose of protecting the lands and property in the Imperial Valley and elsewhere along the Colorado River within the limits of the United States: and the President is authorized to expend any portion of such money within the limits of the Republic of Mexico as he may deem proper in accordance with such agreements for the purpose as he may make with the Republic of Mexico."

An investigation of the conditions at the head of the Imperial Canal was made, under instructions from the Secretary of the Interior, by J. A. Ockerson, and it was definitely ascertained that the shortage of water was due mainly to the silting up of both the intake and the canal. Mr. Ockerson says:

OCKERSON'S REPORT.

"Two courses were open to remedy these defects. With proper appliances, the simplest plan would have been to dredge out the intake. Indeed, this should have been done immediately after the passage of the summer flood, and in all probability a disastrous shortage of water would have been averted. Or, the water could be raised to such an extent by means of a submerged dam, just below the intake, as to fill the canal without dredging.

"It seems that 1200 to 1800 second-feet are necessary to satisfy the demands of the area now under cultivation and to meet the requirements of the large herds of stock and for domestic use, as these are wholly dependent on the canal for their entire supply, as there are no wells; neither are there any storage tanks for use in tiding over an emergency, such as might come from a break in the canal, that would cut off the entire water supply for a time, and cause great suffering to the people and to live stock.

"In the latter part of July, the volume passing the head gates had dropped down to 746 second-feet, and the conditions became alarming. Only 395 second-feet reached Imperial Valley.

"The California Development Company secured a dredge with which to clear out the deposits in the intake, and also took steps to build a submerged dam, on which work was begun July 22. By August 23 a trestle was completed across the river, and rock dumped therein had raised the water surface two feet, and the water in the intake stood above the tops of the head gates, giving a flow down the canal of 1700 second-feet."

The Abejas is now an open, well-defined channel at least to a point some miles below Campo Lino, but its character below that point is not known with certainty. It is reported that between Campo Lino and Volcano Lake the water spreads out over broad mud deposits, and that the Abejas loses the character of a well-defined channel. Such a condition is recognized as possible, and it may be some years before the water will take a clearly defined route to an outfall either into the Volcano Lake or into the Hardy's Colorado.

LAKE FILLED.

The water delivered inland by the Abejas into the region of Volcano Lake far exceeds the amount that reached the lake under former conditions. Consequently the lake is filled by the river's summer flow to higher stages than formerly.

The levee at the north of the lake and the dam across New River prevent this water from flowing north into the Imperial Valley.

All of it at present finds its way

HERMOSA BEACH

Answers All Questions

IS HERMOSA BEACH SOME NEW PLACE?

Yes and no. HERMOSA BEACH is about seven years old. It is a highly developed and highly improved Beach-town with something like five hundred dwellings, stores, etc., a town with over 12 miles of asphalted streets, cement sidewalks, etc., yet a town that affords splendid investment opportunity, because prices have not been boomed up out-of-sight; There IS room, splendid room for NEW INVESTMENT.

DOES HERMOSA BEACH COMPARE FAVORABLY?

It has more miles of improved streets than any other town of its size in the country. It has a septic sewer-system, seven years in perfect operation, that prevents any deleterious matter from flowing into the Ocean. It has the most perfect drinking water in the State, by chemical analysis. It has just decided to build an up-to-date Ocean-walk over two miles long. It is a strictly up-to-date beach-home-town, but not a whooping-hurray beach-resort.

HAS HERMOSA BEACH NATURAL ADVANTAGES?

HERMOSA BEACH is just north of Redondo, on the Pacific Electric Railway, as well as on the Santa Fe. It's an easy, pleasant, quick trip from Los Angeles. It is so beautifully located bordering on a crescent-shaped beach and lying back against a gentle slope, that it could well rest on its oars, but it has added bountifully to what bountiful Nature has done for it, until it is one of the really prettiest Western towns. Come and see it.

WILL HERMOSA BEACH BE POPULAR?

If getting rich on investment will make buyers like a place, Yes. If the very choicest of neighbors will do it, Yes. If a beach that has never had a death from bathing, is popular, Yes. If cleanliness means anything in bathing, Yes. If health is a necessary attribute of satisfaction, Yes. If the right price and right terms on Real Estate stands for anything, Yes. If a progressive city-government helps, then again—Yes.

Any depression of the river bed throughout that part of the Colorado River from Pilot Knob southerly to the south boundary line of Arizona will be of direct benefit to the protection works which now prevent the river from going down the Alamo into Salton Basin. The greatest menace to these works, under conditions as they have prevailed since they were completed, is the unstable river bank. The menace becomes small if the flood stages can be kept below bank heights; it increases rapidly as flood depth on the river bank is increased.

The advantage which results from a depression of water surface, particularly at flood stage in that part of the Colorado River for some miles below Pilot Knob, is in some measure offset by the increased difficulty of supplying an adequate flow of water to Imperial Canal; also, by the increased difficulty of supplying water to lands now irrigated mainly by pumping in Arizona below Yuma; also, by the resulting menace to the stability of the Laguna Dam.

PROJECT OF 1910.

Surveys covering some thirty-five miles of the Colorado River, above and below the break, and also several miles of the Abejas River, were made in August and September, 1910, under Mr. Ockerson's direction.

An examination was also made of the Volcano Lake region, New River, Alamo and Hardy rivers, extending down the latter river to its junction with the Colorado.

As a result of these investigations, and a careful study of the physical situation, a project was developed providing for the closure of the Abejas River by means of a rock fill dam to divert the water to the Colorado, and about twenty-five miles of levee along the west bank of the Colorado River about 3000 feet from its westerly bends.

This project was approved by the President, the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner appointed by the Mexican government to pass on the work.

As the projected work is located in Mexican territory, it became necessary to secure the consent of the Mexican government before active operations could begin. As finally agreed upon, the terms provided that the work should be done by a Mexican corporation, and the Colorado River Land Company, owners of the land on which the proposed improvement is located, agreed to the use of its charter rights and powers to carry out the project, the cost thereof to be met by the United States.

While the project was submitted to the Secretary of the Interior on October 4, 1910, with a view to completing the works before the advent of high water, the diplomatic agreement was not consummated until early in January, 1911.

By this time the lower-water season had passed, and it was fully realized that the prosecution of the work in the face of inevitable flood conditions would greatly increase the difficulty of closing the Abejas, and failure to divert the water to the Colorado was more than probable.

It will be seen that the conference report sustains Engineer Ockerson, substantially, commending the river work done heretofore under his direction. The report was approved by the President, who has recommended to Congress a further appropriation of $1,000,000 to continue the work of trying to arrest the runaway Rio Colorado of the West.

The problem was further complicated by the political situation, the scene of operations being under the control of insurrectos, whose presence seriously disturbed labor conditions, alarmed the contractors on levee work, who suffered substantial losses of stock, equipment and subsistence stores through their depredations, and repeatedly interfered with the train service engaged in delivering rock to the Abejas dam.

THE WORK.

Active work was begun early in January, 1911, or as soon as diplomatic arrangements were concluded. Some seven and one-half miles of railway were built from a point on the railway line of the California Development Company fifteen miles below Hanlon's Heading to the Abejas River. The levee line was constructed some 24.6 miles long, beginning eleven miles below Hanlon's Heading, thence extending southward along the west bank of the Colorado River at a distance of about 3000 feet from the westerly bends, and terminating at a point about twenty miles above tide water.

The construction of the levee required some 613 acres of clearing and grubbing, and 1,277,984 cubic yards of earth work, 1300 men and 2100 animals were employed. The work was completed April 1, 1911, at a total cost of $432,434.76. The customs duties, payment of which are still pending, estimated at $20,000, should be added to above cost if not remitted.

The construction of the dam across the Abejas River was begun on January 21, 1911, when the track laying reached the river and the last bent of the trestle was driven on February 1, and the bed of the stream was blanketed with rock by February 5.

The equipment of cars, locomotives, steam shovels and pile drivers used was hired from the Southern Pacific Railway Company, with the exception of two small steam shovels and some minor equipment which were borrowed from the United States Reclamation Service.

FLOOD DAMAGE.

A succession of moderate floods resulted in several breaks as the work progressed, and greatly increased the cost of closure, but the dam, some 1500 feet long, and a top width of 20 feet, was finally completed on May 15, 1911. In fact, all of the projected work was completed as planned, except the levee protection.

The natural banks of the Abejas, at the south end of the dam, have an elevation of eighty-five feet above sea level, and as the project was based on the supposition that the closure would be made at low water, it was expected that the diversion into the Colorado would be made without overtopping the banks.

The water did flow down the Colorado for several weeks, but erosion of the bed did not keep pace with the increasing volume, and the water impounded by the dam rose to such height as to overflow the banks, and, following down along the new unpro-

INTIMIDATION IS ALREADY STARTED.

Laborite Plans for Preventing a Fair Trial.

Bold Scheme for Helping the Dynamite Gang.

Spies and Bulldozers Hired to Worry Witnesses.

The labor bosses who are looking after the "interests" of the McNamaras have organized a secret service bureau for the purpose of scientifically intimidating and frightening witnesses called to testify against the unionites charged with the murder of twenty men and the destruction of the plant of this newspaper.

The bureau was formed at the instigation of the San Francisco ring, whose members guide the acts of the General Strike Committee, which was appointed to bulldoze the rank and file of organized labor in Los Angeles into attempting the destruction of free labor here. Already its spies have been sent over the country, and every effort is being made to "scare off" witnesses, who are believed to possess damaging evidence against the accused dynamiters.

In order to offset public wrath against the dastardly methods they are adopting, the northern bosses declare that the bureau is to be used to detect spies in the unions' ranks, and that it has been organized for no other purpose. That the real work outlined for the bureau includes the supressing of evidence against the McNamaras and the secret visiting of probable witnesses, was made known as a result of factional differences in the labor ranks, and the refusal of a number of unionites to tamper with the law.

The northern bosses have been planning the organization of the bureau ever since their arrival in the city. At different meetings of laborites the subject has been broached, but the bosses have been careful not to admit its real purpose. The bureau is composed chiefly of striking ironworkers.

George Gunrey, secretary of the Strike Committee, boldly announced the formation of the secret service bureau, and said that its members would see whether or not the McNamaras could be convicted.

Gunrey declared that the scope of the bureau was not limited to the protection of the alleged dynamiters, but to the protection of all unionites haled before the courts regardless of their apparent guilt or innocence.

All members of the rank and file of union labor who refuse to submit to the dictations of the high-salaried bosses are classed as "spies." In order to maintain their prestige with the bigger bosses—those who control the politics of the American Federation of Labor—the little bosses must make a big noise. They are paid at the rate of $10 a day as long as they can convince their superiors that they are carrying on a work for the good of the "cause."

In the defense of the McNamaras the members of the General Strike Committee saw a way through a tight hole. Having fallen down in their efforts to force closed-shop conditions in Los Angeles, their only hope of being able to hold their easy-money jobs rested with their ability to make the national bosses believe their presence in Los Angeles was necessary if the McNamaras were to get a fair trial. By proceeding along these lines, the walking-delegates have been able to pull down their easy money, secured from women and children and foolish union wage-earners.

LABOR UNIONS AND OLD AGE PENSIONS.

[Editorial.]

A PIECE of news calculated to throw some light on the real aim of labor union bosses comes to us from Paris, in connection with the old age pension bill of the French government. This bill, promoted by the radicals with the sole object of bettering the condition of industrial workers, is being bitterly opposed by the so-called labor party. The unions take especial exception to compulsory contribution on the part of the workmen to the general pension fund, of which fund the government and the employers of labor will, nevertheless, raise the greater part.

We have never known the labor union officials to show any delicacy about receiving compulsory contributions from the men, whom by fair means or foul, they persuade or intimidate, into bowing beneath the union yoke; nor to hesitate about using these compulsory contributions for their own personal advantage or to cover up the tracks of criminals. Nor can we see where the general conditions of living among the poor have been bettered by this enforced levy.

But these same men raise a howl at the suggestion that the laborer should help to establish a fund which, when old age and infirmity overtake him, will insure him against poverty and distress. The inference is obvious. These creatures, posing as the friends of labor, do not really desire to see the lot of the laborer ameliorated or his burdens lightened. Their aim is to discourage him and keep him discontented, because, like Judas, they carry the money bag.

Of all the hardships which human flesh is heir to, none is so cruel as penniless old age, and unfortunately hopeful youth seems to care little about laying something by for the proverbial rainy day. A law that compels men to help themselves and is willing to back up these enforced efforts with a substantial bounty, should commend itself to all who have the interests of their poorer brethren at heart. As might have been expected, the labor union machine is opposed, in France, to any such remedial legislation. No, they say in effect, let all the spare cash possible be wrung from the hard earned wages of the toilers, to keep bosses and walking delegates in champagne and cigars and dynamite bombs, but never let us consent to the workers putting anything into a fund from which they themselves, and not their mis-leaders, will reap the only benefit. Sic semper tyrannis.

Snake Bites.

UNION DYNAMITE TRAIL FOLLOWED.

FIRST CLEW FOUND IN IRON-WORKER'S MAGAZINE.

Dynamiting of "The Times" Was Only an Incident of the Regular Work—Structural Steel Workers Most Brutal of All Unions in Existence in America.

[Hezekiah N. Duff, in the Square Deal.]

"They must have got a few of the snakes for the big end of them quit."

When a delegate of the Salt Lake City local of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers wrote the above sentence to the Bridgeman, the official magazine of the iron workers, in the latter part of 1909, little he knew that he was furnishing a clue the folowing up of which would eventually startle the world. Had he not made mention in his report at that time of an attempt made to stone non-union iron workers employed in the erection of the Utah Hotel in Salt Lake City, the arrests of John J. McNamara, James W. McNamara and Ortie McManigal might not have been brought about.

The quotation above given from the Bridgeman furnished practically the first clue connecting the officials of the structural iron workers with the dynamiting which had occurred for upwards of five years previous in all parts of America. Detectives in the employ of the National Erectors' Assiciation, representing the larger building contractors in the East and Middle West, had been running down clues for a long time, but all their efforts seemed to come to naught. They had arrested and convicted several men for the actual dynamiting but were unable to trace the entire plot to a fountain head. The little item from Salt Lake City caused them to watch the Bridgeman, and from that time on every number of that magazine furnished more proof that a gigantic plot was being engineered by the union to put the open shop methods of doing business out of the running.

Constant application by Walter Drew, the commissioner for the National Erector's Association, with a capable corps of detectives soon produced evidence which was really startling. Gradualy closing in and picking up thread ends here and there the fall of 1910 arrived with its awful explosion at Los Angeles. This brought into the case a perfect horde of detectives headed by William J. Burns, and it was not long before the two forces were working in conjunction. What happened is now history. The arrest of John J. McNamara and his brother, James W. McNamara, and the confession of Ortie McManigal revealed a condition of affairs which suggests anarchy in its deepest form.

The dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times was but a mere incident. For years the bridge and structural iron workers had been dynamiting all over the country, from Maine to Utah, and from Louisiana to Michigan. They had come to be known in union circles as the proud possessors of a dynamiting gang which could do a job in a few hours, hence their "committee" was in demand wherever union labor leaders (those who would stoop to any deviltry,) were desperate and in need of help. Somebody invited "the gang" to visit Los Angeles, ostensibly to dynamite iron workers' shops in which non-union men were employed. Once upon the ground it was decided to go after Gen. Otis, the owner of The Times, and the arch enemy of militant unionism on the Pacific Coast. They did it, and The Times Building was destroyed and twenty persons lost their lives, and this incident, for it must not be forgotten that in the history of the trail of the union dynamiting the Los Angeles Times disaster was but one little link in a long chain, hastened the downfall of the entire clique.

Ever since 1900 the organization of structural steel workers has been without exception the most brutal of all unions in existence in America. Originally known as the Housesmiths' and Bridgemen's Union, which was later consolidated with other steel workers' unions into the international, the organization sprang into prominence in the years 1902-1903 in the city of New York under the leadership of Sam Parks, a famous militant union leader who wound up his career behind the walls of Sing Sing. Strikes against the open shop in 1902-1903, in the city of New York, brought to the front Parks and his rowdy followers. The methods used there at that time furnished the example for many other unions in later days. Dynamite was utilized in several instances in attacks upon unfinished buildings which were being erected under the open shop. Murders were frequent, while assaults not resulting in fatalities filled page after page of criminal court blotters. A reign of terror settled down in the industrial circles of the metropolis which was only broken by the arrest and sentence to Sing Sing of Parks himself.

Shortly before the arrest and conviction of Parks, an internal war sprang up in the union. Frank Buchanan, who at that time was the International head, was against Parks and his methods and tried to drive him out. Buchanan, it might be remarked in passing, is now a member of Congress from a Chicago city district, having been elected last fall on a Democratic and Socialist ticket. In the fight for control within the ranks of the organization there sprang into prominence a young man who was destined later to become possibly the most notorious man the union ever had as a member. That man was John J. McNamara, and in the New York squabble he was one of the chief allies of Sam Parks, and opposed to the more pacific measures of Frank Buchanan. McNamara was then in Cleveland but made many trips East to help Parks lick Buchanan.

Shortly after Parks's arrest and conviction, two of his faithful adherents kept following him by also going to prison. In the month of January, 1906, a plot to blow up the Post & McCord building, then under course of construction at No. 304 East Twenty-third street, New York City, was frustrated by an amateur detective named John Guthrie. He ingratiated himself with the members of the union to such an extent that he became one of the leaders in their dynamiting gang. In the Post & McCord plot he informed the authorities and Charles Moran and Thomas Weir were arrested. At first they decided to stand trial, but upon being informed that Guthrie, who had been working with them and who had heard through them of the conspiracies to blow up buildings, cut cables and fix derricks, was a detective, Moran promptly confessed. He was sentenced to a term of four years and eight months in Sing Sing, while Weir was committed to Elmira for a shorter term.

This case is probably the first on record in which the dastardly work was really traced directly to members of the union, although at the time the union was quick to deny any affiliation with the defendants. After their arrest, Secretary Patrick H. Farrell of the New York local, said:

"The whole thing was a put-up job to bring the union into disrepute. Guthrie was a non-union man working for Post & McCord in Jersey City when our walking delegate took him off the job. We clothed and cared for him, but he sneaked back to Post & McCord. Moran and Weir were never in the union. The union had nothing to do with this affair, but this is an attempt to discredit the union."

In the confession which Moran made he stated very positively that he was a union man, member of the union, and always had paid his dues to the union. He told the authorities that he had received $150 for "fixing" a derrick on one occasion and $100 for cutting a cable in two. He also gave the location of 100 one-pound sticks of dynamite concealed in the Jersey meadows, and in the sands at the foot of East 24th street. Both of these places were subsequently visited by the police and the dynamite found.

The sentencing of these men did not take place until the summer of 1906 and after they were sent to prison the dynamiting was dropped for a time by the union workers and resort had to plain, everyday slugging. On June 13, 1906, at Follansbee, W. Va., William Wilson, a foreman for the Fort Pitt Bridge Works, was assaulted while at work by a gang of iron workers. The officers finally secured indictments of William Wise, alias "Slim" Wise, George Lohman, John Davis, John Foley and James Snodgrass. Wise was the only one of these ever arrested, the balance of them still being fugitives from justice with good sized rewards upon their heads. Wise was arrested in the city of Chicago, brought back to West Virginia for the trial, and upon trial convicted and on July 6, 1907, sentenced to a term of nine years in the Moundsville penitentiary.

A month later, or to be exact, on July 11, 1906, during the building of the Plaza Hotel, New York City, by the George A. Fuller Company, a noted exponent of the open shop, there was considerable trouble. Michael Butler, an ex-member of the New York Police force, had been employed by the Fuller company as guard. He was attacked by several ironworkers on the eight floor of the building, and thrown from there to the third floor, receiving injuries from which he subsequently died. A number of union workers, including "Dutch" Martin, who was a member of the union, were arrested, but no witnesses could be found who could actually fasten the crime upon him. Martin, however, became frightened and pleaded guilty to an assault on another guard on the building, which did not prove fatal, and for this was sentenced to four years at Sing Sing.

On August 15 of the same year, the union came very close to dynamiting again when several of its members set fire to an iron mill being erected at Conshohocken, Pa., for the Longmead Iron Company by the McClintic-Marshall Construction Company. The contractors were and always have been open shop and there were unmistakable evidences of incendiarism which were later confirmed by some boasts on the part of the union men.

In the fall of the same year dynamite was resorted to again. On September 25 a derrick car on the Nickel Plate viaduct, Cleveland, O., belonging to the Pittsburgh Construction Company, was dynámited. This case, in the opinion of the detectives, probably marks the first use of the methods applied in the Los Angeles Times case, for here was found for the first time a clock apparatus similar to those used in late years. It was of the same style and mode of operation as those found within the past year throughout the Middle West, and found on James B. McNamara and McManigal when they were arrested. The method of exploding the machine here was so crude, however, that only a portion of the expected damage was done. The machine was evidently thrown from the window of a passing railway train, and the jar caused by its descent to earth broke the entire clock attachment to pieces. The dynamite sticks, or some of them at least, broke loose, went off and destroyed a portion of the derrick car, but the fuse connections and the clock itself were unharmed and were taken at that time by the detectives, and are still where they can be reached to compare with the ones but recently found.

Shortly after this, on October 12, an attempt was made to dynamite a viaduct being built for the Pittsburgh, Virginia and Charleston branch of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Clairton, Pa. The only result was the dynamiting of the derrick car which was being uesd in the work. The erecting contracting company, the American Bridge Company, had a guard on this car, one Bert Figley. He was decoyed away from the car by one of the would-be dynamiters, but later returned just as the crew was leaving after placing the explosives under the car. Realizing what had happened, he broke for the car, but was assaulted and held back. After the arrest of Ortie McManigal, Figley upon being shown his picture, quickly identified him as one of the crowd which assaulted him, although as far as known now McManigal's confession does not cover the Clairton job.

From this time until the fall of 1907 by the steelworkers and the old dynamiting was apparently cast aside methods of slugging guards and assaulting foreman were again in vogue. The first outbreak occurred late in December of 1906, at Ben Avon, a small station some eight miles west of Pittsburgh on the Fort Wayne branch of the P.R.R. The American Bridge Company was doing some work of an erecting nature at this point and had quite a force of men on the job. In the middle of the night the foreman of the construction work was enticed from his sleeping quarters into a toolhouse by three men who assaulted and shot him. For some time the police authorities and even the private detectives attributed this shooting to the "Black Hand" and it may be possible that this publication will be the first intimation that many of them have that the "Black Hand" was not responsible. Acting on this theory shortly after the occurrence a man was arrested, charged with the crime, tried and subsequently acquitted, inasmuch as no evidence tending to convict could be produced by the prosecution. Some months after the case had been dropped in the courts there began to come intimations that the sum of $1500 had been expended by the Pittsburgh local of the Bridge and Structural Ironworkers for the defense of the man arrested. This convinced the private detectives that the case was not one of "Black Hand" but merely another exposition of the unions' brutality. This conclusion has been absolutely borne out by the books which were found in John J. McNamara's office in Indianapolis, in which it appears that practically $1500 was spent in acquitting the man suspected of and tried for the shooting.

On February 5, 1907, another case of assault occurred around the circumstances of which hinges absolute evidence tending to lay the affair at the doors of the union. On that date George W. Ryle, a foreman for the Pittsburgh Steel Construction Company, was assaulted at Ashtabula, O. The construction company was erecting a viaduct or a pier for one of the big ore-carrying corporations, and the work was being done by non-union men. There had been threats expressed, most of which emanated from the Cleveland local of the Ironworkers' Union. Early one morning while near the place where the work was being done, Ryle was brutally assaulted by four men. He managed during the assault to get his revolver out of his pocket, and, in the scuffle which followed, he shot and killed one of the quartette named Robert Butler. The identification of the dead man quickly brought about the arrest of his three companions, namely Steve Davern, John O'Brien and "Rube" Shane.

The resulting trial gave to the public for the first time absolute evidence connecting the Bridge and Ironworkers of America with the attempts upon lives of foremen on non-union jobs. All four of Ryle's assailants were members of the Cleveland local of the union in good standing. After their arrest, Davern and Shane were released on bail, it being shown at the preliminary hearing that most of the assaulting was done by O'Brien and Butler, the man who was killed. Members of the Cleveland local who were possessed of real property enough to furnish bonds for these men did so. After being bailed out, they became fugitives from justice, and still are so, and it might be mentioned in passing the bonds furnished by the Cleveland local were forfeited by the Ohio authorities. At a subsequent court trial, Ryle was exonerated for the killing of Butler, it being shown conclusively that he acted in self-defense, and O'Brien being placed on trial for the assault was convicted and sentenced to a term of six years in the Ohio penitentiary.

It was during the course of O'Brien's trial that the real startling evidence against the union came out. One of the witnesses sworn in that case was a brother of Albert Butler, the man who was killed. Witness Butler told of conversations he had several times with his brother regarding assaults made on non-union foremen in and about Cleveland. One job in particular he told of by saying that he was hired to make the assault by one Charlie Smith, who was secretary of local No. 17, located at Cleveland. For this bit of "missionary work" he received the sum of $100. The Cleveland local for the defense of O'Brien and for the getting away of Davern and Shane spent upwards of $5000, part of which was reimbursed to them by the international officers of the Bridge and Structural Ironworkers. This transfer from the International Board to the Cleveland local also appears upon the books found at Indianapolis.

In September of 1907 there were indications of the renewal of activities in the dynamiting line. In Cleveland at the plant of the American Steel and Wire Company, a component part of the United States Steel Corporation, the hoisting engine was dynamited and wrecked. The dead was done under cover of night and no evidence was ever secured as to the guilty parties, although as has been usual in many cases, some of the union workers boasted afterwards of the success of the job. In this case a boasting came from members of local No. 17 at Cleveland.

On October 30 of the same year two dynamiting outrages were committed at almost the same time in two widely different portions of the country; one at Youngstown, O., and the other near Harrison, N. J. The Youngstown job occurred on a bridge being built by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company by the the Youngstown Construction Company. Here a pier was the object of the explosion and while some little inconvenience was caused, the bridge was not wrecked and the loss to the contractor was small. There had been for some time considerable differences between the construction company and the union ironworkers. The explosion in New Jersey occurred at a bridge being erected for the Pennsylvania Railway by the American Bridge Company, at Newark Meadows. This explosion was heavy, the dynamite being placed under one of the main girders of the bridge. The girder was destroyed and a space about six feet square broke clear through the buckle plate used on the floor of the bridge.

With the beginning of the year 1908 the dynamiting became much more frequent and of greater damage. During the first few months of this year the gangs apparently worked overtime, their first appearance being at Cleveland, O., on January 31. Here the Interstate Engineering Company had a large pile of materials (chiefly girders,) stored for use on what was known as the Eagle-avenue bridge, which was being built for the Big Four Railroad. The dynamite was placed under a car near the girders and the car was blown to pieces and much of the girder steel wrecked. Some few houses in the immediate vicinity were also badly shattered by the explosion. Again boastful remarks made after the explosion emanated from members of the union.

The scene now shifte dto New York City, where a big drawbridge over Eastchester Bay, in Pelham Bay Park, was being built for the city by the American Bridge Company. On February 3 large guy clamps on four or five large guys were removed, letting the entire draw end of the bridge fall into the bay. The damage here was between $5000 and $10,000. On the 16th of the same month the Wisconsin Bridge and Iron Company received its first hard dose. The company was erecting a double-track bridge over the Mississippi River at Clinton, Iowa, for the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad. Thirty sticks of dynamite were placed in a derrick car. One of them exploded, the others being so badly broken that they failed to respond. The one that exploded caused some $2500 damage. In this case there was considerable evidence against union workers and the watchman on the job at the time was believed to have been in collusion with the perpetrators.

On March 18, 1908, a derrick car of the Pittsburgh Construction Company at Buena Park, near Chicago, and along the line of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad, was dynamited and considerably damaged. There was absolutely no clue in this case. The same was true of the dynamiting of the drawbridge over the Raritan River at Perth Amboy, N. J., on March 25. This bridge was being constructed by the Pennsylvania Steel Company and the bridge itself was dynamited to the extent of $1500 damage. The same day a

THE PROGRAMME OF FAIR DEALING.

THE National Association of Manufacturers of the United States of America has declared that the following principles shall govern the Association in its work in connection with the problems of labor:

(1.) Fair dealing is the fundamental and basic principle on which relations between employees and employers should rest.

(2.) The National Association of Manufacturers is not opposed to organizations of labor as such, but it is unalterably opposed to boycotts, blacklists and other illegal acts of interference with the personal liberty of employer or employee.

(3.) No person should be refused employment or in any way discriminated against on account of membership or non-membership in any labor organization, and there should be no discriminating against or interference with any employee who is not a member of a labor organization by members of such organizations.

(4.) With due regard to contracts, it is the right of the employee to leave his employment whenever he sees fit, and it is the right of the employer to discharge any employee when he sees fit.

(5.) Employers must be free to employ their work people at wages mutually satisfactory, without interference or dictation on the part of individuals or organizations not directly parties to such contracts.

(6.) Employers must be unmolested and unhampered in the management of their business, in determining the amount and quality of their business, in determining the amount and quality of their product, and in the use of any methods or systems of pay which are just and equitable.

(7.) In the interest of employees and employers of the country, no limitation should be placed upon the opportunities of any person to learn any trade to which he or she may be adapted.

(8.) The National Association of Manufacturers disapproves absolutely of strikes and lock-outs, and favors an equitable adjustment of all differences between employers and employees by any amicable method that will preserve the rights of both parties.

(9.) Employees have the right to contract for their services in a collective capacity, but any contract that contains a stipulation that employment should be denied to men not parties to the contract is an invasion of the constitutional rights of the American workman, is against public policy, and is in violation of the conspiracy laws. This Association declares its unalterable antagonism to the closed shop and insists that the doors of no industry be closed against American workmen because of their membership or non-membership in any labor organization.

Hawley King & Co., Los Angeles, Cal.

Gentlemen:—I wish to state that I have used a 30 H. P. FLOUR CITY engine constantly from December 5th, 1910, to April 15th, 1911, in plowing and chiseling land for a bean crop. I will say that we overloaded the engine at least 25 per cent. and my total bill for repairs was $30.00.

I consider the FLOUR CITY engine to be the best wheeled tractor in the field today. We ran over one piece of 115 acres three different times with chisel cultivator weed knives and double disc harrows, pulling 16 ft. of the double disc harrows as well as spike tooth harrows at same time. I estimate that I did this work for less than half the expense which I formerly had with teams.

Yours truly,

(Signed) F. E. BARNARD.

[illegible] will be forthcoming to defend them. Organizations commanding hundreds of thousands of votes seem to be interested in proving their innocence. Burns and his fellows have been arrested for kidnaping. Burns is a careful man, and it seems unlikely that he failed to meet the requirements of the law in extraditing his prisoners. It is absurd to treat him as a conspirator, working in the interest of organized capital against organized labor. If he has got a parcel of scoundrels who have been blowing up buildings and killing people, he has done a great public service,—for which every order-loving and law-abiding citizen should be grateful to him—a service quite as valuable to workmen as to employers. Burns seems to be quite impartial in the prosecution of his business. In Oregon he rounded up land-stealers, well-to-do men of standing in their community; in San Francisco he hunted grafters, fairly rich men again, and the tools of still richer men; now he has been hunting, not labor organization men as such, but dynamiters and assassins, and really the labor unions and the Socialist brethren seem to be quivering with anxiety for fear he has caught them.

We see not the slightest ground for apprehension that McNamara will be convicted if he is innocent. "Labor" seems to want him to have not a fair trial, but an unfair one. What folly! Labor unions have come to stay. As things go in the industrial world they are necessary. But they cannot win with dynamite, nor by compulsory lowering of the standard of human efficiency.

REPORTS ON WAGES AND CONDITIONS.

Timely Bulletins from All Parts of the World.

Two years ago Samuel Gompers made the statement that organized labor would soon control both industry and commerce. It does not control them yet and I venture to predict that five years from now the independent workman will be able to go around without running the risk of being tapped on the head with a lead pipe, said John Kirby, Jr., of Dayton, O., the re-elected president of the National Association of Manufacturers, at its sixteenth annual meeting, held recently in New York City.

The principle of the open shop was firmly adhered to by the adoption of a resolution condemning every form of closed shop agreement and pledging adherence to the principle of industrial freedom "in defense of which the signers of the Declaration of Independence pledged their sacred honor, their fortunes and their lives." A resolution was also adopted demanding the repeal of the State and Federal eight-hour laws relating to public work on the ground that they were an attempt to secure by indirection that which cannot lawfully be done by direct legislation.

President Taft was asked to end the boycott, for all time, by seeking the punishment or dissolution of organizations enforcing it. The A. F. of L. was declared to be "presently prosecuting and intending to further prosecute such boycotts."

Taken all through the average scale of wages is lower in Canada than here. If it were not so why is it that thousands of people—young men especially—are leaving the provinces of Quebec and Ontario and the maritime provinces to seek industrial, commercial and professional employment in the United States? The writer knows what he is talking about, because no less than eleven of his male relatives have made that move in the past few years, the result being six own homes in Los Angeles and vicinity. We hear of no imigration of people from the United States to Canada, except of farmers, who are going to the Canadian Northwest to occupy cheap farm lands.

"We know of our own personal knowledge," says the Boston Advertiser, "that wages of farm laborers and mechanics are from 25 to 50 per cent. lower in Nova Scotia than in Massachusetts."

In Los Angeles today there are Canadian young men earning from $225 to $500 a month, whose earnings horizon was limited to from $100 to $125 a month in Canada.

BRITISH TRADE UNIONS' BILL.

The Times of London says: The government's trade unions bill, which was introduced on Wednesday by Mr. Churchill, will afford protection to the minority in a trade union who may object to the funds' being used for political purposes. Such a minority will not be obliged to subscribe to the political funds. The trade unions will be enabled to devote a portion of their funds to political purposes, the bill giving them legal sanction to take part in political action in the event of a majority of those voting deciding in favor of this course. Political action, it is understood, will be deemed to cover local as well as central political activity. It is further understood that the proposal is that the political fund of a trade union shall be kept separate, and is to be raised by a special voluntary levy.

Under the provisions of the bill a trade union which desires to use funds for political purposes would take a ballot of its members. If a majority was in favor of this course—and it is understood that a bare majority would suffice—the union would declare the result, and it would then be legally empowered to raise a political fund by means of the special voluntary levy specified. It would have no power of exercising any compulsion on the members of the dissenting minority, save those of moral suasion, and no penalty would attach to the members of the union who refused to subscribe to the special political levy.

This bill will doubtless pass, as the British government has a large majority in the House of Commons. Its chief good feature is that it will prevent forced levies on union members for political purposes. The "union card" cannot be taken away from noncontributors.

WAGES IN TENNESSEE.

A census bulletin shows that in the five years, 1904-1909, the principal factories of Tennessee increased from 3,175 to 4,609, a gain of 1,434.

The corporative pay rolls are:

Employees	82,258	65,482
Increase in five years		16,776
Pay roll	$37,438,000	$27,886,000
Increase in five years		9,552,000

OPPOSING WAGE REDUCTIONS.

Closely following the announcement of reduction of prices of certain manufacturers of steel comes the information that the "independent" companies—so called in distinction from the United States Steel Corporation—are proposing reduction of wages.

But the United States Steel Corporation is opposing the proposition. Its managers agreed readily enough to price reduction, doubtless reasoning that it would serve as the needed stimulus to demand; but it is not willing to cause disturbance in the labor situation by agreeing to the proposition of the independents that the manufacturers shall at once take out of the wages of employees money to make up to themselves the decrease in profits.

In all fairness the American Federation of Labor, which on various occasions, has manifested hostility against the United States Steel Corporation, should take note of its attitude toward its employees, so strikingly in contrast with that of the independents toward their workers—[Albany, (N.Y.) Journal.

STRIKERS IN PENNSYLVANIA.

In his 1909 report (latest issue,) J. L. Rockey, chief of the Bureau of Industrial Statistics of Pennsylvania says: "Truth of history compels the record of several very deplorable labor disturbances in widely separated parts of the State. The strike at McKees Rocks was most unfortunate throughout, and very regrettable because it involved loss of life and property. After it had run its dire course almost normal operations were resumed, with apparently no profit or benefit to either party. It was another illustration of the general futility of strikes, no matter how great the provocation may be. It would seem that if the same conciliatory measures had been used at the beginning of the contention as at a later period, serious trouble might have been avoided."

During 1909 there were twenty strikes in the bituminous fields of the State, causing a loss of 1025 days work, affecting 5721 persons and involving an estimated money loss in wages of $163,920, or $28.65 for each person. The one "too much union" strike was settled by a return to work under "non-union conditions."

No anthracite strikes reported for the year.

COAL WAGES IN PENNSYLVANIA.

The same report gives the number of employees, total wages, and average individual wages in the 1162 bituminous coal mines of Pennsylvania in 1909:

Average number of workers in 1909	173,003
Total wages of same	$90,680,128
Average yearly earnings (261 days)	$524.15

The daily rates of wages were from 83 cents (outside boys,) and 96 cents (inside boys,) to $2.07 (outside men,) to $2.16 (inside men.)

And in anthracite coal mining:

Average number of workers in 1909	169,338
Total wages of same	$84,358,706
Average yearly earnings (212 days)	$498.17

which classified as:

Miners	$651.79
Miners' laborers	440.78
Other inside men	489.02
Boys, inside mine	230.09
Outside workmen	482.21
Breaker employees	322.57
Boys, outside	191.87

The daily average rates of wages were from 90 cents (boys,) to $3.06, miners.

BLIND TAXATION.

The agitation within the unions is continuing against the increasing taxation in up-keep. The San Francisco unions are just now in tumult against an additional tax of 20 per cent. for purposes of maintenance and there being so many other taxes the members are naturally in revolt. The assessment of 25 cents a week per member for the Los Angeles strike is such that it has sapped the hope of the union member.

There is no let up in the demands made of the rank and file. The McNamara defense tax is not yet assessed because many of the members are on the verge of revolt but eventually that tax, too, will have to be assessed on the already over burdened.

Sacramento and a number of unions of San Francisco, twenty-one to be correct, are in open revolt. Bakersfield unions are slow and some of them have absolutely refused to come through. Many of the unions are sending the funds directly to those in distress in Los Angeles and this, they say, has been found the better way as there is then some accounting of money.

UNION DYNAMITE TRAIL.

of Fall River, and, in the early part of the present year by reason of his former lawyer's political pull, O'Donnell's sentence was commuted, and he was released.

From this time until April 1, 1910, there were in the neighborhood of twenty-five dyntmitings or attempted dynamitings in various sections of the country, the great majority of them being in the East and in the Middle West. While at the time of their occurrence and upon investigation by detectives there was little indication that the ironworkers' unions were interested in them, the confession of Ortie McManigal describes in detail the great majority of them and tells by whom they were done. Inasmuch as McManigal's confession has not yet been made public, the exact conditions respecting these various explosions cannot be given here.

During this period of time in some cases the old idea of slugging and murder was restored to. On September 18, 1908, James Lynch, a watchman for the Wisconsin Bridge & Iron Company, at Chicago, was shot and killed by a number of assailants who boasted that they were going to do Lynch up simply because he was a "scab."

Beginning with March 31, 1908, Thomas Slattery, a delegate of Local No. 135, Brooklyn, N. Y., came into prominence in connection with a number of sluggings and dynamiting jobs committed in the immediate vicinity of New York. Slattery, personally, was a giant, six feet and over in height and weighed 210 pounds, and of an extremely athletic build. He had been prominent in ironworker circles for a number of years and was one of their strongest men, so strong, in fact, that he engaged in politics. On March 31, 1908, during a fight in a Brooklyn saloon over a primary election, he shot and killed a man. The killing was done during a general melee in the saloon and Slattery had no trouble in getting away from the clutches of the law in regard to the death. In May of 1909 a small building belonging to the American Bridge Company, located within three blocks of Slattery's home, was dynamited and the same night the foreman of the American Bridge Company was assaulted by five or six men, some of whom were arrested. They insisted that they had been paid to do the work by Slattery and that he was the head of a gang of sluggers which was responsible for nearly all of the slugging connected with attacks on non-union builders in and about the city of New York. Slattery's politics and political affiliations not only got him out of trouble but kept getting him into trouble, for the latter part of 1910 he was indicted for assault in the second degree upon a labor delegate, and later in Brooklyn for attempting to purchase witnesses for a Coney Island assault. These latter cases are as yet undisposed of.

From April 1, 1910, until September, 1910, the dynamiting continued without interruption and with the detectives still working along various clues. About the 15th of September, 1910, the man who subsequently proved to be the nemesis of the entire gang entered the lists against them. That man was William J. Burns.

Prof. Charles Noble Gregory, formerly of the University of Wisconsin and late dean of the law department of the University of Iowa, has accepted the offer made him by the trustees of George Washington University to head the law department of that institution. Prof. Gregory will succeed Prof. Ernest Gustav Lorentzen, who resigned in order to become connected with the law department of the University of Iowa.

LOS ANGELES MEN SECURE PROPERTY.

Rio Antigua Group at Forest Now in New Hands.

North Star Is to Make Over Champion Mines.

Crises Has Been Reached in Smelter Smoke War.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

NEVADA CITY (Cal.) June 16.—Operations have been resumed at the Rio Antigua group at Forest, by E. S. Shank and associates of Los Angeles. Men are being put to work rapidly and it is evident that the company has mapped out a campaign of extensive developments. The old workings are being put in first-class condition, and within a few days driving for the channel will be resumed. The Rio Antigua has already expended about $80,000 in development work on this property and has opened up a large area of promising gravel. The main channel, however, has not yet been found, but indications are considered exceedingly bright.

The Rio Antigua is operating the property under a bond from the South Fork Mining Company. Several months ago a dispute arose between the bonders and the owners, and the property temporarily closed down. Recently an amicable agreement was reached, and the bond and lease renewed. E. S. Shank arrived from Los Angeles a few days ago to personally start operations. With the renewal of its activities the company is planning developments along broad lines. Work will be concentrated on completing the crosscut, which is expected to intersect the channel, and a large force of men constantly employed. It$ is understood that Walter Lawry, formerly superintendent of the Bald Mountain Extension property, and one of the leading mining men of Sierra county, will have charge of developments.

The Rio Antigua lies in the heart of one of the richest gravel fields in California. Adjoining properties have yielded fabulous quantities of gold, and several rich strikes have been made on Rio Antigua ground. The company has conducted operations over seventy years and appears on the eve of winning just reward for its faith and enterprise. The holdings are among the most extensive in the Forest district, comprising several hundred acres of ground.

Preparing to Acquire Champion.

It is understood that within a short time the famous Champion mines in this district will pass into full control of the North Star Mines Company. The latter has held the property under bond for nearly six months, during which time extensive developments have been prosecuted. From inside sources it is learned that results have been satisfactory, and the closing of the deal is expected within a short time.

The acquisition of the Champion by the North Star people will inaugurate a new era in the Nevada City district. Practically ever since its discovery in the early '50s, the Champion has ranked among the great gold mines of California. From time to time other properties have been acquired until today the group is one of the largest in the State. The total production of the Champion mines is estimated at about $15,000,000. Of late years the properties have not geen worked along the usual large scale, owing to the increasing expense attending deep mining and the financial straits of the owners. The North Star people are backed by practically unlimited capital, and will operate the Champion along modern lines. Among the improvements contemplated is the sinking of central shaft, which will largely reduce hoisting and pumping expenses, besides enabling the working of the property through a main avenue, in place of the four shafts now in use. Improvements will also be made to the plant. At present the Champion is making no attempt to extract ore from the deep levels, keeping its active twenty stamps running on quartz from the 800-foot point.

Crisis in Smoke Problem.

Within a few days the hostile forces of the Farmers' Protective Association and the Balaklala Copper Company, will have their first skirmish in the war recently declared by the grangers. The officers of the Balaklala have been cited to appear before Judge Morrow in the United States Circuit Court at San Francisco, to show cause why they should not be punished for contempt of court. The farmers charge that the smelting company has violated the decree under which the smelter is permitted to operate, and it is understood that this allegation will be actively contested by the smelter people. Upon the outcome of the fight will largely depend the future of copper mining and smelting in Shasta county. The Mammoth Copper Company is operating three furnaces at Kennett, and appears to have solved the smoke question by means of the baghouse, but the closing of the Balaklala will show whether the Mammoth is controlling the fumes as effectively as asserted.

The Mountain Copper Company Limited at Keswick is closely watching the struggle, and a victory for the smelting interests would probably mean the resumption of activities at this pioneer Shasta smelting town. At Delamar the Bully Hill Copper Company is arranging to change over its copper smelter to a zinc producer, while efforts will also be made to produce the red metal electrically. If this can be done it will probably result in clarifying the situation to a large extent. The closing of the smelters means the suspension of activities at numerous small gold mines, as these properties would be unable to operate if the market for fluxing ores was closed against them. Accordingly the outcome of the fight between the Balaklala and the farmers is being awaited with much interest by farming and mining interests throughout California.

Alleghany Notes.

The era of active production was inaugurated at the Gold Canyon mine last week. The five-stamp mill, recently erected, is in action and excellent ore is being treated. The pumps are unwatering the shaft, which is 135 feet, below the lowest adit, and as soon as the bottom has been cleared, a drift will be extended on the rich shoot opened several months ago.

The Independence Mining Company has let a contract for the immediate construction of a five-stamp mill. Large quantities of good-grade ore have been opened and the company is arranging for an active season. Developments are progressing with an increased force of miners.

J. M. O'Brien, the San Francisco magnate, who recently bonded the Tightner mine from H. L. Johnson, has placed C. C. Derby in charge of the examination work, and is arranging to push preliminary developments at several points. The bond runs till August, the owner declining to grant a further period. O'Brien states that if his associates decide to take over the mine, it will be operated on a large scale.

Pioneer Active.

The Pioneer mine, one of the largest active properties in Placer county, is producing about eighty tons of ore per day for the twenty-stamp mill. The veins have been opened to a depth of 1100 feet, by a 2600-foot crosscut, with the ledges varying from four to seventy feet in width. The property is owned by the Consolidated Pioneer Gold Mines Company. Several Southern Californians are understood to be interested. H. W. Morris is superintendent.

Bisbee.

SHATTUCK MINE IS CLOSED DOWN.

ONLY TWENTY MEN RETAINED TO GUARD PROPERTY.

Low Price of Copper Is Given as the Reason for the Stopping of Work—Present Condition of the Tombstone Consolidated—Little Damage in Mexico.

BISBEE (Ariz.) June 16.—Only twenty miners have been retained in the Shattuck mine, which closed down about a week ago. This force will be maintained indefinitely, for development work and proper care of the workings and surface equipment. About 120 men were thrown out of employment. Many of these have been taken by other mines, but about half of them have left for other localities. The only explanation given for the shutdown is that copper is too low in price for the economical extraction of the company's ores in proper quantity. The management did not care to continue gutting the property of its high-grade ores, considering it much better to await better copper prices, when the higher grade ores could be mixed with the lower, when tonnage extraction costs could be equalized and made much more economical by hoisting the average run of ore as it came to the miners.

Miners are at work sampling the ore in the workings of the Cochise Development Company. A meeting of directors is to be held in about a month, when the results of the sampling will be made known and when it will be determined whether the ore in sight will return a profit for extraction and reduction.

A new spur track is being run to the Mame shaft of the Great Western Copper Company at Courtland, especially for shipment of 1500 tons of ore now on the dump. Several companies are shipping ore from Courtland and Gleeson at the present time, but the camps are in the same condition as many in the southwest, with great quantities of ore in sight just a little too low in grade for profitable extraction.

The water level in the Tombstone Consolidated mines at Tombstone is said to have risen only to the 600 level and has not submerged the pumps on the 600-foot station. This fact is gratifying to the management, Secretary A. L. Grow stating that conditions are such that the mine could be readily unwatered at any time when work is to be resumed.

The new electric line of the Tigre Company is completed between the mine in Sonora and the power plant of the Copper Queen at Douglas. The power line has been under construction for nearly a year, but its operation latterly has been delayed, owing to the Mexican insurrection. Not only the Tigre, but a number of other mines in the same locality are to be afforded much better power and the bullion output in northern Sonora will be largely increased through the greater economy of operation thus secured.

With the coming of peace in Sonora, capital already is making plans for the operation of mines closed down for a year or more past. In the neighborhood of Noria, two smelters are to be blown in soon, one by the Cobriza Mining Company and the other by the Sonora Copper Smelting Company. Large plants are completed, but have not been operated on account of the unsettled conditions. In the Cananea neighborhood, the Calumet and Sonora Company has completed the installation of an electrolytic concentrating plant. Near Carbo, on the Sonora Railroad, a new mill is to be built by the West Coast Smelting and Refining Company, which has spent $100,000 on mine development and which is reported to have 3,000,000 tons of ore blocked out, sampling $10 a ton. A force of 100 men is employed on development, which has reached a depth of 500 feet with a length of $300 feet. The company, which owns 346 pertenencias, was organized at Pittsburgh, though its capital was raised very largely in Holland.

Late arrivals from Sonora state that less damage was done to the mines and mining interests by the insurrectos than reported during the progress of the trouble. The larger mines were hurt but little, but the smaller properties in a score or more of cases had to close down and lost their workmen, horses, arms and supplies. Little ill treatment, however, was inflicted on Americans and foreign property rights appear to be as secure as ever in northern Mexico.

State's Mineral Production.

The State Mining Bureau is now engaged in the annual collection of statistics regarding the mineral production of California in 1910. In the effort to make the record as complete as possible the co-operation of all persons engaged in producing minerals of any kind whatever is solicited by the officials of the Mining Bureau. To gain this end a call has been sent broadcast by Mineralogist Aubury.

HIGHER VALUES BEING SECURED

Consolidated Arizona Gets Better Results.

Blue Bell Is Being Worked by the Company.

General Conditions in the Prescott District.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

PRESCOTT (Ariz.) June 16.—The Humboldt smelter of the Consolidated Arizona Company, is shipping about ten cars of copper bullion a month. It is told that, by reason of late improvements, the cost of the plant's operation has been very materially lowered and that the works are profitable to a degree hitherto unknown. The company is working the Blue Bell mine on its own account and is securing much of its ore from that source. Down to the 600 level the Blue Bell ore is said to average 5 per cent. copper, with $2 to the ton in gold and silver. The main shaft is being continued down to 900 feet of depth.

The mill of the Climax Mining Company is being operated and gold shipments are being made to a Prescott bank. The mill is a small one and only five men are employed in both mill and mine, yet the result of a five-day run gave $3500 in gold bullion, of remarkably high grade. The present work is considered as nothing more than a sampling of the mine. Enough ore has been developed to warrant much larger operations and engineers are now considering the installation of a very much larger reduction plant, to be propelled by power hydraulically developed on the Hassayampa River, only a short distance from the camp.

A large reduction plant is to be placed on the property of the Lake Superior and Nevada Company in the Bradshaw Mountains and is to be ready for operation by January 1. Cyanide treatment will be the main feature of the plant, which is not to have stamps, the finer crushing being done through a tube mill and Chilian mills, the ore going to the tanks through 200-mesh screens. On the property already blocked out are 60,000 tons of ore which sample around $8 a ton. The mines, which lie north of those of the Tiger Gold Company, had more than local renown years ago, when $18,000 in free gold ore was taken from shallow workings on the main ledge. The property has been developed mainly by tunnels, though it is proposed to extract the ore mainly by a new inclined shaft.

Five different valuable fissures have been cut in an inclined shaft of the Nelson mine near Crown King, within the last fifty feet of 125 feet of total depth. The ore is iron sulphide, with good values in gold and silver, with an increasing percentage of copper. Manager G. P. Harrington expects to find native copper at greater depth.

An Eastern company is negotiating for the well-known Sink-to-Rise group of mines in Copper Basin district, now owned by Edward Block. The property is remarkable for the fact that values are found within kaolin, in a fissure vein which runs from three to ten feet in width, which carries gold values from $4 to $16 a ton, together with 24 per cent. of aluminum. This formation has been developed to a depth of 100 feet and seems to be continuous from the surface a length of 400 feet.

While work has been abandoned on the famous Congress mine at Congress and the mill has been closed down, the camp is by no means dead. A quarter of a mile southeast of the Congress is the Alaska mine of the United Mines Company, on which a 700-foot shaft has been sunk, developing ore below the 400 level estimated to be worth at least $1,000,000. The ore is of the same pyritic character as that of the Congress property and is being developed much in the same manner as was its better-known neighbor. The Alaska employs forty miners. On the property is a Nissen mill, with capacity for thirty tons a day. Its operation is somewhat constricted, owing to the absence of sufficient tank capacity in the cyaniding department.

A deal is said to be under consideration at Los Angeles for the sale, in that city, of a large block of stock of the Glorioso Mining Company, which has property in the Harcuvar Mountains, twenty miles north of Wenden. The mine has one of the largest mineral deposits in the Southwest, averaging over a hundred feet wide for the length of several claims. The main values are copper, yet there is one streak of about fifteen feet of strongly oxidized iron ore, said to average nearly $20 a ton in gold. In the effort to secure these gold values, a large Lane mill was erected last year, but the bullion returns were unsatisfactory, owing to the lack of concentration. The proceeds of the stock sale are to be used in the building of a concentrator, whereby it is hoped to secure a large proportion of the gold values. It is proposed to utilize the returns of the mill for further development of the property and for its eventual transition to a copper producer.

FOR TREASURE MINE.

STAMP MILL PURCHASED.

J. M. Worton, manager of the Treasure Mining and Milling Company, and V. A. Campbell, president of the Treasure company, arrived in Los Angeles from Kingman yesterday morning. At a meeting of the stockholders held yesterday afternoon a five-stamp mill was ordered for the property and will be placed in commission as soon as the weather is cool enough for work in that country. With a perpetual stream of water only 400 feet from the Treasure ledge, and with abundance of fuel near the mill site, the owners of the property have few difficulties with which to contend in its development.

Mr. Worton outfitted himself and his family last fall for a prospecting trip through northern Arizona, and within three days after leaving Kingman he located a fine property which he sold for $50,000. His plucky wife, in her miner's boots and short skirts, located the Treasure property, which themselves, Campbell and their associates are now developing with high success.

They have trenched the ledge in three places at a fifteen-foot depth, showing values from $1.25 to $40 in gold, silver and copper, and have sunk a shaft in the gangue between parallel veins from ten to fifteen feet in width which, at a depth of twenty-five feet, shows an average value of $5.55 per ton.

Two miles from the Treasure the Walnut Creek people are actively engaged. G. E. Worton is president of this company, and they have already ordered a five-stamp mill and concentrator. They have a big 100-foot ore body ahead of them and are now in the drift for sixty-five feet. This was the first property which J. M. Worton located.

The Walnut Creek property joins the famous Moss mine, known as the "Pride of the Pines," which was worked forty years ago. Moss is said to have made millions from it and he then disappeared. He was a one-eyed squaw-man of mystery and he always worked in the dark. Worton and Campbell say that the Walnut Creek country, which is fifteen miles east of Drake Station on the Santa Fe Railroad, will be a wonder producer.

IN THE EARTH.

Rare Minerals, Metallurgy and Chemistry.

LA COLORADO, Sonora (Mex.) May 10.—To the Editor of The Times: I am forwarding you by separate mail a small sample of graphite.

I would esteem it highly if you could advise me as to just how this particular kind of graphite would be classified and if you have any idea whether there may be a Pacific Coast market for the same.

If you will kindly answer either in your columns or by letter and advise what the charges are I will be glad to remit.

Yours very truly,
F. E. C.

ANSWER: No charges, Sir! This is a "free for all" department of The Times.

It is doubtful that you can find a market for the graphite submitted in the locality named.

The sample is graphite all right, but it is combined with coal.

We would therefore name the sample graphite with coal and grit present, but the impurities can be isolated and a marketable graphite obtained therefrom.

The deposit from which you obtained the sample should be carefully prospected. No two samples of the material from one foot apart will analyze alike.

Artificial graphite, obtained as a by-product from gas works, is a fierce competitor of natural graphite nowadays.

Volcanic Ash.

SWANSEA (Ariz.) May 11.—To the Editor of The Times: Enclosed find sample which comes from Mohave county, Arizona.

Would you please tell me in your "In the Earth" what it is and if of commercial value.

Yours respectfully,
Ch. Y.

ANSWER: The sample could be confused (at sight) with limestone, caliche, porphyritic rock, quartz, magnesite, gypsum and many others of the white race in the mineral and rock families.

Analysis proves the specimen to be volcanic ash and has an uncertain commercial value in the cement industry.

Vanadates Present.

BANNING, May 12.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am sending you samples found near this town which I think is scheelite. Please let me know if I am right or not through your "In the Earth" column. Get an answer as soon as possible.

Thanking you in advance,
Yours truly, J. H. T.

ANSWER: It shall be our endeavor to publish answers hereafter within three weeks after dates of communications, excepting those from Mexico or Alaska.

Sample No. 1 is porphyritic rock with vanadates trace only.

No. 2 is quartz with traces of lead and vanadic acid present.

No. 3 is altered pegmatite (graphic-granite.)

Hematite.

LOS ANGELES, May 12.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Am sending you a rather odd sample of ore from seventeen miles northwest of Cajon Pass. Does it carry lead? Kindly answer in "In the Earth."

Yours truly, J. C. T.

ANSWER: The sample is a handsome variety of botryoidal (grape-like form,) hematite.

Lead is not present in the mass. The ore will meet all requirements for cabinet specimens.

Porphyritic Base.

BLAKE, May 13.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am sending you by mail today three samples of rock, to the "In the Earth" department.

No. 1 is, we think, carbonate of lead. No. 2 is from the same lead, only about 300 yards away from No. 1. No. 3 is out of a large vein or schute, about 100 feet deep and we do not know what it is.

Will you kindly give me the names of the samples and what values they contain, if any.

We have been told that No. 3 carries selenium.

These samples are all from near Goffs, Cal.

Thanking you in advance for any information you can give us.

Yours truly, J. J. B.

ANSWER: Glad to hear from you. No. 1 is altered soda feldspar, lead sparingly present, and the prospect is worthy of further development. No. 2 is porphyritic rock soda present. No. 3 is altered albite with boron, and selenium present, low per cent.

Orthoclase and Albite.

LOS ANGELES, May 13.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Enclosed herewith please find two samples supposed to be potash feldspar. The deposit from which they come is near Goff's Station, on the Santa Fe Railroad, in San Bernardino county.

On the two claims I have located are three lens-shaped ledges, from twenty to thirty feet wide in the widest part. Is it potash feldspar? Is it pottery-grade feldspar? Is there any known process of extracting the potash on a profitable commercial scale?

Yours truly, G. W.

ANSWER: No. 1 is impure orthoclase (potash feldspar,) iron and soda present. No. 2 is impure albite (soda feldspar.)

Material represented by the samples would not be pure enough for pottery grade feldspar. There is no known process of extracting the potash on a profitable commercial scale.

Some over-educated dreamers (?) would advise you otherwise, however, and, at the same time, assure you that "there's millions in it."

The claims should be further prospected in the hope of finding higher-grade orthoclase.

Yellow Mica.

LOS ANGELES, May 15.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Enclosed find piece of rock. Please name it for me. Is there any gold or mica in it or of any value?

Yours truly, R. W. E.

ANSWER: The granitic sample carries no free gold; iron oxides and manganese oxides are present in the mass, with yellow mica somewhat resembling free gold.

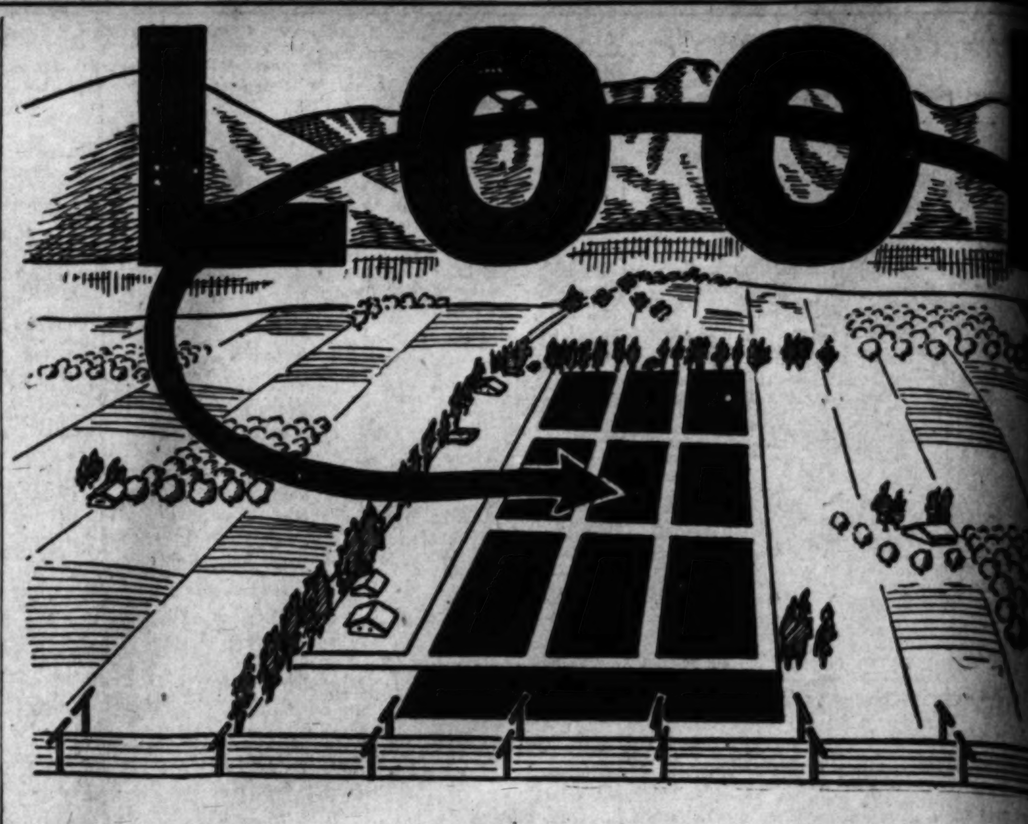
Edible Clay.

RICARDO, May 15.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Enclosed find a piece of rock that comes from this locality. Please name it for me. Has it any commercial value?

Thanking you in advance for favors,
Yours very truly, C. C. T.

ANSWER: The sample is a variety of talc or soapstone.

It will answer for certain



At the Park Ave. Tract First!

¶ See if in any particular it fails to come up to your requirements for a homesite—all of them. See if in the matters of accessibility, of good neighbors, of social advantages, of schools, of churches, of natural scenic beauty it is not among the most ideal spots you have ever seen. Consider its advantages fairly and squarely, with your eyes open. We don't want your patronage if you can find a better realty buy in all Southern California. But if we can prove to you, and we think we can, that in this Park Avenue Tract you can get lower prices for greater advantages, than you can find in any other development now on the market, then you want the land far more than we want to sell it to you.

These lots are priced at $375 and upwards. By the acre, they are bringing us no more than other agents near us are asking for smaller lots than ours. Undoubtedly this tract is one of the few really great buying opportunities left in the Glendale Valley today.

Note the Improvements

And Remember That These Big Lots Are Selling on Cash and Monthly Payments of Only $10

NO INTEREST, NO TAXES

Streets are graded and oiled. Cement sidewalks and curbs have been put in. There is plenty of pure, fresh, soft mountain water in the tract. And there are also gas and electricity. The restrictions which cover the purchase of every lot will protect without embarassing you. They will safeguard your homesite from all undesirable features. They will guarantee that your lot here will not deteriorate in value.

the extent of the underground lake which supplies irrigation water for this district is much larger than has been generally believed. A hufe well of great capacity has been brought in on the Bolton ranch in the Deer Creek district. This well is twelve inches in diameter. Although only sixty-five feet in depth it has a capacity of 300 inches of water.

After the well was tested out for capacity, it was capped with a ten-inch centrifugal pump ,and although this pump has been running at capacity for three days, driven by a 40-horse-power engine, the water in the bore, which now stands within an average of thirty-five feet of the surface, has not been lowered an inch. The water from this one well is enough for the irrigation of 2000 acres of alfalfa, and one more user has left the old canal system for the new and more convenient pump and well irrigation system. This well just brought in is considered by the owners to be worth $20,000.

BUILDING FOR WORKERS.

Dining and Social Quarters to be Provided for Factory Employees. Others to Follow.

That the Young Women's Christian Association's work among the factories is bearing fruit is attested by the good that has been accomplished at the factory of Bishop and Company, East Seventh and Alameda streets, where nearly 500 men and women are employed. Here a commodious lunch and rest room will be constructed at once, the plans for which have already been drawn by Architect De Forrest Howry.

The new building will face on Seventh street, adjoining the plant of Bishop and Company, and will be devoted exclusively to the use of the factory workers. It will be two stories, with wide verandas, a large dining-room, rest room and a room exclusively for men. The dining-room will be run on the cafeteria plan, where wholesome, well-cooked food will be served, a good lunch being had for 10 and 15 cents. The rest room will also serve for social gatherings, plays and parties. Evening educational classes will also probably be conducted here during the winter months by the Young Women's Christian Association.

Frances Holmes, who has charge of the Association's extension work, reports encouragement among many other firms with regard to establishment of lunch and reading rooms for their employees. The telephone companies, Brownstein, Newmark & Louis, the Western Union Telegraph Company and others are doing much for the welfare of their help. The Young Women's Christian Association is to be commended for the interest it is taking to make the lives of the hard working factory girls easier and happier.

FINE HOME PURCHASED.

Manager of Large Insurance Company Buys Beautiful Residence. Will Make Home Here.

Frank E. McMullen, who came here from Rochester, N. Y., to become manager of the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company in Southern California, has purchased from Frank E. Hartigan, the residence at No. 580 Western avenue. This home contains ten rooms, three baths, attic and double garage. The reception hall and living room are finished in Juanacosta mahogany; the music room in Tobasco mahogany; the dining-room in quartered oak. The decorations throughout are in hand work of the art nouveau type. The price paid was $11,000. L. L. Warner and Company handled the transaction.

Four years ago, when Mr. McMullen was president of the National Association of Life Underwriters, he visited Los Angeles and then decided he wanted to make his future home here. It is his purpose to endeavor to induce his company to make loan in Southern California.

VAN NUYS DOINGS.

Ernest Faure is building a large reinforced concrete building at Seventh and Sherman Way. Work on the bank building at the corner of Sherman Way and Virginia is progressing rapidly. The new water works plant, with an abundant supply for a population of 6000 to 8000, is completed, and the work of laying the laterals is being rushed. A large force of men are planting ornamental trees along the cross streets. New residences are springing up in every direction. The electric railway which will be the finest equipped in Southern California is rapidly nearing completion. The freight receipts averaged bout 300 carloads in past thirty days. A large force is at work on the railroad yards just north of Van Nuys. Mrs. Fannie M. Sanford and A. R. Mather have just purchased lots and will improve them with fine houses in the very near future.

Plans have been accepted and the contract awarded by Languin & Nordwold for a substantial business building on Sherman Way, just south of Virginia, which will be occupied by the above company for furniture and undertaking. The same people are building two beautiful homes on Seventh street, one block east of Sherman Way.

Sagstetter, five-room cottage, at No. 921 East Twenty-seventh street, $2750.

BUSY HAMMERS.

Fifty bungalows now under construction in the College tract of the Los Angeles Investment Company will, when completed, have brought to achievement the big task of covering this subdivision with homes. There will be nearly four hundred houses on the tract, practically all of them occupied. The last fifty houses are going up on Arlington street, between Vernon avenue and Fifty-second street and the parallel distances on Cimarron street. OIL NEWS FROM ANAHEIM.

All Sorts of Items About All Sorts of Things in the Kerosene District.

ANAHEIM, June 16.—The derrick on the Orange No. 4 is completed and ready for spudding in.

The Home Oil Company have pulled the four-inch casing in order to change a shoe.

The Murphy No. 5 is down 2290 feet and the work is proceeding in excellent shape.

The Amalgamated will soon have two new rigs started, Nos. 4 and 5.

The Shafer Oil Company have started work once more on their well in the western part of the field.

Delaware Union Oil Company are going to build a large carpenter and blacksmith shop in the near future.

The rigging on well No. 8 on the Menges has been completed and it is expected that work will be commenced at once.

The Whittier Des Moines Oil Company temporarily suspended operations pending the arrival of a shipment of three-inch well casing.

The Anchor Oil Company in the Whittier hills has a forty-foot bailer stuck in the pipe. They expect to get it loosened up soon.

The Menges Company well No. 7 is down over 600 feet with fifteen and one-half inch casing. This well was drilled to a depth of 500 feet without any pipe.

All the leases are taking precaution against fire spreading by plowing strips of land around the derricks and cutting the dry grass and stubble.

Well No. 44 of the Delaware Union is down 700 feet with fifteen and one-half inch casing. Well No. 45, which was recently spudded in is down over 200 feet with no casing.

A big gang has been busy putting in the pipe connecting the water supply from Whittier to the Amalgamated camp. The connections are about completed.

On the Murphy No. 2 well a careful watch on the pressure ghuge is kept all the time. Sometimes the gauge runs up over the 600-pound mark and it requires constant attention.

The Orange No. 3 well has successfully passed the string of tools that were lost in the hole some time ago. They are now awaiting the arrival of the six and one-quarter inch casing, when the drilling will be continued.

Well No. 26 on the Brea Canyon lease has been successfully bailed and will now be put on the beam for pumping. No. 26 is 4480 feet deep and has never produced a great amount of oil on account of the water but it is hoped that it will become one of the steady producers from this time.

The Berry ranch of 200 acres is among properties on which the Standard Oil secured leases last week. Ten thousand dollars bonus and yearly rental until a given number of wells are brought into production and deliver royalty are reported as the terms. The property is due west from Randolph and south of the Union holdings. The Frank McDermott ranch, immediately north of Fullerton and on this side of the hill, was another interesting lease made for the Standard during the week.

"Where Are Building Lot Values Likely to Increase in Value 150 Per Cent in the Next 18 Months?"

BY C. R. STUART

There is just one locality where, in all probability, residential values will increase 150 per cent, and perhaps more, within the next year and a half—and that is in the extreme Southwest section of the city. To be more definite and specifically name a subdivision, I would point out "Angeles Mesa," where lots are today offered at nearly 50 per cent under their real market value.

The extremely low prices are a result of the purchase of the entire plateau at a rock bottom figure by the owners and developers. Angeles Mesa is destined eventually to become the most coveted residence property in the city because of its exceptional altitude. It is the highest subdivision in Los Angeles—a veritable balcony, commanding a vista of mountains, valley and the city that instantly captivates every visitor to the property.

Property values within only a couple of blocks of Angeles Mesa have increased several hundred per cent within the last two years. The trend of the best residential development is logically in this direction. The artist's sketch reproduced above shows the splendid $250,000 college building just opposite Angeles Mesa—the site is considered one of the finest for an educational institution available in America. "Mesa Drive," a grand boulevard 180 feet wide, is another notable feature of Angeles Mesa. All public improvements and utilities are well established. If you want an exceptionally desirable homesite in a community that is refined and exclusive—and if you are looking for the locality where values are apt to increase the most during the next 18 months—go and see Angeles Mesa today by all means.

Special automobile excursions will be run Sunday from the offices of the owners. The offices will be open till noon. Prospective purchasers may go out in one of the company's automobiles or take Inglewood cars at Second and Broadway. Angeles Mesa Land Company, owners. RUMORS PLENTIFUL ANENT LITIGATION.

Not All of Railroad Land Is to Be Attacked.

Distinction Between Recovery of Oil and Land.

Associated Has Good Well in Elk Hills Section.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

BAKERSFIELD, June 16.—It is now stated on what purports to be good authority that the proposed action of the government to enjoin the Southern Pacific from removing oil from land obtained under grants will not extend to all the railroad sections where it is supposed that oil will hereafter be found, but will be confined to those sections in North Sunset and vicinity where the K. T. & O. is now getting a good production. Other railroad sections where there is now no development will not be included in the first suit, according to the report.

Simplicity and the saving of time are the motives which actuate the government in this decision, and the fact that there will be no difficulty in proving that the sections in question are oil bearing also is an important consideration. Were the government to bring suit to receive title to oil in unproven lands it would possibly become a tedious and expensive matter first to prove that there is any oil there. By taking a few proven sections for a test case the right of the government to the oil in land patented to the railroad can be established or disestablished as well as though the proceedings covered all the lands included in all the grants.

Another matter of importance in connection with the expected suits is the distinction overlooked by many writers on the subject—between a recovery of the land patented to the railroad and the recovery of the oil in the land. It is stated that the patents to the land will not be attacked, but that the government will seek to establish that the patents to the railroad do not carry with it the right to extract the oil that may be found beneath the surface. Such a contention would be in line with the recently developed policy of seperating the righ to till or graze the surface of the lands from the right to mine for coal or other minerals that may lie beneath.

It happens that in the case of the west side oil lands the surface in nearly all cases is worthless except as a place to build derricks, erect tanks and reservoirs and string pipe lines, and, if it is determined that the public owns the valuable oil strata while the railroad owns only the worthless surface, the government may be able to lease or buy the railroad's surface interests to facilitate the oil development when the time comes. This speculation, which is only speculation at the present time, illustrates the many fine and interesting points which a suit to recover the oil from the railroad lands may develop.

With the oil sand barely uncovered at a depth of nearly three thousand feet, the Associated has a well in section 30, 30-24, Elk Hills, which, it is estimated, will produce 300 barrels of 28-gravity oil. So soon as the oil began to show in quantity the deepening of the well was stopped, pending the building of a pipe line to section 26, 30-23, a mile and a half or two miles to the west. At this point, the line, which will be two and a half inches in diameter, will connect with a four-inch line to Midway. The latter line was laid to supply fuel for drilling the well on section 26.

While the new well has not been tested and no close estimate can be made as to its probable production, oil men, who have visited it, are confident that it will be a really good producer and that it proves that there is an oil field in the Elk Hills, a question concerning which there has been much doubt in recent months. It is believed that the new well is in a very much more prolific sand than was encountered in the Associated's well on section 26, at a depth of 3400 feet. The latter well, which was the only strike in that territory until the well on section 30 came in, has been deepened to 4000 feet without developing any further profitable sand. Oil from the 3400-foot level is coming up between the casings, and shows a very high gravity.

At a depth of 3150 feet, the Canadian Pacific has brought in on section 4, 32-23, a well which is producing 1000 to 1500 barrels of 27-gravity oil. The well is in line with the big development of the North Midway in the past year, and is in what is now recognized as excellent oil territory, although a year and a half ago it was wholly unproven.

The Pyramid Oil Company has landed the eight-inch casing at 3000 feet in its well on section 18, 32-25. The present formation is hard shell, and when this is penetrated, it is expected that the oil sand will be encountered.

The K. T. & O. well on section 5, 32-23, is making about one thousand barrels per day, and that of the Midway Premier is reported around eight hundred.

MIDWAY NORTHERN. BIG WELL PRODUCING.

The Midway Northern well No. 1 is keeping up its flow of 2500 barrels of oil per day through a one-inch aperture. This well is into the oil sand at 1945 feet. Well No. 2 is down 1928 feet, but as there is some dip to the stratum, it will probably strike the pay about 100 feet deeper than it was found in the former. There is every indication that it will be a gusher.

The adjoining Maricopa Northern well is being reamed out for setting the six-inch pipe, previous to breaking through the shell formation capping the oil sand. The hole is kept full of water to prevent the tools being thrown up through the derrick when the shell is perforated. A great deal of gas is already bubbling up, indicating that pay is close. The Standard is taking the oil from the Midway Northern regularly, and is preparing to connect its pipe line with the tanks of the Maricopa Northern.

MAKING FINAL SURVEY. GUARANTY PIPE LINE.

T. O. Turner, manager of the pipeline department of the Guaranty Oil Company of this city, is now in the field, accompanied by Surveyors Parsons and Barton of Bakersfield. They are making the final survey and setting the stakes for the new pipe line from Maricopa to Santa Barbara.

G. H. Burdick, field superintendent of the Guaranty Oil Company.

The Guaranty owns producing properties in the Midway field, and recently took over the plant of the Alcatraz Refining and Asphalt Company at Carpinteria with twenty acres of ocean frontage. The preliminary survey of the proposed pipe line showed its entire feasibility, and the financing of the project has reached a stage where actual construction work will soon begin.

R. L. Cox, general manager Guaranty Oil Company.

Some time ago an arrangement was made by General Manager R. L. Cox of the Guaranty whereby the American Oilfields Company (Doheny) operating in the Midway field, is to have control of one-fourth the capacity of the pipe line.

The engineers in the field the other day communicated by telephone with the officials in this city, stating that the work was progressing nicely.

SAN EMIDIO FIELD. OIL STRIKE REPORTED.

The G. R. Oil Company is reported to have struck oil in section 22, 11-20, San Emidio field. The company located there largely on the strength of one of Ralph Arnold's reports in which he says: "I have no hesitation in saying that this is one of the best prospective oil propositions of which I know, and I feel that the geologic and structural conditions both favor the presence of commercial quantities of petroleum at reasonable depths under the land."

The depth at which the G. R. company struck the sand is said to be between 1200 and 1500. Nothing is definitely known about it, as the superintendent is not giving out information of any kind. The Midway Union has a large tract of land near the G. R. property.

CLEANING OLD WELLS. INCREASING THE OUTPUT.

The Atlantic Oil Company is pleased with the report of Superintendent Kyle, of its recently purchased Kern River holding. The production has been largely increased by the cleaning out of the wells, those that had an output of fifteen to twenty barrels now averaging about fifty barrels a day. In the No. 5 well a broken-off working barrel was found at 700 feet and pushed to the bottom and pulverized. Three of the ten wells remain to be cleaned. New and improved burners have been placed under the boilers, resulting in a decrease in the fuel from forty to about twenty barrels of oil per day, which is a notable saving. Wells 11 and 12 will be spudded on the first of the month, and should be finished in thirty days, as the depth is only about 850 feet.

On the Atlanta's Ventura property steady progress is being made in the "Whale" well, which was started with sixteen and one-half inch casing.

PALMER UNION PROGRESS.

The Palmer Union Oil Company has its well No. 1 nearly cleared of sand and is preparing to put it on the pump. A few days' pumping should start the oil gushing, as there is greater gas pressure than any of the adjoining Palmer gushers exhibited when they were brought in. The casing of this well when put into the oil sand was buckled by the enormous gas pressure and new casing had to be put in, this causing the delay in finishing it.

Well No. 2 is being cemented at 2700 feet and drilling will be resumed within the week. It is expected to be completed and flowing within thirty days. No. 3 is about 2200 feet deep and has the same formation as the Palmer gushers; there is already a considerable showing of gas in the shale. No. 4 is about ready to be spudded and will shortly be followed by No. 6.

On the company's Tapo lease a good road has been built, and well No. 1 drilled to a depth of 700 feet. The wells on the Midway property are producing twice what they did before cleaning, and speeding the pumps, and No. 5 is nearly completed.

Battle Rumors.

IS NOW INTRENCHED IN NORTHERN LAND.

Rothschild Oil Interests to Buck the Standard.

Distributing Station Near the City of Seattle.

Standard Secures Light Oil from Katalla Field.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

SEATTLE, June 16.—That the Shell-Royal Dutch Companies, under the name of the Asiatic Oil Company, intend to invade the entire Pacific Coast in their fight against the Standard Oil Company, is indicated by the purchase of a tract of land several acres in extent at Richmond Beach, a few miles to the northward of Seattle, on Puget Sound and the Great Northern Railway. Agents of the invaders admit that the ground is to be utilized for a distributing station intended no' tonly to serve the immediate territory but as well all the Northwest, and to stretch back perhaps half way across the continent.

With the Rothschilds on the one side and the Rockefellers on the other, the struggle promises to be the greatest battle of millions that has ever been witnesed. It is the claim of the Rothschild interests that they control two-thirds of the oil business of the world. The Shell companies use the Sumatra and India oil fields as their chief source of supply, but now have added the big tracts purchased in the California oil belt.

Some time ago the Standard Oil Company indicated that it had under consideration plans for the enlargement of its Puget Sound facilities, and the location at which large works were to be placed was guessed as a point near Port Townsend, but this surmise was not correct. In a few days Manager John McLean of the northwest operations of the Standard is expected to make announcement of his plans. These are far more extensive in their scope than the public has any idea.

With gasoline as the crying need of the oil market, and California producing chiefly the heavy asphaltum oil, the action of the Standard in purchasing 100,000 barrels of the Katalla (Alaska) oil, which is a paraffine and gasoline oil of high grade, is regarded as noteworthy. This gives the Standard the first of the northern flow, which will soon begin to come southward.

This arrangement on the part of the Standard works in nicely with the contract to supply the Copper River and Northwestern Railway with fuel oil. The Copper River line has determined that California fuel oil is cheaper than the Alaska coal could be mined for—supposing it could be mined at all—and will cost only a fraction as much as the present supply, which is imported from British Columbia. The Llewellyn Iron Works of Los Angeles is preparing to ship northward steel for a 2io of tanks that will hold a total of 105,000 barrels of oil.

The Llewellyn concern is just completing three tanks having a total of 37,000 barrels capacity, at Katalla, for the Amalgamated Development Company, which is preparing to market the flow of four wells. These wells were drilled several years ago, but the public never knew how much of a yield they produced, for strife grew up among the various companies interested in the ground, and it was a game of "freeze-out" until new interests gained possession.

The smallest of these three Katalla tanks, of 2000 barrels, stands at the wells, while the second is about three miles away, where the pipe line leaves the mainland to cross to Kanak Island, and there the 30,000-barrel loading tank was placed. The pipe line between the intermediate and largest reservoirs is not completed, and an eight-inch feed pipe is yet to be laid about a mile from the largest one to the Controller Bay roadstead.

That operations in the Katalla district are to be more extensive this year than ever before is apparent. The Amalgamated Company plans to drill as many as ten new wells; the Katalla Oil Company has an excellent location and is to drill this season; the Pioneer Oil Company is drilling right near the producing wells; the Alaska-Canadian Oil and Coal Company has a rig at Mirror Slough, and W. B. Vanderlip, a cousin of the president of the National City Bank of New York, is preparing to operate on a tract of several hundred acres of oil land he has in the neighborhood of Katalla.

SANTA MARIA FIELD. PALMER GETS RELIEF.

SANTA MARIA, June 16.—Cat Canyon's famous gusher, Palmer No. 1, which has steadily been pouring forth between 1000 and 2000 barrels of oil daily, since May 7, 1908, has at last sanded up and has gone "dead." This wonderful spouter, beyond doubt the longest-lived gusher in the history of the American oil industry, has produced over 1,000,000 barrels during its career. The trouble came about some ten days ago, when a cave-in occurred in the subterranean depths underlying Palmer Nos. 1 and 2. This caused a sudden sanding up and both wells refused to flow.

No. 1 has never been properly cleaned out. It was finished up at a depth of 3300 feet, but an accident occurring to the casing plugged up the bottom of the well, and the immense production has come forth at a point somewhere about 2700 feet. Operators at the well are thoroughly convinced that the famous gusher is far from being a "has been," and work is now on foot to clean out the bottom of the well, when it is expected "Old Faithful" will spout again with a volume in excess of what it has hitherto shown.

No. 2 has been somewhat of a troublesome customer. It has frequently sanded up, and just as frequently has gone on a rampage, throwing the black product against the hill at a daily rate of from 5000 to 10,000 barrels. Last October the well was shut in for a time and considerable difficulty was encountered in re-establishing the former figures of production. It is believed, however, by the company's expert men that the well will shortly resume its erstwhile enormous figures of production, as soon as the operators are ready to turn it loose again.

The directors of the Palmer Oil Company are feeling more highly elated than otherwise over the cave-in incident, for it would seem that nature has solved a most weighty problem. Over half a million of barrels are at present in storage, upon the lease, and, with the famous pair of spouters steadily at work, production was mounting up faster than transportation or storage could care for it. Already had Nos. 3 and 4 been shut in, while No. 5, about to come in at any time, was tabbed for like procedure. Now the overtaxed powers of sump and delivery may take a figurative breathing spell.

Work on the Palmer Annex holdings is going rapidly forward. Two 10,000-barrel tanks have been completed, while work has begun upon the first 55,000-barrel tank. Ground has been broken for the site of a terminus depot, a boarding-house and quarters for the men. The spur line is under way, and inside of thirty days work will be started upon the asphalt refinery, which will extend over a period of three or four months to completion. The refinery will be built to a capacity estimated at 3000 barrels daily, which tends to show that the company expects a big production.

Palmer Annex No. 2 was successfully cemented two weeks ago, at 2750 feet, on the eight-inch, a new string is now being run in. A fishing job on No. 1 has been successfully culminated, four strings of tools having been hauled out into daylight. No. 3 is down about 400 feet, while No. 4 is just starting. Two more rigs are to be built at once.

Princess No. 1, on the Muscio Tract in the Tinaquaic district, is going rapidly and smoothly ahead. The drill is working at a depth of 2350 feet in a formation of dark brown shale, on the eight-inch casing. A plentiful gas pressure is reported.

Princess No. 2, on the Tunnell Tract in the Tepusquet district, is looking better day by day. Day before yesterday the drill passed through an eighty-foot stratum of hard sandstone formation which had been bothering the drillers for several days. When the drill plunged through the troublesome shell a terrific gas blow-out occurred which sent water boiling over the casing to, inundating the floor of the derrick and spattering the workmen standing near. The drill is now pounding away at a depth of 152 feet. The Princess people are so well pleased with the prospect of this well that they have negotiated for a considerable acreage in holding on two or three tracts to the north of their well.

It is reported that the California Meridian Oil Company will very shortly put up a rig about eight miles to the north of the Princess well. The ground has been covered by two or three experts, and the new company expects to find ample production for the outcome of their venture.

The Gato Ridge Oil Company has leased 400 acres of the Teresa Bell ranch and is erecting a rig thereon.

Making Good Progress.

George De Sellum of Sunland is a large stockholder of the Consolidated Midway Chief Oil Company, and has recently visited the property in Towsley Canyon, near Newhall. He states that the drillers are down about 200 feet and making good progress in hard brown shale, alternating with strata of shells, under which there is more or less gas. New tools have been shipped in, and with two shifts of men everything is complete for steady work. The boiler fuel is gas from the four drilled wells. The logs of the adjoining wells of the Standard Oil Company give the depth of the first pay sand at about 1600 feet, and of the second from 2500 to 3000 feet. If the first of these proves a small producer, drilling will continue to the lower one, from which the Standard is getting in several of its wells a fine production of high-gravity oil.

Developing the District.

The companies drilling in the Vallecitos district are making steady progress, and two of them have good indications for oil at a not much greater depth. The Sussex, which had a big gas blowout recently, is down 11 feet. The Range 16 has a depth of between 1400 and 1500 feet with a fine showing of gas and light oil. all probability the pay sand found here at less depth than in the Sussex, which is drilling near the ties and the various farmers' organizations have expressed favor for the treaty. In this Province but very few associations have declared themselves against reciprocity.

ALBERTA, TOO.

The feeling in Alberta Province is almost solid for reciprocity, but it is not considered probable that annexation would follow. The Premier and the entire ministry have declared themselves as favorable to the agreement. This is probably the richest Province in the Dominion. Its resources having but lately been developed, it is bringing millions of dollars of eastern Canadian money, as well as a great deal of capital from the eastern part of the United States for investment purposes. This Province is also settled by a great many Americans, and while they are in favor of reciprocity, they are decidedly against annexation.

The province of New Brunswick is a political hot-bed over the question of proposed reciprocity, but if the question could be divorced from politics and treated as a purely business proposition, it would receive hearty support of fully four-fifths of the people of the province of New Brunswick. This province has suffered for years by trying to force trade through unnatural channels, it is a well-known fact that New Brunswick has no market in the western part of the dominion for its leading industries, that of lumber and farming products, and naturally must look to the United States and to England for a market for its goods. At present this province does an extensive trade with America, mostly in shingles and small lumber and it is easily understood why they favor the treaty as it would greatly increase the demand for these articles and make New Brunswick's leading industries more profitable. The annexation question in connection with reciprocity is not taken very seriously by this province. The Premier as well as his ministers have expressed themselves as being favorable towards the proposed treaty.

QUEBEC SPLIT.

The Quebec province has suffered a complete split over the questions of reciprocity and probable annexation, with the rural people on the favorable side of the treaty and the manufacturers and moneyed interests located in the larger cities decidedly set against it. The farmers in the province of Quebec are almost united in their favor of reciprocity while the other side claims that it will surely be followed by annexation and that annexation would mean the ruin of the entire dominion. If a vote were left to the people it is probable that reciprocity would win and all probabilities point to the end that it will be settled by an election in which the question will be fought out. The Premier, Sir Lomere Gouin, has made but one statement and that statement briefly stated that the natural resources of Quebec must and will be rigidly protected.

Manitoba is one province that is strongly opposed to the issue of reciprocity, more as a fact, the possibilities of following annexation as it is felt throughout the province that an acceptance of reciprocity would lead ultimately to that of annexation and with this view in hand the Premier, Mo. Borden, begins his campaign in a fortnight through the western section of the province where he will wage a bitter campaign against the treaty. The moneyed interests of Winnipeg have vowed to defeat reciprocity at any cost.

ONTARIO LEERY.

The feeling against reciprocity in the province of Ontario is due to the possibilities of annexation, to which the province is strongly opposed. On the basis of reciprocity, and reciprocity alone, the majority is neither one way or the other; if the people in the large cities were to vote on the issue it is probable reciprocity would suffer an embarrassing defeat, while on the other hand, were a vote to be taken in the rural municipalities a different story would be told. The rural districts, however, do not carry enough weight and it is probable that the province of Ontario will go on record as opposed to the treaty. Sir James Whitney, Premier of the province, presented a resolution to the Legislature of Ontario, which was passed on a straight party vote, which indicated that reciprocity has resolved itself into a political issue. Politics, however, do not enter into the feeling against annexation.

NOVA SCOTIA.

Very few people in Nova Scotia favor reciprocity, and the Premier, Mr. Murray is the leading factor in the strong feeling exhibited in that province. In regard to annexation, the opinion is divided along party lines, but not altogether so. A resolution recently passed in the Nova Scotia Legislature was against the treaty. Conservatives are in the majority in the province and this reason can be advanced for the marked opposition. About the only people that can be said to favor the agreement are those engaged in the fishing business, but they are greatly in the minority.

Unrest in Nippon.

AN HAS THREE GRIEVANCES IS RUNNING ARSENALS OVERTIME.

Stress is Coming on and She is Not ght Again, Just Yet—Cost of Living for ople Increased One-third—Count Okuma ment Nation Will Not Stand Tariff.

BY COL. H. B. BEECHER,
Special Representative of The Times in Japan.

would unhesitatingly declare that such a race could not pass successfully through the crucial test that lies before Japan, for moral strength is required to endure through all national crises.

Whether reverence for their Emperor and love of their country will enable the common people to hold out through the hard times that are coming remains to be seen. The thoughtful people of this empire seem to realize that the effect of the new tariff will be disastrous to Japan's ambitions.

Count Okuma, one of the "elder statesmen," and once Premier, seems to realize the folly of this effort on the part of the government to increase its revenues by an advance in tariff charges; he declares that the people will not stand for it. With the heavy taxation now prevailing, the margin of wages left for living expenses is frightfully small, too small to be endured by any nation. With the new tariff in operation, adding an additional third to the cost of living, it makes the future of Japan look gloomy.

On the other hand, there are two facts that seem singular to a close observer, and for which there is seemingly but one explanation.

First, why is Japan so feverishly anxious to pay off her war debt before it is due. And, next, why are her arsenals working double time in the manufacture of explosives? I learn from a high source that Japan has invented a new explosive far ahead of any now in use, and from which she expects great results in her next war. The common people seem to take it for granted that their next war will be with the United States. They seem to have three grievances: (1) That we, by urging the Portsmouth treaty, robbed them of the results of their victories over Russia; (2) that we have, particularly in the Pacific Coast States, shown an unfriendly spirit, and in prohibiting them the use of public schools, have classed them with the Chinese, a thing which they particularly resent, and, (3) that we are endeavoring to loosen their grip on Manchuria, and by diplomatic methods are trying to discredit them with China, thus injuring their trade with that country.

There seems to be a condition of unrest throughout this land. What it means the future will reveal.

STANDARD WILL PUSH ITS WORK.

BUILDING NEW PIPE LINE AND SECURING LEASES.

Company Now Has About Four Hundred Acres Under Lease in That Field—Pipe Lines to Connect With New Refinery at El Segundo. Other Concerns Are Active.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

ANAHEIM, June 17.—The Standard Oil Company is extending its development work not only by leasing oil lands but by the building of new pipe lines. Six carloads of six-inch pipe and two carloads of tank steel have been unloaded at Northam station on the Santa Fe, and the new pipe line will be built up the Coyote Creek past the Murphy wells and on through the La Habra Valley to Brea Canyon and Olinda. The Standard is intending to be in position to control the greatest output of oil from the entire field. A big pumping and storage station will be built at Northam station on the Woods ranch, which has recently been acquired. It is understood that the El Segundo refinery is to be the terminus of the pipe line.

The Standard has something over 400 acres under lease in the field and the development work is beginning on nearly all of it The P. Yriarte tract is the first to have the lumber on the ground for the rig. This tract is the eastern line of the company's holdings, but the principal work will be in the west end of the field. In the Coyote Hills the Standard has leased the Toler ranch and a well will be sunk on this property at once. Oil leases are being sought on all the foothill and mesa lands running from the San Gabriel River east and up to the La Habra Valley and this summer's development work will show a wonderful increase in proven oil territory.

The Truman Berry tract of several hundred acres northwest of Fullerton, about a mile from the city limits, has been leased for twenty-five years to Don A. Baxter of Lima, O., who is now in Los Angeles, and is understood to represent the Standard interests. The terms are $15,000 and royalties.

The Shaffer Oil Company has taken a lease on a tract one mile north, belonging to Mrs. Anna H. Foster.

The Whittier-Des Moines is down 3622 feet with four and one-half-inch casing. At 3365 the first sand was entered and continued for thirty-five feet. The Murphy is reported to have obtained this sand at about thirty-five feet greater depth, and on a tryout it is said to have shown good for about 300 barrels. The second sand, in which the Murphy well finished, has not yet been struck, but should be entered very soon if the formation on the Murphy property is maintained. The Standard has obtained the right of way for its pipe line to the Toler lease which adjoins the Whittier-Des Moines, so that that company will be provided with an immediate market.

Among the other operatives in the Fullerton district, the La Habra Oil Company is down 780 feet on the old New England lease with good indications of oil. The company will go deeper, however, for lighter oils which have been found in this section. This lease was worked about ten years ago, but the well plugged up after showing a good flow of oil.

The Fullerton company has one string of tools going in the Whittier field and the rigging up on No. 2, preparatory to spudding This company is making good dividends.

The Colorado company has three strings of tools going and the Central company is running nine strings. The latter has two rigs up and are using electric power on two wells.

The Murphy company will deepen No. 19, which is now down 2600 feet, and a better flow of oil is expected. Number 26 is down 2500 feet, No. 27 is down 1600 feet, and No. 28, 1000 feet.

The Industrial Oil Company has completed the rigging of No. 48 and the well was spudded in this week.

Ready for a Gusher.

B. X. Dawson left for Maricopa last night in order to be present at the bringing in of the Dawson well No. 1. The drill is expected to strike the pay sand at any moment. As soon as it is finished a second well will be started with a rotary, as the ground is proven to be right for that kind of rig, and a well can be put down in one-third the time required by a standard rig. The sumps and tanks for the expected gusher are finished, and the Standard Oil Company is ready to take the output according to contract. The oil in this vicinity finds a ready market as it is 25 gravity and easily refined. Adjoining the Dawson the K. T. O. well 16 continues to flow 1500 barrels of oil a day of this gravity.

INDUSTRIAL SALES.

George M. SoRelle, manager of the department of industrial real estate of the G. H. A. Goodwin Company, reports the following sales and leases: F. E. and Emma F. Gaston to the Excelsior Cereal Milling Company, a lot 45x140 feet on the east side of Santa Fe avenue, between Seventh and Atlantic streets, $4500, or $100 per front foot. The purchaser was represented by the Edwards-Wildey Company. Dan E. Smith to Fairchilds-Gilmore-Wilton Company, a lot 50x130 feet on Thirty-seventh Place and Hoover street, $4000; Warren E. Rowley to the Southern California Chemical Company, 4.338 acres on the Salt Lake Railroad east of the Los Angeles River, on the Jaboneria or Downey road, $8750; Charles W. Brashear to James Shultz, about 36,000 square feet on the Santa Monica branch of the Southern Pacific Railroad and Hooper avenue, $10,000. Charles L. Pinney and William Titus lease to the Pittsburgh Foundry Company and S. U. King Machinery Company the plant and site on Thirty-second, Naomi and the Southern Pacific Railroad formerly occupied by William Titus Foundry. Lease is for five years; total rental $10,500, or $175 per month.

NOW'S TIME TO BUILD.

far from Los Angeles. There is seldom a time when the big mills of Washington, Oregon and the northern part of California are not willing to cut rates if they can gain anything over their competitors. With practically all of the big mills shipping to Los Angeles, this being the greatest lumber distributing center on the Pacific Coast, prices here are continually affected. This has been true during the past year, especially for the reason that there has been much more activity in local building fields than through the Middle West.

Since June of last year the price of lumber has been forced down gradually from $21 to $17 per thousand feet. These are base prices, from which siding, ordinary flooring, and so on, are figured. Last year the figures were lower than the year previous; so this season sees lumber cheaper, perhaps, than it has been in three or four years. Predictions of several local lumber dealers are that prices will rise soon.

A COMBINATION.

"There has been a coalition of some of the bigger mills in Washington and Oregon and a general agreement seems to have been reached that no further cutting is to be done," said one of them. With a continuance of heavy building operations, prices will go higher and to get the advantage of present quotations means to buy now.

Shingles are selling at $3.40, only 10 cents less than a year ago. This quotations stands on redwoods, cedars being worth more. On the other hand, the various compound roofing materials, made of paper, rubber, asphalt and kindred products, have come down and are acting as real factors in the shingle market. Many contractors report an ever increasing demand for this sort of roofing which is considerably cheaper than shingle and is accepted generally as just as good where small buildings are to be covered.

There has been no differentiation in lath, either lumber or metal. Metal lath is coming into greater use because of the solidity it imparts; and as the price of wood advances, metal lath are expected finally to do away entirely with ordinary lath.

Cement is 5 cents a barrel lower. Lime is just the same, plaster is worth $11.50 per ton now and was worth that a year ago. It takes about two tons of plaster to cover the walls and ceilings of a six-room house, so that this would not be a heavy item in the cost of construction.

The very heavy demand for crushed stone to be used in road work and also in building has kept the price of that at a very even base. It is selling at $2.80 per yard on the best sandstone or granite crush put into concrete foundation or piers.

BRICKS UP.

Bricks are up from 50 cents to $1 per thousand. They sold last year as low as $4.50 for a few days. The average price was $5. These low figures were caused by the rate war which waged between the different brick companies of Los Angeles and which was amicably settled, at least as far as surface indications go. Even at the present cost of $5.50 per thousand bricks are much cheaper in Los Angeles than they are in Chicago, New York or any other city of size.

CUTS ON DOORS.

Then there are sash and doors to be figured on. In these there have been some very deep cuts. A fine, hardwood door, solid panels with heavy brass ornamentation that sold for $25 last year can be purchased for about $19 at the present time. The same is true of window frames, chair railing, base boards, moulding and similar accessories. They are selling so low that most of the manufacturers claim they are losing money on their output.

Plumbers' supplies, bath tubs, basins, toilets and all iron, enamel and similar ware are selling at 5 to 10 per cent. less than last year. The reason again is said to lie in the fierce competition that exists between the many supply houses. Builders' hardware comes in the same category.

BUILDING CONCERNS.

Factors in the creation of competition evolved among others the great home building concerns of Los Angeles, which locally represent more capital than similar institutions in any other cities of the United States. These investment companies have jobbing connections. They cut out much of the middleman's profits. They employ help more cheaply than the average contractor in so far as they are able to make a wage offer for the period of a year, or two years to their employees at a certain figure. Assuring continued work and no idle days, they are able to obtain men for lower figures than the average builder.

Further, they have their own lumber yards, their own planing mills, their own architects and are as a whole co-operative, which has enabled them to put down the cost of building. They have been beneficial to the man who builds his own home if he builds through a contractor, for the reason that they have forced the contractor to shade his profits very closely. They have made it impossible to demand exorbitant figures for building in this city and have been a great aid in maintaining the lowest possible building prices. The contractors are the ones who have suffered. It has driven some of the smaller ones out of business, but has not effected the larger ones.

HOT AFTER BUSINESS.

Then the contractors state that in no other city in the country is there so keen a contest for business as there is here among the plumbers' supply houses, the hardware dealers, the lumber yards. There is a greater ratio of these dealers in Los Angeles to the population than elsewhere and in order to turn over their money and get a fair interest they are forced to sell close and fast. When they get together and decide that it is time to quit these practices, which they are doing more or less at the present time, prices are bound to advance, as have bricks for an example.

Secretary Campbell of the Exchange stated that the consensus of opinion among the builders belonging to the organization predicts advances. "Prices are at rock bottom and can go no lower" he declared. "They can and will advance and that before the end of the year so that the man who really wants to profit by the low cost of building should get in and finish his plans at once and build before the end of the summer."

The president of a great timber corporation, who passed through Los Angeles several weeks ago from his home in Seattle on his way to New York, stated that there is nothing that will more surely advance than timber in the next five years. "Reciprocity with Canada may have a very brief effect on the market, but much of the Canadian timber is held by American capitalists who have similar interests in the United States and cannot afford to kill one side of their business to help the other," he stated. With this and many similar assurances of higher prices in the future it is apparently time to build that new house and do it now.

NEW-COMERS ARE HERE TO STAY.

Demand for Pasadena Realty Continues Good.

New Companies Organized to Build Many Houses.

Wonderful Activity Noticed in Building Operations.

PASADENA, June 17.—The real estate business for the past week has shown a slight dullness owing to the approach of the summer season. A number of deals are in the grind and will probably be consumated shortly. Regardless of the general exodus due to summer vacation time, rentals have kept up and there are but a few vacant houses to be had in the city. This feature shows a healthy real estate condition. Rental agents state there is a very large demand for houses for next winter.

One of the best sales of the week was made by the Citizens' Realty Company when J. J. Gill sold his home on North Madison avenue, at the corner of Herkimer street, to William Salisbury of Dover, Del., consideration $15,000. The purchaser, who owns considerable property in Los Angeles and several of the beach cities, will move his family to Pasadena and will make his home on North Madison avenue.

The same company also sold to W. R. Lane, new manager of the Crown City Transfer and Storage Company, a vacant lot on Holliston avenue, north of East Orange Grove avenue, consideration $1500. Mr. Lane will move his family to Pasadena from Berkeley and will rent a home until he can build on the Holliston avenue lot. He recently organized the Crown City Transfer and Storage Company among a number of local capitalists. The new company has purchased the lot just east of the office building of the Blinn Lumber Company, at Center and the Southern Pacific Railroad tracks and will build a large brick storage warehouse.

The Citizens' Realty Company also sold a vacant lot on North Michigan avenue north of East Orange Grove avenue to Mrs. Swift, consideration $1200; also a vacant lot in Sutton Villa to Henry Meyers for $1800. The lot adjoins the home property of Meyers and will be used to extend his lawn and flower garden.

A new company organized during the past week which will have much to do with real estate and building activity is the Foss Designing and Building Company. Offices have been secured in the Richardson building. The company is capitalized for $50,000 and the officers are R. F. Foss, president and manager; P. N. Gibbings, vice-president; W. H. Soale, general counsel; John Mel, treasurer and secretary. The company will engage in designing and building houses in Pasadena oth on its own account and for others.

During the past week a number of Pasadena and Los Angeles capitalists organized the Pasadena Land and Investment Company. It is capitalized at $250,000 and owns 3920 acres of land in Tulare county which will be improved into a citrus fruit ranch. The officers of the new company are H. G. Cattell, president and general manager; James Clark, vice president; J. C. Coy, secretary; Paul S Hornberger, counsel. The directors, in addition to the officers, are L. A. Boadway, Charles Hughes, L. A. Sont, Herbert North and J. A. Horrell.

Real estate men and uuilders are highly elated over the big run which has been made in building permits for the first half of June. The total permits for the first fifteen days of this month are $190,148 as against a total for the entire month, last year, of $213,313, the heaviest month of 1910. There are a number of large contracts to come in during the remainder of the month so that it is believed this month will be the banner June for Pasadena building.

The largest permit of the week was that for the new Elks' home to be built on West Colorado street to cost $55,000. Other permits were Daniel Wilson, two-story, eight-room frame residence, No. 976 Atchison street, $3500; E. C. Sisson, five-room bungalow, No. 971 East Washington, $2000; Kate M. Fowler, a garage, No. 363 Grove street, $4500; Francis Drake, five-room bungalow, No. 1299 North Catalina avenue, $2100; Mrs. Amelia Seibert, seven-room bungalow, No. 171 South Lake avenue, $4140.

Mrs. Charles E. McDonald is believed to be the only certified woman guide in Maine. She is a native of Maine and is said to have shot as many black bears as any man in the State.

Real Estate Men Report Many Inquiries for Improved and Unimproved Property—Good Sales Made.

SOUTH PASADENA, June 17.—Most of the real estate firms in this city report excellent business for the past two or three months, and state that they are kept busy showing improved and unimproved property to easterners, who desire to own homes in this section. With the many conventions that are to be held in Los Angeles and vicinity this season, and the accordingly low rates from the East, a large summer business is anticipated.

The following sale has been reported by Gilbert & Company: Mary L. Harlan to H. Witte, both residents of this city, lot 50x135, on Meridian avenue, between El Centro and Monterey road, $1500. This lot was purchased as an investment. Other sales are J. S. Alexander to William Thorn, lot 50x155 feet, on Fletcher avenue, between Huntington drive and Oak street, consideration $1700; E. A. Newton to Mrs. Emile Goeser, lot 50x149 on Electric avenue, between Huntington drive and Alhambra road, $1000.

An option has been taken on a fine lot on the southeast corner of El Centro street, and Fairview avenue for the proposed new Y.M.C.A. building. The lot has a frontage of eighty-one feet on El Centro street. The purchase price is $50 a front foot, or $4050. The site is an excellent one for a Y.M.C.A. building, as it is across the street from Central Park, and is in a central location.

An old English style residence, with circular bays and projecting upper story has been planned for William A. Sanson of this city at an approximate cost of $26,000. The first story will be veneered with buff brick, laid with black mortar, while the second story will be plaster over metal lath, and the roof will be covered with cement shingles. The entire first floor will be trimmed with oak and mahogany, with floors of oak and white maple. The walls of the living, dining and music-rooms and reception hall will have hand-decorated work. There will be three bathrooms, and the house will be heated by steam. A portion of the basement, which will extend under the entire building, will contain a handsomely furnished billiard-room.

BUILDING AND REALTY ACTIVE.

Apartments and Bungalows in Demand—Many Houses Planned—Improved Residence Property Moves.

SAN DIEGO, June 17.—An apartment-house to cost $25,000 is to be erected at the northwest corner of Twenty-third and D streets, by E. P. Sunberg, who was successful in stock raising in North Dakota, where he disposed of his interest. Sunberg bought the ground, 100x100 feet, from H. L. Rowell for $7500. Plans are being prepared.

Hans Petrikowski is erecting at the southwest corner of Third and F streets a three-story brick store and apartment building to cost $20,000. The building is to cover a ground area 50x100 feet. There will be five small stores on the first floor. The upper floors will contain forty-two rooms. J. B. Stannard is the architect.

The Pacific Building Company is preparing to begin construction of a series of bungalows on Union street, between Couts and Bandina, to cost $7935; a residence on Date street, between Cedar and Date, to cost $3150, and a residence on Lyndon road to cost $2772. M. E. Ellsworth is building a cottage on Valle Vista street to cost $3500.

The Modern Home Builders plan to erect at least one hundred houses a year in a rapidly-growing section of the city, known as Inspiration Heights, Ramona Heights and Mission Hills. At the present rate of the demand for homes, the corporation figures that it will spend within the next two years more than $1,000,000 in new houses and in acquiring sites.

Among recent sales of real estate are the following: Harry Scott to Ellis Barron, 50x100 feet, improved with a modern brick garage, on the west side of Ninth street, between F and G, $16,000; Ellis Barron to G. W. Davis, seven lots, with a modern five-room Swiss chalet, on A street, between Thirty-first and Thirty-second, $4000; W. S. Wheeler to S. M. Crow, two lots and a six-room residence, on Seventh street, north of University avenue, $4000, the purchaser came here from Seattle; George A. Harrison to John Withrow, lot 50x140 feet, with a six-room house, on Twenty-second street, between C and D, $3500; three lots, 75x140 feet, at the northwest corner of Center and Lincoln streets, Ruth L. Barnes to the Modern Home Builders, for $4500; four lots, 100x100 feet, at the northeast corner of Twenty-ninth and Fir streets, sold by E. S. Potter to Alex T. Crane, for $2250; lot 50x140 feet, on the south side of C street, between Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth, Daniel Schuyler to E. G. Dehm, for $2750; John Roy to Henry Jasper, two lots and a modern six-room house on K street, between Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth, for $4200; Nellie Snyder to Enos Jenkins, one lot and a five-room house on Colton avenue, near Twenty-ninth street, for $1450.

The Chester Grove ranch of twenty-five acres of river botton land in Jamacha Valley was sold through the Wells & Lane agency to Mr. and Mrs. C. V. McFall, for $5500, the purchasers recently came here from Los Angeles. Mrs. Margaret Sheppard and daughter, Miss Daisy Sheppard, of La Jolla, have purchased from Henry Trebes a five-acre lemon ranch, at the corner of Third street and National boulevard, Chula Vista, for $6000.

REDONDO BEACH TURNED OVER.

Employees of Real Estate Company Celebrate Purchase in Annual Picnic and Frolic.

Redondo Beach, its bay and all of its places of amusement, were turned over in fee simple to the Los Angeles Investment Company yesterday and from morning until evening the employees of the company, their families and friends made merry, at the annual picnic and frolic given under the auspices of Charles A. Elder, president, and Michael Angelo Musse, office boy. Eating peanuts from the same bag, Mr. Elder and Mr. Musso agreed that their fellow workers were having the time of their lives.

Special trains of electric cars took a thousand pleasure seekers from Fourth street early in the day. The morning was given over to track events, calculated to whet the appetite and the curiosity—the latter especially aroused by the fifty-yard hobble skirt "dash." A great mid-day "spread" was served in the picnic grounds. In the afternoon, real estate sharks disported themselves in the surf. Fishing, boating and other recreations were indulged in. Everything from the bathhouse to the dancing floors was at the unreserved disposal of the big throng.

The picnic committee consisted of F. H. Covey, A. B. Marshall, W. D. Deeble and Ernest Ingold. The company has seventy office employees and 291 outside workers. The distribution of badges showed they were all there and had brought the family and the first best friend.

PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE,
305½ S. SPRING, NEAR THIRD ST.
A RESIDENT OF LOS ANGELES 27 YEARS.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an experienced practitioner in the science of modern ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The horoscope shows the powerful influence of the planets in all affairs of life. It shows diseases, deaths, domestic and financial affairs; talents; environment; about children; relatives; when and where to travel; what to seek or to avoid; when in danger of losses, troubles, etc., etc.; also your good periods coming — GIVING DATES OF THESE EVENTS FOR THE FUTURE.

PROF. ALTHOUSE read E. H. Sothern, Nat Goodwin, Mary Mannering, Gadski, Admiral Schley, David Starr Jordan, ex-Gov. Pardee, ex-Senator Clark, Gen. Chaffee, Edison, Sousa, Modjeska, Julia Marlowe, Anna Held, Jefferson, Louis James, Lillian Russell, Calve, Admiral Evans, H. E. Huntington, De Wolf Hopper, Maxine Elliott, etc. These are a few of the more NOTED PUBLIC PERSONS—and for this reason ONLY are they here mentioned—ALL positively read by PROF. ALTHOUSE, besides hundreds of the best people of Los Angeles, with whom all his readings are strictly CONFIDENTIAL.

DR. J. A. LARSON writes: "I want to say that your reading was the most satisfactory thing I have ever had in my life. I know a great deal about these sciences, and I consider your work as the most THOROUGH and reliable of any reader in the United States."

MME. BALDWIN writes: "The Horoscope you wrote for me is absolutely CORRECT. My friend, MME. NORDICA, the singer, first showed me her Horoscope, and recommended your work to me. Inclosed find check for four more Horoscopes—all friends of mine."

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an expert PALMIST, and WITH EACH PALM READING gives also an ASTROLOGICAL READING.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S SKILLED WORK, with his trained judgment, must in no wise be classed with that of other readers. Therefore, do not waste your money on the idiotic advice and warning of HUMBUG astrologers, palmists, psychics—those doing dishonest work.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in the casting of HOROSCOPES and hand reading has brought him a LARGE AND SUCCESSFUL PRACTICE. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances.

HIGHEST GRADE OF WORK that skill and experience can produce, therefore HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED. Personal attention given. Strict privacy. Daily and evenings; Sunday, 10 to 2. STUDIO PARLORS, 305½ S. SPRING ST.

STANLEY AND HOLT,
THE WORLD'S GREATEST PSYCHICS,
247—S. HILL ST.—247.
LOW FEE—FOR THIS WEEK—LOW FEE.

Prof. Stanley desires to state that he has associated with himself Prof. Holt, who has just returned from Europe, and who is without question one of the greatest psychics the world has ever known. He being a member of the Psychical Research Society of London and Paris, also belongs to the famous adepts and Magi of India, having spent 6 years of his life in that country under the tuition of the greatest teachers of psychology the world has ever known.

KNOW THY FUTURE.

Byron Stanley is too well known that any introduction is necessary. He has been a resident of this State for 22 years and a constant worker in this city for the past nine; is a property holder. If you want the benefit of these able psychics, and want the truth, you will consult Stanley and Holt.

DO YOU WANT TO KNOW ABOUT YOUR BUSINESS, HEALTH, MARRIAGE, LOVE AFFAIRS, OR HOW TO IMPROVE YOUR CONDITION FINANCIALLY AND SOCIALLY?

ALWAYS CONSULT THE BEST. IT IS THE CHEAPEST IN THE END. IT IS BETTER TO CONSULT NO CLAIRVOYANT THAN ONE WHO IS NOT ABLE TO HELP YOU.

If you want the truth, with reliable advice, you will consult Stanley and Holt on past, present and future. Also remember what has been told you, which too often is not the case. Before you go into anything of importance—or undertake anything serious—in business or love or marriage, or before you make any change—you should consult the master mind of PSYCHICS.

STANLEY AND HOLT

fully appreciate that in this day of sensational advertising there are more false claims and misrepresentations chaperoned through the columns of the daily press than the most hypential tongue could utter in a lifetime, until one cannot be blamed for doubting almost everything they read. Therefore, they say to you—come to them this very day and let them give you a complete reading, telling you every hope, fear or ambition, better than you could explain yourself. They will tell you the bad as well as the good, keeping nothing hidden from you. They will tell you everything upon matters of love, marriage, divorce, business, health; in fact, they will read your life like an open book.

Don't struggle with a burden you can divide. A troubled mind begets a morbid conscience. Sympathy, consolation and timely advice heal the worst of wounds. Be advised and relieved of anxiety.

Readings, 10 to 8, daily and Sundays.

Stanley and Holt do not read by mail and have no time to wait on people who call through curiosity.

MRS. MASSON,
the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST. (over Owl Drug Store)
by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigation along psychological lines that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT information.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity can all be told you through scientific palmistry WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

WANTED—
ATTENTION, INVESTORS!
BUSINESS. BUSINESS. BUSINESS.
Read this and think seriously.

I have a business of unquestionable merit; strictly honest and legitimate, which will quickly become an enormous dividend earner. Requires little more capital to place it among the largest ones of its kind. References. Five previous investors perfectly satisfied. They would not consider disposing of their holdings at 10 times their investment. You won't, either, when once you become interested. You deal with owner direct. Absolutely without fake, graft or mystery. Owner personally started and made this business, and will satisfy you he intends to stick. Similar enterprises have made millions while a few have lost. I put this up to each party, whose curiosity I have aroused, to interview me immediately, and then use your own judgment. Prejudice and timidity often sidetrack lifetime opportunities from faint-hearted people. You can never become independent without earnest efforts. Takes lifetime for $500 in banks to double; you know that. Just give me an opportunity to explain how you can double in sixty days. Failure impossible. Will only take $1500 at present prices, and will consider any amount from $300 to $1500. Purpose is to give the poor man a chance. Write for interview. Positively no brokers or agents considered. All other answers faithfully and promptly attended. Opportunities positively limited to above amount, so don't delay investigation, as it costs nothing. Business like open book, although this advertisement's blind. Address C, box 119, TIMES OFFICE.

ON SALARY, $150 MONTHLY, FIRST YEAR. CHANCE OF A LIMETIME.

Rigid investigation invited and approval assured. H. T. C., room 440 Bradbury Bldg., S. E. cor. Third and Broadway.

WANTED—DO YOU WISH TO SELL YOUR real estate? Houses, business property or building lots in Los Angeles or surrounding towns or cities? Do you know that we sell more real estate at auction than any ten average real estate brokers do at private sale and more than any five auctioneers combined? We will sell your real estate for cash. If incumbered you get all cash over and above your indebtedness. Why not try yours at auction? Instead of trifling from day to day, trying to sell) when you know you have a good chance of selling your property on a certain day and at a certain time without further delay. Remember that we guarantee you your price and positively make no charge for commission unless we actually sell, therefore you take no chances whatever. We can sell your real estate and sell it quickly (if worth the price you ask.) Others are selling by auction with great success, why don't you? We invite you to call at our office and see the list of properties that we have handled. Follow our auction ads in the Los Angeles Times and other papers. This will convince you as to our ability. Every auctioneer cannot successfully sell real estate. It takes a genuine real estate auctioneer to do so. We are real estate specialists at auction and have been for fourteen years and employ a large number of competent people for every department of the business. Our office is always open for consultation—call and let us explain to you. Secure our terms; right now is the time to sell. The H. C. PRICHETT COMPANY, Auctioneers. FOR SALE—NO HOOF, NO HORSE. Statistics show that 80 per cent. of all lameness is caused by hard and contracted hoofs. The dry season in this section is very hard on hoofs. As a hoof softener, toughener, nourisher and grower, there is nothing equal to ESHELMAN'S WOOL FAT HOOF HEALER. Do you know about "Wool Fat?" It is great. It is not a grease. Grease and water will not mix. Wool Fat is very penetrating, and readily mixes with the water. Nor is there anything that can be compared with it as a remedy for contracted hoofs, split hoofs, quarter cracks, and fever, corns, grease heels, and for cuts anywhere on any stock. Send for folder with many testimonials of prominent horsemen, vets and others.
4-oz. pkg., 25c; 12-oz., 50c; 32-oz., $1; 5-lb. pail, $2; 10-lb. pail, $3.50. Easy to apply. Directions with each package. Money back if not satisfactory. If not sold by your dealer, we will prepay carriage.

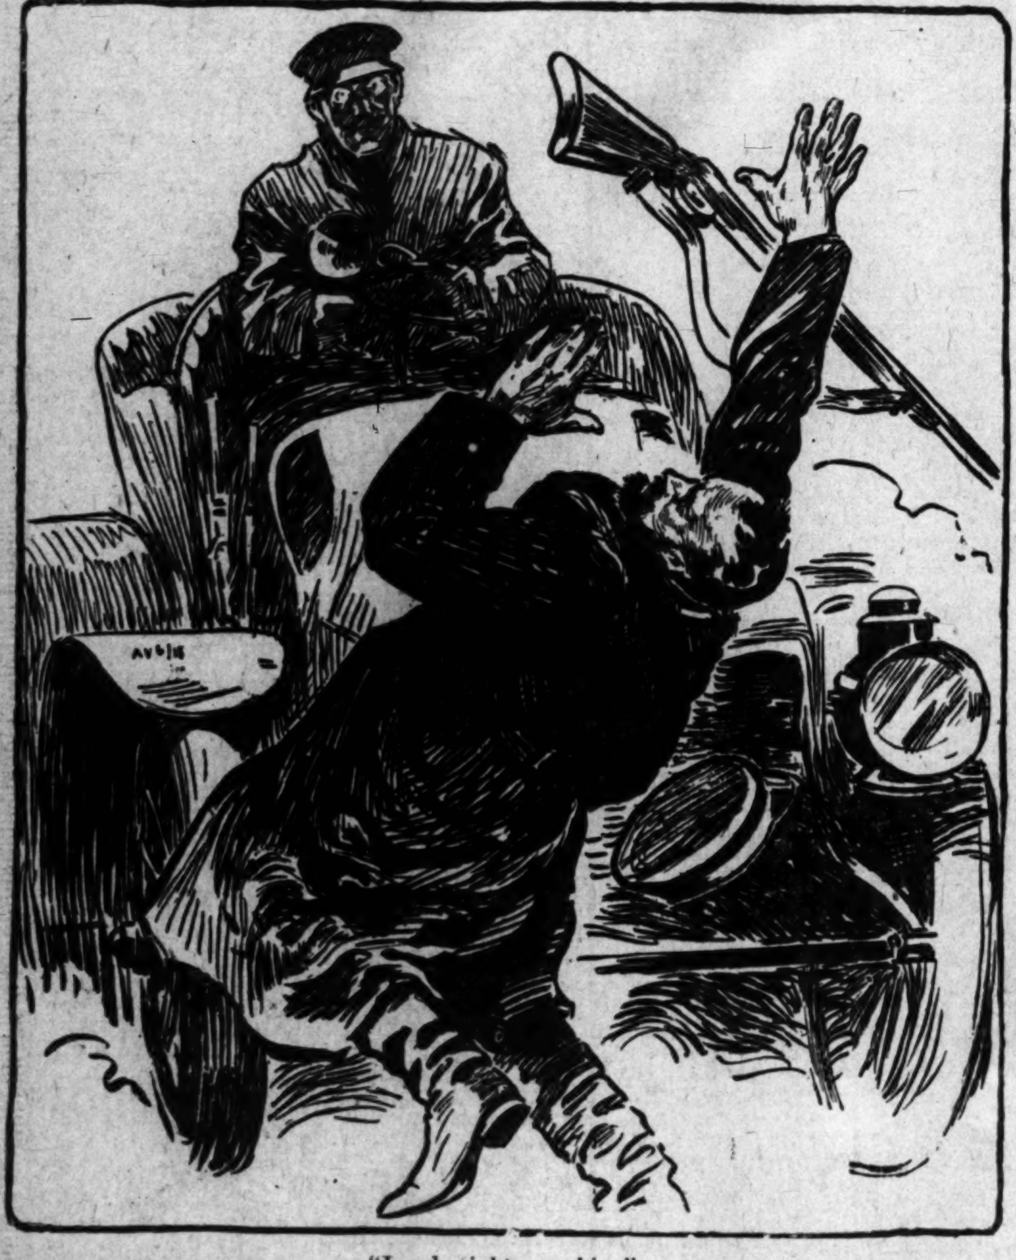
REVELATIONS OF AN INTERNATIONAL SPY.

BY A. V.

THE ABDICATION OF FRANCIS-JOSEPH.



"I rode right over him."

IT WAS during the war between the British and Boers in South Africa, at a period which I do not care to specify more particularly, that I had the honor to receive a request to proceed without loss of time to Petersburg, and wait upon M. de Witte.

The moment I arrived at Petersburg, I went without delaying to change or refresh myself, to wait upon my client. Our interview took place, not at the Ministry of Finance, where M. de Witte would have been surrounded by spies, but at a small private house in a surburb.

"I have asked you to meet me here," the Minister explained, as soon as I had seated myself and lighted the cigar, which he pressed upon me, "because I don't wish the fact that we are in communication to be known to a single person in the Russian Empire. In particular, it must be kept a strict secret from the Minister of War. It is against him that you will be really acting, and I shall have to ask you to pledge yourself that in case of your proceeding attracting his attention, you will lead him to suppose that you have been sent here by some foreign Power."

I contented myself with bowing, and waited for the Minister to proceed.

"Will you permit me to ask you," he said politely, "if you have ever done business in behalf of the Emperor of Austria-Hungary?"

"I have been engaged by his majesty on two occasions," I responded.

"You know so much of what goes on in Europe, M. V—," he resumed, "that perhaps it will be no news to you that Francis Joseph has decided to abdicate."

"I will not pretend that it is news," was my response. "But I am always glad to have my own information confirmed, I shall be grateful for anything that you may tell me."

"I am not going to keep anything from you," said the Minister. "The Emperor has made a private announcement of his intention to my own master, the Czar, asking for his good offices on behalf of his proposed successor.

"What I am going to ask you to do may sound rather extraordinary. I want you to go to Vienna, see his majesty, of course without letting him know that you have been in communication with me, and tell him that you suspect the Russian government is playing him false. Then persuade him to employ you to find out what is in the wind."

I started at M. de Witte in some bewilderment. Then I answered cautiously:

"Do I understand you, sir, to propose that I am really to enter the service of the Emperor? Or am I to be your agent?"

"I want you to do both," was the answer.

"I ame to deceive the Emperor, it appears?" I said with rising indignation.

"Not in the least. You will accept his commission to ascertain the secret intentions and purposes of the government of Russia, and you will execute that commission exactly as if you and I had never held this conversation."

"M. de Witte, I must beg you to be plain with me. I never consent to act in the dark. What is your true motive in making this strange proposal to me?"

"I think I have already told you," the Minister returned with perfect coolness. "The man whom I am combating is Count Lamsdorff."

"Your colleague?"

"Exactly. My colleague, the War Minister."

"Let me see if I clearly understand your excellency. The Emperor of Austria has given the Czar private notice of his intention to abdicate? The Czar has promised to preserve a friendly attitude? Nevertheless, the war party in the Ministry, with or without the Czar's connivance, are secretly preparing to take advantage of the situation in some way? Your excellency, knowing this, and disapproving of their plans, desires to put the Austrian Emperor on his guard, that the scheme may miscarry?"

M. de Witte punctuated this speech with a series of nods.

"And why?" I demanded bluntly, throwing myself back in my chair.

The Russian heaved a sigh of amused resignation.

"Very well, then, I will tell you." He bent forward and lowered his voice. "Russia is not ready to strike. A war now would mean bankruptcy of the Empire. The others will not believe this, but I know it. I will not have my carefully laid plans shattered by them, for the sake of a miserable province like Galicia."

The Russian spoke with real emotion. If I still retained any faint misgiving, it was not enough to restrain me from accepting the service required of me.

Within three days I found myself in the palace of Schonbrunn.

I found the Emperor in his favorite room overlooking the park. His Majesty did not invite me to be seated in his presence, an omission which indicates no unfriendliness.

"I am pleased to receive you, monsieur," he said in a stately, clear voice. "The services you have rendered me entitle you to ask for an audience, and I have no doubt your reason for seeking it is a proper one. Be good enough to state it."

"I have taken the liberty of asking for this audience in order that I might offer your Majesty certain information about your forthcoming abdication."

The Emperor could not repress a slight start. Lifting his eyebrows he gazed at me steadily in the face.

"I have comunicated my desire to abdicate,' he said with a significant intonation, "to six persons only. Two of them are brother sovereigns; two are members of my own family; the other two are the Chancellor of the Empire and the Prime Minister of Hungary. Through which of them did you receive your information?'

"Not one of the persons in your Majesty's confidence has the slightest idea that I have heard anything whatever on the subject. I must respectfully beg your Majesty not to press me further."

The aged Emperor was evidently much disturbed.

After a few minutes' silent consideration, during which the frown on his face deepened, his Majesty looked at me again.

"What do you wish to tell me?"

"I wish to put your Majesty on your guard."

"You have done that already, most effectually," he interrupted.

"I have come to beg you to distrust the assurances you have received, no matter from what quarter, that your majesty's abdication will pass off quietly. And if I should be so fortunate as to possess your confidence I would further request your majesty to employ me on the service of ascertaining what the intentions of your neighbors really are. Will your majesty pardon me if I venture to make a proposition. I will undertake to ascertain the actual state of things at my own risk. If I am able to report that my suspicions are unfounded, your majesty shall make me no acknowledgement whatever.'

Francis Joseph threw me a displeased look.

"I regret that you should have permitted yourself to speak to me in that way, monsieur. Be good enough to remember who I am. I do not employ servants without paying for them. You may consider yourself retained to make this investigation."

This acceptance of my offer, glacial though it was, consoled me for the rebuke by which it was accompanied.

It will be noticed particularly that, although the Emperor had practically admitted that it was his intention to vacate the throne, he had refrained from giving me the smallest hint as to the date of the abdication.

I took my way toward the Galician frontier in the character of a British tourist, armed with a sheaf of the coupons of Messrs. Cook. I was aware that this disguise would serve better than any other as a cloak for prying questioning.

In Galica itself I found everything in a state of the most profound peace and security. There was the usual frontier garrison, but the camps showed no signs of special activity. I toured along the frontier almost from end to end in a motor which I had ordered from Paris, and I came upon great stretches of country, several miles in extent, where a whole Russian army corps could have debouched across the line without being observed, far less opposed.

At the end of this inspection, which lasted about a week, I crossed over to the Russian side.

At the first blush everything seemed as peaceful on this side as on the other. The number of troops under arms was not excessive, and the men showed none of those signs of suppressed excitement which warn an experienced eye that some movement is in contemplation.

Presently, however, I began to remark an extraordinary number of telegraphic dispatches arriving at the various posts. Special messengers seemed to come and go with a frequency that hardly seemed necessary in time of peace. At last, one night, I was roused from sleep by a sound which my ears were quick to recognize. It was the muffled rumble of an artillery train passing over the rough paving stones of the small town in which I had stopped.

I got up, softly drew back the curtain of the window, and cautiously peeped out. There in the moonlight rolled by gun after gun, followed by the caissons and all the supplementary oufit of a park of artillery.

They were heading southward, and the frontier lay only three miles away. I counted six batteries, thirty-six guns, the equipment of an army corps. When all had gone by I retired to rest again.

I rose at break of day, took out my car, and followed in the route of the cannon. The road conducted me without a turning straight to the frontier post, where I found a sleepy Russian sentry exchanging friendly greetings with a still drowsier Austrian one.

I turned my car round and drove back slowly, scrutinizing every hedge and tree along both sides of the road. Less than a mile from the post my attention was caught by a place on the left-hand side, where the hedge appeared to have been recently mended. I ought to explain that the road was bordered at this point by a thick wood apparently impenetrable to anything bigger than a stoat.

I stopped the car, got down, approached the hedge, examining every inch of the ground.

The first discovery I made was that the road itself had been recently mended.

Then, looking closely at the hedge, I perceived that the bushes were no longer growing in their places. The entire hedge had been cut away level with the ground for a space of several yards, and then replaced.

I drew up my car close to the hedge, and, mounting upon it, managed to scramble over into the wood, at the cost of some scratches.

I found myself in the midst of a pile of brushwood which extended for some paces, completely covering the soil from view. Immediately beyond came a gap in the trees, not in front, but at one side, so that it was quite invisible from the road. Turning sharply toward the frontier and, running almost parallel with the high road, was a grassy ride or lane, about ten feet wide, and sufficiently free from undergrowth to admit the passage of an army.

I stole along this path, which revealed by a hundred tokens that it had recently been used. I followed its windings for I should think a mile and a half, when I found myself brought up abruptly by a post and rail fence, the posts being painted yellow on the side which faced me, and black on the reverse.

This fence was the boundary between the two empires. A narrow footpath bordered it on each side, so that the patrol might pass along it each day on his rounds.

The park of artillery seemed to have disappeared, as if it had been swallowed up by the earth.

I looked around me in all directions. The woodland road by which I had reached the frontier stretched away on the other side of the fence. This was in itself a suspicious sign. It scarcely seemed likely that the independent rides would have been constructed so as to meet in the heart of the forest, unless there was some traffic meant to pass that way. All at once the explanation burst upon me. It was a smugglers' route, and what the Russian War Office had done was to bribe the smugglers to act as its allies in this strange invasion. Unless my deductions were wholly false, the thirty-six guns that I had seen passing my window in the night were by this time actually parked on the soil of Austria.

I sprang over the fence, and hurried forward on the again clearly revealed track.

Suddenly I felt a powerful hand gripping my throat, a dark cloth descended over my eyes, and I was thrown violently to the ground.

I did not lose consciousness while I was lifted up by the feet and shoulders and carried a distance which I calculated at 200 paces. After some twisting and turning I was set down, and the cloth was taken off my head.

I found myself in a small hut or wigwam of boughs and woven rushes, surrounded by half-a-dozen dark-faced men who squatted between me and the doorway, the only opening by which light was admitted. One glance at my captors satisfied me that they were neither soldiers nor Russians.

A muttered exclamation solved my doubt as to the race of the smugglers. The language they used between themselves was Romany.

"What were you doing in our wood?" an old gypsy asked threateningly.

Before I had time to reply, the old man's eye suddenly lighted up. He took a step toward me, uttered an amazed ejaculation, and then, before I knew what was happening, fell on his knees before me, and seizing my right hand, respectfully kissed the ring on the little finger. At the same time, the other members of the party crowded round, evidently impatient to follow his example.

The ring which excited this extraordinary demonstration was one which I had worn so long that I had forgotten all about it. It had been given me seventeen years before, in Bagdad, by an old gypsy woman I had saved from the bastinado at the hands of a savage pasha.

They told me that the six batteries I was tracing were within a few yards of us, skillfully hidden among the trees. Their arrival brought the force designed for the occupation of Galicia up to a total strength of 80,000 men and seventy-two guns, all of which had been secretly brought across the frontier at different points during the last few days, and were now ready to move in concert as soon as the signal was given, and overrun the unprepared province.

The fact, was known to every smuggler along the Galician frontier, and yet so profuse were the bribes they had received, and so perfect was their secrecy, that not the slightest hint had been suffered to reach any official of Austria.

I spent some hours of the most agonizing suspense I have ever known in the company of these outlaws, before I dared to risk an effort to get away. Their suspicions, or rather their natural distrustfulness, caused them to raise all sorts of objections to my departure. It was only by swearing on the sacred pentagram that no hair of their heads should even be imperiled by any action of mine, that I was able to tear myself away.

When I got out on the highroad again, at the spot where I had left my motor, I found, as I had feared, that it was no longer there. I turned at haphazard in the direction of the frontier post. As soon as I came in sight of the Russian guard house, I saw, to my delight, that my car was standing on the road in front of the door, with a group of interested soldiers curiously inspecting every part of it.

I strolled up carelessly, greeted the astonished soldiers in broken Russian, and asked them if they were familiar with the machine.

I handed my passport to the lieutenant to read, a process which takes some time with an illiterate Russian officer, and went on explaining the mechanism of the car to the inquisitive soldiers. Finally I came to the driving power.

"And now, my friends," I said, "I will show you how the car is propelled. Stand back clear of the wheels, if you please. You see this lever. I place my hand on it so—"

"Stay!" shouted the officer, divining the danger in this demonstration.

He spoke too late. As my hand grasped the lever, I vaulted into the car, and before the excited soldiers realized that it was under way, the Panhard was tearing toward the boundary line at the rate of twenty-four miles an hour.

The Russian sentry ran out into the middle of the road to stop me. I rode right over him, and I am sorry to say that I believe he was killed.

The Austrian sentry simply fired off his gun as a warning to his comrades at the guard house farther along the road. They swarmed out, and I pulled up the machine. I had put the brake on immediately after crossing into Austrian territory.

"In the Emperor's name!" I whispered to the Austrian officer of the guard. "I am not an Englishman, but a member of the Austrian secret service. By allowing me to pass without delay you will render the government a vital service."

"You've just killed a man," the officer objected, pointing to the blood on my wheels.

"I am afraid so. The fact that I killed a Russian sentry in order to cross the frontier should convince you that I am in deadly earnest."

The officer, by some rare chance, was intelligent enough to believe me.

"Pass on, sir," he said.

I pressed the lever, and set out on my mad race across an empire to Vienna. I will not attempt to describe that nightmare ride. Late in the evening of the following day, I alighted at the gate of the palace of Schronbrunn, worn out, my face and hands chapped and bleeding, my eyes half-blinded with dust, and my strength nearly gone.

"The Emperor! Take me to the Emperor!" I gasped to the first person I met. "It is life or death!"

I was conducted into the presence of a chamberlain, who sought to impose all sorts of obstacles.

"You cannot see his majesty now. I dare not intrude upon him. He is closeted with the archdukes. It is a Hapsburg Council!"

"I must! I cried out, "you have given me ten thousand reasons for insisting. If it costs my life I must interrupt his majesty!"

My violence cowed the official. He conducted me, on, in fact, supported me, for I was almost too weak to stand, to the door of the Council Chamber.

"Go in if you must" he said. "For my part. I dare not announce you."

I turned the handle of the door, and staggered into the room.

The spectacle which met my eyes was dazzling. In a blaze of light all the archdukes of the Imperial House wearing their uniforms and robes of state were grouped in a semicircle, facing a throne on which the representative of the Caesars was seated in his imperial mantle, wearing the great double-eagle crown of Austria. Before him on a footstool knelt a handsome lad of fifteen, in whom I had no difficulty in recognizing the Archduke Karl, the destined successor to the throne.

At the moment I burst in, I saw the venerable Emperor raise his hands to his head, lift up the imperial crown, in which the huge diamonds and rubies and sapphires sparkled like founts of fire, and hold it poised in the air over his young kinsman's bent head. In another second it would have rested on the boy's brow, and Francis Joseph would have ceased to reign.

"Pardon!"

My voice rang out like the hoarse scream of a drunkard. I tottered forward and fell on my knees, while the Emperor half rose from his throne, still grasping the great crown in both hands.

"Pardon, sire! At this hour a Russian army of eighty thousand men is encamped upon the soil of Austria!"

Francis Joseph sank back on his seat, and mechanically replaced the diadem on his own head.

UNREST OF ISLAM.

Grave Possibilities of Another Holy War in the Near East Foreshadowed.

BY JOHN FOSTER FRASER.

Everybody acquainted with countries where Mohammedans live is aware of the sullen, seething unrest which prevails, and which occasionally finds expression in the assassination of Christians.

The average European pays little heed, except to be mildly surprised that orientals do not live happily and appreciate the blessings of civilization brought to them by the enterprising nations of the West.

But there are always two points of view. The oriental does not admit the occidental is his superior. True, the European has a certain facility in mechanics, but he is a barbarian and a dog of a Nazarene. In big eastern cities, where the white face has settled in numbers, the Mohammedans see advantage in trains, steamships, electric cars, the telegraph and telephone.

But there are hundreds of millions of Mohammedans who have never beheld these things and what they have heard of them is proof they are the creation of the Evil One. In the minds of these people is bitter, fanatical hatred of the Christians.

It is no good arguing with such people that under Christian rule they are well treated. In India and Egypt they feel the presence of the British. The Tartars in Russia know they are under the heels of the Muscovites. Turkey has lost provinces and territory, and she is badgered by the Christian Ambassadors. Practically the whole of North Africa is partitioned among the European powers.

ISLAM IS BEING ROUSED.

Now education has spread among Mohammedans. Young fellows of India and Egypt come to England for instruction. Turks go to France or to Germany. Though all the history of eastern nations has been made by despotism, the western plan of representative government is novel and attractive to these men with semi-emancipated minds. Besides they see the weak points in the white man's character. However, many men of the East, with the glamouh of the western system in their eyes, want to set up and demand constitutional government in Turkey and Persia and Egypt and India.

Further, they have seen one eastern people, the Japanese, smash in war a great European power, Russia. The result of that war has had a tremendous moral effect on the whole Mohammedan world.

Moslem nations are taking stock of their relationship with Christian nations, and they see that all is not well with them. Turkey is squeezed and balked in her Macedonian policy, and mighty stretches of her old empire have been lopped off for the benefit of Christian races. In Asia Minor, Germany is laying her grip. Persia feels she is under the thumb of Russia. Britain has Egypt. France has Tunisia and Algeria, and threatens to have Morocco. Everywhere the Christians have a hold. Enmity roots in the hearts of the Mohammedans.

So there is growing—not thought much of in this country, but seriously significant—a Pan-Islamatic movement, having for its object the assertion of Mohammedan rights. The headquarters are at Baku, in Trans-Caucasia; and emissaries, preaching war against the Christians, are sent into every Mohammedan land. The oriental moves quietly, slowly, subterraneously, but ever the ferment is at work. Now and then is an explosion of race and religious fanaticism; we read of seditious propaganda; the culprits are crushed; then we go on our way and think of other things.

Yet Islam is being roused.

HATRED OF CHRISTIANS.

It has been my duty to study this Pan-Islamism, to get into touch with men who are its leaders, to discover whether the outbursts are froth or whether there is a deep religious seriousness underneath it all. In India I have heard the hiss of hatred toward Britain, and in Egypt talk about the need of autonomy. In the Turkish regions of the Balkan area, pashas grind their teeth at the dictation received from foreigners. In the southern areas of Tunisia and Algeria there are influential kaids who hunger for the clearing out of the French. In Morocco, fanaticism is rife. In the trans-Volga provinces, Tartars snarl at the indignities heaped upon them by Russia. In Baku itself the leaders have explained to me the machinery whereby it is hoped to stagger the Christians. There are grave doctrinal differences amongst Mohammedans; yet all look to the Sultan of Turkey as Caliph, as Defender of the Faithful, and he will give the signal.

For what?

A Holy War—a massacre of Christians!

True, on the face of it, the thing looks an impossibility; also, it would be a crime against humanity. Further, what chance in war could the decrepit Moslem countries have against the trained armies of Europe? I am quite as conscious as anyone that those who would suffer most would be the Moslems themselves. I will go so far as to admit that the leading statesmen in Mohammedan countries are averse from any such rising. They are aware of the awful penalty which would have to be paid.

But the men who dominate Islam are not the statesmen; they are the mullahs, the religious leaders. These, hundreds of thousands of them, narrow-visioned, fanatical, appraising the widening power of Christendom, think there is good in the killing of the Christian.

The removal of a Nazarene dog is a work of merit. The Mohammedan who dies in war facing the Christian goes at once to Paradise.

Over these mullahs, conventions, international agreements, have no authority. The hated Christian is in their land. The infidel is unworthy of consideration. Mohammedan countries for the Mohammedans is the cry. It has spread; it is doing its work. Millions of Mohammedans—cruel and short-sighted if you will—have let hatred of the Christian fester at their hearts. It only needs the signal of a leader, and the waving of the green flag of the Prophet, for the rising to take place, and for all Christians within reach, in their blind frenzy of religious fanaticism, to be put to the knife. I remember the massacre of Armenians in Constantinople in 1896.

HOW ISLAM MAY ASSERT ITSELF.

What will be the good of it? Knowing how impossible it is to argue when the Mohammedan fanatic sees red, I have put the question to Moslems—after they have, with flaming eyes and savage tongues, revealed to me what is in their minds—"What advantage are you going to get from it?' The men, obsessed with passion, have gloried in the prospect of a Holy War, doing the work of Mohammed, having no mercy, but swiftly cutting the throats of every Christian man, woman, and child, and thus asserting the triumph of Islam. Others, more calm, argue it is the only way to teach the Christians a lesson. They see diplomacy whittling their powers; they readily recognize that no Moslem nation can fight with any hope of success against one of the big European nations. All that is futile; they lose every move in the game.

It is only by a sudden massacre, intended to shake Christendom by the blaze of a Holy War, that they hope European aggression will be checked. The reprisals—yes, they know of those! But the Mohammedan faith is that of fatalism. Death in such a cause is good in the eyes of Allah. The pleasures of Paradise is the immediate reward.

Well, that is the situation today, perfectly well understood by all who make close personal study of religious movements in the East. Let something occur to outrage Mohammedan sentiment and the great religious leader to arise, then I fear the green flag will be unfurled and the Holy War proclaimed.

FROM OUR CONSULS.

Efforts are being made to merge the seven boot and shoe manufacturing companies of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. The American hen need not fear competition. In spite of the duty of 3 cents a dozen, eggs are imported into Canada from Kansas and other States. In 1910 Germany exported 4,100,593 tons of chemical and pharmaceutical goods, including paints, colors and dyes, worth $164,399,000, a gain in value over 1909 of 13 per cent. The United States is still the largest buyer of German chemical goods, particularly abraum salts (so-called,) potassium chloride, and superphosphates. German capital is developing the chemical industry of Norway, to draw its products to Germany.

Motor vehicles of all kinds are prohibited in the province of Prince Edward Island, Canada, under a fine of $500, or six months imprisonment in default of payment. This law smacks of centuries ago. There is no chance for a "Touring the Island" company there.

Montevideo, Uruguay, is to spend $3,825,800 gold for port buildings, fifty cranes, power and light apparatus, fencing, railway supplies, conduits, fire protection, sanitation, etc.

Two-cent postage between Australia and the British Isles was inaugurated on May 1.

The Bureau of Manufactures invites suggestions for special investigations relating to the commerce and industries of New Zealand, with which British colony we have already an export trade of about $6,000,000 a year. Consul Henry D. Baker of Hobart, Tasmania, has been sent there for the purpose.

Freights from Europe to Buenos Ayres have been raised about 25 per cent. European importers there protest unless the rates from New York to Buenos Ayres are similarly raised. That matter is under consideration.

Deposits in Russian savings banks have increased from $235,203,500 to $649,930,000 in fifteen years.

For steel castings needed at Kingston, Ontario, American firms competed with Canadian foundries and received the orders in spite of the 27½ per cent ad valorem customs duty.

Five pages of consular report No. 119, are filled with complaints of short postage on letters sent abroad by American exporters, new and old. Our consuls are frequent victims. The proper rates are given in the report.

The world's largest crane has been erected at Govan, on the River Clyde, for the Fairfield shipyards. A load of 200 tons can be lifted 170 feet. The test load is 250 tons.

Canada produces 82 per cent. of the world's supply of asbestos. The operating companies are capitalized at $24,290,000. The 1909 output was 62,200 tons, worth $2,300,000. Two thousand men are employed, with a yearly pay roll of $1,350,000. The Black Lake quarries have 45,000,000 tons of asbestos rock in sight.

Greece has a foreign commerce of $50,000,000 a year, three-fifths imports and two-fifths exports. Our share is $2,500,000 of the exports, but only $500,000 of the imports, reports Commercial Agent John M. Carson. Greek residents in the United States send home about $5,000,000 a year. This stimulates emigration to this country. In ten years 210,000 Greeks have come here. About half our purchases are currants. See consular report No. 120 for valuable details.

Canada had a new and renewal fire insurance business in 1909 of $1,579,975,867, paying premiums of $22,302,632, or about 12 per cent. more than in 1908. American companies wrote $28,750,744 worth of the increase.

Shoes made in Australia are being stamped "Made in U.S.A.," a free interpretation of which is "United States of Australia," though the intent is obvious, as there is a prejudice there against Australian-made shoes because of defective tanning.

A Moscow firm, at is own expense, is advertising American goods by leaflets in the Russian language.

The Kantanga Railway Company is increasing its capital by $10,000,000 to push construction of the Cape-to-Cairo Railway, from Elizabethville to Bukama.

Johannesburg, South Africa, has a programme of public works, involving an outlay of $11,525,000, including $1,400,000 for electric power and lighting; $1,450,000 for electric railways, $500,000 for water supply, $2,662,000 for sewers, and $1,125,000 for a town hall. Two and a half million dollars is to be spent at once on the railways traversing the Rand, Transvaal.

Catalogues descriptive of American oil pumps and tanks have elicited considerable interest among Hamburg firms, following the more general use of oil-burning engines. The recent arrival at Stettin, Germany, by direct shipment from Vladivostock, of 4823 tons of Manchurian soya beans, valued at $168,600, marks the entry into that market of a new raw material for industrial exploitation. Following Hamburg's example a company with $357,000 capital has been formed to develop the industry.

The Hongkong cotton market was all but dead in 1910 for two chief reasons: One is the high price of foreign raw cotton, restricting Chinese consumption, and the other is the watering of cotton produced in China and shipped abroad, particularly to Japan.

gales, this in the face of the fact that the people have voted the present limit of 150 feet into the charter. Chicago has adopted 200 feet as the extreme height of future business blocks, a determination resulting from a careful study of conditions by experts. Los Angeles is growing at a rate aptly comparable with that of Chicago at the time of its greatest activity and therefore the conclusions of the students of the skyscraper situation in the country's second city are of real value to this city, soon destined to crowd both Philadelphia and Chicago.

The Chicago experts find that 200-feet buildings meet the demands for light and air in the streets and leave the sidewalks and pavements as free from congestion as could in reason be expected in so large a place. A 200-foot limit here would certainly not be undesirable at the present time, and, in a city whose future is as certain as that of Los Angeles, such a building limit would certainly be stringent enough to compel the proper amount of spreading out in the business section.

Is it Hideous?

We are constantly hearing modern high buildings condemned as an affront to art. Doubtless no new building nor architectural principle ever came into existence without meeting the same criticism. The cave men probably knocked the finished product of the first man who essayed to pile stone upon stone into a semblance of a dwelling place and considered it vulgar that a man should fashion his place of habitation to suit himself instead of being satisfied with one already hollowed out.

The best examples of the modern skyscraper are sane in proportion, in appearance and in use. The finest of the buildings of the Egyptians, the Romans, the Greeks and the Gothic peoples were constructed after the same architectural principle that enters ino a child's block house. The forebears of the modern architect built frankly for effect, even as the architect of today puts forth the skyscraper as a business necessity demanded by modern city progress. The building of today is no longer a pile of loose stones, but a firmly grounded, firmly knit together unit of steel and concrete. That it should have developed possibilities of architectural novelty is nothing against it, and that many skyscrapers are both imposing and beautiful in appearance can not be gainsaid. Why is the skyscraper called hideous?

Municipal Sky-piercers.

The practical utility of the skyscraper type of construction has already been discovered by some of the larger municipalities of the United States, and lofty public buildings are becoming quite common. New York is building a monster city hall that is to boast thirty-five stories, every square foot of which will be utilized by the various city departments. By going skyward from the limited ground space available instead of condemning and buying the huge and priceless area necessary for the erection of a building along old approved lines the metropolis has saved millions upon millions of dollars. Architects and artists, too, are agreed that the new building meets every artistic requirement and is in every way as creditable to the public that is building it as the finest adaptation of classic art would be.

Oakland is building a city hall structure that is frankly and avowedly a skyscraper. San Francisco contemplates the erection of a municipal building that will overtop any other structure in the bay city by a hundred feet. Both cities have boldly cast aside traditions and in so doing subjected themselves to no end of criticism. Perspectives already published show buildings, which, though startlingly different from those at present used for public purposes, are nevertheless artistically and architecturally meritorious. Both structures have demonstrated that the possibilities of effective and tasteful ornamentation in the skyscraper are limitless. Who knows but students of architecture a thousand years from now will be raving over both of these majestic structures?

Los Angeles will soon be confronted by this same problem of profitably utilizing the limited space owned by the municipality for a city hall. There is no reason from the consideration of art, engineering feasibility or utility why the Temple block should not be made the site of a magnificent city hall towering twenty stories or more into the sky, a beautiful, dignified and monumental edifice sufficient for the needs of the growing city department activities for the next century.

HAPPYLAND.

Unique Name Applied to New Seaside Tract Just Placed on the Market.

Commencing from a point four miles east of Long Beach and extending southerly for a distance of fourteen miles, the different coast resorts have been given the name of "Happyland." The beach towns of Bay City, Sunset Beach and West Newport with the still-water bays and lagoons thereabouts are included in the new townsite just placed upon the market by the Golden State Realty Company of this city. The property not only includes the land along the shore, but also Newport Heights, which has been subdivided into five-acre lots. This land is suitable for lemon and fruit culture and has been piped for water. Sunset Beach, Bay City and West Newport have been established for some years and have improved streets, numerous fine residences, amusement attractions and bathing and boating facilities. These beach towns, with the intervening territory, have all been combined and will hereafter be termed "Happyland." The property has just been placed upon the market and is selling rapidly. It is a favored spot and no doubt will build up rapidly.

REAL ESTATE NOTES.

H. J. O. Pohl, formerly of New York City, has taken charge of the branch office of the McCarthy Company at Fifth street and Wilton Place, to care for the Van Ness Avenue Square tract. He will also handle, in connection with the McCarthy Company, property in the Wilshire boulevard district.

The Southwest Land Company, which has just put the new Vermont Square tract, at the corner of Santa Barbara and Western avenues, on the market, has opened new offices in No. 601 Walter P. Story building.

Evan Mattinson, president of the First National Bank of Gibson, Ill., has purchased a large lot at Beverly, upon which he plans to erect a large winter residence to cost $10,000. The house, designed by the Los Angeles Investment Company, will be typically Mission in style and will contain ten large rooms.

FOR INVESTMENT.

R. A. Rowan & Company report the sale of No. 950 South Hope street for Mary A. Rice to Julia Delano for $28,000. Miss Delano, who is an Eastern investor, purchased this property as a permanent investment with the idea of substantially improving the property at a later date. Grant Bros. and the Grant Estate have sold to the Hill Realty Company, the southeast corner of San Pedro and Market streets, being lot 5, subdivision of property of Don Manuel Requera, for $11,300. The Hill Realty Company will improve this corner with a substantial brick building.

Peerless.

PASADENA'S POLY TO BE UNEXCELLED

PLANS PERFECTED FOR THE NEW INSTITUTION.

High School to Be Complete in Its Every Detail Soon to Be Constructed in the Crown City—Will Be Absolutely Fireproof and Built of Best Possible Material.

What will without doubt be the finest polytechnic high school in the southwest will be the one to be constructed in Pasadena, the architect's drawing of which is shown on this page. The citizens of the Crown City recently voted bonds in the amount of $475,000 to provide for this educational institution. Of the amount available $375,000 will go into the buildings, of which there will be six and $40,000 for additional equipment. The school site, containing eighteen acres, is situated on East Colorado street and is known as "Rose Villa." It cost $60,000.

The main or administration building, which will house the offices of the school, and an assembly hall with a seating capacity of 2000 people, will have a frontage of 280 feet and will face on a quadrangle. On each side of the main building will be a wing, on the one side the commercial training high school and on the other the classical and manual arts building. These buildings will contain the study halls, also two outside study rooms on the roof. The library will be located in the center of the main building under the large dome, in close proximity to the study halls. The study halls built on the roof will have a covering, but will be open on all sides, allowing the free circulation of air.

There will also be domestic arts building, science and agricultural building, mechanics building and power house. The mechanics building will have a frontage of 200 feet. In it will be taught the various trades, mechanical drafting, etc. To the west and rear of the administration building will be the choral hall and physical culture department. The power plant will supply power, light and heat for the entire group. The buildings will accommodate 1800 scholars.

To the rear of the buildings the athletic field will be located, also the experimental grounds for the horticultural and agricultural departments. The front will be parked and made as attractive as possible. There are a number of large live oak trees on the property which will be preserved.

The buildings will be constructed of reinforced concrete and will be absolutely fireproof. The exterior walls will probably be faced with glazed pressed brick. Many new features have been introduced into the plans by the architect, Norman F. Marsh of this city, making it one of the best planned in this part of the country, and comparing favorably with any in the United States. Mr. Marsh has made an especial study of schools and school architecture and has designed many fine buildings throughout Southern California.

Working plans for the Polytechnic School buildings are now being prepared and will be in the hands of contractors about August 1 for estimating purposes. The buildings will be completed and ready for occupancy by the opening of next years' school term.

TWO GOOD SALES.

The property known as No. 2731-33 West Pico street, lot 51x135, improved with one-story garage, was sold for C. Q. Stanton to Mrs. Kate W. Sprowls for a consideration of $16,000. U. H. Gowen & Company represented C. Q. Stanton in the transaction and Mines & Farish, the purchaser.

The firm of Mines & Farish also reports the sale for Mrs. Kate W. Sprowls to a local investor of the property on the southeast corner of Washington street and Staunton avenue, lot 120x130 to an alley, for $7500.

LARGE PURCHASE CITRUS LAND.

The Mentone Citrus Land Company has just purchased about fourteen hundred acres of orange, lemon and olive lands with valuable water rights at Mentone, San Bernardino county.

This large tract has been purchased through W. P. McIntosh, manager of the country department of Edward D. Silent Co. of this city.

About one thousand acres of the Mentone Citrus Land Company's purchase and the most valuable water bearing lands were owned by a wealthy Englishman named Sir Robert Edward Bredon, for many years, which in a great measure accounts for this beautifully located tract of land having remained uncultivated and unimproved, although it is within a half mile of the city of Redlands, and surrounded by the finest orange groves in California.

This is the largest acreage of strictly citrus land bought in the Redlands district since Mr. McIntosh and his associates purchased the well-known Barton Ranch of 1000 acres for a quarter of a million dollars, nearly twenty years ago, Mr. McIntosh subdividing this large tract and selling, within two years' time, about 1000 acres at $300 per acre. Today this same land has a market value of $2000 per acre.

It is understood this land will at once be subdivided and prepared for oranges and lemons, and in all probability each five or ten-acre piece will be planted before being sold, and a modern gravity system for irrigation and domestic water installed throughout this large tract.

VAN NESS SQUARE.

Among the busiest spots in the city at present is Van Ness Square, with building activity on every street in this popular tract in the Wilshire boulevard district.

Among the houses now in the course of construction are the following: House on the northwest corner of Fifth street and Van Ness avenue, eight rooms, of the value of $4000, being built by Anderson & Hovey, for Mr. Hovey; eight-room house on Wilton Place, lot 7, block 10, Van Ness Avenue Square tract, being built by Ley Brothers, for Mrs. Elizabeth G. Pomeroy, $4000; nine-room house on Van Ness avenue, lot 9, block 8, Van Ness Avenue Square tract, costing $4500, for S. N. Smith of Oklahoma; fourteen-room residence, costing $10,000, at northwest corner of Fifth street and Norton avenue, on lots 1 and 2, block 6, Van Ness Avenue Square tract, with adjoining two lots to be used for garden, for E. Avery McCarthy; attractive Swiss chalet, eight-room house being built by the McCarthy Company, at a cost of $4000, on lot 17, block 8, the McCarthy Company's Van Ness Avenue Square tract; eight-room house, on Van Ness avenue, on lots 22 and 23, block 2, Van Ness square, Swiss chalet style, by the McCarthy Company; eight-room house, southwest corner Linden and Wilton Place, lot 12, block 9, Van Ness square, designed and being built by G. E. Shelton of Kansas City, Mo. Besides the above, three others are to be started during the coming week, being the first of twenty-seven homes to be built by a building company having purchased that number of lots in Van Ness Square. The purchase of Windsor square property for $1,000,000 directly adjoining Van Ness Square on the west has given added interest in Van Ness Square, and the McCarthy Company reports increased inquiry in this subdivision.

MAIN STREET LOT SOLD.

Charles G. Andrews of Wright & Callender Company and Horace G. Hamilton of Horace G. Hamilton Company report the sale for a syndicate represented by the Title Insurance and Trust Company, as trustee, to Elmer E. Cole of this city, the property known as No. 721 South Main street, 48x120 feet, with nominal improvements, consideration $129,000. Eighty lots at Santa Monica, each 50x150 feet in size, between Nevada avenue and San Jacinto boulevard, east of Seventh street, were taken as part payment. The new owner of the Main street property contemplates making substantial improvements at an early date.

HANDSOME BUNGALOW BARGAIN.

Here it is! Don't look any further! A fine six-room bungalow, strictly modern—hardwood floors and every convenience. As pretty a little house as any one could wish. And the location is close to Western avenue on West Twenty-ninth street, on a fifty-foot lot, well improved with lawn, flowers and shrubbery. We haven't seen a bargain like it for a year. The bank loaned $2000 on it. Now the owner must sell. He leaves for South America this week. Be wise and take the chance here offered you. Only $3550.

REMARKABLE BARGAIN HERE.

Look at this! A nine-room, modern home, finished in hardwood, with furnace and every convenience, for such a figure! A fine home in a location unexcelled on West Adams Heights. Think of it! We have never offered any bargain like it. It lacks none of the excellencies of the best homes, and the lot is covered with bearing fruit and shrubbery. The property is worth $9000 of any man's money. The owner sells because he must leave at once. It is the chance of a lifetime. Only $6500.

ATTRACTIVE WESTMORELAND HOME.

The man who desires a close-in home will look far before he finds the equal of this. An eight-room house of that attractive chalet bungalow style, built but a short time, and with all the modern and cosy ideas to make a delightful home. Hardwood floors downstairs, polished above; big living-room, handsome dining-room and small breakfast-room; a garage and a big 60x160-foot lot, well improved. You could not want it nicer. And the location is Westmoreland, close in. Price only $6750.

EIGHT-ROOM, WILSHIRE BUNGALOW.

Seventy-foot lot.

This property consisting of an eight-room bungalow, finished in hardwoods, situated on an east front corner lot, seventy feet wide, is the ultimate thing in bungalows and is absolutely the finest finished house for the money we have ever seen.

The living-room is finished in mahogany, the dining-room in oak, the den in birch, and the remaining rooms in beautiful egg-shell white enamel.

There are two bedrooms and an elegant bath downstairs, and upstairs is a beautiful suite consisting of a large bedroom, bathroom and fine sleeping porch with a concealed bed.

A dainty Dutch breakfast room, very convenient to the kitchen, is the last feature of this dream of a house. There is a good garage.

Remember the seventy-foot lot, the eight rooms, hardwood floors throughout, and hardwood finish, and the two baths, and you will be convinced that this is a bargain.

BEAUTIFUL WILSHIRE BUNGALOW.

This bungalow is the swellest thing built this year. It stands on a sixty-foot corner lot, facing east, in Wilshire; and the eight commodious and elegantly appointed rooms, with two baths, sleeping balcony and three porches, make the largest and handsomest bungalow we have ever seen. It is finished with the last word in Wanikaskie mahogany and elegant decorations, superb lighting facilities, and attractive rooms throughout. It has a furnace and an automatic water heater in the basement; hardwood floors everywhere; the family bath tiled, and servant's room and bath well arranged to the rear; breakfast room delightfully sunny; one large room above stairs that will be either billiard room, or play room or balcony bedroom, and there is a regular balcony opening off of it. Last, there is a fine garage, with drive. The price of $8750 would not duplicate the property.

ELDEN AVENUE NEAR PICO.

A real snap—located on Elden avenue, between Pico and Twelfth streets, facing east, on a 62x150-foot elevated lot. The home of eight rooms is very artistic and one of the best-built houses in Los Angeles, with hardwood floors, cellar, furnace and large garage. The lot alone is worth $150 a foot and the improvements about $8000, so you can readily see what a bargain you are getting. The property overlooks the Westmoreland Place with an unobstructed view of the mountains. Very easy terms can be arranged.

BEAUTY ON HIGH GROUND.

This magnificent new house is situated on an east-front lot at the highest point of beautiful Rampart blvd. There are nine large rooms, with oak floors throughout, unique electric fixtures, handsome wall hangings, two up-to-date bathrooms, gas furnace, and fine garage with plumbing and servant's quarters. The grounds are beautiful, with shrubs and roses in profusion. Easy terms.

LARGE RESIDENCE IN WILSHIRE.

We have seen no residence of twice the figure that surpasses this in superb arrangement, thoughtful comfort, and quiet elegance throughout. It stands on a wide lot, very close to Wilshire blvd., and it has the benefit of large gardens that lie alongside. The entire lower floor is finished in hardwoods—the splendid hall and stair in golden oak, the spacious, dignified living-room in dark mahogany, the large and elegant dining-room in Peruvian mahogany, and the secluded, livable library in weathered oak. Needless to say, there are maid's room below stairs, a furnace, automatic water heater, garage with chauffeur's room, hardwood floors all through the house. This home is a harmonious whole; there are perfectly stunning bedrooms, baths, balconies and every necessity such as closets and attic. We believe this property unequaled by anything of anywhere near a like price in the city. It is the opportunity of some man who wants a splendidly built and faultlessly finished residence in Wilshire.

BUILDERS!!
BUILDERS!!
This Will Certainly Interest
YOU!!

We offer you a proposition that POSITIVELY CANNOT BE EQUALED on any other DESIRABLE, CLOSE-IN LOTS in Los Angeles. To further stimulate building in our new tract at "29th and Western" (we already have about TWENTY (20) FINE HOMES built and under way,) we will sell TWO (2) MORE LOTS on these liberal terms, to RESPONSIBLE BUILDERS: Pay us, say, $200 or $250 cash on a $900 lot (though we have good ones for even less;) we will give you a clear deed, so that you can borrow the full amount to build. We will take back a trust deed for the balance, payable at only $15 per month. The only strings to this offer are that you build a house costing at least $3000, at once. This is the most popular tract in all the southwest today, and if you "BUILD RIGHT" you'll be able to sell BEFORE YOUR HOUSE IS COMPLETED.

"We Can Show You."

Aside from this certainly most liberal offer, these lots are grand buys at the price asked. PAVED STREETS and every other strictly high-class improvements included in this LOW PRICE. CLOSER IN than other lots, without the improvements and advantages, selling for TWICE THE PRICE. To take advantage of this exceptional offer, you must ACT AT ONCE, if at all.

Take UNIVERSITY YELLOW CAR, "29th st. Branch," on Spring st., and ride to end. OFFICE, straight across "Western ave." from where the car stops, open every day and all day Sunday.

This is NOT A KEY LOT—just the same as any other lot on the same street selling for from $50 to $200 more. Will make terms of only $75 cash, $15 per month, at only 6 per cent. SQUARE.
"THE SQUARE THAT GROWS."

The area of Arlington Square, of course, does not grow, but its advantages as a residence tract, and the number of people who are interesting themselves in it and who aim to build homes, grow mighty fast—and for very good reasons. The place is right for a home and for investment. Here's your chance to get that lot you've been wanting in the southwest—a high-grade lot at a low grade price—on terms you can easily meet, price only $25 up; terms $25 cash and $15 monthly; present buyers here will certainly "cash in" with a very nice profit. In fact, I do not know a safer or better place in which to invest your savings than Arlington Square. You can't lose—you're bound to make money! Arlington Square has good car service by several lines, the fare being five cents; the conveniences include gas, electricity and telephones; it's improved with graded and oiled streets, cement walks and wide parkings planted to large shade trees. Beautifully laid out, with a pleasing outlook, protected by wise restrictions, a thoroughly desirable home place. Arlington Square is worth seeing. So, I say, SEE IT for yourself. Take Inglewood car to my tract office, corner Arlington st. and Santa Barbara ave. Or come to my downtown office and have me take you out in my automobile.

EXCEPTIONAL OFFER IN INDUSTRIAL AND BUSINESS PROPERTY.
I am the owner of a tract, 290 feet front by 163 on North Main st., in 1800 block and adjoining this in the rear: 397 feet front by 178 on Naud st., free of incumbrance; both properties can be served with spur track by the Santa Fe, as well as Southern Pacific. Being desirous to realize cash money now I offer a big bargain for entire or part purchase of this promising tract with hypothecary guarantee for the refund of the purchasing price, inclusive, 6 per cent. interest and taxes, if at the expiration of five years buyer should feel inclined to renounce such purchase. Beyond question, double the amount may be realized within the time mentioned, and better prospects yet, if Union Station be erected at its natural location; being in close proximity of the junction of the three roads; might eventually be included for a site. Am also willing to consider a fifty or ninety-nine years lease. Take time by the forelock! Here is your chance and no risk. Investigate addressing ADVERTISER, 2847 Harvard blvd.

FOR SALE—

BUY 5 ACRES AT LOMITA,

NEAR SAN PEDRO.

$325 per acre; 1-4 cash, balance one, two, three years.

You cannot invest your money in anything that will pay large profits. Real estate is always a safe investment and has been the foundation of a great many fortunes.

No property is as advantageously located as Lomita. It is only 10 minutes' ride from our great harbor and when the road is cut through the Bixby Hills it will be less than three miles, just far enough away to make it a most desirable residential section of San Pedro.

A few miles northwest of Lomita the Standard Oil people have bought the Peck land and they are going to spend $2,000,000 on improvements. They have 800 mules at work grading the refinery site. Adjoining the north line of Lomita is to be built the new industrial city where it is said a number of the largest Los Angeles manufactories are to be located. They are going to install a water plant that will water 24,000 acres.

No land ever gave greater promise of becoming very valuable property. You should take a look at it.

FORTY-ACRE FARM.
$12,000.
ONLY 8 MILES FROM CENTER OF CITY, NEAR WHITTIER LINE.

Here is a bargain—a property possessing real merit from every viewpoint. A rich, even, sandy loam soil, all in potatoes, corn, cauliflower, onions, tomatoes, lettuce, garlic, beans, cantaloupes and carrots, and particularly adapted to alfalfa—just the soil desired and the best to be found.

Improved with country house, barn, well and equipment for domestic water; and another larger well and equipment capable of producing seventy-five miner's inches of water for irrigating.

This property leases readily at a handsome rental—it is sure to increase in value substantially each year.

To a successful farmer, one who will work this property himself, it will easily net him a production profit each year of more than 15 per cent., or about $3000 a year, and in addition it will increase in value at the rate of at least 10 per cent. per year for the next several years.

To the investor or capitalist the yearly return on the capital invested by leasing would amount to 5 per cent., per year, which, when added to the 10 per cent. yearly increase, would make the investment pay him 15 per cent per year.

These figures are minimum figures—not maximum figures.

This property would be ideal for a dairy and alfalfa farm. An inspection of this soil and the crops now on it, its desirable close-in location, and a comparison of prices in the vicinity, will cause any thinking man to seriously consider the purchase of this property.

It is the one class of property constantly in demand, a real money maker—not a gamble.

No trade. No agents. Am offering this at a bargain figure and I must have a substantial amount of the purchase price in cash.

If you are seriously considering the purchase of a property of this character, it will surely pay you to see this forty-acre place. J. C. SAMSON, 218 P. E. Bldg. Main 853, or F8865.

HERE'S THE PLACE FOR ALFALFA.

A man can raise a limited amount of alfalfa almost anywhere. But what you want is a place where other ranchers have proven that alfalfa will bring you a big return, a large pile of hard cash every year, steadily. One of my neighbors at Perris Irrigated Farms had 300 acres of alfalfa which earned him $35,000 in the past two years. You can do just as well. He just sold his ranch for $450 an acre in order to start a larger place. He will get the same or a bigger return from the new ranch, and his successor is making the same money on the old ranch. Both these men are "on easy street." I will sell you some of the finest alfalfa land in Southern California for $100 to $150 an acre, and I will furnish the pumping plant and water. Close to the city of Perris, near Riverside and the boulevard. Terms one-fourth cash and the balance in four equal payments, or $5 cash and $5 monthly per acre. See this land. It will suit you.

YUCAIPA VALLEY—

FOR SALE—

RED APPLES

GROWN

are the most staple of all fruits. An orange is a luxury, an apple a necessity. There are no RED MOUNTAIN GROWN APPLES on the market today, the supply is exhausted. Do you wonder at our statement that apple growing in the Yucaipa Valley is as profitable, if not more so, than orange culture? Our very best land costs you only $375 an acre, including one share of water stock in a mutual company with each acre, giving you not only a water right, but water ownership, very easy terms. It costs you about $100 an acre to bring your apple trees into profitable bearing, which brings your orchard complete at a cost of $375 an acre.

Apple growers from Colorado, Michigan, Oregon, Washington and New York, as well as orange and lemon growers, together with a large number of business men from Southern California, are buying this land almost daily, and planting apples. WE URGE YOU TO LOCATE IN YUCAIPA. Take a trip with us any day in the week, free excursion to buyers. Let us show you our bearing orchards of apples, cherries, etc.; over 1000 acres of young orchards, hundreds of acres of young orchards planted to potatoes, onions, beans, sweet potatoes, etc. Now is the time for you to see the fruit and truck in growth. Prices WILL SOON ADVANCE. One year old orchards in Yucaipa are selling at from $420 to $500 an acre, which is a profit to the early investor of from 50 per cent. to 75 per cent. in twelve months.

Call in and see a sample of Yucaipa apples at our local office. For further information or illustrated booklet, call or write.

ORANGE AND LEMON LANDS.

Do you realize how the Panama Canal will increase this number by dozens of carloads—not only adding to the present enormous demand of the Middle Western and Eastern States, but also including Europe in its scope?

Do you further realize how the annual incomes of orange and lemon growers in this vicinity will thereby be increased by thousands of dollars?

When you consider that orange and lemon growers are even now making from $4000 to $20,000 and more annually—it is little wonder that professional men and business men in practically all departments, are forsaking their business and professional careers and buying their 10 and 20 or more acres in

SOME YEARS AGO THE UNDERSIGNED made a discovery of non-metallic mineral land, on which is now being operated one of the largest industries in the State of Colorado, employing 600 men and who have expended $2,000,000 in equipment and railroads and paying dividends. He has recently made another discovery of similar land of greater extent and more favorably located, being only 3 miles from main line of S. P. R.R. There has been in late years a tremendous increase in the demand for this material and one of the largest industries in the Southwest can be developed and with only a fraction of the capital that was required for the Colorado project. I want a first-class promotor to handle this enterprise, one with best of references and of strict business integrity, in short, a high-grade man. Have samples in city. A 104-ton passenger and freight boat, now under a good charter, which netted last month $325 with no work on my part at all; if boat is run by owner himself, he can make at least $1000 per month, and it does not take any marine experience to handle the business end of the boat. At present the boat is manned with twelve men, and sails under U.S.A. flags; boat cost when built $65,000, and is one of the best on the coast, and as a money maker it can not be excelled. Will sell or exchange for $60,000 in good real estate in Los Angeles.

TO LOAN—

$2000—$10,000—$22,000
$4000—$12,000—$25,000
$5000—$14,000—$34,000
$7500—$15,000—$45,000

Most of these amounts may be divided, though some of the larger ones are for ranch loans and are to be loaned in one piece.

6 and 7 per cent. prevail on city loans and 7 per cent. on country or ranch loans. Of course you realize that many applications are so strong as to command 6 per cent. and we have clients who will consider these as well as the more conservative.

Empyrical Medicine.

CINCINNATI MAN TRIES STING OF BEES AS

CINCINNATI (O.) June 15.—The sting of the honey bee has been found to be an excellent cure for rheumatism, when applied systemically. One sting will not cure your rheumatism, but if you take one sting every day your rheumatism will soon disappear; that's why bee-keepers are a class of people who know not the painful rheumatic malady, say prominent physicians who are watching an interesting experiment in Cincinnati.

John Renner, of Cincinnati, long a sufferer from rheumatism, is taking the bee sting cure for rheumatism. The victim has been under treatment for two weeks. At first hardly able to hobble about with a cane, he can now walk without the aid of the stick and it is estimated that the change in his chronic case was due to the poison injected into his system by the seventeen bee stings he has taken so far.

Only a few cases are recorded where rheumatism has been cured by the poison of the bee. Fred W. Muth, expert bee master, of Cincinnati, is one who became interested in bees through rheumatism. Physicians who are watching the experiment says that the formic acid which makes the sting of the honey bee so painful is the agent that nullifies the dreadful rheumatic pains. Sharp and painful as the sting of the bee is at the moment it is a pain of relief compared to the dull incessant pain of the rheumatic victim's lot.

In the experiment the patient takes on an average of two treatments a week consisting of three to five sting at each treatment. When once the system is innoculated with the poison of the bee sting, the person is immune to the rheumatic attacks.

EXPERIMENT FAILS.

What Women, With Municipal Suffrage for Twenty Years Have Not Done for Humanity in Kansas.

LOS ANGELES, June 17.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The women of Kansas have had school suffrage since 1861, and municipal suffrage since 1887 and yet in its care of helpless children and dependent old age, Kansas is very backward. The prosperity literature of Kansas may be well enough for those who do not know of real conditions there, but the Kansas official records and documents tell another story. The aged poor are cast, Lear-like, to the night, and the voting women of Kansas have lifted not a voice in their behalf. The State law of Kansas compels the State to care for the "indigent insane," while the various counties are compelled to care for the destitute or indigent poor. As a result, there are few poorhouses in Kansas, but the insane asylums are over-crowded with sane, but poverty-stricken old men and women.

On page 182 of the Second Biennial Report of the State Board of Control of Kansas, appear these words: "The great modern problem is not how to get inmates in the institutions for the insane, but how to get them out. . . . Persons who have been failures in life, on account of weak intellect, are sent to the insane hospitals instead of to the county almshouse. Old people, whose minds are failing along with their bodies, are sent to the insane hospitals by county authorities, rather than helped at home."

Dr. T. C. Biddle, superintendent of the Topeka State Hospital, says on page 384 of the same Kansas official document: "Many of these old people (patients in the insane asylum under his management) are brought to the institution in the last days of senile decline, both mental and physical. They are exactly the same type of cases that in former years were cared for at home, or perhaps, in the county almshouse. Now they are adjudged insane and transferred to the care of the State, occupying many beds that could, with greater benefit, be given to acutely insane, who, for want of room, are now compelled to remain in jails or other unsuitable places."

What a fearful arraignment of the failure of woman in politics! With municipal suffrage in her hands since 1887, the cities and counties of Kansas unloading their destitute aged on the State as insane, for the sake of the saving of a few paltry dollars! Where women have not the ballot, where the woman heart looks, not for political advancement, but for the good of humanity, such conditions could not exist.

Kansas is perhaps the only State in the Union where dependent children are kept in the county almshouses, along with idiots and imbeciles, and any doubting Thomas may verify this fact by an examination of the report of the Kansas State Board of Control.

Kansas City, the largest city in Kansas, is situated in Wyandotte county, a county with an assessed valuation of $101,000,000. It was in Kansas City that [illegible] Guyer was elected Mayor a few years ago by a majority vote of more than 45 votes. His opponent [illegible] male vote. Guyer was elected by the small majority of [illegible] and known during his term as "The Ladies' Mayor." An investigation [illegible] the vote [illegible] Kansas City daily newspaper, proved conclusively that Guyer was elected by the votes of the illiterate negro women of the Third Ward—the black belt of Kansas City, Kan.

When the women politicians of Kansas City were electioneering for Guyer, the great Wyandotte county had a tumble down shack on the outskirts of the city, known as the Wyandotte Juvenile Institute, where delinquent [illegible] housed. [illegible] Clerk showed that $5526.60 was spent by the county for the [illegible] the shack, though no one ever explained where the money went. There was not a carpet or floor covering of any kind [illegible] raided the Wyandotte Juvenile Institute, [illegible] ter there was no fire in the place, except that furnished by an old cookstove [illegible] discarded as worthless by the county poor farm officials.

The chief probation officer of the city, in speaking of the institute in a published interview, said: "It is not fit to house dogs." [illegible] compelling facts, [illegible] friends of the [illegible] beautiful [illegible] day dreams in vain.

Women have done, with the ballot, what they [illegible] doing the whole world over [illegible] and home and country and [illegible] ity without the ballot. ATTLE OF GIANTS IS "THE TIMES" CONTEST.

a daily newspaper whose whole life has been devoted to the upbuilding of this section, is surely clean and fine and dignified.

Most men devote their lives and ambitions to the establishment of a family and a comfortable home in which to house them.

Here is your chance to accomplish in several short months what in the ordinary course of events would require years. Intelligent effort studiously applied in the conduct of your work in this canvass is almost certain to place you high up in the list and within easy reach of one of the better prizes.

Read this prize list over carefully and you will see that twenty of them have a value of from $1000 up, and about an equal number from $500 up to $1000. They have been carefully selected and there is scarcely a prize offered but what the average man or woman would find acceptable.

The contestant securing the highest number of points computed upon the subscriptions and daily coupons turned in to the Contest Manager up to the close of the contest, will have first choice of all the prizes; the second highest contestant will have second choice, and so on down the line. You need not take the prize that happens to come next in the list when your choice comes, if you prefer something else. It is entirely a matter of your option.

MARK BLANKS CAREFULLY.

Contestants are requested to exercise special care in marking the subscription blanks turned into the office and should specify clearly the number of months a subscription is to run and whether it is old or new.

It will have been noticed that quite a few individual scores appearing one day are reduced in total on the following day. The reason for this is that some subscriptions have been entered as new by the contestants, but upon investigation and verification by The Times agents, they have been found to be old subscriptions. In the majority of cases it is not the fault of the contestants in turning in a subscription as new when it should be old, but is a lack of information, or the result of being misinformed by the subscribers as to whether they had been taking the paper regularly or not previous to giving the order to the contestant.

This cannot always be avoided, so as fast as new subscriptions are investigated and found to be old ones, the contestants are charged back with the difference in points between old and new subscriptions.

The change of address upon the part of a subscriber does not make that subscriber a new one; the transfer of names from one to another at the same address where practically the same people receive the paper does not constitute a new subscription; the discontinuance of the service of The Times temporarily upon the part of a regular subscriber in order that the contestant may receive a new order, does not constitute a new subscription.

A new subscriber as construed by the contest department means one who is not taking the paper regularly at the time the order is given to the contestant, or who has not been taking it for thirty days previous to that time.

While we endeavor to follow these general rules, each case must be decided upon its individual merits and the circumstances surrounding it; so therefore when a contestant finds that his score has been reduced by any amount, it is suggested that the contestant call and see the contest manager in order that the details may be given.

WEEKLY AND MONTHLY PRIZES.

A new week for the two prizes to male and female contestants consisting of $25 each, began at noon, Saturday, June 17, and will close at noon Saturday, June 24.

The object of these prizes each week is to stimulate the work of all contestants and offer to those who happen to be far down in the general list, an opportunity to win out for the week. The general standing of points has no application upon the week's work, so that any contestant, old or new, has an equal chance to win this $25 prize every week.

In addition to these, the prizes for the month of June amount to $300 as shown in a table in another column. There are six of these prizes consisting of first, second and third prize, for male and female contestants, to be awarded to the contestants who secure the highest number of subscription points during the month of June.

SCHOLARSHIP CONTEST.

Boys and girls, you have just one week from tomorrow in which to prepare yourselves for the great Scholarship Contest which is annually conducted by The Los Angeles Times.

Many of you who are now attending school have participated in this contest in the past. To those of you who have, no word is necessary as to the manner in which The Times conducts these contests, or of the extremely friendly feeling that has always existed between this paper and the students who have engaged in this work.

This will be the eleventh year of these contests, each succeeding year having been just a little bit more successful than the one before; and this season promises to outdo all past years, both in the number of contestants engaged and in the number and quality of the scholarships awarded.

To the earnest student, and especially to the one who is handicapped by lack of sufficient means to proceed with his elected course of study, this contest offers a means of accomplishing something tangible, and attaining desired results. Ambition, desire to go further, an effort to attain a higher education as a means of future success in life, are most laudable qualities, and it is for the consummation of these aspirations that this contest is held.

On the other hand this is not a philanthropical proposition upon the part of The Times, although in itself it is an uplifting work; as you benefit, The Times benefits, for this contest is mutual and cooperative in its results. While many students without sufficient means to complete their educations would be glad indeed to progress further along their special lines of study, few of them would care to accept such things as gifts. The really earnest student is quite willing to render some service to attain his goal. The service required here is that of securing subscriptions for The Los Angeles Times; not any specific amount in subscriptions or any specific numbers of subscribers but simply to get all he or she can. In return for this service it has always been the custom of The Times to pay a regular compensation irrespective of the scholarships offered as prizes, so that the student may feel and know that he is engaged in legitimate business and is accepting nothing but what he earns.

The scholarships awarded as prizes stimulate the work and are to be given in accordance with the relative ranking of the contestants at the close of the contest.

Any student of good character is eligible to enter this contest, and no requirements are made other than an agreement to live up to the rules and regulations governing the same. These rules are not difficult to conform to, but are adopted merely that The Times may be able to conduct the contest without partiality to anyone.

For the past several years almost every student who has entered these contests and remained until the finish has qualified for a prize. Quite a few more contestants than prizes were entered at the beginning, but as in all cases where large numbers of people are engaged, a certain percentage, for various reasons, drop out entirely before the finish. So that the one who sticks, works faithfully, and gives this work the same attention and energy that he would in pursuit of his own business or pleasure, is almost certain to come within the list of winners.

It cannot be impressed upon you too strongly that it is well to enter early and start the work promptly on Monday, June 26. The Scholarship Contest runs throughout vacation time until about the opening of the public schools in September. Unlike the Greater Contest, the time is limited so that the student who enter at the beginning will have just a shade the best of it all the way through.

While this contest is one of the features of the Greater Contest, it will be conducted as an entirely separate department. Those entering for the scholarships will have their points credited in that contest only, and will have no interest, whatsoever, in any of the long list of prizes announced for the Greater Contest in another column; nor will any of the contestants in the Greater Contest have a choice of the scholarship prizes.

Scholarships will be awarded in accordance with the relative standing of the contestants at the finish. The contestant receiving the highest number of points will have first choice; the second highest, second choice, and so on down the line until all of the prizes shall have been awarded.

So fill out the nomination certificate and send at once to the Scholarship Editor at The Times office. Do this at once in order that there may be no possible delay in getting started in time.

A list of these scholarships will be published in due time and you will have an opportunity of selecting the particular one that you desire to win.

Oklahoma the Stage.

HAIR-PULLING FEST AHEAD IN CAMPAIGN

Owen, Haskell and Williams in Role of Stars.

United States Senatorship for Survivor of Game.

Comedy, Near-tragedy, Even Vaudeville—Which?

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

OKLAHOMA CITY (Okla.) June 15.—Oklahoma's greatest political hair-pulling will be staged promptly in the spring and summer of 1912. The performance will be strictly impromptu, and the company will contain only the three, or possibly four, stars. One of them will be leading man. Just which one is a mystery, and this mystery it is which serves to make the "tragedy" already the subject of gossip, both political and social, in every section of Oklahoma, from Guymon to Idabel, and from Coffeyville to Frederick. The United States senatorship will be given the survivor.

DRAMATIS PERSONAE.

Robert Latham Owen, Cherokee Indian, well educated, well bred, of personality both pleasing and imposing, at present junior United States Senator from Oklahoma. Inclined to pomposity, both of manner and appearance. Intolerant of views which differ from his own, but too much of the tactful politician to show it. Inclined to be aristocratic.

Charles N. Haskell, native of Ohio, self-educated, and self-made, with a few of the corners still untrimmed. Formerly Governor of Oklahoma, and before that a power in the constitutional convention. Affable, at times, abrupt at others. Easy to anger, and once an enemy, or a friend, always the same. Also intolerant of opposition, and also tactful; inclined to hide his tact, however, under a cloak of "rugged honesty," worn for political purposes chiefly. Democratic—when he wants to be.

Robert L. Williams, born in Alabama and possessed of all the pride and willingness to fight natural to the southerner. Well educated, polished and always courteous. At present a member of the Oklahoma supreme bench, and formerly at the head of it. Politic, but aggressive, and ready to adapt himself to any style of fighting that may be adopted.

BITTER CAMPAIGN AHEAD.

That the campaign will be a bitter one is admitted. It will be largely a newspaper campaign, and various charges that have been made from time to time against both Owen and Haskell will furnish the first round of ammunition. This campaign, judging from facts known at present, will be more even at the start than has any ever fought in Oklahoma.

According to general report, the Daily Oklahoman will support Owen against the field in the primary race. It is expected, also that the Muskogee Phoenix, published in the home town of Owen and Haskell, will be inclined toward the side of the present Senator. The Tulsa World is expected to attack both Owen and Haskell during the campaign.

In the southeastern part of the State practically all Democratic papers are expected to support Williams. The southeast so far has been neglected politically, it thinks, and this opportunity of landing the United States Senatorship is going to call out almost a full vote.

In the southwestern and south central parts of the State, the Ardmoreite, published by Col. Sidney Suggs, a warm admirer and personal friend of the Governor, is practically certain to oppose both Haskell and Williams, and this fact is taken as an indication that the Governor will support Senator Owen, passively, if not actively. The Enid Morning News, in the northwestern part of the State, is expected to support Owen.

HASKELL BUYING PAPERS.

Haskell's newspaper support will be added to by papers that he is buying, as well as by his original weekly paper, the New State Tribune, published at Oklahoma City. Shortly after he retired from office he bought outright the McAlester Herald-Democrat, and for a short time ran it as a daily, later changing it back to a weekly, however. It is rumored that since he returned to Muskogee to make his home he has bought controling interest in a Democratic paper there.

Williams's strength is expected to come from the southeast and from the central and west parts of the State, sections which were aided by the location of the capital at Oklahoma City. The decision of the State Supreme Court which favored Oklahoma City's claim to the capital was handed down by Williams, and the fact that it was sustained by the United States Supreme Court recently brought about his unofficial announcement of candidacy.

Owen and Haskell must fight for the northeast. Both of them live there. Haskell, who is recognized as one of the most effective builders in Oklahoma, is building an interurban system with Muskogee as the center, and this fact is going to be no mean political factor.

INDIANS FOR OWEN.

Owen will carry the Indian vote almost solid, it is expected, for the simple reason that the Indian will support one of his own race, no matter what he may have against the man personally.

The north central part of the State will go against Haskell, and most probably will give Owen the greater part of the votes, for the reason that the north central part has looked with favor on Guthrie, and the fact that the former Governor was bitter in his fight on that city, and that Justice Williams dealt Guthrie its death-blow through a decision, doubtless will militate against both of them. This section is Republican, but polls a heavy Democratic vote also.

In the northwest, the fact that the leading papers which circulate there will support Owen, doubtless will bring him a large number of votes. At present that section has little reason for supporting any one of the three men, and it is hard to tell just who will finish with a majority.

WILLIAMS'S EYE ON TOGA.

In the southwest and in the south central portions, the fight will be hard. Political friends of Owen who have influence there, including Gov. Cruce, doubtless will make a hard fight for him, but both Haskell and Williams are popular, and it is expected they will divide the lion's share of the vote. Williams undoubtedly will carry off the majority in the southeast.

Williams's political methods are an unknown quantity at present, and for that reason the semi-official announcement of his candidacy is causing considerable comment.

Political friends of Williams insist that he does not hope to win this race, but is entering it to draw strength from Haskell. They insist that he can hope to carry not more than one section of the State, and that a section at present favorable to Haskell.

His real ambition, they insist, is to get his name before the others this time, and then run against Senator T. P. Gore of Lawton when his term expires in 1914.

Whether he is running seriously or just trying to get in practice, he certainly will make doubly interesting a political fight which, without him would have been the most interesting ever "pulled off" in Oklahoma.

FRATERNITY PLANS HOME.

BANK EMPLOYEES' NEW QUARTERS TO BE ATTRACTIVE.

Work to Commence Next Week on Fine Clubhouse to Be Used Wholly by Members of Chapter Devoted to the Financial Institutions—Some Features of the Structure.

Ground will be broken next week for the erection of a three-story and basement brick club building and dormitory on South Hope street, between Sixth and Seventh, for the exclusive use of the Los Angeles Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, which has taken a lease for ten years on the new structure from the Orena Estate, the builder. It will cover a lot 50x152 feet in size. Parkinson & Bergstrom are the architects.

The first floor will be devoted to social uses. There will be a spacious lobby with a monster brick fireplace, lounging room, billiard and card rord room and an assembly room 40x60 feet. The assembly room is designed principally for class work, lectures and club meetings. It will also be used for dining-room purposes.

The second floor will contain the library, writing room, directors' offices and seventeen dormitories. The third floor will be subdivided into twenty sleeping rooms. There will be a number of private and public baths. The gymnasium, showers and boiler room will be quartered in the basement. All rooms will be outside rooms and will be steam heated, wired for telephones and have running hot and cold water.

For a number of years the local chapter has had rooms in the Exchange building at Third and Hill streets, its quarters being the largest of any chapter in the United States. It will be the first chapter in the country to have an entire building for its sole use. During the past year the Los Angeles Chapter has become an incorporated body and its growth has been phenomenal. It now has nearly 400 members. The local chapter of the American Institution of Banking was organized April 14, 1903, and for the past eight years has done much toward the up-lift of its members, and is now recognized as one of the foremost chapters in the United States, ranking sixth in size of membership.

The officers and directors of the Los Angeles Chapter are: Don W. Carlton, president; George W. Greene, vice-president; William H. Thomson, treasurer; W. G. Mohr, secretary; Leo S. Chandler, W. W. Gibbs, Jr., G. C. Bradley and Norman M. Fraser.

Building Leased.

The entire two story and basement loft building situated at No. 272-78 South Los Angeles street, and having a frontage of 62¼ feet by 120 feet in depth, has just been leased to the Emil Olcovich Shoe Company. This firm is at present located at 256 South Los Angeles street, where their rapidly growing wholesale trade has made it imperative that they secure quarters of a much larger size. The new quarters secured by them will give them over five times the floor space which they have been occupying. Several thousand dollars have been spent and more is being expended in changing and bringing down to date their new quarters, included in which was the installment of an entire new plate glass front. The property is owned by the J. P. Newmark estate, represented by Samuel Newmark. The lease runs for a period of five years and the total rental is approximately $20,000.

$10 Round Trip to San Francisco.

On sale Monday, June 19th, good for fifteen days; going via Coast Line, returning either Coast Line or Valley. Stop-overs allowed at Santa Barbara, Paso Robles Hot Springs, Castroville (for Del Monte,) and Santa Cruz, and at Merced (for Yosemite Valley) returning. See agents, Southern Pacific.

This Is the Record.

MONSTER ELECTRIC COMMERCIAL TRUCK CARRIES TWENTY-TON PRODUCE LOAD.

ONE of the largest motor trucks ever built may soon be brought to Los Angeles. The body of the monster commercial automobile resembles an electric car and has a cab in front. The generator and the engine is in front and the capacity of the truck is said to be twenty tons.

Equipped with a ninety-horse power six-cylinder gasoline motor this big machine has all the power that is necessary. In addition to this the immense truck is equipped with a twenty-kilowatt electric generator. It will move away with a trailer over the roughest of roads and is especially adapted for hauling immense loads through the mining districts.

There is a seven and a half-horse power motor for each of the wheels. If the truck is passing over a sandy road the wheel motors can lift the big wagon out of the sand wherever is possible to secure traction. Though will move at the rate of from five six miles an hour on its lowest speed it is capable of a much faster speed when the roads are good.

The cars are twenty-five feet in length. There is room for a load that will exceed that which can be placed on any other machine of the kind. The weight is of course in excess of that of any other truck built.

The wheels are 48 inch in diameter and are of the artillery type. They have a twelve-inch faved cast steel tire with corrugations. This tire can be removed or can be taken up when it loosens.

These big machines were built in Chicago and were taken out of the shop on March 20 and shipped to Kingman, Ariz. They were taken over a roundabout course because of the many tunnels in the mountains.

This gas-electric road truck will make two miles to the gallon of gasoline. It will carry ore over the hills and into the back country. It has a world of power and looks like a huge locomotive and is unlike anything of the kind ever built before.

Vanity of Riches.

RICH PAUPERS LIVE IN GARRETS.

ECCENTRICITIES OF MILLIONAIRE HERMITS.

Recent Death of G. E. Dering in England Who Scorned Wealth and Shunned the World—Other Rich Men Who Lived in the Utmost Apparent Penury.

The "vanity of riches" has never been more strikingly demonstrated than by the story of G. E. Dering, who has recently died at Lockley Hall, Welwyn, says London Tit-Bits.

For the greater part of half a century this lord of many acres and of a quarter of a million of money has been content to lead the life of a hermit in his magnificent home, surrounded by a thousand acres of park land. His valuable picture—by Holbein, Fra Bartolomeo, and other old masters—have stood for a generation stacked three deep, with their faces turned to the walls. A generation of dust had settled undisturbed on Dresden vases, gold and enamel clocks, statuary, and costly furniture.

Gorgeous carriages, rich with heraldic painting, lay rotting in his coach house; his front door was overgrown with ivy as high as the stone shield of arms that crowned it. Not even a lamb was allowed to bleat within the hearing of the lord of this desolate mansion. And even the highroad was diverted, that no sound of traffic should vex his ears. Thus, amid dust, decay and desolation, lived and died the owner of £25,000 a year, shunning the world and scorning his wealth.

And so it has always been and always will be. One man squanders his gold; another hoards or despises it. It is but a few years since one of our wealthiest baronets—a man with a rent roll of £30,000 a year—died in a miserable attic near Waterloo Bridge. His sordid room was papered with illustrations from the weekly papers; he never crossed its threshold except for an occasional solitary ramble by night; no one was ever allowed to enter his dreary sanctum, his meals being left for him outside the door, and his long days were spent looking through his attic window on the moving panorama of the Thames.

While Sir Henry Delves Broughton was sitting at his attic window a man infinitely richer was walking the streets of St. Petersburg in the guise of a beggar, pocketing the alms of charitable passers-by, and gleefully carrying back his spoil to his miserable two-storie dcottage in one of the city's slums.

This was the only "palace" of the multi-millionaire Solodovnikoff, where he lived among his decrepit stick of furniture with an old housekeeper. Here he would sit shivering through the cold winter days, too miserly to allow himself a fire or even to brighten the dark house with the light of a solitary candle. For twenty years he was only known to wear one suit, a 'thing of shreds and patches," scarcely a vestige of the original cloth remaining. And yet this sordid-living hermit was one of the greatest land-owners and railway magnates in all Russia—a man who left behind him a hundred million roubles. Far wealthier than many kings, he led a life from which most peasants would have shrunk.

A few years ago there was no wealthier man in all Paris than M. Colasson, who for a generation had lived as a pauper in two rooms of his magnificent palace in the Rue Galilee. During all this period he never once left his splendid prison, and no one was ever allowed to enter it except his one faithful attendant, who kept him supplied with his daily food of bread and eggs. As in Mr. Dering's case, it was the death of a father that consigned him to his hermit life, so with M. Colasson it was the tragic death by fire of a loved nephew and heir, in 1874, that decided him to forswear the world and all its vanities.

Within a few weeks of the death of M. Colasson there died in an attic in a Berlin slum one Herr Schwarz, who was known to and pitied by his neighbors as the poorest of the poor. He sallied out daily into the fashionable quarters dressed in rags and carrying a sack in which he collected crusts.

He lived alone and died alone, a mere bag of bones, surrounded by riches, for in his rooms was found £80,000—in gold coins, stored in scores of jars and bottles, and in bank notes, with which his pillow and mattress were stuffed.

A shipment of 90 pieces of suitings sent to one of the high-rent, high-price tailors of this city was refused by them because the mills had made such a low price on the goods that they wanted spot cash for them. They were a specially ordered, specially woven line, only one suit to a pattern. The high rent tailors were long on fancy fixtures, but short on cash. They couldn't handle the shipment. And so we stepped in and for spot cash bought the whole 90 pieces for 40 cents on the dollar.

We've never had a higher quality shipment come into the store. While they last, the price is $14.50, no more, no less. Get yours early.

SOME MYSTERIES IN FEDERAL EXPENSES.

Voucher for Portrait Calls Attention to Them.

Themes for Fiction Writers in National Capital.

Secret Agents Employed to Keep Up to Date.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

WASHINGTON (D. C.) June 5.—The United States government gets money and spends money in rather curious ways for such a large business institution. Dealings that run into the millions are simple affairs and can be understood at a glance. It is the small transactions that often puzzle the students of the science of government.

The discovery that the government paid only $850 for a portrait of former Secretary of State Day, but made out a voucher for $2450, simply calls attention to the fact that the United States frequently has to spend money for certain purposes which it would not be good policy to disclose. The trouble with the portrait item is that the voucher is palpably a false one and includes an expenditure of $1600 which the State Department wishes to keep quiet. There is no allegation as yet that this was an improper expenditure. But that the method was improper is pretty generally agreed.

ANNUAL FUND.

The State Department has an annual fund from which it may make expenditures which are not for publication. This is well understood and Congress does not hesitate to grant the money, recognizing the fact that it is one of the necessities of a sovereign government. The appropriation bill of last year carried $90,000 for the State Department, to be used for emergency expenditures in the diplomatic and consular service. Some of these expenses are no secret and are of the most ordinary character. Others are of a highly confidential nature and are incident to the operation of a government which has dealings with the other nations of the world. If the extra $1600 expended under the Day portrait voucher was for some confidential purpose, members of Congress do not see why it was not charged against this general fund, without stating its exact nature, instead of being included in another item to which it had no relation.

MYSTERY AND ROMANCE.

Writers of fiction who deal with the mystery and romance of secret politics always select nations abroad. The secret agents, the spies and the diplomatic sharps are either Germans Frenchmen, Russians or Japanese, and occasionally Englishmen. The Russians and the Japanese seem to have the strongest hold on popular favor. But nobody ever seems to pick the United States as an employer of secret agents. The stories of fiction always deal with thrilling underground events in which the nations of the old world are concerned.

Yet is is well known in Washington that this government does employ secret agents; in fact, it is forced to do so in order to keep abreast of the times. You cannot learn at the State Department, at any other department, who the agents are or what they do, but it is well understood that the United States keeps itself informed concerning politics abroad. It gets and pays for information about foreign military establishments, fortifications and navies. This sort of service naturally is of the most confidential character and would cease to be of value if the details concerning it were disclosed. To expect the government to give a detailed statement of it would be like asking the New York police department to give out all the particulars concerning whatever important criminal investigations it may have under way.

ITEMS OF EXPENDITURES.

This $90,000 fund in the hands of the State Department covers a lot of expenses that never will become public and, for State reasons, ought not to be disclosed. There are, however, in the report of the receipts and disbursements of the United States a lot of curious items of which no secret is made. They come under all departments and some of them seem to be of the most trivial character. The government gets its income from a few well-known sources. The customs receipts are the largest item. Next to that rank the internal revenue receipts and then those of the Postoffice Department. A good deal of money is derived from the sale of public lands. But under the head of miscellaneous receipts the government last year took in over $45,000,000. This money is distributed among all the departments and some of the items run as low as 1 cent.

Not all of the customs districts produce large revenues to the government. The district of the port of New York turned in over $220,000,000, but Natchez, Miss., in a whole year collected only $2.15, while Saco, in the State of Maine, contributed $6.58 to the support of the government. The government derived last year $919.68 for the board of private horses in the stables of the Senate and House. It got $276.61 worth of gold and silver out of counterfeit coins. The Treasury Department notes a receipt of $70.50 as a reimbursement to the government for the use of a carriage.

UNEXPLAINED BALANCES.

Nearly all of the departments find unexplained balances in their cash accounts and they are turned in as government receipts. Last year the Treasury Department turned in 1 cent, the War Department 17 cents, the Navy Department $53.21, the Interior Department 9 cents, the Department of Commerce and Labor 40 cents and the Department of Justice 46 cents. The Treasury Department got $101.53 as a rebate on telephone calls. Somebody found $15.49 in a safe in the War Department. The presence of the money could not be explained, so it was added to the government's receipts. The Navy Department collected 86 cents for overcharges on telegrams. Some of the departments manage to get back part of the money spent on private telephone calls. In this way, for instance, the Interior Department took in $30 last year. It also reported the sum of $11 as revenue from the Crater Lake National Park in Oregon.

HOUSEHOLD EXPENSES.

The government has all sorts of household expenses. Last year it cost $1500 to repair the paintings in the Capitol and $2000 to purchase a bust of Zachary Taylor. Putting postage stamps on letters for United States Senators cost $325. The State Department spent $590.40 on its cipher code. The government paid for rent of grounds at its embassy in Tokió, Japan, $203.69. There also appears in the Treasurer's report an item of $4242.93 for bringing home criminals, and another of $5056.70 for rescuing shipwrecked American seamen. The International Fisheries Congress held in Washington cost the State Department $10.

All sorts of amounts were spent last year on public buildings, ranging from hundreds of thousands of dollars down to one dollar. The latter sum was expended on the postoffice at Iowa Falls, Iowa. The postoffice at Dalton, Ga., got $1.85 for upkeep. Under the expenses of the District of Columbia appears an item of $1.25 for extending and widening streets at Anacostia bridge. How much street widening and extending can be done for that amount students of municipal government may be able to figure.

One of the tiny expenditures of the Navy Department came under the head of "housing torpedo vessels." It cost $3.08 to do this in 1910. The Patent Office spent $4.81 "for international protection of industrial property." The Agricultural Department, through its bureau of entomology, got rid of the sum of $1.40 through an investigation of the cotton boll weevil.

So the list goes, the little items mixed in with the big ones, and of such wide variety as to show conclusively that the United States government is a very complex piece of machinery, which operates thousands of different enterprises.

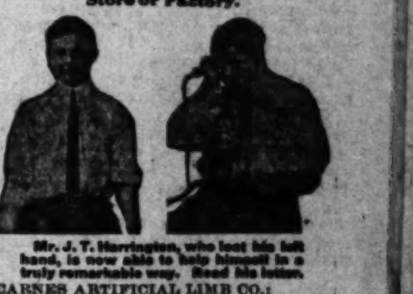
Have You Lost A Hand or Arm?

Read Below About the Wonderful Invention That Enables Armless People to Use a Telephone, Write Letters, Run An Automobile, Carry a Sample Case or Do Almost Any Kind of Work in Office, Store or Factory.



Mr. J. T. Harrington, who lost his left hand, is now able to help himself in a truly remarkable way. Read his letter.

CARNES ARTIFICIAL LIMB CO.:
After wearing your arm for the past two months, I must say that you have a great invention. I can do everything that you claim and many things that I thought impossible with an artificial arm. I find it of great assistance at work, especially in handling the receiver of the 'phone. I write this letter with my artificial hand, which I think is pretty good, as I was never left-handed. J. T. HARRINGTON, 2911 East 12th Street, Kansas City, Mo.

For the benefit of others who may have lost an arm or hand, it may be of interest to learn that these wonderful artificial limbs are made by the Carnes Artificial Limb Co., of Kansas City, Mo.

However remarkable it may appear, there seems to be no doubt, whatever, that these arms will do all and more than Mr. Harrington claims. Surgeons who have seen the Carnes Arm in operation have heartily endorsed it as the most useful and natural appearing artificial arm and hand ever invented.

The Carnes Artificial Limb Co. have prepared a remarkable illustrated booklet showing the wonderful uses to which their Artificial Arms can be placed. They offer to pay the expenses from any point in the world of any one to whom they fail to prove every claim made in this booklet.

Any reader of this article who has suffered the loss of a hand or arm, or who knows of any one similarly afflicted, should write for full particulars and proof of this marvelous invention. Use coupon, or a postal will do.

Physician Drives His Car on, In Violation of City Ordinance—May Be Summoned to Court.

While riding a motorcycle on South Flower, near Sixth, yesterday afternoon, W. Willis, No. 3830 Vermont avenue, was struck and knocked down by an automobile driven by Dr. C. P. Drum, No. 515 West Thirty-third street. Willis was quite severely bruised. He picked himself up, brushed his clothes and looked about to see whose machine had struck him, when he saw Dr. Drum moving rapidly away.

Dr. Drum admitted that his machine had struck Willis, but declared that when he looked back Willis had arisen, so he did not believe him to be severely injured.

Drum did not report the accident immediately, as required by the ordinance, and unless a report is made to Capt. Haupt before Monday morning, the physician must appear in the Police Court.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

Receipts of eggs yesterday morning were 237 cases. The demand for eggs was lighter than usual and with reports of lower prices in the central part of the State the market here made further declines, case count going to 20 cents and candled to 24 cents a dozen.

Butter arrivals for the week were also lighter than they have been for some period past. The demand was good and Eastern prices well sustained, which kept the local market at the same place. Receipts were 46,230 pounds.

Cheese arrivals were 5735 pounds. The call for cheese has been light locally, but buying by local dealers in the East has been heavy and practically three cars a week have been coming in for two weeks, which has caused the declines. Prices in the East are beginning to show a little more firmness and may be advancing before the end of the week.

Potato arrivals were 265 sacks. The demand for potatoes has been good during the week. Stock is being shipped to Oregon, to Arizona and Nevada and a few California spuds have gotten into Texas, while more have come out of Texas for this territory.

There were no changes in onions during the week past. They remained very firm. Beans are slowly being consumed. Other staples were fairly steady.

Fresh fruits are plentiful and prices in all lines dropped some during the last few days. This week will be the final heavy week of cherries after which will come the windup of the crop. Melons are dirt cheap, cantaloupes selling as low as 50 cents a crate on poor quality stock. Berries are at their best and should be purchased for preserving purposes.

LOS ANGELES EXCHANGE.

Trading Is Light on the Last Day of the Week and the Market Inclined to Be Bullish.

Mexican Petroleum common was the main trader on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange yesterday, and made a slight decline. Closing at 37.50 bid. This has been one of the most active oil shares on the local market for several days, and the present price is a big gain over the usual quotation. Mexican preferred held its own, closing at 72.50.

Consolidated Midway, while not as active as usual, sold up to 12½ and closed at that figure. Palmer was a little off, closing at 1.31.

There was some activity in the mining list, and also in the Public Utilities. The latter included Home Telephone, Edison Electric common and Los Angeles Investment.

SAN FRANCISCO EXCHANGE.

Most of the Trading Is in the Comstock Shares, but the Opening Prices Were Best—Quiet Elsewhere.

[Special Service to The Times by B. F. Taylor, 118 West Fourth street, Los Angeles.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—As usual the big trading is in the Comstock division. The opening prices were the best of the session and without any apparent reason prices gradually receded, but closed better than the low prices of the day. Ophir was off 5, Mexican 7½, Consolidated Virginia 2, Yellow Jacket 4, Sierra 5, Union 2. The 2400-foot north drift on the Mexican crossed the Union line this morning, the face of the drift averaged $11 per ton. This is said to be the first ore found in the Union in thirty years. This is just what has been expected from this drift and Union promises to do better.

With the exception of Jumbo Extension, which was up two points, there were no changes in the Goldfields. The Tonopahs were practically unchanged from yesterday, as was the stocks in the outlying camps. Bonnie was off one point in the bid.

News comes from Tonopah that preparations are being made to resume work in the bottom of the Belmont shaft, which is now about 1210 feet below the collar, or twenty-two feet below the new station at the twelfth level. Before sinking can be resumed it will be necessary to install a pump to handle the water which will be encountered before much greater depth is attained. When work was discontinued in the shaft the last round of drill holes showed water, and no further sinking was attempted, owing to the inability to handle any water which might come in at that time, and attention was turned to the cutting-out of the station at the twelfth level, or about twenty-two feet above the bottom of the shaft. This station is now practically completed, and in order to carry the shaft down the company has purchased an Aldrich quintuplex pump. This pump is capable of delivering a large quantity of water under high pressure, and will be installed at the twelfth level station, below which sinking pumps will be used to raise the water from the bottom of the shaft to the sump on the twelfth level, from which place it will be raised to the surface by the Aldrich pump. As they must install this pump and put in the necessary piping to handle the water, it will be some time before the real work of sinking the shaft begins, but no time will be lost in gaining additional depth.

Compared with last Saturday, Florence is off 7½, Jumbo Extension is up 2, Nevada Hills 5, Mexican is off 2½, Union is up 10.

DOWNWARD TONE PREVAILS IN CHICAGO WHEAT PIT.

Other Cereals Decline in Sympathy Close of Finer Grain Is at Fractional Loss—Oats and Corn Show Dip of Half-Cent—Trade in Provisions Nearly Nil.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, June 17.—Favoring weather in the spring crop belt gave the wheat market today a decided down turn. Compared with last night the close was ⅛ to ¾@7-8 off. Other cereals, too, showed a net decline of ¼@3-8 to ½, and oats a shade to ¼. For hog products the outcome varied from 5 lower to 5 advance. July wheat fluctuated from 86 7-8 to 87½ with last trades ¾@7-8 down at 86 5-8. September corn ranged between 55 5-8 and 56, with the closing ½ down at 55 7-8. Cash grades were in fair demand. Number 2 yellow finished at 54½@54¾. High and low points for September oats were 39 1-8 and 38 7-8 with the close 39 1-8, a net loss of 1-8@1-4. Trade in provisions nearly vanished. A nickel either way measured the extent to which the market would budge.

NEW YORK COTTON MARKET.

[Special Service to The Times by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members of the New York Stock Exchange, 118 West Fourth street, Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, June 17.—The market declined today on heavy selling by McFadden interests in July and August, and general liquidation and short selling of the new crop months by the public, based on unofficial reports of heavy general rains in north central Texas. As was the case yesterday, the official weather bulletins posted at noon by the United States Government failed entirely to confirm these private reports of rain, and showed temperatures in Texas the highest for the season, and also the highest on record for so early in the year. It was noticeable that scales brokers did practically nothing during the greater part of the session and some thought this interest was waiting for the liquidation to spend itself, having bought a large part of their crop lines when the market was well down. The trade is much confused, owing to the discrepancy between the official and private weather advices as to the rains.

Logan & Bryan's letter says:

"We have arrived at the middle of June, and with an already late crop becoming later, the entire western belt is crying for rain, and beginning to use the stereotyped phrase, "we must have rain in the next ten days." This might well be used during August drouth, with a full grown and hardy plant, but a June drouth with a young and tender plant needed the rain not ten, but twenty days ago, and the producer is trying to make himself think the damage thus far is slight. The damage already done is tremendous, unless unusual July and August weather follows, and to add the usual August drouth on the extreme heat we have already seen means the fate to the cotton crop that has happened to oats. There is much more desire to be conservative and hopeful in the middle of June than in the middle of August. In August hope is flung behind, and exaggeration turns to the other extreme. What rains have thus far fallen in the Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana country are of no value whatever. Showers that might come could not stem the tide. The only relief must come from two or three days of continuous downpour. These views are radical, but so has been the weather. The world's spinners have already taken 10,643,000 bales, and have two and one-half months yet to take care of the world's visible supply, which is smaller than that of last year, and the world's invisible supply is much less than a year ago. Even a large crop of cotton will sell at higher prices; a small one will revolutionize the cotton trade."

STOCK EXCHANGE UNUSUALLY DULL.

MILDLY REACTIONARY FEELING DOMINATES TRADES.

Slight Losses for Day, However, for Most Part Effaced by Recovery Towards Close—Copper Group Well Held and in Fair Demand. Bonds Quite Irregular.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, June 17.—Prices were barely changed as a result of today's trading on the stock exchange. The market was unusually dull and was dominated by a mildly reactionary tone, although the slight losses were for the most part effaced by a recovery before the close. The copper group was well held and was in fair demand. The decrease of nearly five million pounds in the European visible supply of copper, as reported in the fortnightly statement, reduced the total to the lowest in two years. Unusual interest attached to today's bank statement because, for the first time, it embraced the operations of the sixteen new trust companies' members, whose resources swelled the total enormously. Actual loans, for instance, increased last week about $13,000,000, and this week increased $572,000,000, while an estimated cash gain of $18,000,000 based on the operations of the former members only, was increased to $74,000,000. Bonds were irregular. Total sales, par value, $1,629,000. United States 2's lost ⅛ and the 4's ¼ on call on the week.

THE COPPER INDUSTRY.

[Special Service to The Times by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members of the New York Stock Exchange. 118 West Fourth st., Los Angeles.]

Arizona Commercial will receive $200,000 cash through sale of one-half interest in its smelter to the Superior and Boston. This will increase the cash resources of Arizona Commercial to over $300,000 and permit of placing the Superior and Boston in the ranks of producers within comparatively short time.

We have repeatedly given the facts of the great improvement in underground workings of the North Butte, and it has been this improvement that is responsible for the large buying of the stock from 27 up.

It is worthy of note that some of the largest stockholders in Granby have been quietly picking up the stock. We hear of one large holder who bought a block and was compelled to take most of it in odd lots, taking several weeks to acquire.

The cost of production at the Ohio has risen somewhat within the last few months, owing to the increase in tonnage and grade of ore treated, the figure being close to 10 cents per pound. About 200 men are at work at Ohio mine and concentrator outside of construction crew at mill.

Except for the continued large refinery output the Copper Producers' statement for May was quite favorable, the increase in surplus stocks amounting to only 440,000 pounds. Domestic deliveries at 64,500,000 pounds were larger than in any other month since March. The average for 1910 is 62,400,000 pounds, so that on a comparative basis May deliveries show up exceedingly well. Added to this is the continued large exports which are now holding well above the 60,000,000-pound mark, the average for 1910. With admittedly quiet business conditions in the United States thus far in 1911, the average domestic deliveries have been over 55,000,000 pounds per month, and this in face of a poor start in January and February, when combined deliveries were only 92,500,000 pounds, or a little over 46,000,000 pounds per month. Production unfortunately continues very heavy, the average for the first five months of 1911 being 120,000,000 pounds per month, against 121,000,000 pounds in 1910. This is in face of an alleged 15 per cent. curtailment by several large properties. Not much argument is needed to prove the fallacy of the curtailment agreement. The May increase in surplus stock in the United States is most insignificant. Monthly increases since January have grown steadily smaller, that for January being 20,400,000 pounds, with a perpendicular drop down to the May increase of 440,024 pounds. This year's production, domestic deliveries and export deliveries compare with the monthly average for 1910 as follows (in pounds:)

	Five months 1911.	Monthly avg. 1910.	Decrease	P.c. Dec.
Production	120,000,000	121,000,000	1,000,000	.8
Domestic del.	55,000,000	62,400,000	7,400,000	12.
Export del.	57,000,000	60,000,000	3,000,000	9.5

There is nothing particularly encouraging to be gathered by an inspection of the above table. It shows production well up to the average for 1911, and at the same time shows that shipments to home manufacturers are over 7,000,000 pounds less, while shipments to foreign shores are 3,000,000 pounds less. It is fortunate indeed for the copper situation as a whole that the foreign situation is showing extraordinary improvement under the stimulus of a very active manufacturing demand.

Looking to the world's surplus, the month of May showed a net decline of nearly 12,000,000 pounds which, coupled with the April decrease of 6,000,000 pounds, makes total decrease of 18,000,000 pounds in the two months. World's surplus on June 1 amounted to 328,649,052 pounds, as compared with 309,735,475 pounds on January 1, 1911. We show in the following table the American surplus, foreign visible supply and total of the two since January 1, 1910, at various periods (in pounds:)

Janss, in Dash Across Continent, Wires Garland, Drops Out of Sight. Friends Think He Plans Coup.

A telegram received yesterday morning from Dr. Herman Janss, who, with E. T. Stimson, is crossing the continent in the latter's Packard roadster, announced that the tourists were leaving Granger, Wyo., on their way to Denver. A request that mail be rushed to Omaha indicated that the two men will not delay in the Colorado capital, but continue on their remarkably fast run toward Chicago.

No message has been received within the last two days from William M. Garland and his party, who, in a Pierce-Arrow, hoped to outdistance the Janss-Stimson car. It is suspected that when Garland found himself so badly beaten into Salt Lake City he gave up the race and will have as an excuse that the fishing was good in the northern waters.

It was declared by some of his friends yesterday, on the other hand, that he may be driving night and day to overtake the Janss party and that he is withholding messages in fear that they will learn of the ruse. At the present rate, however, it would be possible for Garland to catch up only through an accident happening to the Packard.

The telegram from Dr. Janss at Granger is as follows:

"Arrived here this morning and are going right on to Denver, reaching there some time Sunday. Perfect score, including tires. The machine has stood the test of every sort of road and grade. From Denver we push on to Omaha, stopping there for mail. Will probably reach Chicago ahead of our schedule. Has Garland given up and gone back to Los Angeles? We don't hear a word about him any more. Weather excellent. Much interest along the way over our cruise."

STUDY PATTON PLANS.

County Officers and Physicians Visit Insane Asylum to Get Information Relative to New Ward.

The committee appointed by the Board of Supervisors last month to consider the plans for the new psycopathic ward, to be established in connection with the County Hospital, went to Patton yesterday and spent the day inspecting the asylum for the insane.

The committee is composed of Judge Hutton, Dr. C. H. Whitman, superintendent of the County Hospital; Dr. H. G. Brainerd, head of the department of mental and nervous diseases, University of California; Dr. James Fisher of the department of mental and nervous diseases, University of California, and Dr. George H. Kress, secretary of the Los Angeles Medical Society. They were accompanied by Supervisor Pridham.

According to members of the committee work on the building which will house the new department will begin in the near future. Just what sum will be placed at the disposal of the committee to carry on the work has not been made known. It was for the purpose of ascertaining the probable cost of installing the new department that Supervisor Pridham made the trip to Patton with the members of the committee.

The majority of the committeemen are connected with the Psycopathic Association. They have been studying the needs of the insane and the best manner of caring for them for some time. The plans of some of the most modern psycopathic wards in the United States have been secured. It is the intention to make the psycopathic ward at the County Hospital equal to the best in the country. With the addition of the ward, it will be possible to hold cases under observation and provide treatment that cannot now be secured.

VISITING DELEGATES' DAY.

Reception Tendered Sunday-school Folk at the Chamber of Commerce, and Shown City from Automobiles.

The W. C. Pearce party of Sunday-school delegates, coming from Chicago and points east of that city, arrived in this city yesterday morning, and, together with the Texas party, which arrived on Friday, took part in an informal reception at the Chamber of Commerce yesterday afternoon. They were accompanied by members of the Southern California Sunday-school Association. A mandolin club furnished music, and light refreshments were served. The visitors were conducted through the exhibit hall. The Reception Committee of the Chamber of Commerce comprised J. G. Warren, Fred F. Wheeler, R. W. Bailey, Melville Dozier, William Horace Day, A. C. Smither, E. A. Healy, Robert Hale, W. L. Cleveland, G. D. Cadwallader, E. C. Lyon, George Davis, Leonard Merrill and Ervin S. Chapman.

After viewing the display in the hall the visitors were taken in automobiles and given a comprehensive tour of the city, covering all the southwest residence section.

The New Orleans special arrived late last night. Delegates will address mass meetings this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the First Methodist Church, at 3:20 o'clock in the Auditorium, and will speak at a number of meetings this morning and tonight. A number will go north tonight, and others will remain until tomorrow morning, when they will be accompanied to San Francisco by the local delegation. The international convention will open there on Tuesday.

Los Angeles Hotel Man Returns From Eastern Gathering of Bonifaces; Tells About Entertainment.

John S. Mitchell, accompanied by his son, Standish, arrived at the Hollenbeck yesterday from the annual convention of the Hotel Men's Benevolent Association, held in Boston this year. Mitchell presided and was banqueted as the retiring head of the organiaztion at Hotel Touraine. Succeeding him is Linfield J. Damon, Jr., a Boston hotel man who was one of the eastern delegates at the convention held here last year.

"Los Angeles is already in the race for the convention of the bonifaces within the next five years and will probably get it," said Mitchell. "The memory of the entertainment offered here impressed itself so indelibly that a good part of the convention was converted into a reminiscence meeting over the episodes of the western visit. As for the entertainment afforded us, it was superb. We were taken to all of the historic places around Boston, to the beaches on boat excursions and were banqueted every day. The most unique of all the banquets was held in the cow barns of one of the Boston hotel men, who has one of the largest dairies in that part of the country, with which he supplies his tables.

"The cleanliness of the stable was such that we felt it a pleasure to eat there. The milk for the meal was drawn from the cows and a half a hundred of them were standing in the wing directly across from the banqueters. Many historical take-offs were arranged as entertainment, and the only beverage outside of milk was champagne, not a drop of water being obtainable."

LIFE WRITERS PICNIC.

Employees and Officials of Company Enjoy Outing at Long Beach—Come From Several States.

Three hundred employees of the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company, in addition to the officials of the company and fourteen agents, who, through their enterprise and industry, won long trips from various parts of the United States to the local office, picnicked at Long Beach yesterday. It was the third challenge cup convention of the company and the winner of the cup this year was M. J. Dillon, general manager for Minnesota, whose forces piled up the highest number of policies written. The cup thereby was transferred from the New Mexico agency, which won it from Alabama agents the year previous.

This afternoon, the delegates to the convention will leave over the Southern Pacific for San Francisco and then on to Lake Tahoe, where several days will be passed. The fourteen delegates visiting here are: M. J. Dillon of St. Paul, Herman Fellinger of Cleveland, F. C. Goodspeed of Chicago, H. H. Ward of Portland, J. C. Staples of Philadelphia, Samuel Polk of St. Louis, J. W. Jackson of Chicago, J. N. Russell of this State, J. S. Fabling of Denver, Joseph Dinkelspiel of New Orleans, W. D. Clizbe of Detroit, W. B. MARBLE HEART FOR GRAFTER.

MAXIMUM PENALTY FAVORED FOR EX-PATROLMAN.

Former Member of Purity Squad Seeks to Obtain Statements from Recent Associates on Police Force to Establish Previous Good Character.

For having cast a shadow over the entire police department it was recommended by the Acting Chief to the Mayor yesterday that Earl Busse, former member of the Purity Squad, who has confessed to having accepted a bribe for police protection receive the maximum penalty. The recommendation was made so that the attitude of the department may be known in case Busse applies for probation when he appears in the Superior Court.

The giving of probation is solely in the hands of the judge who tries him. Busse visited the Central Police Station yesterday afternoon to secure from friends on the department statements about his previous good character.

Capt. Bradish made it clear that in view of Busse's confession no sympathy could be expected.

"If you had received $100,000 or some big sum like that instead of a paltry $250 I could understand how you might be tempted and risk your reputation and position, but the fact that you sold out for $250 puts you in a small class. I have sympathy for any person in trouble but for a man in your position, who knows the law, knows the penalty for doing what you did, I have no sympathy whatever. To myself I call you 'petty larceny Busse.' I believe you ought to get the maximum penalty."

Busse has greatly changed in appearance since his arrest. His face, usually ruddy, is very pale. In going about the Central Police Station yesterday he met many with whom he had worked on the Metropolitan Squad and in other departments and he received from each a promise to make a statement in writing in reference to the length of time they had known him and that he had always upheld the law in every particular and that to the best of their knowledge and belief his recent trouble is his first misstep.

Mrs. Charles Jarvis, who testified against Patrolmen West and Cornwall Thursday night in the hearing before the acting Chief, states that she has had no connection with the rooming-house at Seventh street and Maple avenue for more than a month, and that police protection or graft had no part in her story. She was called to tell of the actions of West and Cornwall at her new place, No. 808 East Fifth street last Sunday night, when they ar alleged to have been drunk. She went to the Police Station on a car and gave strong, straighforward testimony.

NO SLUMP AT REDLANDS.

Good Demand for Orange Groves—Deciduous Ranches in Full Bearing Bought by Newcomers.

REDLANDS, June 17.—The realty market in both orange acreage and city property still holds up remarkably well, notwithstanding the fact that the first of June usually marks a slump in business of all kinds in the inland towns. The past winter a great deal of fine property has changed hands, including raw land, citrus and deciduous fruit acreage, residence and business property. Many eastern people have acquired fine homes here, varying from one to twenty acres, on which they propose to spend the remainder of their days.

Two big deals were consummated last Thursday when the big Farquhar-Boettger grove of seventeen acres was purchased by Mrs. Albert Ferguson and her son, Albert Ferguson, Jr., who have recently arrived from Reading, Pa., to make Redlands their home. The selling price was $2000 per acre, or $34,000. The grove is planted to full-bearing navels and has an ample water supply. A small house now occupying a sightly knoll on the property will be torn down and a fine, modern residence erected. The other big deal of Thursday was that of the ten-acre grove in Crafton owned by C. A. and C. D. Woods to Farquhar and Boettger. This is one of the finest groves of that section and this season produced 6000 boxes of fine oranges. The grove also has fine water rights. The price paid was $20,000, or $2000 per acre.

B. G. Holmes has sold his ten-acre grove on Reservoir street, adjoining "The Peppers" to K. C. Wells for about $23,000. The grove is set to Washington navels and Valencias about sixteen years old. The grove carried with it excellent water rights. A. J. Wilson has sold a nine-and one-half-acre orange grove known as the Cook grove on "The Heights" to W. H. Frink, the purchase price being about $18,000. Mr. Frink gives in exchange for the property a twenty-two-room house on East Olive avenue, between Eureka and Grant streets valued at $12,000. In another deal A. J. Wilson sold to W. H. Frink a lot on Orange street valued at $4500, taking in exchange a house and lot in Los Angeles.

A. C. Denman, Sr., has purchased from Henry Fisher the property located on San Mateo street and Highland avenue, paying therefor $10,000. The dwelling is a modern one of ten rooms and the tract comprises one acre. Mr. Denman will make some changes and improvements in the house and will occupy it as a home in the fall. Guerdon Williams has sold a thirteen-acre orange grove at the corner of Highland avenue and Dearborn street to R. H. Higginbotam of Bentone, the consideration being $25,000. The grove is planted to full-bearing trees, mostly navels with a few Valencias. The grove has good water rights. John F. Clark has sold two large lots totaling about five and one-half acres to Margaret McClellan, the price being $17,000. In exchange, Miss McClellan traded in the Henry B. Ely place for $14,000.

Many fine new buildings are now in course of construction throughout the residence and business section of the city. The Elks' clubhouse at the corner of State and Third streets is being erected at a cost of $25,000. H. A. Cherrier has let the contract for a $10,000 mansion to be erected on West Fern avenue and Center street; Dr. C. E. Ide is erecting a fine residence on Linda Vista street in the Terricina section; J. J. Suess is expending $2000 in remodeling and adding to his West Palm-avenue home; C. D. Myers is erecting a bungalow on Eureka street at a cost of $2500; George Huizing is erecting a $2000 bungalow on Eureka street.

MONROVIA REALTY NOTES.

MONROVIA, June 17.—After a brief period of comparative dullness, realty business became normally active this week with sales aggregating nearly $50,000. Citrus orchards of the district are practically all in full bearing. The inquiry for groves is constant, but only a few are on the market. With the rapid extension of the business section the quest of building sites is keen and there is a lively demand for residence property. Sales indicate that the alfalfa and general farming lands just south of city limits are held at about $100 more per acre than a year ago.

Sales reported are as follows: James McLachlan to C. T. Renaker, business site, fifty-three feet on Myrtle avenue by 165 feet on East Lime; consideration stated, $9275. Purchaser will erect a building for own occupancy. Plans are not perfected, but it is stated that the new block will be commenced late this year.

Monroe and Evans, acting for the Bradbury Estate Company, to Fred Lindo, ten acres of unimproved land on California and Santa Fe avenues, consideration, $6000. Property is on city water system. The same firm acting for the Monrovia Building and Investment Company, to William B. Brothers, lot 43, Highland place, $1000. Purchaser has let the contract for a $4000 home. A. B. Clapp to C. Verry, six-room bungalow on South California avenue, $2500.

Bunker and Wade, acting for Joseph Huverstuhl, to W. A. Woodson, seventy-five feet on West Lime avenue, by 150 feet, $1500. Purchaser will build. J. C. McClintock, to E. C. Bunker, cottage on East White Oak, $3200. Tifal Bros. to R. Ainley, new bungalow on East White Oak, $3500. A. W. Barka to A. Marquis, cottage on East Lime avenue, $1650. D. W. Morrison to Mrs. Lucy Duncan, thirty-acre alfalfa ranch, one mile south of city limits, $20,000. Property carries water right of one share per acre in pumping plant for Sierra Pacific tract. Building improvements consist of a new house and ranch barns.

Business blocks, for which plans are being prepared, will be erected by F. J. Cornes and John Reagan on Myrtle, between Lemon and Lime avenues. The Cornes block will be 50x80 feet, two stories and basement and constructed of reinforced concrete. The Reagan site is 100x100 feet, but the owner has not announced his plans. Both buildings will be commenced at once.

APARTMENTS LEASED.

Creighton Smith reports the following leases for new apartment buildings: To Mrs. Cora Weston, six-story and basement reinforced concrete building, 200 rooms, now in course of construction on West Fifth street, between Grand avenue and Hope street, from Fred E. Engstrum, ten years, at a yearly rental of $24,000. The lessee has contracted with the Niles Pease Furniture Company to expend $25,000 in furnishing the building. The Bennett apartments, Nos. 668-670 South Alvarado street, to Dr. G. Bowlby and wife, ten years, total rental $30,000.

APARTMENTS IN DEMAND.

Local Architects Plan Tenement-houses of Good Design—Call for Small Apartments Continues Brisk.

Among the better class of apartment-houses that are scheduled for immediate erection are the two illustrated on this page, one for Morris Spier, to be erected on Georgia street, between Ninth and Tenth streets, and the other for Mrs. G. Pellissier, to go up at No. 520 South Flower street.

The building for Morris Spier, which was designed by Architect S. Tilden Norton, will contain seventy-two rooms and will be modern in every respect. It will have front of cream-colored pressed brick, with ornamental cornice of galvanized iron. A sun parlor will be arranged on the roof. The interior will be finished in stained Oregon pine, the kitchen and bathrooms being white enameled. Telephone service, steam heat, vacuum cleaning apparatus and running hot and cold water will be supplied each apartment.

The house to be built for Mrs. G. Pellissier will be of brick construction, 41x155 feet in dimensions, and will be divided into suites of two and three rooms each. There will also be a large front porch, spacious entrance lobby and parlor, assembly and ballroom, billiard-room and private storerooms for tenants. The building will have a front of enameled pressed brick, with ornamentation of colored brick, which will make a very pleasing effect. There will be no terra cotta or molded brick employed on the building. Up-to-date conveniences will be embodied in the construction of this structure, the plans for which were prepared by Architect Fernand Parmentier.

Portland, 11; Vernon, 3.

About the only pitcher that Hap Hogan of the Vernon team has is Stewart, and he is supposed to be sick in bed. He is not, but he probably wishes he was, or is glad they consider him that way, when he looks in the papers the next day and sees what the Champions are doing to his fellow-sufferers who were signed as pitchers.

There were fourteen swats again yesterday. Twenty on Wednesday, thirteen on Thursday, sixteen on Friday and fourteen on Saturday. Sixty-three hits in four games, or almost sixteen to the game. Can you beat that? Is there any use in learning how to ptich if an aggregation of boneheads gets in every day and tries to knock the fence down with everything you thought you knew about?

Castleton thought early yesterday morning that he understands something about heaving, but early yesterday afternoon he didn't think so. In fact, he did not think much of himself. If he did think of himself it couldn't have been much, for the champions slammed him for eight runs and six hits in the first two innings. This was naturally all he wanted, and was glad to get under the bench where they could not even see him.

Young Bush Gipe was hauled out in the third inning, and given an opportuntiy to show 'em up, but they cut him right off at the pockets as soon as they got a good look at him. After that he commenced to look at them, and then they ascertained that there was nothing more stirring. In the final six innings of the game he allowed but four scattered hits, and but one man got to second base.

Big Six Steen seemed always sure of himself and with the terrific lead the Champs got in the first three innings, was never in danger. Doubles by Burrell and Sheehan in the third made an easy Vernon run, and the other two in the fifth resulted from singles by Gipe and Carlisle. Chadbourne's pass of Carlisle's swat and a two-bagger by Kane to right field. In five innings not one of the figers got to first base; in two others but two reached there on singles, and in these seven no one reached second. You cannot grab off many ball games under such painful conditions as these.

There was a lot of pretty fielding, but the fans were so dopey from the effect of these eleven quick runs in the first three innings that they could not appreciate half what they did see.

VERNON MISERY BEGINS.

That first inning for the Champs was a corker. Chadbourne smacked a grounder to Brashear, who threw to Patterson, but Pat muffed the ball. Barry and Ryan were passed, filling the bases, with none out. Krueger singled to right, scoring Chadbourne and Barry and putting Ryan on third. Rapps forced Krueger at second, and Castleton filled the bases again with a pass to Tommy Sheehan. Then he forced in Ryan with a pass to Peckinpaugh and came right back with a pass to Murray that forced in Rapps with the fourth run. Steen fanned and Castleton finally ended the inning by making Chadbourne pop to Brashear.

Barry started the second inning with a hit to center and after Ryan had flied to Kane, Krueger and Rapps singled, Tom Sheehan tripled to right and Murray came along a moment later with a swat to left, making four more runs.

The third opened with Chadbourne's infield single and Barry's sacrifice. Then followed a pass to Ryan, Krueger's hard double high on the left fence; Rapp's hit to right, Tom Sheehan's sacrifice fly to Kane, and Peckinpaugh's infield hit. Three more runs. These were all, for by this time the Champs were all in from chasing each other around the bases.

Patterson's left-handed stop of a high bouncer to first; Burrell's left-handed scoop of abou ncer by Barry in the ninth, and the fast fielding of Peckinpaugh were the fielding features.

The score:

PRETTY GIRLS STEALING BASES AT POLYTECHNIC HIGH SCHOOL.

BY ALICE GROFF.

"Over the fence, Slim! Show 'em where you live!"

No, it wasn't at the Chutes ball grounds. A block from there a young lady just released from a Latin recitation was "fanning" at the Polytechnic High School girls' baseball game Thursday afternoon.

There are two girls' nines at "Poly," and they play with each other exclusively, according to the new rules of the school. The teams are about equal in strength, and are captained by Georgia English and Fannie Swem.

These girls can play ball. Anyone who has seen Fannie Swem "slide to first" in a cloud of dust after a vicious swat to left field, or Meta Teichrib "fix a good one" pitched by Grace Hardin or Georgia English catch anything that comes her way, won't MONSTER MOTORS TUNED FOR RACE.

Bakersfield Road Battle Call Strong for Dealers.

Tour to Start Over Valley Route for Race Course.

Fifty Automobiles Promised for Big Contest.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

Fifty motor cars on a tour to Bakersfield is the plan of the automobile dealers and owners of motor cars who expect to attend the Bakersfield Road Race July 4. W. E. Bush, the Pierce-Arrow agent, who will return from the East this week is to be asked to lead the procession of motor cars through the valley to the big road race course. The cars are to leave this city July 2 for the run of 151 miles to Bakersfield.

More than 20,000 spectaters are expected and the big event promises to be one of the best automobile road contests ever pulled off. Motorists from all over Southern California and thousands from the Kern River Valley are planning to attend the race. The cohorts of rooters from this city will drive their cars up the San Francisquito Canyon and should reach Bakersfield in plenty of time to enjoy the fair and the race.

With the assurance of at least twenty fast racing cars in a battle royal on the ten mile course chosen by the Kern County Merchants' Association for the motor contest, the interest in the big road race is keen. From this city alone thousands of persons are expected to view the race and from all corners of Southern California autoists will flock to Bakersfield.

RACE TIMER.

W. H. Halliwell, the Warner speedometer man, has been chosen to time the big road race and the cars will be clocked as they speed over the course on the 150 mile spin and Halliwell promises that no such break as was made in the 500 mile race on the Indianapolis Speedway shall mar the finish. He has made all his plans and the time of each lap, the time of each car, and the complete time of the race will be announced immediately after the last car crosses the tape.

With the rest of the autoists from this city Charles Halliwell will drive his Cadillac to Bakerfield and he will be joined by scores of others who intend to make Bakersfield their mecca on the day of the big contest. This is to be made the affair of the mid-season and the cars are to join the tour and compete for a series of prizes which will be worth having. From almost every agency on automobile row cars will be sent on the run to Bakersfield.

Bill Ruess may drive the Pope-Hartford in the big road race. Though this is news even to Bill himself he is the kind of driver who enjoys a novelty. Bert Dingley is here and of course will be the big attraction on a

MISS HOTCHKISS RETAINS TITLE.

[Associated Press Night Report.]

PHILADELPHIA, June 17.—Miss Hazel Hotchkiss of Berkeley, Cal., defeated Miss Florence Sutton of Pasadena, Cal., in the challenge round for the women's national tennis championship today, 8-10, 6-1, 9-7, and thereby retained the title.

Remarkable tennis was played by both champion and challenger. The two games that Miss Sutton lost were bitterly contested. Miss Hotchkiss had an easy time in the second game but the first and third belonged to anybody until the last stroke was made.

A large gallery surrounded the court and the spectators were furnished with many thrills. The first game was the most exciting.

WOLGAST INSISTS ON TRAINING IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

Rain and Fog Near the Bay not Pleasing to the Champion—Guarantee Makes Ad Independent of San Francisco Sports—Loud Wails from Sporting Writers.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Tom Jones and Ad Wolgast always insist upon doing something else than the right thing.

Take the present state of affairs. The championship bout scheduled for July 4 between Wolgast and Owen Moran is little more than two weeks distant. It is by far the most important bout in that division since the Richmond struggle between Wolgast and Nelson and is apparently more even.

For all that, Wolgast insists upon doing his training in Southern Califronia where he is not available for newspaper copy—one of the potent factors in making any boxing contest a big proposition.

Naturally with a guarantee of $12,500, Wolgast and Jones are not particularly concerned as to the receipts of the house, but they ought to be more careful of the interests of the promoter who helps them to their money.

Wolgast can probably condition himself in the South as well as in San Francisco, but the public that goes to the bouts has a right to be considered and the right to know just what Ad is doing and how he is coming along. This information can't be secured under present conditions and the sooner Jones brings his boxer to San Francisco the better for all concerned.

WEST VIRGINIA SEAMEN CAPTURE FIRST IN FLEET TRACK EVENTS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Leading by a wide margin, athletes of the West Virginia today won first place in the events of the annual field and track meet of the Pacific fleet.

Every division of the fleet had entries. They finished in the following order: West Virginia, 47; South Dakota, 35; Marine Corps, 16; Torpedo Division, 13; Maryland, 12; Colorado, 4; California, 3.

The field exercises were held in Balboa Park under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce. The large grand stand was filled by 3000 sailors and officers and many civilian spectators. The West Virginia sailors not only won a majority of first places, but seconds as well. This crew also rejoices over the capture of the baseball pennant for the season. About the only event not taken by the West Virginians was the cutter championship.

A notable feature of the day's sports was the showing of the tug of war team from the camp of the marines. Each man was over six feet in height and averaged 200 pounds in weight. They had no difficulty in winning this event. A special cup was awarded the marines because of their appearance, besides the fleet trophies.

The West Virginians were awarded numerous individual prizes. Each participating team was awarded a cash prize donated by the Chamber of Commerce. A feature of the day was a dinner served in the open to the 3000 sailors. More than 600 women, members of church societies, waited on the tables. Following is a summary of the events:

RACING EVENTS ON MANY DATES

Motor Carnival From Atlantic to the Pacific.

Bakersfield Road Race Has A.A.A. Sanction.

Other Events Captured for the Western States.

The following facts in reference to the proposed National Circuit are published for the information of all concerned. The original intention of the proposed National Circuit was to provide a series of automobile contests following each other in logical sequence, both as to date and geographical location, to enable a maximum number of participants in each contest at a minimum cost for transportation.

Discussion with the racing team managers at Indianapolis on May 30 of the tentative list of contest dates, heretofore published by the Contest Board as proposed National Circuit dates, has served to demonstrate that such dates are too many in number and beginning on May 30 and extending to November 1 cover too long a period to secure consecutive and continued support of sufficient contestants to justify their designation as "national" events.

No further attempt, therefore, will be made to carry out the National Circuit proposition during the 1911 season. It should be clearly understood that clubs, associations and individual promoters will therefore make their applications for sanctions for contests in the usual manner, secure their entries and make their own arrangements for such officials as are required under the rules.

Revised list of proposed contests for 1911:

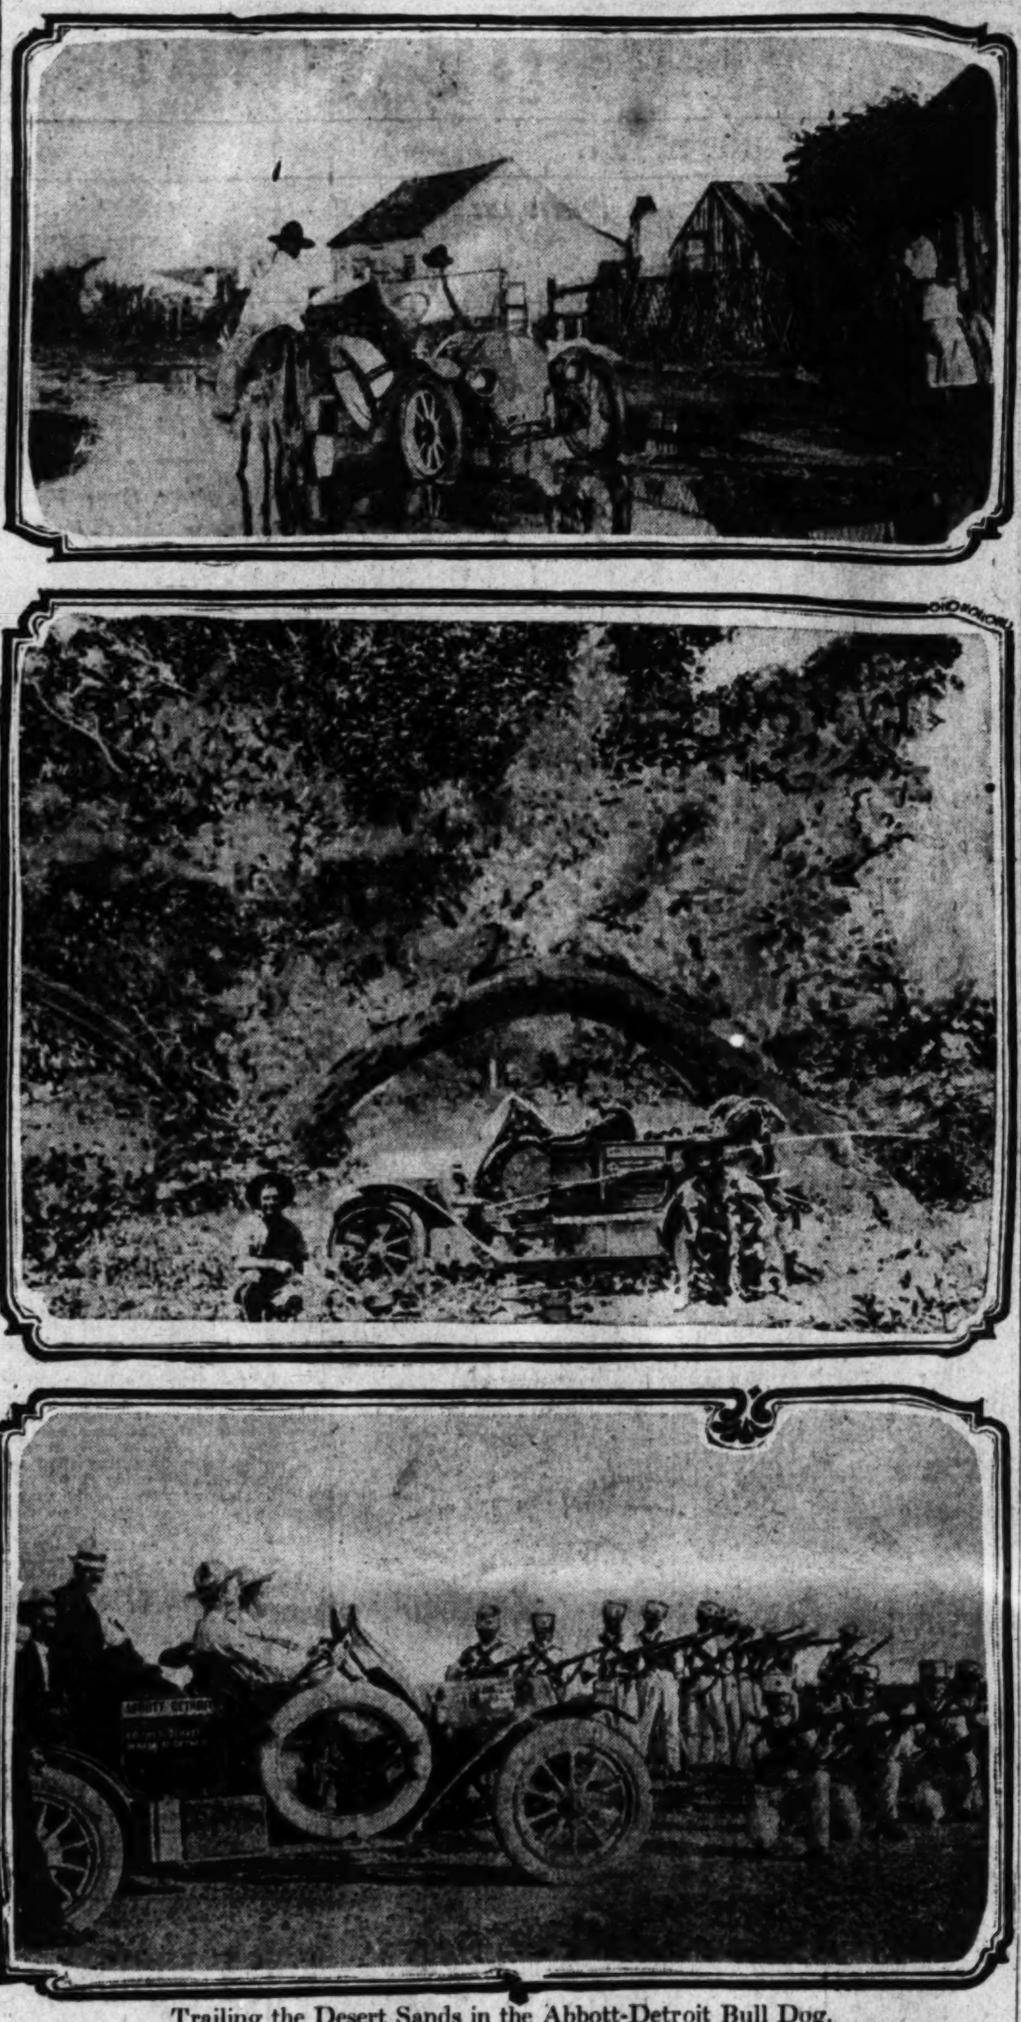
MANY MOTORISTS IN SEATTLE.

Automobile Run Calls Many Who Plan to Make Tour Over Roads of Northwest in Their Automobiles.

Automobilists from all over Oregon, Washington and British Columbia will attend the great automobile carnival to be held in Seattle July 16 to 22nd. Plans for the great run to this city are being worked out by prominent Seattle citizens with the prospect of having a gathering of machines such as has never before been held on the Coast.

The Seattle Automobile Club has sent out invitations to all clubs and individual owners in Washington and Oregon and the territory to the north, urging them to make a run to Seattle on the Sunday preceding the opening of the Potlatch, and the outlook so far indicates that every road leading into the Oregonian city will be thronged with machines. Following the arrival of these machines, the visitors will be hospitably entertained by Seattle automobile owners, and will be provided with novel entertainment by the automobile trade association of the city.

The dealers in automobiles and supplies in Seattle plan to hold hill climbing and other exciting contests, and one of the big features of the contest promises to be a road race that will not only test the skill of the driver, but the durability and reliability of the car entered. As many machines are sold and owned in Seattle as in any other city of the Northwest, and they are prepared to give an automobile carnival such as no other city on the Coast could give.



Trailing the Desert Sands in the Abbott-Detroit Bull Dog.

This is the car that is nearing Phoenix on the transcontinental trip from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Above is a street scene in Salinas, Mex., in the center the Abbott-Detroit crew is camped on the Rio Grande near Laredo and below the car is stopped by the Mexican Federal troops.

Coming Our Way.

ABBOTT-DETROIT BULL DOG HITTING THE SANDY ROADS OF THE DESERT MESA.

DR. CHAS. P. PERCIVAL, editor of the Health Magazine, who is making a 100,000-mile tour in an Abbott Detroit "Bulldog," declares that international highways are the need of both the United States and Canada. Dr. Percival has already traversed the United States from Denver to Portland, Me., Boston to Nashville and Cincinnati to Savannah, Ga., and perhaps knows the main traveled thoroughfare as no other man.

"Much progress has been made by both the United States and Canada," said Dr. Percival, "towards the consummation of two great international highways, but this great work has all been done on the Pacific Coast, and within four years the "Pacific Highway" will stretch in absolutely first-class condition from Tia Juana, Mex., northwards through the Pacific Coast States and British Columbia; and within the same period an equally as good "Canadian Highway" will stretch from its intersection with the "Pacific Highway" at British Columbia, through the provinces of British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, to the city of Winnipeg."

The Abbott Detroit "Bulldog" with its crew, in which Dr. Percival is making his tour, have reached Tucson, Ariz., and will spend Sunday there glad of a rest after their trying experiences of the past week. Traveling day after day in from ten to fourteen inches of sand and finally being lost in the desert without drinking water, the party was rescued by Troop K of the United States Fourth Cavalry and were guided into this historic mining town with a total mileage of 28,517 miles. The past week's trip covered three States, Texas, New Mexico and Arizona, and the country traversed has had little or no evidence of civilization. The route was through Deming, N. M., through Bowie, Ariz., and thence to Tucson.

The route next week lies across 485 miles of the great American alkali desert from Phoenix to Blythe, Cal. There is a possibility that the Abbott Detroit will cover the new route of the Los Angeles-Phoenix race through Yuma and San Diego.

Teaching Pigeons to Fly.

There is a man in a high tenement building on East Thirty-first street, who spends all of every Sunday morning teaching pigeons to fly gracefully, says the New York Sun. Perhaps sixty or seventy birds are kept in coops on the roof. Just after the sun rises on Sunday the man makes all the pigeons line up in a straight row on the edge of the roof which overhangs the street. Then he takes a long pole with a cone-shaped rag on the end of it and starts waving it in front of pigeon number one.

The bird rises, circles, turns somersaults, swoops, sinks, flutters, falls and alights according to the movements of the rag at the end of the pole. The man thus performs with each pigeon and then leads twos, threes, quartets and finally whole flocks. All the neighbors who get up early enough watch him. They call his pole a baton. He does lead his band of birds with it. In the afternoon he rests in a steamer chair in the shade of one of the building's ventilators.

Goodyear No-Rim-Cut Tires Savi

These patented tires the greater part of last year cost 20 per cent. more than period Goodyear Tire Sales just trebled. They jumped to $8,500,000.
And all because Goodyear No-Rim-Cut Tires get rid of rim-cutting. And size. These two features alone just double the worth of a tire, and are saving dollars. Now these premier tires—because of enormous production—cost the 64 leading motor car makers contracted for Goodyears for 1911.

No Rim Cutting

The No-Rim-Cut Tire

The cuts show at a glance why Goodyear No-Rim-Cut Tires get rid of Rim Cutting. Rim-cutting ruins more automobile tires than any other one cause. Instead of the flanges being slipped on the rim with the hook turned in and against the side of the tire, the flange is reversed—the Hook turns out. So in case of puncture or under-inflation the tire, instead of being gouged by this hook, presses against a smooth curved surface and will run for miles without a suggestion of rim-cutting.

In No-Rim-Cut Tires the use of flat tapes of 126 braided piano wires do away with hooks. These 126 braided wires are imbedded in the tire base. When the tire is inflated, it contracts on the rim with a pressure of 134 pounds to the square inch.

No tire bolts are needed on No-Rim-Cut Tires. These braided piano wires take their place, hold the tire on so it can neither slip, creep nor give in the slightest. We positively guarantee it.

In an effort to secure a non-stretchable base, some tire makers have used a single wire, others a

wire method has

The New York Department of Health officials threaten to become very active this season in the enforcement of the ordinance requiring motor boats plying the waters adjacent to New York City to be equipped with mufflers. A similar movement is under way at Newport, R. I.

As one result of the action of the New Jersey motor authorities in withdrawing the eight-day touring privilege, costing $1, from Pennsylvania and Delaware motorists, the movement for a Federal motor license law has received a decided impetus in the two latter commonwealths.

An appeal has been made to the president of the Automobile Club of France in a letter from a Norman farmer in behalf of the lives of sheep-dogs, which, it seems, are constantly sacrificed by reckless chauffeurs. The writer says that his own shepherd has within a short space had three faithful sheep-dogs killed before his eyes by motor cars, which flew by so fast that it was impossible to see the number.

All told, more than $7,000,000 has been appropriated for good roads by Legislatures in the two States of New York and Pennsylvania this year. New York's funds amount to more than $4,000,000, while Pennsylvania will spend $3,000,000. The entire road-making system has also been reorganized in Pennsylvania, the State hereafter to exercise greater supervision over the work of counties.

JACKSON WINNER OF WHITTIER CLIMB.

Fast Time Made by Local Cars Up Hog's Back.

Event to Be Sanctioned by the Contest Board.

Autoists Enthusiastic Over Results of Motor Races.

When the Jackson won its event in the Redlands hill climb, Charles H. Thompson, the local Jackson agent, came into his own in proper style. Bucking opposition that appeared to be hard to overcome and with the rivalry of the keenest Thompson sent his Jackson car to Whittier and captured his event.

The time of the Jackson was particularly fast. The car showed its class from the moment of the getaway until the finish, when it raced over the line with a margin to spare. The Jackson proved to be a hill climber of ability and the car made a hit even with those who were anxious for another machine to win the event.

Ever since the hill climb Thompson has driven the winning car and is proud of the machine which is in tune for other hill climbs. There is a possibility that this machine may be started in the Bakersfield road race. It has shown speed, enough to win against high-priced cars.

Prominent automobile men of Los Angeles and Whittier are enthusiastic over the road races and hill climb held in the Quaker city, Saturday, and the affair may result in a permanent local organization for the automobile owners of Whittier who will spend considerable money improving the course up the "hog's back." The fast time made by some of the local cars as well as those from the Angel City has spurred the owners at Whittier into action and the races will be made annual if not semi-annual events.

Steps have already been taken toward effecting a permanent organization and the races next year will probably be sanctioned by the A.A.A., and there will be at least three events for professional drivers.

Only five outside cars were entered in Saturday's races, three of which were prize winners. The fast American roadster entered and driven by W. Frank Pipher of Los Angeles made the fastest time on the course, covering the two and one-half miles in two minutes and twenty-five seconds. The fastest time made by any local car was made by Dunlap's seven-passenger Chalmers, which made it in three minutes and seventeen seconds.

Another Good One.

TOPANGA DRIVE HAS ATTRACTIONS.

THIS IS THE SEASON TO ENJOY THE RUN INTO THE HILLS.

Mountains Are Brown and Roads Are Good and This Tour Lures Many Who Like the Calabasas Country Where Game Abounds and Where Trout Is Plentiful.

The beautiful and rustic Topanga Tavern opened Saturday evening, with a dinner and dance. There were over 400 guests, who went up to the beautiful new resort in automobiles, carriages and some on foot. W. H. Lynch, who is runing the new hotel, was there to welcome the tired and dusty city folk. He entertained them royally. When they came upon the little tavern, nestling among the hills of the lower Calabasas country, they were welcomed by the genial host.

It is hardly necessary to describe the canyon, for many people have already been to this retreat. The roads are in the best condition at this time of the year. The way leads up the coast from Santa Monica and is easy to follow. There are signs to lead the tourer, and at the mouth of Topanga Cayon htere is a large sign telling the motorist to turn into the mountains to the left. After many crossings of the small creek the two-mile grade is started.

There is no hill so steep that it cannot be easily negotiated on the low gear and many cars make it on the intermediate. After reaching the summit there is a grand view presented, the many hills and canyons making one of the most beautiful sights imaginable. The winding road leads down an easy grade to the forks of the Topanga Creek, where the road must be followed straight ahead to get to the tavern.

The roads are so good that an average of twenty-five miles an hour can be easily maintained. About the best way to make the trip from the city is to go out Sunset boulevard to Hollywood, turn to the left where the auto club signs are placed, going over the Cahuenga Pass, which is not a bad climb, as the work on the road is nearly completed. Keep to the left where the road branches to San Fernando, and straight over the Ventura road to Calabasas, where an auto club sign says to turn to the left to Topanga and Santa Monica. By going this way one gets to see the beautiful valley in the morning.

There are many pleasures for the tourist who may wish to remain for a few days, as the time passes only too quickly in roaming over the hills, which are in their splendor at this time of the year.

A motor enthusiast was on a short trip to this canyon some time ago and the description he gives of the scenery is almost beyond words: "I climbed one day to the highest hill and from the summit watched the gorgeous sunset. I could see across the main canyon and the hills on the opposite side were bathed in the direct sunlight. They showed all the beauties of the California mountains, the most solid color being a dark green made by the combination of oak, redwood, chamise and buckthorn. Tall sycamores line the small creeks in the tiny valleys on the sides of the mountains.

Frank Camp, who is now bowling with the Benges, collected enough of the syrup sticks in his three games against the Venice Cubs Friday night on the Grand Alleys to average over 194. Every time Frank came to the line the pin boy got ready to pick up the ten.

FOR SPECIAL BUSINESS.

Specialists and specializing seem to be the keynote of modern business methods. Why not apply this to the building of motor trucks, the same as to any other business?" said A. E. Barker, vice-president and general manager of the Universal Motor Truck Company of Detroit, recently in discussing this subject.

"This type of vehicle is going to play a most important part in solving the transportation problem in large centers. The service required of motor truck is particularly severe. To meet the requirements successfully trucks must be particularly well designed and well made. The Universal company believe that this can best be accomplished by specializing intensely, not only in men but in factory, machinery equipment and design."

HIGHWAY PROJECT GETS BIG BOOST.

Sea Level Route to Channel City a Possibility.

Highway Scheme Indorsed by Santa Barbara Men.

Everitt Thirty Covers Route in Splendid Shape.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA BARBARA, June 15.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] With $100,000 pledged for the building of a sea-level road from Ventura to Santa Barbara, citizens of both counties and automobile devotees throughout Southern California are showing more than ordinary interest in the great highway project. They are interested for its commercial benefits as well as from the viewpoint of pleasure, and will eagerly await the consummation of the plans.

The construction of the road will result in the elimination of the treacherous, though scenic Casitas Pass, which strikes terror in the hearts of the unseasoned motor drivers before they start to negotiate it and throughout the trip. Some automobile owners, it is true, enjoy a journey over the precipitous grades, but it is a known fact that the great majority view it with a shudder and both counties fully realize that by providing another route auto travel between this city and Los Angeles will be given an impetus that will work to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Milo M. Potter, manager of the Potter Hotel, H. J. Doulton, County Supervisor, and owner of Miramar, and Samuel P. Calef, a millionaire resident of Montecito, conceived the plan for solving the road problem. They knew that both counties were deeply interested in the subject of drawing more people from Los Angeles and environs, and decided that such a result was only possible through the construction of a highway that would permit of safe traffic en route.

After carefully sizing up the situation, they determined to make Ventura county the proposition that they would agree to raise $50,000 to be given to the Supervisors of the neighboring county for the building of the road providing the Ventura Supervisors would pledge $50,000 for the construction of a bridge across the Ventura River.

FAVORABLE RESPONSE.

Announcement of the proposal brought forth only favorable response from the citizens of both counties, and at an enthusiastic meeting in Ventura last Thursday, called by the Supervisors, the proposition was accepted. To build the bridge both the city and county of Ventura must unite, the span encroaching on the territory of each, and representatives of both were unanimous in their decision to raise the necessary money.

With Ventura county meeting Santa Barbara half way, it is now up to the trio of public-spirited citizens to make good their promise to raise the $50,000. The big purse has been given a most encouraging start by a donation of $5000 by the Potter Hotel Company, and it is believed that little trouble will be met in raising the entire amount. Supervisor H. J. Doulton said yesterday that since the announcement of the plan a large number of people have notified him of their willingness to contribute to the fund.

Aside from the money subscribed by Potter, the Santa Barbara Automobile Club at a meeting Thursday night pledged $100 and promised its moral support to the proposition. Doulton, who has taken charge of the collection, has announced that he will not be ready to receive subscriptions until a uniform plan for so doing is agreed upon at the joint meeting to be held in Ventura on June 23.

While Los Angeles county as a whole is not to be requested to assist in the raising of the money, a cordial invitation will be extended to motor enthusiasts to contribute. The matter will be laid before the Los Angeles automobile organizations and the local committee believes they will not turn a deaf ear to the entreaty.

A sea-level route between Ventura and Santa Barbara will allow an automobile run of four hours or less from Santa Barbara to Los Angeles. Following the Casitas route it is fully thirty-five miles to Ventura and over the proposed Rincon route it is lessened to about thirty miles, the road being practically level, and there would be no dangers to encounter.

Another reason for immediate action on the proposition is that the improvement of the highway undoubtedly will have a deep impression on the State Highway Commission and will likely result in the decision of that body to adopt the Rincon sea-level route as a part of the coast highway connecting Los Angeles and San Francisco.

HUPP-YEATS RECORD RUN.

Remarkable Trip Is Made by Classy Car Which Covers Many Miles of Country Highways.

A Hupp-Yeats Electric Coupe driven by James O. Harris, manager of the Los Angeles branch, recently made one of the most remarkable trips ever accomplished by an electric in this part of the country.

Mrs. C. S. Harwood of Uplands, Cal., after looking at the different makes of electrics for sale in Los Angeles, decided to purchase a Hupp-Yeats. Harris, with Mrs. Harwood and her daughter as passengers, left Los Angeles at 8:30 in the morning, drove to Pasadena, arriving there a few minutes after 9 o'clock. After leaving Pasadena, they drove through Alhambra, to San Gabriel, over the El Monte road to Pomona and then two miles north to Uplands, reaching Mrs. Harwood's home at 12:30 p.m.

The speedometer showed they had covered fifty-eight miles over rough roads, at the rate of fourteen miles an hour, and at the same time making a climb of over 2000 feet.

A trip like this is conclusive evidence that the Hupp-Yeats Electric Coach is not only a car for city use but that it will do about as much rough country work as the average man wants in a day.

OAKLAND CARS EARN LAURELS.

SECOND PLACE IN LONG EVENT CAPTURED BY THIRTY.

Prominent Angelenos Purchase Classy Cars and Are Pleased With the Machines Which Are Making Such Good Records on Hill and Road in All Corners of Country.

The Oakland cars continue to win laurels both on hill and on the flat. The Birmingham climb went to this car recently and now comes word that an Oakland "30" won second place in the 200-mile race at Denver Memorial Day, at the motor speedway. In this race was entered some of the speediest cars in the West, most of them being high-priced ones, and the showing of the Oakland therefore is more gratifying to the agents here.

Dr. LeMoyne Wills, L. C. Brand, president of the All Night and Day Bank; Mr. Fredendall of Pomona, C. C. Funnell & Co. of San Diego and Eddie Lingenfelder, the new manager of the Goodyear Rubber Company, are some of the recent purchasers of Oaklands. Dr. Wills accompanied Mr. King of Hawley, King & Co. on a trip to Squirrel Inn, and although the doctor had some misgiving as to reaching their destination, far up beyond Arrowhead Springs, nevertheless the climb was accomplished and he joined the army of Oakland boosters and bought a model "33" five-pasenger car on returning to the city. Mr. Fredendall purchased a "40" touring car, finished in battleship gray.

Eddie Lingenfelder toow a "30" roadster, which was delivered to him Saturday. Just to try the car out he made a trip up the Topango Canyon Sunday and returned thoroughly satisfied with his car, as well he might, for this is one of the steepest grades hereabouts and sufficient to test the merits of any man's car. A carload of machines which arrived June 8 has been almost entirely sold out. Another will arrive in a day or two and frequent shipments will be made throughout the summer.

rough roads and by taking his turn in the sands when it was necessary to fight the deep drifts.

For about a month Dr. Stone will be in this city and he has planned several enjoyable outings, one of which is the trip to Bakersfield to watch the racing cars in the big road event on July 4. He is one of the well-known men of Phoenix and he made a host of friends all along the way by his genial spirits and his desire to make everybody in the two E.M.F. cars have a jolly good time.

But is is impossible to mention the crew of the E.M.F. pathfinders without thinking of Shirley Christy, secretary of the Arizona Territorial Fair Commission, who made the entire trip. He underwent the hardships of the journey, he asked no favors of anybody and when the boys were lost on the desert he stayed with them, of couse, because he was obliged to, but he would have stayed, anyway, because that's his nature.

He is the double of Teddy Roosevelt. In fact, he has been nicknamed "T. R." He has the smile and all of the grit, and he is the man who is helping to make the Arizona fair such an immense success. He is here to stay for awhile and will remain long enough to get well acquainted with the automobile men. If you want a pass to the fair, ask Shirley. You may get it and then, again, perhaps you won't.

Vernon Sweeney is the boy who drove the other E.M.F. car after Harvey Herrick was forced to take a back seat because of his eyes. He is a great lad and he made the trip in his E.M.F. just to see how the car would stand the journey. He knows now, and is happy. The other lad, Johnny Sabra, is also a hero in his way. When Vernon struck a stone he was forced to take a tonneau seat and Johnny drove. He handled the car like a veteran and brought it into this city safely, after a wait at Whittier, in which Christy took an active part.

That Whittier wait will long be remembered. At the banquet given by Bullard and Christy, the other evening, every phase of the Whittier incident was recited by Christy and the joke is on him. He says the newspaper men threw him down because they wanted a picture taken. Well, to tell you the truth, that was a fact.

TOURING CLUB CHOOSES ROUTES FOR MOTORING THROUGH NEW ENGLAND.

MOTORISTS touring through New England are to be benefited this coming season by the four branches just established in the leading cities of this country by the Touring Club of America. These branches will be the headquarters in their respective locality for the latest and most reliable road information. Realizing that the majority of tourists make the leading hotels their headquarters, the officials have chosen four of the prominent hotels, in which ample space has been leased for these offices. Managers have been installed and the branches were opened June 15. This action was taken after considering various locations as best suited for the interests of motor tourists.

The new branches with their locations are: The Naugatuck Valley branch in the Hotel Elton, at Waterbury; Connecticut Valley branch, at the Hotel Kimball, at Springfield; the White Mountains branch, in the Mount Washington House, Bretton Woods, N. H., and the Berkshire Hills branch, at the Hotel Wendell, Pittsfield, Mass. Official cars will be connected with each of these, and the latest information regarding road conditions, including any necessary detours owing to repairs or washouts during the summer, as well as the existence of speed traps, will be posted on a bulletin board in each branch. The managers will furnish visitors with route lists and other suggestions for tours in his locality.

As New England is visited every season by thousands of tourists, this is the culminating effort on the part of the Touring Club to do everything possible to make automobile touring more popular. Such a plan to supply the latest touring information has never before been attempted by an automobile organization.

Many inquiries have been made in the past for just such information as the Touring Club managers can supply, and for this reason it is certain that these branches will meet the approval of the many thousands of tourists. The men in charge of the branches are men who understand the local conditions thoroughly, and can talk with personal knowledge of the roads. Reports of road conditions in these different localities will be sent to the headquarters of the Touring Club of America, Broadway and Sixty-seventh street, New York, where the complete service will be available upon request.

F. O. B. DETROIT

With 3-Speed Selective Transmission

EVER SINCE THE ADVENT of the famous Flanders "20," nearly two years ago, we have been deluged with requests for a touring body on this sterling light chassis. These requests came from thousands of good folk who felt they could not afford or didn't care to put $1000 or more into an automobile—of course, at $1000 there's only one choice—E-M-F "30."

TRUE, THERE WERE OTHERS—several makes of cars, selling for less than $1000 and equipped with "touring" bodies. But in the eyes of discriminating buyers these possessed disadvantages that left them out of consideration—for example; inadequate power and chassis strength; two-speed transmissions—and mostly of the power-consuming, noisy "planetary" type. The planetary transmission may be "fool proof," as claimed—but it does not appeal to the mechanically well informed.

FLANDERS "20" DIDN'T BELONG to that class of cars at all. When Engineer Heaslet undertook to design this model for the E-M-F Company he set himself a high standard—that of creating a chassis of medium size that should combine all those features which heretofore had been considered obtainable only in cars selling for four times as much as Mr. Flanders proposed to ask for this car.

THAT HE SUCCEEDED IS HISTORY. True, Flanders "20" in its first few months of existence had to pass through most of the infantile troubles that every new model, no matter by whom designed, must pass through before it reaches that state of perfection that is the designer's ambition. Flanders "20" had its teething troubles, then the measles, mumps and a slight attack of the whooping cough—that last is automobile language for carburetor crankiness.

PERHAPS THIS SURPRISES YOU—this brutal frankness of ours. It is the despair of our competitors. They never can understand why it does not injure us irreparably to tell the public what they consider factory secrets. Confidentially, we believe this is the secret of our success. We are dealing with intelligent people—practical business men for the most part. Infallibility is not to be hoped for in human beings. So it has always been our policy to speak frankly to readers of our ads. It not only disarms unfair competition, but has won for us a confidence on the part of buyers that we consider our chief asset.

YES, FLANDERS "20" HAD ITS TROUBLES in the early days. But—and here's what you are mostly interested in—every Flanders "20" car sold carried with it a full year's guarantee by a company worth several millions of dollars. Not only that, but the buyer knew that the men who signed that guarantee were not in the habit of splitting hairs—would make good not only the letter, but the spirit of that guarantee. And we did—to such an extent that there are today 7000 boosters of this car—satisfied owners.

WHILE WE ARE ON THE SUBJECT let's go back three years. E-M-F "30" was then in its first year. It also had its infantile aches and pains. This company was new then, but the men at the head of it realized that permanent success depended absolutely on backing up our product in the most liberal manner. We had expected small weaknesses to develop during the first few weeks that the new model was on the roads in hands of owners. Why? Past experience teaches us that, no matter how severely a new model may be tested by factory experts, defects will develop when 500 cars are in hands of owners operating under 500 different sets of conditions—defects that no one could possibly have foreseen or provided against. That's the reason for a manufacturer's guarantee—and before you buy any new model—ours or the other fellow's, let us warn you to look well to the kind of guarantee that goes with it, and particularly to the character of the men or the firm that signs it.

WHAT A MARVELOUS RECORD E-M-F "30" has made since that—nothing like it has been known in automobile history. For three years it has been first choice of discriminating buyers and every car has been sold, not by a salesman, but by another owner. And so well did we take care of those first 500 cars, any man who now owns one of that famous first litter to which "Old Bullet" belonged, staunchly claims he has as good a car as we have ever turned out since.

FLANDERS "20" REPEATED HISTORY—that's all. And today we are able to say of this great little car it is as good as its older brother E-M-F "30"—and more could not be said of any automobile.

BUT ABOUT THAT TOURING MODEL. Until recently we have turned a deaf ear to the entreaties of dealers and individual admirers alike—those who wanted a Flanders "20" touring car. The reasons have been set forth above. We had determined first to give the car a full year in hands of owners with the lighter runabout and suburban bodies—watch the performance of every car carefully, and make improvements or refinements wherever opportunity occurred.

SHE IS IN HER SECOND YEAR NOW—infantile diseases long since passed and every defect, however slight—whether in mechanical construction or merely in exterior appearance—has been corrected and such improvements made as the progress of the science of automobile making and steel treatment has made possible. Today we are able to say—and back it up with that same guarantee—that in all the world there is nowhere else such value to be had in a car of this type as in the Fore-Door Flanders "20."

THE RULE WE HAVE WORKED TO in perfecting this light car model has been "when in doubt make it like E-M-F "30"—a rule some of our esteemed competitors have emulated assiduously of late, by the way. You'll find, therefore, many points of similarity in the two cars—and that alone is a guarantee of the excellence of the new Flanders "20" model.

ONE FACTOR THAT HAS HELPED in this process of improvement has been the drop in prices of materials—which we predicted in a recent E-M-F ad. and were so roundly scored for by competitors who thought it was bad for the public to be advised of that fact. For example, aluminum is much cheaper today than two years ago. Result, we are able to use that semi-precious metal in the motor crank-case and transmission housing of Flanders "20" now, whereas it was absolutely out of the question then. We reduce the weight very considerably by using aluminum.

THE THREE-SPEED SELECTIVE TRANSMISSION is another feature that will appeal strongly to the experienced. For the runabout models the two-speeds are all right, but it's a mistake and a grievous one in any touring car. Not only does it interfere with the pleasurable operation of the car—and every Flanders "20" owner drives his own car—but it subjects motor and transmission mechanisms to undue strains when starting or climbing hills or negotiating very bad stretches of roads. It won't do.

WHEEL BASE IS 102 INCHES—only 6 inches shorter than the larger model. Ample room for five large adult passengers and longer than any other car of similar class. Weight, only 1600 pounds, and as this "20" horse-power motor actually develops about 25 per cent. more power than its rating you will have power to carry you anywhere at as rapid a pace as you will ever care to go. And she's a wonderful hill climber.

LESSER IMPROVEMENTS ARE:—Detaching exhaust manifold. Formerly, cast integral with the cylinders, this feature developed defects similar to those from which other makes of higher priced cars, which also adopted this foreign ideal last year, are still suffering. You don't know which ones? Ask your dealer.

CARBURETOR HAS BEEN PERFECTED so as to give still wider range of flexibility and with simpler adjustment—similar to E-M-F "30." FLANDERS "20" carburetor now gives uniform results in mile-high Denver and sea-level Florida.

WORM AND WORM-WHEEL STEERING has been adopted in place of the former internal-gear device. Absolutely irreversible. Four times longer-lived—because four times as much wearing surface. Also adjustable for wear. Equal in every way to that of E-M-F "30."

MAGNETO AND COIL are part of standard equipment of course—Splitdorf, and attached same as on the larger car. Accessible. So are several other parts that formerly were a trifle difficult to get at. Radiator is raised slightly so the starting crank no longer goes through the radiator. Looks better, that's all. Cooling properties of this car always were ideal. Rear axle has been made heavier to support the heavier passenger load. Double strut rods. Brakes twice as wide as before—will slide the wheels on any surface, yet won't shatter nor jerk no matter how severely applied. Lined with thermoid.

SEVERAL OTHER MINOR POINTS have been refined—improved is hardly the word, for there was nothing to be desired in efficiency. Still, there was one point—valve action—where not only refinement was possible, but about 20 per cent. increase in power was obtained.

THINK HOW MUCH WISER IT IS for a concern to adhere to standard models and improve from year to year as we have done with Flander "20" and E-M-F "30" rather than to constantly chase false gods and offer radically new models to the buying public as fast as the seasons roll round.

IS IT ANY WONDER other concerns are trailing in the rear while the E-M-F Company continues to set the pace and constantly increases the distance between? You know the A.L.A.M. report for the last quarter of 1910, just issued, showed the E-M-F Company to be the largest producer of automobiles in the world. Those figures cannot be refuted. And the chief reason is we do not run away from our troubles, but make good to every buyer—and we get our share of the unreasonable ones—and continue to improve and refine our product far in advance of the times and the demands of buyers.

NOW ABOUT THAT FORE-DOOR MODEL. First, let us say this body is not a makeshift one, designed to fit a runabout and be interchangeable. Not at all. It is specially designed for this chassis, which, as we have shown above, had been designed to receive it. Ample seating capacity and just as well trimmed and finished—just as many coats of varnish and the same quality leather and hair as that used in E-M-F "30."

THE PRICE—$800—IS SENSATIONAL—leaves no real competition for this car in the field. Meets exactly the needs of buyers who just can't quite reach EM-F "30"—and gives them a car made of exactly the same materials, by the same wonderful organization and backed by the same guarantee as E-M-F "30"—just a size smaller, that's all.

NOW NOTE THIS CAREFULLY. Deliveries on this fore-door model will not begin until on or about July 1st. And at first they will not come very rapidly—naturally. Orders ahead for Flanders "20" runabouts and roadster must be taken care of. This requires a large part of the factory equipment and organization.

BESIDES, IT BECAME NOISED ABOUT—despite our efforts to keep silent about this model until ready to deliver them in quantities—that this Fore-Door Flanders "20" was coming out, and astute dealers and buyers have already sent in tentative orders for several hundred cars—unsight and unseen and without knowing just what the price would be. Knew it would be right, of course, knowing the E-M-F Company.

SO YOU SEE YOU'LL HAVE TO TAKE YOUR TURN in the line just as those thousands have had to do in the past who wanted E-M-F "30" or Flanders "20" cars. Order at once. Pay down a deposit and have your dealer assign you a definite delivery date. Then you will not be disappointed.

THE OBJECT OF THIS ADVERTISEMENT is not so much to sell these cars—word of mouth information among present owners would sell the entire output as fast as we could get them out. But we wanted to give everybody a fair start—dealers and individual buyers alike. So this is the first official word about this model and you can rest assured there will be no favoritism—first in line first served and with absolute impartiality as in the past.

OUR FORE-DOOR DEMONSTRATOR is in active operation and we will indeed be pleased to show you what the new Flanders "20" can do. Price on this model as shown is $900 f. o. b. Los Angeles, or equipped with Top and Glass Front and Speedometer, $1000. We still have three cars for delivery July 15th. A 'phone call or letter will bring our representative or literature as you may wish.

NEW ROUTE FOR PHOENIX RACE BEST COURSE CHOSEN OVER DESERT ROADS

George Purdy Bullard Chooses the Route in Official E. M.F. Thirty and Maricopa Automobile Club Places Stamp of Approval on the Efforts of Its Big Chief, the Father of the Race.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

GEORGE PURDY BULLARD has mapped out the new route for the Los Angeles-Phoenix automobile road race. With the E. M. F. "Thirty", the official car chosen by the Maricopa Automobile Club, the course was chosen and the route was blazed. The E. M. F. covered the roads all the way and the race can be held without touching a foot of the railroad tracks.

With Dr. H. H. Stone, referee of the Phoenix race, as a passenger, the E. M. F. started on the route-blazing run. Bill La Casse promised to drive over the roads and he kept his word. The Phoenix course is sandy, in one place there is low gear work for several miles, from Andrade to Yuma the route is fierce but the contest can and will be held over the new route through Yuma.

Every foot of the distance has been carefully chartered. Every bad spot is well known to the crews of the two E. M. F. pathfinding cars that made the run. Shirley Christy, Secretary of the Arizona Territorial Fair Commission, was in the second car. Both machnies made the entire trip without any engine trouble.

The entire distance, over the roads, is 563.9 miles. The former Phoenix course was 418 miles. The running time for the race is thirty hours.

The run from Los Angeles to San Diego, the first sprint, is 136.5 miles. The citizens of San Diego have deposited $1000 for the car that reaches that city first. The running time is four hours.

From San Diego to El Centro, in the center of Imperial Valley, the distance is 119.4 miles. The running time is seven hours. Another $1000 has been promised for the machine that reaches the center of Imperial Valley first.

The distance from El Centro to Yuma is 82.5 miles and the running time is six hours, thirty minutes. Citizens of Yuma have offered $500 for the first car that reaches that point.

From Yuma to Augua Caliente the distance is 130.3 miles. The running time is eight hours.

The distance from Augua Caliente to Phoenix is 95.2 miles and the running time four hours, thirty minutes. Another $2000 is ready for the winning car.

When the Los Angeles-Phoenix automobile road race is held November 6, 7, 8, over the new course, one of the fattest purses ever hung up for a big road race will be offered for the winning car. The route through San Diego, the Imperial Valley, Yuma and the desert to Phoenix will be one series of fast sprints to the different cities and ending with the dash into Phoenix.

The racing cars will be divided into two divisions. The high and the low-priced cars will divide the purses also. The dealers, that is the possible entrants, are to be given a chance to discuss the plans and the terms of the race. President Bullard promises to listen to the reasoning of the automobile men.

There are a few things, however, that are settled already. The race will be held over the roads. No railroad tracks for Bullard. The citizens of Phoenix are a unit when it comes to this kind of talk. They will not stand for a race where one car covers part of all of the course on the ties.

It's a cinch to check the railroad from Packard to Yuma, over the particular stretch which was covered by the Cadillac. One man can keep tab on the long stretch. Any car making the run which looked so good to George Adair will be disqualified.

OFFICIAL COURSE.

When the E.M.F. was started by the Maricopa officials it was decided to map out a course entirely different from that covered by any other car. The route of the Cadillac is not official, will not be considered in mapping the course, and cannot be followed by any car in the race if the driver expects to score a victory.

Now that the road race course has been shown and the E.M.F. has covered every inch of sand, silt and hard earth between this city and Phoenix the new route is known to be passable. It has been chosen as the official route for the next race.

What will be the running time? So many guesses have been given that it is futile to even hazard one. The race will be won in thirty hours or less. The roads are as bad as over the other course. There is more low gear work on the new course. The distance is 145 miles greater.

The E.M.F. covered the course with five people and in places it was necessary to stand on the rear springs or crowd to the back of the tonneau in order to get traction. The car had plenty of power, but the wheels were buried in the sand in places and it was necessary to make a path through the deep sand before trying to buck the roads.

NEW ROUTE.

The route from Los Angeles to San Diego is well charted. It is in good shape and can be covered in about four hours. The record of the Buick may be smashed, however, even on this run. It is to be a dash over the southern route for $1000 and a big car will probably win the sixty per cent. of the purse.

Then the run through Steel's Canyon and into the national forest, must be made. The route to Campo, is an up and down bouncing, rollicking spin and El Centro should be made in seven hours or less. The roads are good to Campo, fair to the mouth of Devil's Canyon, sandy through Coyote Wells, where low gear work is necessary, and sandy almost into Imperial.

The run from Imperial to Mexicali is over a rather bumpy road to the Mexican border. After crossing the line the going is good as the cars must follow the bottom lands of the Colorado River to Andrade. From Andrade to Yuma the going is fierce and it will take some low-gear lugging to make the sand hills run.

The bottom lands of the Colorado are covered with briers which will scratch the faces of the drivers unless they are cut before the race. The road is overgrown with these thorny bushes.

From Yuma to Dome, twenty-two miles, the going is bad. This part of the route is particularly rough. From Dome to Middle Wells, in the center of the desert the run is excellent. Middle Wells is fifty miles from Yuma and the run should be made in fast time.

From Middle Wells to Agua Caliente the going is fierce in places and good in spots. There are several sand hills which are hard to cover and which necessitate low gear lugging again.

From Agua Caliente to Yuma the running is rough again until Arlington is reached. From this point to Salome, thirty-five miles from Yuma, the going is good and from Salome to Phoenix the cars will again make fast time.

The old route is reached at the Hassayampa River, just this side of Salome. From the river on into Yuma the former course must be covered and the finish will be at the same spot—the fair grounds gate.

W. H. Halliwell supplied the Warner speedometer with which the E.M.F. was equipped. The route was measured accurately. The need for a speedometer was never more fully demonstrated than on the desert run. Halliwell planned to make the trip, but the Warner did the work without the chief and every mile, every step and every turn have been noted

COLUMBUS ELECTRIC CLIMBS.

Sales Record is Made by Volney S. Beardsley and Coupe is Sold Every Day of Week.

An unusual feat was performed Wednesday by the Columbus electric coupe. Four passengers, averaging 160 pounds each were carried over the mountain roads by the car in splendid shape and Volney S. Beardsley, president of the California Automobile Company made the run.

The record for electrics was broken the past week when Beardsley sold one machine for every week day. He was forced to order a new carload of electrics to be shipped here as soon as possible because of the rush of business. There was something doing every minute and the electrics were moving out in great shape.

The run of the four-passenger coupe was remarkable, as it came at a busy time and was performed as a demonstration. The electric was sold. Leaving Los Angeles, the car was driven to Hollywood, then over Cahuenga Pass to Lankershim and Van Nuys, returning over the Laurel Canyon pass by Lookout Mountain back through Elysian Park to Los Angeles and then to prove the staying qualities of the "Car Supreme" Walter Kerrick, who drove the car, ran it up Grand avenue hill and returned to the garage with plenty of power left to go to the beach.

This was not done for any other purpose than a demonstration to a prospective buyer and is being performed every day by owners of Columbus cars and shows that the "Ladies' Favorite" makes mountain roads appear as though they were city boulevards.

Alaskans Are Uncholoformable.

The administration of anaesthetics is a harder matter than in the white race from the fact that the natives take such lareg quantities of ether or chloroform before they are asleep. But more peculiar still is the fact that no amount seems to affect their heart or circulation, and when they do get to sleep it is like that of a babe. Does the stoicism of the native even control his "anaesthetic centers?" I can seen in the native makeup a peculiar line of resistance to the encroachment of disease seemingly different from that of the white race and which must have preserved the race despite the ravages that have attacked it.—[New York Sun.

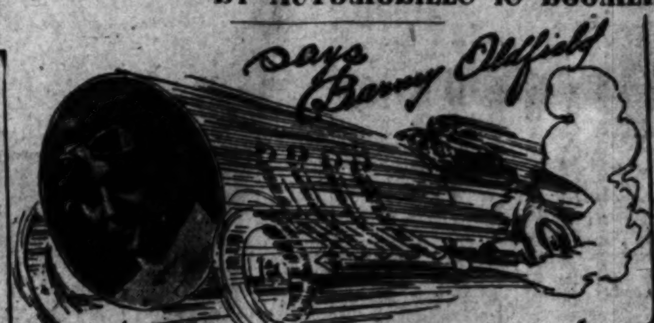
Too Dangerous.

RACING ON FORMER HORSE TRACKS BY AUTOMOBILES IS DOOMED.



[Copyright 1911 by Barney Oldfield.]

MOTOR car racing on circular tracks built for horses is doomed. Not until more than one hundred drivers and mechanics were sacrificed to satisfy the promoters' greed for gold, did the decent element in the sport rise and cry "enough!"

The fiasco at the Hawthorne race track in Chicago a week ago sounded the death knell of that class of contests and "racing" so industriously boomed for the past few years by promoters who cared nothing for the killing of speed-mad pilots and their helpless mechanics, but to whose ears the clink of the dollars as they fell into the strong box spelled the success or failure of their enterprises.

Ever since 1904 those in control have been talking of refusing sanctions for circular track meets. After each fatal accident there would appear a flash of transitory sentiment, a few tears for "the poor fellow," then as the dead wagon or ambulance carted him away the races would go merrily on. Sometimes they halted the cars for five minutes at the funeral hour the next day. But they continued to grant the sanctions and the promoters dangled purses of gold to lure the ambition-mad drivers on to fresh danger.

It has always been within the power of the governing body of the sport to call a halt, but the rich sanction fees meant too much towards the maintenance of the organization to let sentiment interfere. Year after year the minions of the law held aloof from official investigations or interference. The Coroner of Chicago finally awoke to a realization that death resulting from motor racing was nothing short of manslaughter, and while investigating the circumstances surrounding the death of Marcel Basle, gave utterance to about the most caustic criticism and warnings ever handed out by a public official. There will certainly be no more automobile racing in Chicago until special tracks or speedways are constructed.

Two State Senators in Chicago have already announced that they would present anti-racing bills in the next Illinois Legislature.

TREACHEROUS TRACK.

The Hawthorne meet was promoted by a well-known booster of circular track meets, a man experienced in playing up the "death-dealing" features of the game both in the newspapers and on the bill boards. A local motor organization was announced as patron of the affair and many of its prominent members acted as officials of the meet.

The track, long noted as one of the most treacherous, sand-surfaced, courses in the country, was granted a license, notwithstanding that the fences were not removed thirty feet from the edge of the track as the rules specifically require. The fences were flush with the edge of the course. The turns were deeply rutted and soft.

The promoter stated that a member of the contest board of the National Association and generally conceded to be a most capable official, had personally inspected the track and indorsed the application for the track license. This was brought out at the Coroner's inquest.

With 10,000 spectators in the stands on Saturday, June 10, the second race on the programme was started. The unfortunate Basle crashed through the fence on the bad turn and died an hour later. A few minutes following another car plunged through the fence a few feet further along. The association official who had pronounced the track safe then caused the races to be stopped and Burman and De Palma were sent an exhibition mile each, to pacify the throng.

The crowd greeted with yells of "fake," "robbery," the announcement of the calling off of the remaining programmed events. Instead of refusing to allow the gates to be opened the following day, the statement was made by the officials that the track would be "repaired" and the "races" would continue Sunday.

Another crowd of 10,000 was drawn evidently by the morbid desire to witness more accidents. In the second race a car crashed through the fence on the "death turn," and becoming thoroughly frightened, the officials declared the entire programme off. But the immense amount of money taken in at the gates was not refunded.

LOUD IN PROMISES.

Emulating the originator of the idea of padlocking the stable door after the horse was stolen, the officials were loud in their promise that no more races would be held in Chicago so long as the dirt track had to be used. But that did not satisfy the Coroner, who started an inquiry that promises to make much trouble for those interested.

On the same afternoon that the Hawthorne meet was enriching the coffers of the promoter, a driver was killed at a track meet in Omaha and his mechanic fatally hurt. The next day the wires carried the story that a movement is on foot among the real big men of the industry and sport to prevent the granting of future sanctions for dirt track meets.

This is an old, old story, so often has it been told, but I believe they are sincere this time, for most of them realize that the law will no longer overlook the almost constant slaughter of drivers and mechanics.

Fully ninety per cent. of these meets have been promoted by men who cared nothing for the industry or sport. The organized automobile clubs have long since learned to dread that terrible moral responsibility that goes with the promotion of track meets or events that are so liable to result in fatal accidents. The fee of $100 a day for sanctions collected by the association in control of the "sport" is said to be the main support of the contest department of the association.

OFFICIALS PROHIBIT.

Not only will the county officials in many localities prevent the running of track races, but there is an anti-racing bill pending in Texas which is calculated to prohibit circular or elliptical track racing, and, I am informed on good authority, the next Indiana Legislature will act on a bill to kill all forms of automobile racing in that State.

I talked with the father of the Texas bill, while I was down in San Antonio a few weeks ago. Several drivers and many spectators were killed at the Dallas Fair in November, and a week later Tobin Dehymel, the Texan driver, was killed at the San Antonio Fair.

With the tremendous feeling caused by the heavy fatality among race drivers, it needs but the introduction of a bill in many of the States to prohibit track racing. The officials in New York State were unable to stop gambling on horse races until the Legislature passed a bill making the owners of the tracks and officials of the racing associations criminally liable for any betting on their grounds. The moment a single automobile race promoter or official is held for manslaughter it will instantly stop the promotion of track meets.

TAKING CHANCES.

The majority of the drivers do not know the chances they are taking. They see other drivers attaining great speed with their cars, and given a high-powered racing machine, a youngster with practically no experience tries to do the same thing. A vital piece of steel gives way and it is all off.

Wild stories of the immense earnings of racing drivers attract most of these new drivers to the game. There is no driver who earns one-tenth enough to warrant him taking the chances forced upon him. Once in a while some pilot captures a big race with a big prize. But there are hundreds of drivers and only a few big races.

The professional promoter is the curse of the racing game. But they have killed the goose which laid their golden egg. Through a willful disregard for the safety of the driver, mechanic and spectator, they have, in conjunction with the body accepting the sanction fees, brought to an end two men were matched, but the night of the battle Papke had become a big favorite.

In the first two rounds, it looked like the Thunderbolt would kill the Italian, but in the third round Kelly came back strong, and in the fourth he had Papke worried. From the fifth round on, the milling was about even. Kelly hit Papke oftener than he was hit, but the blows of the Thunderbolt were carefully directed and did greater damage when they landed.

And, by the way, that was the first night Stanley Ketchel was introduced to a large fight audience. He had gained a wonderful reputation through his work against second-class men he met, and was then destined to become the master of Papke. Ketchel looked more like a high school football player that night than a prize fighter.

The Michigan fight prombters are anticipating a revival of the ring game in their State before long. I ran into Emerson W. Dickerson, the man who staged the battle that killed the game in that State several years ago. The contest was between Mike Ward and Harry Lewis, and it will be recalled by the fight followers on the Coast that Ward died almost before the fatal ten had been counted over him in the ring.

Dickerson has never staged a big fight since, but he has refereed many, and he says that was a dear lesson to him. It taught him never to allow a battle to go too far.

Nearly every prize fight which terminates in a knockout could be stopped before the final sickening blow comes, if the referee is careful. The fight fans, as a rule, like to see the pugilist beaten into a state of unconsciousness, when a decision would do just as well.

The night that Ward fought Harry Lewis, the little Jew had the Canadian beaten to a plup, and the battle could have ended a couple of rounds sooner than the fatality came, but the audience kept yelling, "Let it go."

As it is the first duty of every promoter to please the audience, the battle was allowed to go on, and, finally, Ward fell to the floor all but dead. His head hit a post, and all was over. The fighting game was through and has been through ever since.

Harry Lewis announced the next day that he would never enter the ring again, but he changed his mind inside of a year, and today is regarded as one of the greatest men in the game. He is in London at the present time.

The authorities in control in Michigan now generally favor limited round boxing bouts, and, while the law on the statute books prevents the staging of the contests in the open, it is often ignored, and it won't be long before the game is going again.

I paid a visit to Wolgast's home at Cadillac, Mich., the other day and got the first look at the champion's little brother. Ad told me in Los Angeles last winter just before the Nemsic battle that his kid brother would make a wonder if he kept on developing in the future as he has in the past, and Ad was right if looks count for anything.

and nine pins, and already many of the 16-pound ballshoot era are limbering up their wings. Just now tournaments are in progress for these games at both the Orpheum and Grand alleys, and the way the boys are digging in means that before many days a lot of the old dyed-in-the-wool tenpin "bugs" will fall for the less strenuous pastime.

The Bunswig Drug Company team rolled some nice scores in the Mercantile League on the Orpheum alley Thursday evening, when they made 2624 in their five games. Incidentally they took five straight games from the Hoegee Athletes. Stone, of the druggists, had high game, with 216, and high average, 193.

The directors of the Southern California Bowling Association held a meeting Thursday evening at Levy's Cafe and settled several important questions of the league. All games rolled by the Bimini Bath team since May 1 were declared forfeited to their opponents, from the fact that this team used bowlers who were ineligible. The College Inn protest was allowed and they were awarded two out of the three games of the Harding Colts match. The time of paying dues was extended to June 21. All teams that have not paid by that time or that have failed to report sheets will be disqualified. It is now up to each and every captain to do his duty in seeing that the score sheets are turned into the secretary in order that the proper team standing and averages may be published.

For about the 'steenth time, Charlie Rising copped the high weekly jimjon score at the Stinson alleys, when he knocked down 153 of the pee-wees. A score of 153 at this game is a good score for any bowler at any time, but this fellow Rising seems to crack out 150 or better scores nearly every week, and that's the reason he leads all others in winning weekly prizes at these alleys.

"Red" McCubbin took care of the ten-pin honors at Col. Stinson's alleys last week, when he chalked up a mark of 268. This is an exceptionally good score and in nine cases out of ten would win the weekly prize hands down. For the ladies, Mrs. Lapham took the honors, with a 203 score. Just a few years ago this lady was one of the leading pin destroyers of Southern California, and if she keeps up this good work will step back into her former position in the ten-pin world.

Below are the standings of the Southern California League to date:

Team—	Played.	Won.	Lost.	P.c.
Venice	60	42	18	.700
Brenwoods	60	41	19	.683
Los Angeles Limited	60	37	23	.616

Well, it seems impossible to break away from a tie in the Interurban League leaders. Friday night on the Grand Alleys the Scott Bros. defeated the Wells-Fargo team three straight games, and this same kind of a dose was handed to the Venice Cubs by "Pop" Benge's Cafe boys. One of these three teams had to drop and it fell to the lot of the Beachites.

A new Commercial League record for single game was made by the Los Angeles Saddle and Findings Co. team on the Majestic Alleys Wednesday night when they gathered 620 pins in their third game. The former record, 618, was held by the Jevnes. Following are the scores:

Gordon	221
Sellers	196
Hoebel	203

The Home Phone team in the Commercial League have at last taken a drop. The Jevne trio managed to take the last two games of five from them on the Majestic Alleys Friday evening. Up to this time the phone boys had lost only one game out of twenty-five, which is certainly a fine record, no matter how strong they are, as any team played against might be "hitting 'em right."

Westphal increased his average in the Commercial League during the past week, and there is now a pretty race for high individual honors between him and Jewell. These two bowlers have been rolling very consistently throughout the entire tournament and have shown wonderful improvement over their work in the last league.

The two games between Coupland Thomas, of San Diego, and L. A. Darling, of Los Angeles, played at Board 13 in the intercity team correspondence match were decided quickly, on errors by the Angeleno, who in game A sent his sixth move from a wrong position, and, losing his queen, resigned. Game B lasted until move 14, when, finding himself then minus a piece and pawn, the local man capitulated. The scores follow:

The result of the championship tournament in the Cabrillo Club of San Diego has been confirmed by subsequent matches under the continuous challenge system. Rev. E. B. Adams, who won the tourney by two points over A. G. Pearsall, has maintained his right to the title by defeating the latter in four out of five matches with a score of 3 to 1 in each of his victories.

Of forty games under way in the Southern California Chess Correspondence Tournament, not over half a dozen are reported as close openings. Nearly one-half are gambits, and most of the remainder are of the open character, indicating an unusually enterprising spirit on the part of competitors.

GOSSIP ALONG GASOLINE ROW

BY BERT C. SMITH.

Leon Shettler promises a big surprise in the motor world within the next two weeks. Watch and wait.

Don Lee is home from San Francisco. He will return next week to close a deal for a big new garage and salesroom.

Norman W. Church is on one of his monthly visits to the Stoddard factory and the main offices of the United States Motors Company in New York.

C. Fred Grundy of the Grundy Motor Sales Company is in the East visiting the Thomas and the Cole factories. He is expected home the latter part of this week.

Guy West is there when it comes to bagging the quail and doves, but he has not won any medals as yet as a blue-rock champion. West is a mighty hunter, and will go after deer next month.

Oscar Werner will talk for several hours without missing a breath on the new Simplex 38. This is one of the 1912 Simplex creations and is a beautiful machine with worlds of speed and power.

Bill Ruess is busy hatching plans for the dealers who are on his staff. Bill has a host of friends, and the Pope-Hartford man also has a host of people, whom he does not wish to be friendly with.

George N. Jordon, Southern California representative for the Michelin Tire Company, will leave today for the factory. Incidentally, Jordon will take a look at the Great White Way and see if it is all there.

Harris Hanshue is doing well with the Apperson agency in Salt Lake City. He is operating the branch for Leon Shettler, and is proving popular in the new territory. "Han" says he has driven his last race.

A. J. Smith is doing well with the Elmore in San Francisco and expects to visit Los Angeles within a short time. The former Los Angeles agent is a San Francisco enthusiast and thinks it the greatest town in the world.

Harrington Brown of South Vermont avenue has purchased a big Thomas six-cylinder, one of the largest cars sold this year. The order was duplicated by Mrs. A. F. George and by Frank Power. The cars are to be fully equipped and were sold by A. M. Young of the Grundy Motor Sales Company.

Those handsome trophies won by the contestants in The Times tour, are on their way and will be exhibited in the show windows of the Whitley Jewelry Company as soon as they arrive. They are costly and will be well worth having.

Bill Curtis is in training to drive the Apperson on one leg of the Phoenix race. Curtis drove to Mecca last year and made a wonderfully good showing. He is a strong, daring driver, but at the same time has judgment.

T. J. Beaudette and Joe Brown will leave this week for the Cadillac factory. They will attend a week of schooling to familiarize all shop foremen with the 1912 Cadillac. This new chassis will be shown for the first time next week.

Eylar Fillmore has returned from his run to Phoenix in the Ford. The trip was remarkable. Only three punctures all the way. The rough sands were easily crossed by the Ford "twenty," which now belongs to a Phoenix citizen.

Dr. Jordon Grundy is touring Europe in his Thomas touring car. This handsome 1911 model is to be sent to all the well-known watering places, and the man who is interested in the Grundy Motor Sales Company is having a splendid time.

Again this record-run business must be brought down to normal. The man who earns a record must start from and finish at one certain place in each town. Let this be understood. To make records official, the start and finish must be checked carefully.

Y. R. Del Valle, local agent for the Brush, has just received word from his factory that the sturdy little one-cylinder car has scored another victory. The car won the economy contest in Milwaukee and finished with a perfect score, just as it did in The Times tour.

C. S. Jameson, who for over four years has been sales manager for the Stoddard Dayton Motor Car Company, has become assistant sales manager to G. W. Bennett, general sales manager of the Willys-Overland Company. R. J. Buell, formerly of the Regal Motor Car Company of Detroit, also joins the forces of the Overland.

Harvey Herrick and Bob Stanton left last week for a tour to San Diego and return in a National roadster. Herrick is now with the National company, and will be at the wheel of that car in all the big races on the Coast. His first appearance as a National pilot will be the Bakersfield race. He will then begin training for the Phoenix race. The National should be one of the favorites in both events.

SPORTING COMMENT

BY THE MELANCHOLY DANE.

Undertakers, Notice.

The proposition of Tham Langford fighting Jim Smith, reported as the middleweight champion pug and the heavyweight, too, of some alleged foreign country, strikes me as a very fine scheme. It will certainly be a great and valuable experience meeting for Mr. Smith; also a great educator. The only thing that might mar the pleasure of the occasion is that the fool Coroner might want to butt in and remove the remains of Mr. Smith before the fight bugs have time to get out of the building. If he can be kept outside for one hour after the meeting takes place I see no reason why the bout should not be attractive. Tombstone makers and grave diggers please copy.

Not Dead, Nor Sleeping.

I observe that the record of Jim Corbett does not appear in the latest fight dope books. However, as he is able to get his stuff in various kinds of newspapers, I imagine he will not allow us to forget him for some years yet.

Matter Rules Mind.

Jack Johnson, negro pug, riding about Lunnon in an $18,000 auto set with diamonds, reminds me of the time some years ago that he was here in Los Angeles in jail for a petty offense. And yet they talk about mind ruling matter. Huh!

The Kink's High Way.

The Kink may be a good sport and a patron of the races, but it strikes me that his ledger account would make a much better showing on the great Trial Balance of Eternity if he would spend that $3,000,000 that his coronation will cost in buying bread for the starving millions of his subjects in India. Still, the late Mr. Hume has led us to believe in his famous tale that the Kinks of England never did amount to much even before the famous pirate and freebooter, William, went over from Normandy and carried off everything in sight. Consequently George don't figure much.

Must be Trained.

The local "sporting" gentlemen and officials who are not being very much embarrassed by the grand jury can now realize how Johnny Rockefellow and the steal magnates feel. The trouble with the local bunch is that it did not have a gentlemen's and ladies' agreement with itself to "can't remember" ANYTHING. This is one of the first principles of business life.

Long Getting Dippy.

Baron Long, ex-promoter of the Jeffries fight arena as a manager of a prize fighter makes me think of John D. Rockefeller driving an express wagon. Long is now taking in about $5000 a minute with the Chinese doctor game in San Francisco, and why he should want to spend this trying to make a prize fighter win, is something that gets me. Any of us will fall for that Chinese doctor stunt, but you've got to indicate to me why we should be asked to let a cheap pug get by us.

Me For That.

Some persons may make a lot of money betting on ball games and prize fights, but as for easy money I'd rather be a cheap Goo-Goo politician or the cop in charge of Chinatown. I want to be that when I get so old that I'm good for nothing but to hold some office. The only bad thing about being a politician, however, is that the grand jury is liable to catch you at it.

It is the neatest, most graceful, sturdiest and most powerful medium-sized four-passenger car that can be bought.

You probably know the enviable reputation created by eight generations of Mitchell cars in Southern California. The one thousand Mitchells in daily use here are adding to this reputation every hour.

This toy-tonneau, four-passenger car has every one of those strong points of construction that have made the Mitchell famous wherever strenuous, exacting service is required.

Out of the two carloads received a few days ago only two Toy-Tonneau Mitchells remain. We believe that here is exactly the kind of car you want. Come and investigate as soon as you can, as the prospects are that these two cars will be delivered before the middle of the week.

Criger Given Poor Support by the Infielders.

Howard Puts the Ball Over the Fence.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Bing! Bang! Bang! That was the way the ball game went at Recreation Park today.

The Angels got the "Bings," but the Oaks were on hand with more of the "Bangs" and that was why they ended up the session 8 to 6 in their favor. All the action was reserved for the latter half of the affray, and when the lads with the baseball uniforms got to stinging the ball there was no stopping them.

Two-baggers and home runs, the latter being evenly divided, with one on each side, were the order of the day rather than the exception, and it was only because the Oaks had the advantage of the start that they beat out the men from Southern California.

Even in the ninth inning, the one in which Howard put the ball over the fence for the Dillonites, the Southerners were coming fast, and only the greatest kind of a catch by Zacher, who jumped into the air to pick Pete Daley's fly ball off the center-field fence, stopped the run getting and gave the Commuters their victory.

Criger of Los Angeles was not altogether responsible for his troubles, although he weakened when the Oaks had an apparently unbeatable lead. Rank infield errors gave the Oaks their start and after that Criger let down and in the sixth and a part of the seventh was touched for seven runs and six hits. George Wheeler, always the substitute twirler when the Angels have as good as lost a game, was battered considerably when he jumped to the rescue, but the damage had already been done.

And with the score 8 to 1 in his favor it was Tyler Christian's turn to face the trouble of the day. The Dillonites, with a well nigh hopeless task in front of them, lammed out four hits, two of them doubles, before there was a halt or a man retired. They got two more hits and four runs all told during the inning and had they been able to keep up that same gait in their ninth and last chance, it would have been a different story.

Ivan Howard and Cutshaw were the home run getters, although the Oaklander by reason of fact that his homer scored two tallies and he added a two bagger to his other long distance record, was slightly in the lead.

It was a clean game up to the sixth inning, in which the Angels scored the first tally. Howard singled through second with Criger out and advanced on another base hit by Bernard. As he was trying for a steal to third, Christian took the cue for a throw down to Cutshaw. Cutty relayed to third, but the throw was decidedly wild and as the ball went to the Los Angeles' bench, Howard scampered home under direction of Umpire Finney.

That lead, however, was held so briefly that it was almost no lead at all. Going right down the batting list, starting with Pfyl, who fanned, the Oaks gathered their four scores. Coy was safe when Metzger fumbled his grounder. Hoffman was hit on the side of the head and Cutshaw doubled to deep center to score the two men who were ahead of him. Hughie Smith heaved the ball wild down to second and Hoffman completed the circuit.

COSTLY ERRORS.

SENATORS DROP FIFTH.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SACRAMENTO, June 17.—Thompson held San Francisco to five hits today and should have won in nine innings, but costly errors by Sacramento in the second enabled the visitors to send the game into the tenth, when they won by bunching a double and a single.

The final score was 4 to 3, making the fifth straight victory for San Francisco.

Miller started the game for the visitors, but was relieved in the sixth. Score:

BAKERSFIELD ROAD RACE.

Pope-Hartford, but the Pope people have been used to entering two cars in every big road race and Bill may be the other driver.

Frank Siefert will appear on a fast car. Here is a man who can come back. There was a time when Siefert was the big noise in racing circles. He is in training again for a big event and has determined to win the Bakersfield road race. This means another fast entry with a speedy driver at the helm of a ninety-horse-power racing car.

DRURY HUSTLES.

W. E. Drury, who is handling the big race at Bakersfield, is sure the affair is to be a world record-breaker. The list of entries to date makes certain a race that will be a hummer from the start to the finish. The fast National, with Harvey Herrick at the wheel, is to be one of the first machines to cover the course. It is a speedster that will vie for first honors with the Pope-Hartfords.

Joe Nikrent will be in the race on a Staver-Chicago. It has not been definitely decided whether a Knox will be entered or whether Albert Dooer will be satisfied to try his luck with the Staver. This car is a speedster that should come into its own in its class.

After smashing the San Diego road record so easily, the Buick is in shape for a road race about the size of the Bakersfield affair. Louis Nikrent is in San Luis Obispo this week and will return about Thursday in time to tune his Marquette-Buick for the speedy dash over the Kern county roads. He will be one of the favorites in the free-for-all.

Another car that has been entered is the Croxton, with Robert Speigel as driver. This fast car is on its way from the factory and will be one of the handsomest machines in the race. It is fast and powerful and good for a speed of eighty miles an hour. Clarence Bucker intends to make a strong bid for first money.

LATONIA RACES.

CALISSE TAKES FEATURE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

LATONIA, June 17.—Calisse, off to a flying start, spread-eagled her field at Latonia today and captured the Clipsetta stakes, the feature event on the card, by half a length from Star Jasmine, with Azyiade third, two lengths back. Lady Lightning was off poorly and was never a serious contender.

With the exception of Derby day, the crowd today was the largest of the meeting. Results:

Five furlongs: Presumption won, McCreary second, High Brow third; time, 0:59 3-5.

Mile and seventy yards: Rocky O'Brien won, Topland second, Ida May third; time, 1:44.

Mile and three-sixteenths: John Louis won, Summernight second, Petronious third; time, 1:49.

The Clipsetta stakes, five furlongs: Calisse won, Star Jasmine second; Azyiade third; time, 1:00 2-5.

Six furlongs: Grover Hughes won, Adams Express second, Princess Callaway third; time, 1:12 2-5.

Gov. Deneen of Illinois wants a renomination, and the Deneen Republicans are planning a State convention to be held in Springfield within the next few weeks. It will be called as a meeting of Illinois' progressives, but the Merriam-Jones-Dobyns progressives have no intention of taking part.

GIRLS STEALING BASES.

doubt that girls' baseball at "Poly" is a success.

SCORES IN A WALK.

And how those girls can steal bases! One clever little strategist with a huge ribbon hair bow took her base on balls, and then sneaked around home in a walk.

The ball used by the girls is larger and softer than a regulation ball. It is well that it is softer, or some pretty faces might be broken, for there's not a quiet moment after Miss Ohman, the girls' physical director, in her role of umpire, says "Play ball!"

These are busy days at the school, as it is near commencement time, so that some of the regular players were unavoidably detained in the classrooms. There was nearly a riot because some baseball celebrity, called "Rusty," was not there to take part. But if Rusty can beat those present, she'll have to show me.

Dunn, the principal of Polytechnic, in speaking of the new regime in athletics adopted this term, said yesterday: "The interest of the students, both boys and girls, has not abated since the abolishing of the championship system. We play all games inside the school, and not for competition, but for physical benefit to the players. We have a greater number of students enrolled in the athletic classes than ever before. Some of our teams play unofficially with other schools, but no championship matches are entered."

At the Los Angeles High School the girls' baseball team under the direction of Miss Rogers, has had a very successful season. It is allowed to play with other schools and has defeated San Pedro and Compton, but lost the championship to Santa Monica.

OLD PLAYMATES TO WED.

He a Promising Barrister; She an Accomplished Musician — Were Children Together Many Years Ago.

When Miss Nan Lucille Bullard and Raymond A. Leonard announced their engagement to a party of friends and relatives at dinner last night, at Ocean Park, they voiced the culmination of a pretty childhood romance.

As children, they played together in Decatur, Ill., their home city. He went away to college and after many years, they met in this city, renewing their old acquaintanceship.

Miss Bullard is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Bullard, of No. 1030 South Arapahoe street. She is an accomplished musician and has enjoyed great popularity among the younger set, since coming West more than a year ago.

Mr. Leonard recently graduated from the University of Southern California, securing the degree of bachelor of laws. He intends to enter practice immediately. He graduated from the University of Illinois in an engineering course, but in a short time deserted this profession to follow law. Leonard attended the University of California for two years. He is a member of the Phi Delta Phi and Sigma Chi fraternities.

The date of the wedding has not been set, but it will probably be celebrated early in the fall.

Slaughtering the Goose.

FIGHTING CLUBS CLOSING DOWN BECAUSE PUGS GET ALL THE COIN.

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) June 16—The past season has been a very profitable one for some of the best cards in the boxing world, but for many of the good ones and hundreds of the lesser lights it has been a very poor one, due to the boxers themselves in most instances. The exorbitant demands made of promoters by many of the stars have been the means of hurting the game in more ways than one, and the boxers themselves are now feeling the effects of the comeback.

Some of the New York promoters are to blame for this condition of affairs, for they have jumped over one another and have bid ridiculous sums to get star cards. These big prices were advertised all over the country and other promoters found it difficult to do business with boxers without guaranteeing half the receipts and giving them privileges in addition which any other amusement promoter would laugh at.

At Indianapolis a week ago the promoters took in $4000, and then lost over $500 on the show. They had guaranteed big sums to the boxers and when they came to settle up they found they could not meet their obligations, or get within $500 of it. At New Orleans the West Side Athletic Club took in close to $4000 for the Conley-Coster contest, and still lost over $500 because it had guaranteed Conley close to $2500 and Coster about $1000, which, with expenses, more than ate up all the receipts and left them in the hole for all their trouble.

At the McFarland-Kilbane bout, in Buffalo the promoters gave a big guarantee and lost quite a bunch of money as a result. At the Wells-Cross bout in New York City the promoters again guaranteed more than they could afford, and lost a big chunk of coin. It has been the same in Milwaukee in several instances where guarantees have been given and also in Boston and Philadelphia.

The New York clubs have been losing money on most of their shows of late, but still they could not see or would not see the real cause of it. At last one promoter there—Harry Pollick—has tumbled to the fact, and he announces now that he will give no guarantees, but straight percentages; that if the boxers cannot draw the money they have no right to guarantee.

Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, who put up a handsome new clubhouse in Philadelphia, has been obliged to close up because of the high prices demanded by boxers and the inability to make anything under existing conditions. Boxers like McFarland, Wolgast, Moran and Knockout Brown, have been annexing all the coin, while the others—and many of them good ones—have been getting the crumbs. When the boxers succeed in putting the promoters and clubs out of business goodbye to their soft money, for it sure is soft money they get where the limited round bouts are held and no decisions given. And what boxer could go out and earn half or quarter the money he gets for the short-round bouts? If the boxers want to keep the game going they had better get together and assist the promoters by working on reasonable terms instead of trying to hog it all and killing the sport.

Pro and Con.

M'GREEVY TALKS ABOUT INSULTERS.

Says It's Up to Club Owners to Preserve Order.

Umpires Don't Care What Crowds Call Them.

Berry and Hogan Letting Well Enough Alone.

The question as to whether a bunch of spectators has a legal or moral right to blaspheme an umpire in a ball yard and not do the same to a bum actor in a show shop was probably settled years ago in the minds of all common-sense persons, but the common run of humanity still assumes its alleged right to keep the question open by ignoring it.

It may be for years and it may be forever before the fans at a ball game will acquire the brains to realize that an umpire is not perfect on anything, but just at present there does not appear to be any chance for improvement.

A movement has been started in the East to expel rabid, brainless fans from the ball parks who use insulting and vulgar language to a ball player or an umpire and it may be possible that the wave of reform will reach the Coast. Sooner or later something will have to be done.

Dozens of players are injured every season by hoodlums throwing bottles and rocks in the usual rough way of showing anger over a decision, while thousands of men trying to make an honest living at the great American game are abused and cursed and villified as if they were some sort of fiendish criminals instead of men engaged in an honorable business and with wives and families depending on their efforts.

Owing to their helplessness in the matter of numbers ball players have come to take these insults from the bleachers as a part of a rough-neck visitation, but the time must soon come when the club owners and managers must take some action toward a quick and forcible expulsion from the grounds of all those persons who seem to pay 25 cents for the privilege of insulting someone. The increasing number of women and girls that are now going to the games demands that something be done to remedy things, for it seems impossible to breed a higher class of citizenship or rather to get the higher class out to the ball games.

The local ball magnates in this city and Umpire McGreevy himself seem to have slightly different views on this subject, but these opinions will certainly be interesting to the better class of fans not in favor of bad language and profanity at a ball game. Just read some of these thoughts:

BY UMPIRE GENE M'GREEVY.

It's up to the club owners and not the umpires to preserve order in the ball grounds of the league. The umpires have really nothing to do with it. According to the instructions of the president of the league the umpires can order any abusive spectator from the grounds and if necessary, call the police to have him thrown out, but I do not believe any umpire in the Coast League ever thought of doing such a thing.

I sometimes think that some of the fans pay their money for the privilege of going out and roasting some ball player or the umpire, for many of them do this very thing. You can't stop them very well. As a matter of fact, few of us umpires notice the roasting we receive, but the president of the league puts it up to them to see that no one uses vulgar or profane language that would be heard by ladies present. All persons using such language should be put out of the ball park.

I do not see any reason why the umpires should take the lead in this matter. It should be the duty of the club owners to eject any obnoxious characters, for the umpires have all they can attend to in handling the players. The umpire is in a ball game for the express purpose of running the game and not the spectators and it would be foolish for us to try and make the fans behave.

BY HENRY BERRY.

Of course we will look out for this proposition of making the fans behave themselves. There has been little actual complaint to us about it so far and for this reason I do not think we are called upon to act. It will be time enough to attend to the matter when the occasion arises.

BY HAPPY HOGAN.

We can't stop that business, for the fans go out there to the ball parks and pay their money. They probably have a right to do what they please. Of course, it is bad business to have inconsiderate fans roast either umpires or players, for it does no good, but I don't see why we should try to stop it. We have been very lucky in this league and I venture to say that there is less rowdyness in this league than in any other with the population. The spectators are kept quiet at theaters and concerts, but I don't see how you could do this very well at a ball game.

BY WALTER M'CREDIE.

Of course, something should be done to prevent unwarranted assaults by the fans on the players and the

GERMAN GYMNASTIC WORK HAS FOR OBJECT ALL-AROUND DEVELOPMENT.

BY DR. KARL F. ROSS.

Director of Physical Exercises, Sixth Turnfest of the Pacific Circuit.

T of gymnastics often causes wonare included in the German system HE large variety of exercises that derment among those who are not familiar with our sports. The reason for the large variety is that we endeavor to develop all sides of the physical nature of the pupil.

We only practice such exercises as are of physiological and educational value and meet the demands of the pupil. The delicate pupil gets just the exercise that will strengthen him and give him life and energy, while the robust, bubbling over with life and vigor, finds an excellent means of utilizing his surplus energy in a manner most beneficial and gratifying.

The German system of gymnastics is so manifold that monotony never enters a German gymnasium. Whether a pupil is young or old, male or female, we have such an abundance of appropriate material at our command that our exercises are ever interesting.

Physical exercise is primarily muscular action, but the more complicated the exercise the greater are the demands upon the nervous system. Hence physical exercise is impossible without a defined amount of mental exercise. Every contraction of muscle implies its share of volition and nerve impulse.

Some of our calisthenic exercises combined with classic dancing steps are the highest type of exercise requiring independence of movement and perfect co-ordination. Upon the circulatory system, including its pumping station, the heart, physical exercise has a pronounced effect. Every movement produces combustion and this causes carbon dioxide formation.

In order to replace the carbon dioxide by pure oxygen, the respiratory as well as the circulatory systems are called upon to functionate more rapidly. We breathe deeper, the heart beats faster, and perspiration sets in. If physical exercise is done to excess, the heart muscles weaken and dilate, causing irreparable damage. This is why we never tolerate violent or excessive training.

Since muscles are attached to bones, every muscular exercise is also exercise for the bones and joints. This promotes nutrition of the bones, rendering the bone substance flexible and highly resistant.

Exercise incites all vital organs to increased activity, fatigue and languor are cast off, and nervous headaches fly to parts unknown. It is highly rejuvenating, and an unlimited source of health, happiness and contentment.

TURNVEREIN GERMANIA FRAMES UP SCHUETZENFEST PROGRAMME.

ARRANGING a programme and drafting the necessary rules to keep a jovial crowd of several dozen Germans from shooting the wrong target or perforating each other may seem the simplest of work, but the dignity of Schuetzen target drilling is heavy at all times, and the maintenance thereof at concert pitch is no small job.

The Teutons take their sports as seriously as they take their steins; everything has to be done according to the rules set and provided for such cases. This entails a seance of the midnight oil order; and when some $500 worth of trophies of a merchandise nature are to be apportioned also, it mean several somebodies have a lot of "thank you" labor thrust upon them.

Seven members of the shooting section of Turnverein Germania who are enthusiastic riflemen were detailed for the conduct of the rifle tournament to be held under the auspices of the organization in Schuetzen Park next Sunday, and that redoubtable veteran knight of the trigger, Chris Krempel, was selected as captain. Joe Singer, Adolf Maas, Frank Huebsch, William A. Frick, Otto Pachmayr, and last, but never least, the inimitable and irrepressible Heinrich Pfirrmann, also serve on the committee.

All riflemen are entitled to compete for the prizes, aggregating $1000 in value, no restrictions being made on guns or sights. The committee invites the attendance and co-operation of all marksmen, hoping to make this event the commencement of a new era in sharpshooting in this section.

The leading competitions will be as follows: Anniversary target, twenty-five cash prizes, from $30 downward; pool shooting, point target. The proceeds will be divided among the number of points made, at 12 m., and 6 p.m.

Numerous special prizes are to be offered.

Shooting is to begin at 8 a.m., sharp, continuing until 6 p.m., with an intermission from 12 to 1 o'clock. The prizes will be awarded at the clubhouse after firing ceases.

Firing will be offhand at 200 yards, exclusively, under the latest range rules. Capt. Chris Krempel will act as shooting master, and Joseph Singer will have charge of the range.

Practice Shoot Today.

Target practice at Schuetzen Park today will include the regular mid-monthly shoot of the club, as well as open practice for all marksmen in preparation for the grand prize-shooting festival which occurs next Sunday and for which eighty trophies and cash and merchandise prizes have been provided by the Schuetzen Park Association and its friends. Any sights on any rifle are permitted by the rules, which new conditions are intended to favor the many riflemen who are unaccustomed to strict Schuetzen equipment. All shooting is done at 200 yards, offhand, on the German 25-ring target.

Warren "30"

Back of each Warren car is the eager desire to see that you get your full money's worth of service and enjoyment out of it.

This spirit of service is winning us a host of boosters. People are beginning to appreciate that we are building an unusually good car—also, that we are looking after our customers in an unusually careful, painstaking sort of a way.

Maybe you have noticed that Warren owners are courteously and frequently urged to "bring your car in for adjustment whenever necessary." Some people never bring their cars in—they don't find it necessary—others, who may not be so experienced, or don't know about things mechanical, aid themselves by bringing their cars in to be looked over frequently—not because they need it—but, because it's better to be safe than sorry—and the service is theirs for the asking.

The Warren way is to do many things for a few customers—not a few things for many customers—we would rather be the best than the largest.

If you are interested, get the Warren catalogs—showing all styles of cars, or better still, Phone Broadway 3020 or A4125, and arrange for a demonstration.

The Burkhard-Crippen Motor Car Company, agents for the Lexington cars, report deliveries of "40" touring cars to Mrs. Josephine Gavagan, Mrs. Isaac Barman and Mrs. H. F. Harding. They have sold, during the past week, "40" touring cars to E. J. Manning and George W. Harding. C. Butterfield, who recently purchased a seven-passenger Lexington touring car and left at once for Bakersfield and the oil fields, has returned after a remarkably perfect trip. Dr. George Kubler of Berlin, Germany, and A. C. Clark, a banker from Telluride, Colo., who purchased three oil properties from Butterfield, and others were loud in their praise of the beautiful scenery and magnificent touring possibilities of Southern California. Dr. Kubler says that the continent of Europe has nothing so grand, while Mr. Clark is positive that Colorado does not compare with it. The party toured around through Paso Robles and down the coast route.

1912 MERCER

Built by A. Roebling's Sons Company of Trenton, New Jersey, the largest Steel Structural Manufacturers in the world.

The Sensational Performance of the TWO MERCER RUNABOUTS in the 500 MILE INDIANAPOLIS RACE proved conclusively that specially built machines with large motors are not essential to great speed. Both MERCERS in this race had a bore and stroke of 4 31/8x5 inches with a piston displacement of only 300 cubic inches.

Both MERCERS Averaged Over 67 Miles Per Hour and Finished in Perfect Condition

No mechanical work was done on either car and but one tire blown in the entire race.

No car in the world has in so short a time, so strongly impressed the public with its consistency, its endurance and its absolute reliability as the MERCER.

Replying to yours of the 31st, I have to say that my experience with the Oakland has been very satisfactory. The use I give a car is of the hardest. People say I'm a hard man on a car, and the fact that I have my tenth auto should be conclusive. I have been using the Oakland about a year. I can speak especially of the very courteous treatment awarded me.

RACQUETERS TO PLAY AT VENICE.

Annual Tennis Tourney to Begin Thursday.

Many Entries Received for Country Club Event.

Bundy Is After Montgomery Challenge Cup.

Many of the best tennis players will again get into action the latter part of this week. The Venice Country Club is to pull off its sixth annual tourney—the first big court affair of the season. Nearly all the southern players who do not compete in the coast championships at Santa Cruz are to appear on the Venice courts and the tourney promises to furnish the devotees of the game with plenty of diversion.

Play is to begin Thursday morning and will conclude Saturday afternoon. The four cement courts are in good shape and all will be used in running off the tourney. Mrs. B. O. Bruce, Miss Stickrod and Miss Alice Scott are among the women players who are to compete. May Sutton and Mary Browne will be playing at Santa Cruz, so of course will not compete at Venice.

With the exception of Nat Browne, who is to play at Santa Cruz, practically all the leading local racquet wielders are to enter. Tom Bundy, Gerald Young, Winnie Mace, Clifton Herd, Earle Weller, Claude Wayne, Bob Variel, Jack Duncan, "Trow" Hendrick, Hal Braly, Ward Dawson, Ralph Noble, E. Galusha and Paul Lowry are expected to play. The tourney will be the only one to occur before the Pacific Coast doubles championships at Long Beach, July 4, and will be welcomed by the men as an opportunity to tune up for the big event.

Tom Bundy is in line to capture the Montgomery challenge cup as a permanent possession. He already has two legs on it and only needs another to turn the trick. Last year Melville Long won the cup. In the two preceding years Bundy won it. Long and McLoughlin have been invited to play at Venice but it is probable that they will play at Santa Cruz instead. In the event of neither of them coming South it looks as if Bundy would take the trophy, unless Mace does.

The events to be held are men's open singles, women's special singles, junior singles, men's open doubles, mixed doubles and consolation singles. As the only ladies' event is the special singles for players who have never won in an open tournament, Mrs. Bruce will not be a competitor. However, she is slated to play in an exhibition match Saturday.

The junior singles usually furnish excitement. In this division at Venice several of the leading local players got their start. Winnie Mace, twice Southern California champion, Ward Dawson, Kenneth Newell of U.S.C., and Clifton Herd are among the boys who broke into open tournaments via the junior singles route.

CARE IN MANUFACTURE.

"Next to design nothing can be of more importance in the building of a successful truck than care in its manufacture. It is a mistake to suppose that a classy design is of no particular importance, or that the utmost attention to details does not count," said Vincent Link, chief engineer of the Universal Truck Company of Detroit. "Aside from the mechanical advantage of these items from the standpoint of durability the purchaser likes to see classy workmanship and attention to every detail. Noise must be eliminated when possible, vibration reduced, forgings and castings made with some idea as to looks, not that this necessarily has a direct bearing upon the durability of the truck, but because it reflects the care with which the whole car is produced."

BACK UP RADIATOR.

Much interest in motor truck designing is centered around the test of the radiator-back-of-the-motor type of construction for truck use recently made by Chief Engineer Link of the Universal Motor Truck Company of Detroit.

The test comprised a ten mile run with seven thousand pound load on a standard three ton chassis out into the country through mud axle deep with gears set in second speed. The test was a severe one, and although Mr. Link has always had faith in the radiator-back-of-the-motor principle, yet he is now doubly satisfied that the Sirocco type of fan used on the Universal will throw a sufficient draft of air into the radiator to amply cool it under the most trying conditions.

Senor Jose Rivera,

father of Joe Rivers, featherweight champion boxer of the Coast. The old man was a champion runner in his younger days.

Castilians All.

FATHER OF RIVERS WAS CHAMPION RUNNER OF PIONEER CALIFORNIA.

BY HILDA WESTREM WHEELER.

WHILE IT IS always interesting to meet an old-timer, I found Senor Jose Rivera, father of Joe Rivers, the fighter, particularly so, as he was born and raised in Los Angeles and was a well-known athlete in his younger days. It was really wonderful to hear him tell of his first recollection of the "City of Angels," when it was less than a small pueblo and consisted of about a dozen adobe houses.

To find the old gentleman I had to leave busy Broadway and go down into the old part of the city known as the Latin quarter. Although Senor Rivera is in ill health at the present time, I found him still possessed of a firm handshake and the inherent Castilian pride in things of the past.

Speaking of sports, for instance, he mentioned with pardonable pride his own feats as a runner, which stood alone at that time, and he held many records and won many medals before he retired, undefeated. He still has his running shoes with the oil-tempered spikes, which have been laid on the shelf for more than thirty years, and no wonder he keeps them, as they served him when he sprinted 100 yards, standing start, in the remarkable time of nine and one-half seconds, and also when he made a quarter of a mile in forty-nine and three-fourths seconds.

This, no doubt, explains where young Joe gets his speedy footwork.

Senor Rivera was born on San Fernando street, which was then known as Calle Principal, and his life here was typical of the times. He is a man of good education, having attended the old Chilean school on Calle Principal for fifteen years, and when he found himself the master of [illegible] languages, French, Latin, Spanish and English, he took a position in the school as teacher.

From that regular occupation it was easy to fall back on his skill as a penman, and as an entertainer and many were the parties at the old Pico House that were enlivened by his guitar and violin playing, and his instrument, an old Hoff of fine tone, is still in his possession, a cherished link in the chain of an eventful life.

The Senor is an inveterate reader of the papers, especially The Times pink, which enables him to keep posted on what the public thinks of his youngest son, Joe, the latest California aspirant to pugilistic championship honors, and in referring to the press notices, he took exception to the frequent allusions to the boy as a Mexican.

The fact of the matter is that Los Angeles has seen four generations of the old Rivera family, where as far back as 1825 they were all native sons and daughters, their ancestors having previously left the mother country of Spain, only to stop over at Sinalao, Mex., en route to sunny California. So the family is undoubtedly Castilian. But Ybarra, the original Spanish name, however, seems to have gone through an evolution—Ybarra, Rivera, Rivers.

Having watched the advent of the broncho, stage coach, steam cars, cable cars, electric cars, automobiles and aeroplanes, and the change of popular fancy from such sports as cock fights, chicken pulls, lassoing contests and other sports which have passed with the early days, to the scientific and up-to-date ones of baseball, prizefights and the various tournament games, Senor Rivera is now looking forward to leaving the old home where box cars block the view, to pass his declinig days in the cheerful bungalow near Elysian Park which his son Joe is building.

RACING IS DOOMED.

a sport which, if properly conducted, would rank with the greatest in the world. It is too late for a house-cleaning. All the disinfecting known to modern science cannot now save automobile track racing.

NO LONGER USEFUL.

Racing has outlived its usefulness to the industry. No longer can it be said truthfully that racing improves the breed of the motor car. Contests in which speed and endurance proclaimed the victor, played a tremendous part in the progress and development of the near-perfect car of today.

But the task is all finished. Cars have been produced that are capable of far greater speed than can be utilized either legally or safely. These cars are capable of sustaining that speed for a much longer period than any owner will ever run them. Racing did much to produce and hasten these results.

The promoters whose palms itch for the gate receipts may point out that the great death rate among aviators is essential to the development of the science of aerial navigation. It may be true now, but it will not be the case five or ten years from now. The automobile long since passed that fatal period.

The man who wins the most automobile races today is the man who is best at the tricks of the trade and can "doctor" his car most effectively.

I used to stand aghast at the stories I heard of "doping" horses when I essayed to double my season's earnings by outguessing the bookmakers on the winter tracks. But the average driver of the racing cars can give the "pharmaceutical specialists" of the race horse game all kinds of pointers.

The manufacturer who wants to race strictly stock cars in order to get a line on their weaknesses, soon finds he cannot compete successfully against those who are "slipping over" a few things on the technical committee or forcing the promoter to schedule non-stock classifications.

Racing was conducted on a high plane in Europe, but even there it died a natural death two years ago. What chance has it in this country, conducted as it is, by professional promoters?

REALLY RETIRES.

Ray Harroun, winner of the $25,000 Indianapolis race, has really retired from the game for good and all. Harroun may exhibit his "wasp" at some of the larger State fairs and allow the megaphone artists to eulogize him during the introduction ceremonies, but there is no more real racing for the clever Arab.

I ran across him a few days ago in Chicago and suggested that he ought to keep right at it and clean them all up, again. I pointed out the rare chance for the press agent to grind out "spine-chilling," "nerve-tingling," "death-inviting," and other crimson-tinted adjectives, when describing his driving.

"No more of that hero stuff for mine," he replied. "Along about 1970 I want the lecturer on the aeroplane rubber-neck cars to point out an old guy with a gray beard six feet long and say, 'That's Uncle Ray Harroun, he's the oldest man in the State.' "

Harroun got a pretty good idea of the danger of the game when he grape-shotted the concrete wall around the Indianapolis speedway with a racing car, while going ninety miles an hour a year ago. It took them a week to fix up the wall.

THEY COST MONEY.

Every few days a new story comes to me about the construction of a few half-million-dollar speedways. Speedway building will never be a national pastime.

The greatest speedway in the world, notwithstanding the modest claims of the Indianapolis promoters, is the 3¼ miles course at Brooklands, near London, England. It cost over $1,000,000 to build and much more to conduct before the builders learned that it would never pay expenses. The surface is of cement, which cracked badly after the first winter.

The Indianapolis speedway cost originally about $200,000. But the owners soon realized that the surface of crushed stone and tar would never do. With the completion of the brick surface and concrete retaining wall, the cost rose to $750,000.

Aside from one meet in 1910 and the $25,000 race, it is conceded by well-posted racing enthusiasts that the Hoosier plant never made more than enough to pay expenses.

The Los Angeles Motordrome, with its circular board surface, one mile in circumference, cost $60,000, and while there is no doubt in the minds of the experts that this is the best type of track for racing, many thousand dollars were lost in the promotion of meets since the opening a little over a year ago.

The progressive city of Atlanta, Georgia, built a speedway, two miles around, with a surface of Augusta gravel and oil. One meet in 1910 made a little money. The following meets lost a great deal more than was made on the first. It is reported that the meet held last November ended with a deficit of $30,000.

Amateurish management, to my mind, was the main cause of Atlanta's failure. A ton of money must have been lost in the Long Island motor parkway, but I don't know the details.

That is the history of speedway building in America and Europe. "Get-rich-quick" Wallingford says that New York is the greatest market for gold bricks in the world. But the speedway builders never stung any of the Broadway crowd with stock in a New York speedway.

Automobile racing is too uncertain and too often a frost from a competitive standpoint to ever be a great sport. The favorite expression of the auto-race-goer as he flies out the gate is "stung again." The public will bite at a well-advertised meet now and then, but if surfeited, the next time the crowd will be small.

I always gave them the best I had in stock and always threw in a few skids as I went into and came out of the turns, but there were many times when I was almost ashamed to take the money.

AUTO IS FIXTURE.

How long will it be before the innkeepers and garage owners in the villages begin to regard the motorist as a fixture and recurring customer, due the best treatment in both service and price, and not an easy mark to be gouged?

It seems that the appearance of a begoggled and dust-covered person is the sign, in most stopping places, for every one to figure how the stranger can be given the least possible for the most money. Of course, there are exceptions, but when on a tour one usually finds enough offenders to make it an unpleasant feature of an otherwise delightful trip.

No wonder the foreign motorist boasts of the many comfortable inns with excellent food and drink, which are to be found every few miles along the roads on the continent.

Crags carries no liquor license. Members are free to bring a bottle or so in their machines if they wish, but as a matter of fact the big Mexican olla of icy spring water, with its attendant gourd dipperful does the only rushing business in the thirst-quenching line. The olla hangs in the veranda, and is the goal for the returning pedestrians who have walked to the "great oak" or climbed the ladder and cliff below the house.

Another attraction is the new cement swimming pool. This slopes from a depth of four to twelve feet, and there is a springboard for the divers. I know of at least one lady in the club who dives beautifully.

The members entertain with one house party after another. Seldom is there a vacant room. It is delightful here in the mountains in nearly all seasons. This spring the wild flowers have been wonderful. Think of tangles of wild roses, ferns, mariposas, poppies—every kind of wild flower California boasts grows here. There are acres of tiger lilies; some of them grow nine feet tall and have twenty-eight blossoms on a single stalk. And somebody discovered three of that rare quarry of the botanist, the yellow mariposa lily.

The Crags has been in existence more than a year, now, and Mr. Lombard's dream, with the aid of his friends, has become a happy reality to the sixty members, their families and their favored friends.

COUNTRY CLUB GOSSIP.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

Annandale Country Club.

Now that the Morris cup competitions are over this club is able to devote its attention to more sociable matters.

A directors' meeting was convened last week to consider the matter of July 4 celebrations and a thoroughly trustworthy Entertainment Committee has been selected.

Announcement has been made that a general field day will be held, at which pretty nearly every known sport excepting perhaps kites and marbles, will be played. They did not say aeroplanes but their important reticence certainly implied them.

At all events there are to be golf and tennis tournaments and all sorts of athletic sports, so those members who do not shine on the links or with the racquet will now have an opportunity to show us what they can do, say, somersaults or tight ropes. The most elaborate preparations are being made for refreshments in a style befitting their exalted stations in life, and hosts and hostesses for luncheons, teas and dinners are vieing with each other to secure tables for the great day.

Annandale boasts many illustrious members, including such great men as John S. Cravens of Pasadena, Adolphus Busch, E. H. Strafford, etc. The latter is said to be making arrangements for a large party on July 4. He was one of the founders of the club and built his home as near to it as possible. Charles N. Post, the newly-elected president (the Pasadena capitalist,) will also be entertaining on a sumptuous scale.

The San Gabriel Country Club.

Miss Edith Rowan's tennis party on Wednesday was a great success. She entertained a large number of guests at a merry luncheon on the large porches afterwards and there was a marked reluctance to break up so happy an event.

On Friday J. Myers also gave a tennis party for men, which was followed in the evening by a bachelor dinner, showing considerable discernment of taste. Mr. Mannering was, I noticed, one of the guests.

Today, Sunday, the golfers are having a spirited match against bogey, in which a large number of members are taking part. During the week Messrs. Conde Jones, F. B. Silverwood and C. J. Bannister were among those earnest people who believe that practice makes perfect, and they were keeping their scores very industriously.

Mrs. J. V. Eliot, Miss Alice Tobey and Mrs. Kohler have all been over the links several times this week, in view of competing for the Craft Higgins cup for women. This is the equivalent of the Tom Morris cup, for which the men competed last week.

Work begins on the new links next week and the keenest interest is being evinced. An eighteen-hole course seemed all that was necessary to make the San Gabriel Club as nearly perfect as it is allowed mere country clubs to be.

July 4 is to be a field day at this club also, tennis and golf tournaments being the principal attractions, followed by the usual delightful luncheons and dinner parties. Miss Fanny Shoemaker will again have charge of the tennis, and M. H. M. Woodcock of the golf. There is talk of introducing some athletic sports, but no decisions upon this point have been arrived at.

There is to be a club dinner dance on Saturday, the 24th, and if it is anything like the last it will certainly be a very jolly affair.

Los Angeles Country Club.

The Los Angeles club has been Morris cupping it all the week, too, and little else was talked or thought of. It hardly seemed decent to try to discuss anything else.

Now, however, it is hoped that the July 4 plans will be proceeded with. I am told the committee is open to suggestions for a really novel entertainment, in which case I shall plunge into a recommendation for a really-truly gymkhana. A gymkhana is one of the nicest things on earth, for it includes something to please everybody and all amusing.

A gymkhana is an Anglo-Indian institution. It is generally a large garden party with everybody in their prettiest clothes, plenty of nice things to eat and drink, and a chance for every one to show off in their particular line.

Dressing up is an important part of a gymkhana. One plan is to have all sorts of clothes in piles somewhere. Then start a race from somewhere else, the runners having to select a pile, dress up in it and get back to the starting point. Prizes for the three first best, best meaning not only the fastest, but the best dressed. The clothes may be quite assorted, and wigs and cast-off toupees are permissible.

Then there are hat trimming competitions for men, obstacle races for women, cooking exhibitions for men, first aid to the injured for women (they can select their own victims,) and so forth. All this, besides the ordinary tennis and golf. Golf, however, should be played with, say, tennis balls, and tennis with golf or footballs. In fact, all the topsy-turvy fun of the fair, and everybody young again.

Then there should be cocoanut shies, Aunt Sallys, and of course, if donkey rides can be managed as well, joy is complete. Dignity has to be entirely taboo, needless to say.

But Norman Macbeth has been to India and I expect he will tell them all about it, if their yearnings are that way.

The Chanslor and Lyon Company has just received a shipment of unique radiator caps. These come in the shape of ornaments of all kinds and are growing in popularity.

CLUBS TO MEET IN FIRST RACE.

South Coast and Sunset in Dual Contest.

Mah-pe and Winsome Match Off Long Beach.

Both Boats Are Prepared for Fast Work.

BY BERT S. COLEMAN.

Keen interest has been aroused among the members of the South Coast Yacht Club and the Sunset Yacht Club over the two leading contestants in the race for the Commodore's cup off Long Beach this afternoon, held under the auspices of the Sunset club.

This will be the initial sporting event of the Long Beach Club for the season, and while there are eight entries, the real contest is between Morgan Adams's big sloop, Mah-pe, and Frank Hay's big yawl, Winsome. These two boats are the fastest in the fleet of both clubs.

The Mah-pe's owner belongs to both clubs and is eligible to sail under the rules of either club. Frank Hay is a member only of the Sunset Club. Consequently, the two boats represent different clubs and for this reason each is out to trim the other at all cost.

The Mah-pe has been placed in first-class condition and is sailing better this year than ever before. Morgan Adams will sail the craft with his crew of college men who have been with him for more than a year. The big boat is being handled better than ever before and South Coasters are confidently expecting him to walk off with the first contest for the cup presented by Commodore A. J. Mitchell.

Frank Hay's boat has been undergoing preparations for the race all week and is in the best trim she has ever been since she was launched. She came off the ways at Wilmington yesterday after her bottom had been painted with Phospher bronze, a composition which helped Joe Fellows to win the motorboat race around the island a week ago. This material, while preserving the wood from sea worms, gives such a slippery surface that it counts for considerable in doing away with friction in the water.

The Winsome will be sailed by her owner and members of his crew, who have sailed in many a race with the Arrow, formerly owned by Hay. The latter is sparing no pains to win the event and promises to give Adams the race of his life.

The other entries in the contest are the Arrow, owned by Fritz Overton; the Katrina, owned by Collins and Benjamin; the Venus, owned by Johnnie Farnum; the Rutie B, owned by W. A. Story; the Diana, owned by Richard Bixby and Roger Roe; and the Enchantress, owned by J. W. Patterson. The race will be sailed under a rule devised by A. J. Mitchell and on the performance of the boats during this race will be based the handicaps to be applied during the rest of the season's racing by the Sunset Club.

Commodore Mitchell, who owns the Yankee Girl and the sloop Columbine, will use both boats for judges of the race and friends. He is not racing either, because the event is for a cup presented by himself. The commodore is noted for his modesty and the extent of his wealth.

The race will commence from a point in front of the Virginia Hotel and will finish at the same point, where it may be viewed by thousands of Long Beach people and visitors at the resort.

Today will be devoted to social sailing parties by the South Coast Club members. They held a clam bake at the club on San Pedro Heights yesterday afternoon, and a large party attended the dance held last night.

Many of the boats will sail to Long Beach and witness the race to be held there this afternoon. The South Coast fleet will hold their next race on Saturday and Sunday, June 24 and 25, around Santa Barbara Island, for a handsome cup presented by Harry McFarland.

CHAMPION BOY SPORTSMAN.

BY LITTLE JACK WHEELER.

I HAVE been in some funny places for a chap of my age, and I was so little when I first started traveling that my mamma had to go along to look after me, and so I don't remember much about it, only from the pictures I had taken in the snow, on boats and trains, in hotels and parks. Gee, don't I wish that I was as big then as I am now—think of the sport it must have been to fish on all them big lakes and rivers up North where I was once!

Fishing is best for little boys 'cause when you hunt you got to shoot straight and everything, but when you fish you just drop your line in the water and pretty soon if you just hold your breaf and be real still a big fish comes snooping around and you catch him.

A fishing pole isn't very heavy for a husky boy like me who is used to roughing it, but a gun, o-oh my, I guess I have to grow some 'fore I can ever shoot any big bears or anything. On Sunday when we go on the "hiking trip," that's most fun of all. Whatever a hiking trip means I don't know, 'less it means to walk and walk and carry a lot of things to eat, good things like coffee and meat and potatoes. I like them potatoes they bake in the coals, only they get you so black, and I always can have coffee in the mountains as it is hot and good for me then.

Course, I couldn't begin to walk all that long way we go up them pretty canyons, so my papa he carries me on top of his pack and it's lots better than riding on a hobby horse or even on those moving horses in the merry-go-'round.

When we get to the real steep places I can't put my arms around his neck as I can on the level, 'cause I choke him when I hold on tight, so I have to hold on to his hair, and I am glad he isn't bald-headed like some mens are.

I guess I must be a load, 'cause he says that I weigh fifty pounds when we start and 'bout 100 pounds when we come back.

I'm mighty glad that I am getting bigger and stronger so I can help when we make camp. Even now I can do lots of things. I can carry water and wood and help put sand on the fire when we get ready to go home.

I haven't met any other little boys riding on their papa's back the way I do, but then my papa he says I am his "pal."

He says: "A man who likes to hunt and fish and gets close to nature (once in a while) is nearly always a good scout and that's what he wants me to be; just a good scout.

GET GOOD START.

"It is worth a great deal in beginning any business to be unhampered. A good start is everything," said C. H. Haberkorn, president of the Universal Motor Truck Company of Detroit, Mich. "We have a clean slate, no pleasure car traditions or practices. Our factory is new; our machinery and equipment is of the latest type, and we are prepared to turn out the best trucks that money can make."

At Santa Monica.

CRICKET MATCHES OF IMPORTANCE.

Women to Play the Men Next Saturday.

Big Carnival Planned for the Fourth of July.

Married and Single Teams to Be Opposed.

BY MARSHALL D. TAYLOR.

The Santa Monica Cricket Club is arranging four important matches to meet the requirements of its large membership. The ladies will play the men's first eleven Saturday; on July 4 a cricket carnival is to be held, in which past and present members will participate; on July 15 San Diego comes north to play the return match and on a date to be fixed the "singles" will play the "married" members.

Great preparations are being made for the past and present match. C. C. LeBas has been asked to captain one side. The other side will, in all probability be under the guidance of Joseph Scott. Letters have been sent to the following members, other than the regular players, as have signified their intention of participating, in one way or another, in this match: Joseph Scott, Iva Thomas, Alex Downs, C. Proctor, R. H. Larritt, D. Young of Duarte, A. Evans, C. C. LeBas, C. White Mortimer, Capt. Nicholson, A. C. May, Dr. Chalmers Francis, W. Wade. Among the regular players will be the following: J. F. W. Allen, P. J. Higgins, F. C. Stocker, G. H. Griffith, P. J. Tomkins, W. Hunt, A. R. Yorston, P. J. Dudley, W. Dudley, Mayor T. D. Dudley, W. G. Cochrane, H. F. Elliot, E. H. Wilkes, D. B. Jamieson, A. R. Mitchell, H. Lewis, C. G. Cotton, Capt. Leslie Peacocke, A. H. Collins, H. F. Fletcher.

Lunch will be served on the old polo grounds at 12:30 o'clock. During the afternoon a band will play appropriate airs. The ladies of the club will serve tea, after which speeches will be given about cricket and British sports in general in Southern California.

BIG UNDERTAKING.

This is the first time in the history of cricket in Southern California that such a big undertaking has ever been promoted. The Santa Monica cricketers have always undertaken big things cessful finish. They never do things cessful finish. They neved do things by halves. The beach club, with an ever-increasing membership, is stronger than it has ever been. A meeting is to be held in the near future to decide as to the ways and means of sending a team to San Francisco to play the northern clubs.

The Frankford cricket players, who are due to the Pacific Coast in September, have been written to with a view to having them come South to play Santa Monica, as they have a good team and are worthy to cross bats with the "All Stars," who have an unbeaten record.

The "married vs. single" match is very even on paper, although the singles may carry the day. The line-up of these two teams will be as follows:

Married—P. J. Higgins, W. Hunt, P. J. Dudley, W. G. Cochrane, H. F. Elliot, E. H. Wilkes, Capt. Peacocke, C. C. LeBas, Capt. Nicholson, Joseph Scott, D. Young.

Singles—J. F. W. Allen, F. C. Stocker, G. H. Griffith, P. J. Tomkins, A. R. Yorston, D. B. Jamieson, A. R. Mitchell, C. G. Cotton, A. H. Collins, H. F. Fletcher, H. Lewis.

Practice games are held every Sunday at Santa Monica. These are pick-up games and are productive of a good afternoon's sport.

HOW TO SELL MOTOR TRUCKS.

Pleasure Car Salesman May Not be Just the Man to Successfully Handle Commercial Vehicles.

"Selling commercial cars is a specialty. Pleasure car methods will not always hold good," says F. R. Bump, sales manager of the Universal Motor Truck Company of Detroit.

"There are no fancies to consider, no sentiments to appeal to, no individual members of the family to please. It is a case of figuring dollar and cents saving, and that, too, with a sharp pointed pencil.

"Furthermore, the successful truck salesman must be a student of the transportation problem. He must thoroughly acquaint himself with his prospect's particular trucking difficulties before attempting to show that his individual car will fit the bill.

"I was recently talking on this subject with a large milk dealer who told an incident which illustrates the point well.

"A salesman had approached him with the idea of using an expensive motor vehicle to replace the retail route milk carts. After the overzealous salesman had finished a long story on the great advantage of the commercial car, and had sounded the 'death knell' of the horse, the milk dealer pointed out the weakness of his argument in the fact that a horse has sense enough to follow along from house to house while the driver is peddling the milk from one back door to another. On emerging at the far end of the block the driver finds his horse and cart there waiting while with an automobile he would hav retrace his steps and pick up the tomobile, thus losing valuable time."

HE WIDOW WISE

Verses by Paul West ▾ Drawings by W. H. Loomis

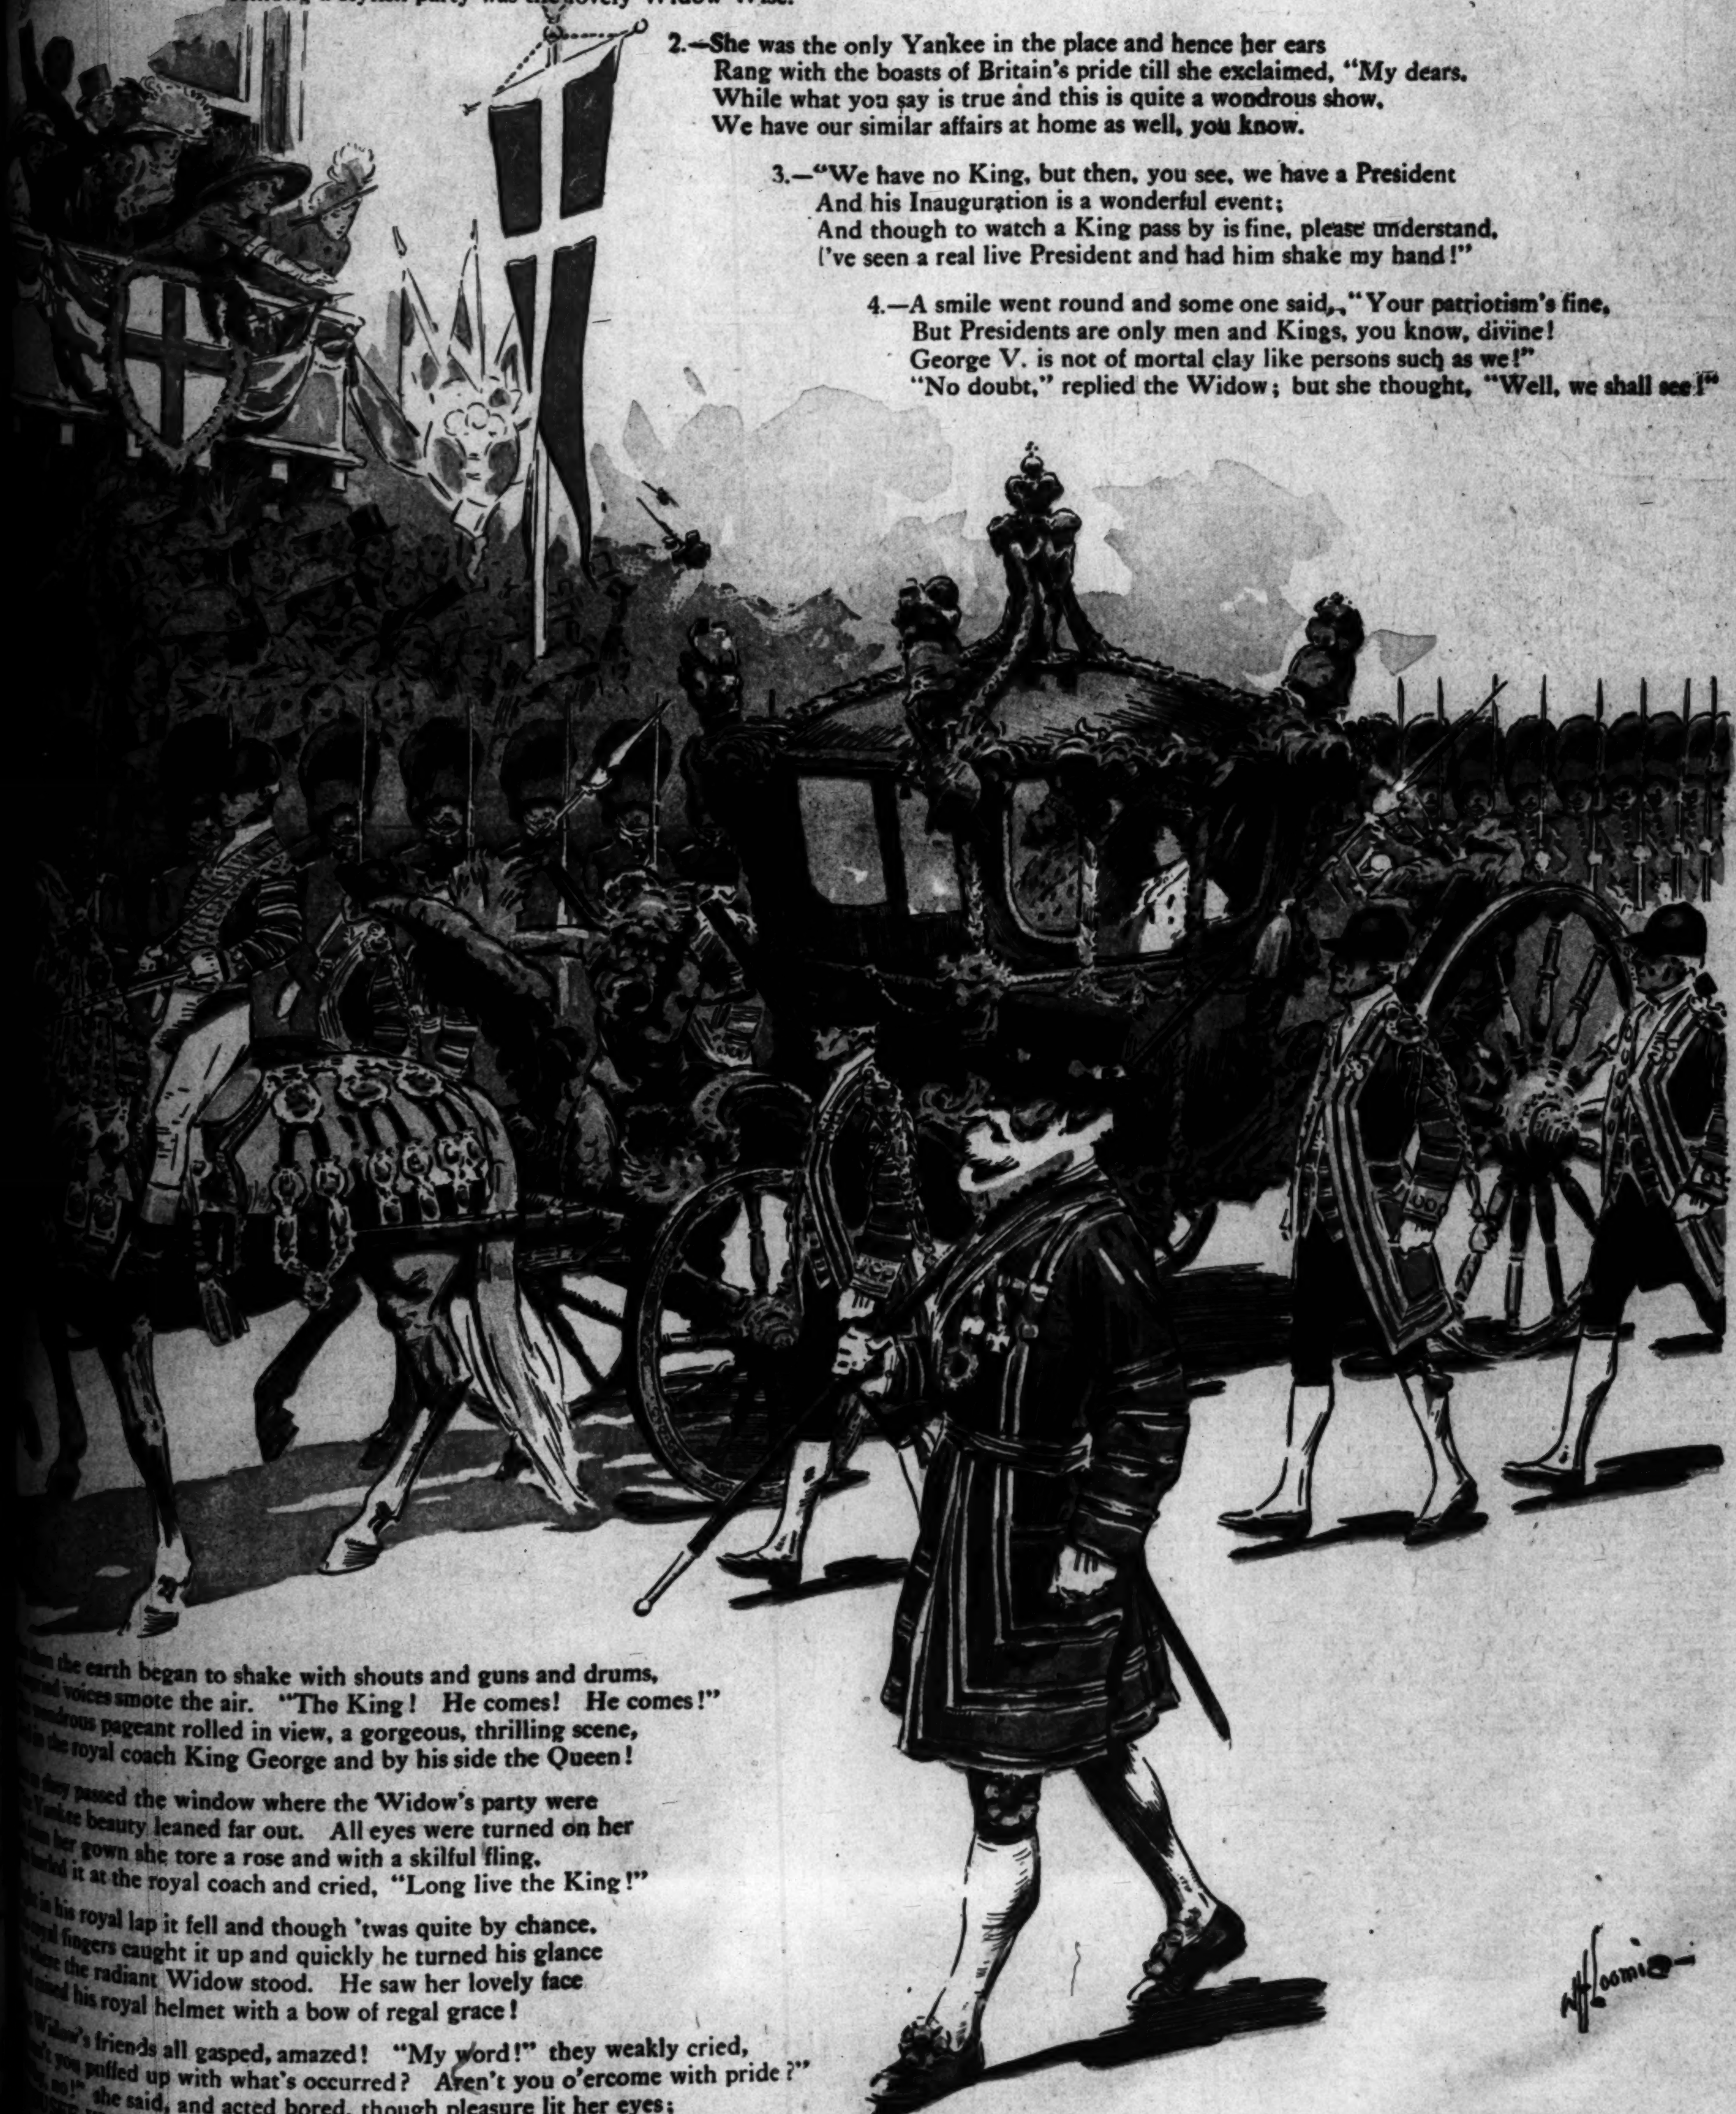
1.—"Long live the King! Long live King George!" 'Twas Coronation Day!
Old London was alive with throngs in wonderful array;
And in a window, there to see the scenes, with eager eyes,
Among a stylish party was the lovely Widow Wise.

2.—She was the only Yankee in the place and hence her ears
Rang with the boasts of Britain's pride till she exclaimed, "My dears,
While what you say is true and this is quite a wondrous show,
We have our similar affairs at home as well, you know.

3.—"We have no King, but then, you see, we have a President
And his Inauguration is a wonderful event;
And though to watch a King pass by is fine, please understand,
I've seen a real live President and had him shake my hand!"

4.—A smile went round and some one said, "Your patriotism's fine,
But Presidents are only men and Kings, you know, divine!
George V. is not of mortal clay like persons such as we!"
"No doubt," replied the Widow; but she thought, "Well, we shall see!"



the earth began to shake with shouts and guns and drums, voices smote the air. "The King! He comes! He comes!"
pageant rolled in view, a gorgeous, thrilling scene, royal coach King George and by his side the Queen!

passed the window where the Widow's party were beauty leaned far out. All eyes were turned on her gown she tore a rose and with a skilful fling, it at the royal coach and cried, "Long live the King!"

his royal lap it fell and though 'twas quite by chance, fingers caught it up and quickly he turned his glance
the radiant Widow stood. He saw her lovely face his royal helmet with a bow of regal grace!

friends all gasped, amazed! "My word!" they weakly cried, puffed up with what's occurred? Aren't you o'ercome with pride?"
she said, and acted bored, though pleasure lit her eyes;
I'VE SHAKEN HANDS WITH TAFT!" exclaimed the Widow Wise.

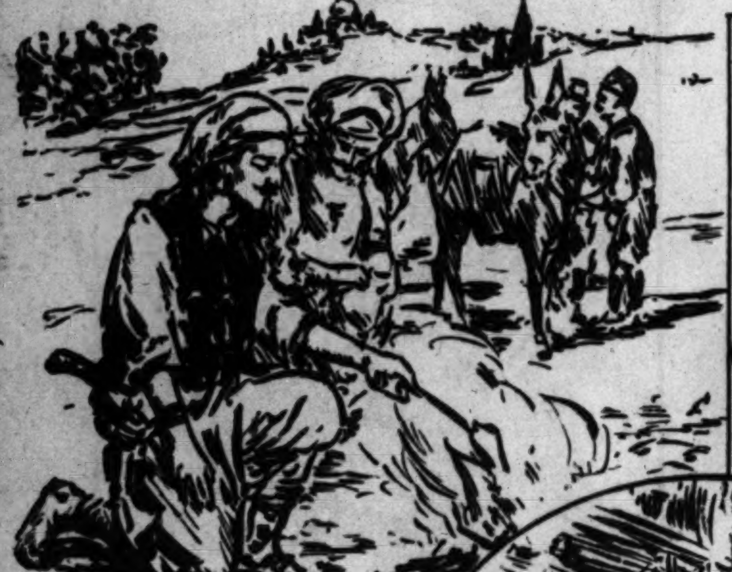
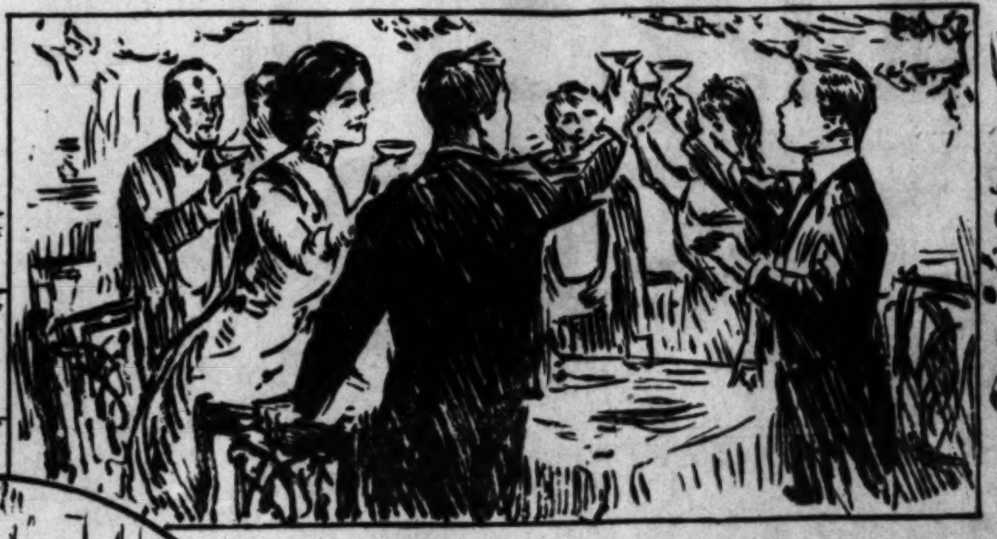
TOAST and the EVOLUTION of the TOASTE

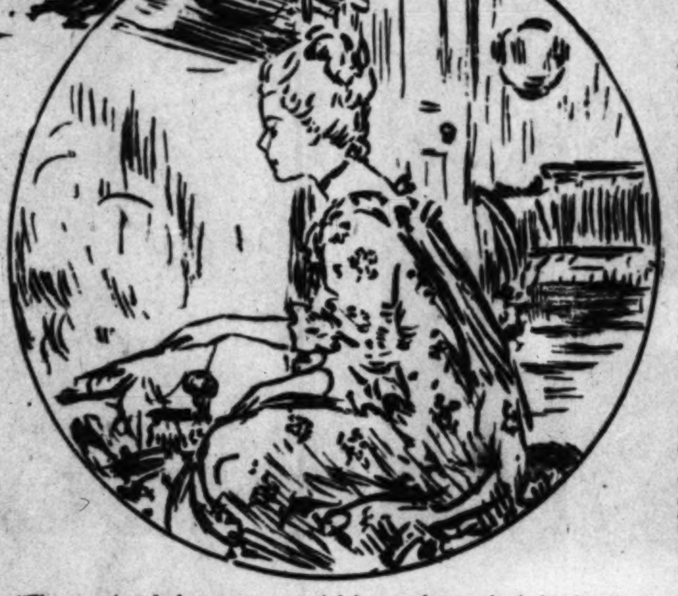


“Syrian muleteers toasted bread over the fire of coals.”



“How many of the scholars at class-day anniversaries know why they are ‘toasts’?”

“The modern electric



“The toasting fork was an essential in our foremother’s kitchen.”

IF THE testimony of the average housewife is to be received as law and gospel, toastmaking and tea-brewing are two of the easiest tasks that fall to her lot.

“Easy as breathing,” she would say. Wiser thinkers—who lead the times, not content just to keep up with them—are calling our attention to the humiliating fact that not one person in twenty knows how to breathe properly.

“But that is another story.”

We have been making toast long enough to have mastered the art. It came like a dash from the far-away past—when I saw the Syrian muleteers tear off portions of the leathery, unleavened bread brought from home in their knapsacks and toast them over the fire of coals kindled upon the desert sands in the lee of their tent—how probable it is that this is what was meant by the “cake baken on the coals” Elijah found at his head with a cruse of water, at awakening from the sleep of exhaustion under the juniper tree. Customs do not change in that oldest of lands, as every traveler will bear me witness.

Toast and toasters were old stories in Shakespeare’s times. We have frequent references to both in his plays. The cooks of the day must have made a better variety of toast than the aforesaid average American cook turns out, for the custom of putting a bit in the bottom of the tankard before pouring in the liquor was established.

“Go, fetch me a quart of sack? Put a toast in it!” orders Falstaff; and a few lines further on repels the suggestion that eggs may be added to the potation. He will have it “simple of itself.” That is, with the toast alone. From a number of the fashionable Tatler, bearing date “June 4, 1709,” we learn the origin of the term “toast,” as applied to a reigning belle or, more widely, to a sentiment uttered by the one offering the “toast” to be drunk. We use the phrases so naturally now that we never bethink us of their origin. Two hundred years ago the Tatler thought it necessary to explain to readers that the “allusion was to the usage of the times of drinking with a toast in the bottom of the glass.”

How many, even of the scholars who offer them at class-day anniversaries, know why they are “toasts”?

What reader of English poetry does not recall the swing and the ring of The Three Troopers as I put that question?

> In each of the cups they dropped a crust,
> And stared at the guests with a frown;
> Then drew their swords and roared for a toast—
> “God send this Crum-well down!”

“Crust” and “crumb” stand for the toast without which posset, ale and sack would not be quite to the Briton’s taste.

The bit of toasted bread in the bottom of tankard or wineglass must have been thin and delicately crisp, or it would have converted sack and wine into pap. The A. A. C. aforementioned slashes off a slice of bread three-quarters of an inch thick, leaves the crust on, and holds it before or over the fire until it smokes angrily on one side; then turns it and cremates the surface of the other. The edges of the crust are charred; the interior of the slice is soggy and unwholesome.

Will the reader bear with me for a moment while I try to explain in unscientific language why I insist that toast shall be thin and cooked through without scorching? The inside of the loaf (the crumb) is largely starch. Before starch can be digested by the human stomach it must be converted into dextrine by the action of certain acids. If the crumby part of the loaf were chewed long and faithfully, saliva would do most of this work. Without knowing why, we get the impression that toast is more easily digested than plain bread. The reason for this is that heat helps on the chemical change requisite for assimilation. Heat must penetrate to the heart of the slice submitted to it, or the gentle warmth makes the inner portions clammy. Then, the eater “bolts” his toast, and commits a crude poultice to the action of stomach and intestines, instead of digestible dextrine.

The notion that toast and tea are the best food for invalids is so firmly fixed in the mind of mothers, nurses and physicians at large that it would be vain to combat it. It is founded upon the fallacious belief that tea is made with boiling water, drawn off from the tannic acid latent in the leaves and drunk before heat and tonic properties have left it; that toast is cut thin from stale, sweet bread, the crust pared away, the slice exposed evenly to clear heat and cooked through without charring; then, that it is eaten at once, with the merest suspicion of butter—if any is put upon it. The stomach that cannot assimilate this delicate offering, washed down with tea brewed as above, is in a bad way. Always supposing that the teeth have acted well their part in converting the toast into pulpy dextrine by the help of the saliva.

When we, as a race or nation, learn how to breathe and to chew as nature intended us to perform these functions, dyspepsia will be a forgotten word, and centenarians multiply in the land until their pictures will cease to figure in the columns of the daily papers.

Contrast the ideal bit of toast described just now with that piled upon a plate, each slice keeping its fellow warm (and clammy), the evil task furthered by a thick coating of butter. This has soaked into the viscid heart of the slice by the time it is transferred to your plate. It is more than likely that the slice is black-edged, in harmony with the rest of the composition. “Buttered toast” is invariably preferred at hotel and family tables. The call for “dry toast, if you please,” is assumed to be the choice of an invalid.

My Syrian guide—and undoubtedly his remote ancestor, contemporary with Elijah—stuck his “cake” upon a pointed stick and held it over the fire of coals. When one side was done he pulled off the bit of bread, reversed it and stuck it on again. One may see the same operation in the Adirondack woods today when a tourist or hunter is so eccentric as to refuse flapjacks. The toasting fork was an essential in our foremother’s kitchen. It hung above the sink in a line with ladles and pothooks. She troubled her busy brain as little with thoughts of the antiquity of the implement as her granddaughter vexes her yet busier wits with the history of toast. Yet name and uses had passed into a proverb by the time Shakespeare wrote “King John.” In the altercation over the dead body of Prince Arthur, Faulconbridge admonishes Salisbury:

> Put up thy sword betime!
> Or I’ll so maul you and your toasting-iron, etc.

In “Tom Brown at Oxford” we have a like opprobrious epithet applied to a bully’s sword. “Pistol” and “toasting fork” are coupled.

The conventional toasting fork of early days had three prongs and a long handle which allowed the cook to conduct the work at a safe distance from the open fire. When fireplace and andirons were superseded by the closed cook stove, a lid was removed that the bread might be held through the hole it had covered, down to a bed of clear coals—an awkward business that brought about the patented wire frame laid across the uncovered hole in the plate of the range. I recall the glow of pride that went through me when, forty years and more agone, I thought out, of and for myself, a plan for preventing smoked toast—an oft-recurring annoyance unless the cook were abnormally vigilant. Some loose crumb would fall into the fire through the wires set above it, blaze up and catch the toast or smoke it into bitterness. The one and only way to secure unburnt toast was to watch it from the moment it went over the coals until it came off, turning it several times to make sure all was going well. My device was to set the toast-or beneath the glowing grate, where, unless a stray coal chanced to alight upon some part of the bread, there could be no scorch, and the acrid, smoky taste—which would seem to be inseparable from toast in some houses—was an impossibility.

Then dawned the blessed era of cooking by gas, and the slender-barred gridiron that is set within the oven when toast is to be made. Or, the patented pyramidal affair of wire netting to be fitted over the gas flame, toasting four slices at once and evenly—if one do not take one’s eyes away from the toaster too long. Then—black, cindery ruin!

One blessed day last winter I was invited to lunch with a friend whose house is dominated by what she calls “Electricity in Harness.” Our luncheon was cooked by electricity; all the sweeping, dusting and scrubbing; the dish washing and wiping; the lighting and warming of the dwelling, were accomplished by the same mysterious, potent agency.

The next day I bought an electric toaster. Since then we have had the miracle toast invariably at every morning’s breakfast. A light wire is connected with the chandelier above the table. A small apparatus, taking little more room than the silver toast rack set beside it, is at the right hand of the person sitting nearest the foot of the table. It is flanked, when we take our seats, by a plate of sliced bread. The slices are crustless and of uniform size and thickness. Without a break in the cheerful table chat, the one who presides over the toaster slips in four slices, closes the doors of the toaster and turns on the “power.” This, when we have eaten our fruit. By the time the cereal is sent away, and the more substantial rasher and eggs appear, we have toast for the first help to all. It is hot, it is crisp, it is real (and ideal!) toast. Those who like it buttered qualify it to their taste. Some prefer it just as it leaves the wires shielding it from the roseate heart of the magical “power.” All is noiseless, rapid and conducted without expenditure of labor or thought. In two minutes one side is done to a turn. The operator quietly opens the metal flap, turns the slice and in two minutes more anybody who is

THE HOUSEMOTHERS’ EXCHANGE

IMPORTANT NOTICE

BECAUSE of the enormous number of letters sent to the Exchange, I must ask contributors to limit their communications to 100 words, except in cases of formulas or recipes which require greater space. I want all my correspondents to have a showing in the Corner, and if my request in this respect is complied with it will be possible to print many more letters.

Attention is called to the fact that Marion Harland cannot receive money for patterns, as she has no connection with any department that sells them.

A Home for Some One

HAVING read of the grievances of “The Business Girl” and “Justicia,” I wish to state that I have been looking for over a year for a woman to do light housework in exchange for board and lodgings, and all the privileges of a private home, and all in vain.

It is plain that the business girl doesn’t want to do housework. I don’t expect “an awful lot” of service. I have three children and a house to take care of, and it would be a blessing to have somebody to help clear up after the evening meal.

My husband’s business keeps him out late on some evenings and I dread to be left alone.

Wouldn’t you think that I should not have trouble in getting a helper and a companion, when you read what the girls write about the hard time they have to make both ends meet?

I am not using the Exchange as an advertising medium, but if any one should ask for my address through interest in the subject, please let her have it.

Mrs. W. S. W. (Chicago, Ill.).

By the same mail which brought your letter, I had one of a dozen pages from a working girl. It goes so far toward answering your suggested queries that I should print it here but for the length.

The writer is still young and unmarried, but she has swung pretty well around the circle of employments for women in a day when these outnumber, fifty to one, the avenues open to the sex fifty years ago.

She served her novitiate in a store where she worked sixty hours a week, and longer in the busy season, and was pushed and hustled about like a dumb animal.

Last summer I worked in a drug store where there was a soda fountain. I worked seventy-two hours every week. That, of course, included evenings and every other Sunday for part of the day. I was on my feet and hurrying most of the time. The floor was of tiling, which is very tiresome to walk on all day long. I received $8 a week, and was told in the fall that that was too much to pay; that some one could be found who would work cheaper. So I was turned off and, in consequence, out of work for two or three months. I stayed with my parents. When I am working, I pay board to them at the rate of $5 per week.

Some time ago you published an article signed “A Rude Man.” The writer thought girls ought to do housework for a living. One woman, who hires girls, thought the same. If either of them had to do housework as a trade, they would change their minds. I could write a good-sized article on that subject. I tried it two or three times! I think there is enough said! That work is out of the question!

Then, again, a woman signing herself “Mother” says she does not pity girls who are not obliged to earn money, but prefer to do it. It may be that the parents of those girls can feed and lodge them, but cannot buy them clothes. I would say to this lady that I almost envy her daughter. For myself, I fairly loathe going out into the world to strive as I have to do, but what is one to do?

Now, she goes on to say, she is in a factory.

I work only fifty-five hours a week (for we have Saturday afternoon off), and I make $9 or $10 a week. After I get more practice, I can make more. Some of the girls make $13 per week. The work is light. It is a stocking factory. We mate and pack stockings. We make twice as much money as we got in the stores, never work in the evenings, and sit down most of the time at our work. I know that all factories are not as pleasant to work in as this. Of course, there are some where one cannot earn much. I would not work in one of those.

I tried once to teach school, but I could not stand life in the country. I tried to “rough it,” but my strength broke down.

I tried working in a hotel during the summer, but after three years of struggle I gave it up and worked at anything I could get to do. Just at present I am trying hard to get back some of my lost strength to fight the battle of life.

Please excuse this painful scrawl! I am so tired and nervous tonight! In fact, I am nervous all the time. I think the majority of working girls feel the same way that I do.

MARGARET M. N. (Chicago).

Apparently the nervous wreck has never found the right socket. It is as palpable that, of all the vocations to which she has addressed thought and energy, housework finds least favor in her eyes. She dismisses the topic with disdain and finally, “That is out of the question.”

During the reading of the plaint, I recollected a message I had forgotten to give to the cook, laid by the paper and stepped across the intervening room and hall into the kitchen. The place was as neat as hands could make it, and bright with bracket and drop light. Under the latter, at a white-covered stand, sat two maids, one reading the evening paper aloud, the other busy with a square of embroidery. Both were neatly and becomingly dressed; their dinner had been as good as mine, and they had eaten it as leisurely as they liked to do. Each has her own room, well furnished, airy in summer and warm in winter. They draw good wages, and, their expenses being the merest trifle beyond their clothing, each sends money “home” and has besides her account in the savings bank. They live for years in my family without ever receiving a sharp word or the symptom of a rebuke. When they are ailing they are cared for as sedulously as if they were indeed members of the family. They have consideration in their worries and in their enjoyments.

The picture might be duplicated in thousands of American homes. The domestics in our homes are the most carefree of the working classes. “Their bread and water are sure,” the term covering food of excellent quality and all they want of it; comfortable lodgings, now and then the “treat” of an evening at the theater (tickets supplied) or a jaunt into the country on the same terms; books and papers at will if they care for reading; church-going regularly, and evenings out in turn carefully provided for, sometimes at the cost of the employer’s convenience. Set down these unvarnished truths against the unrest of the woman to whose tale we have just listened, and say which of the two has chosen more wisely her lot in a working-day world.

In the well-managed household duties are as distinctly defined and performed at appointed seasons as methodically as in factory or store.

Even the bugbear of “company,” against which a certain class of so-called philanthropists raise the cry, echoed by the maids whose champions they assume to be, is reduced to a bagatelle when examined near at hand and in a strong light. At its worst, it is not to be compared to the pressure of the “busy season” in factory and salesroom.

I have been drawn into this defense of housework and housemother by the unrest in the very air we breathe, which fairly throbs with the murmurs and moans raised against domestic tyranny, and the panting and pushing of the strugglers after “a wider and higher life” (heaven save the mark!) for the working woman.

Home Recipes

The accompanying recipes are an answer in part to correspondents who have asked for them through the Exchange.

I get so much of interest and benefit through that medium that I am delighted to return the favor.

Canned String Beans

Cook the beans in salted water until they are tender. Then pack closely in glass cans. Boil the salted water in which they were cooked and fill the jars to the top, covering the beans well. Pour in at the last a tablespoonful of boiling vinegar on the top of each jarful; seal at once and keep in a cool, dark place.

Baking Powder

One pound of the best quality of cream of tartar; ½ pound of baking soda; ½ pound of cornstarch.

Mix all together; sift the mixture four times to be sure of incorporating all the ingredients evenly; put at once into glass jars or cans with tight tops.

Canned Corn

Eleven cups of sliced green corn; 1 cup of sugar; ½ cup of salt. Mix thoroughly; put into a porcelain-lined or enamel pot and cook half an hour, stirring frequently to prevent scorching. Seal boiling hot in glass cans.

When you wish to use it, cover with cold water; scald well; drain and cook with whatever seasoning you like.

Boston Brown Bread

One cup of sweet milk; 1 cup of sour milk; 1 cup of cornmeal; 2 cups of graham flour; ½ cup of molasses; 1 teaspoonful of baking soda; ⅓ teaspoonful of salt.

Mix quickly and steam for 2½ hours. Then set in the oven and bake 15 minutes.

Mrs. G. P. W. (Union City, Ind).

I insert your recipes willingly, and question the propriety of nothing pertaining to them as you have written them.

But in the interest of our housemothers at large, may I drop an observation with regard to the canned corn? After you have sweetened and salted it to make sure it will keep, and then soaked much of the sweetness of the milky vegetable out of it to get rid of the saltiness, is it one-half as good as the best brand of canned corn now put upon the market under the eye of the pure food laws? As I have explained elsewhere, the method adopted by scientific canners to preserve this most delicate of esculents (or green cereals) is heat raised to a degree not attainable by the kitchen range, and holding the corn at that for a longer time than you or I would keep it. By these means the flavor and sweetness are retained.

And don’t think me ungracious, but if there be a better way of doing anything than I know of I must get hold of it! I have always maintained that to mix sweet and sour milk together in cookery was akin to putting a piece of new cloth into an old garment. Why the combination in your brown bread?

Please let us hear from you upon both of these points. Much of the good done by our Exchange is due to the interchange of sentiments and the friendly comparison of ways and means. I am, myself, “a learner still” in housewifely lore. Not a day passes in which I do not pick up a crumb or a morsel of useful information. Your frank reply to my request herein made may put a crumb—maybe a loaf!—into my hand.

One hint to the canner may not go amiss with your gift of recipes. Wrap jars or cans in paper, secured closely by paste or string, before setting them away. Wait until the glass and contents are cold before doing this. The paper will exclude the light and help preserve the color of fruit and vegetables.

Home-Made Ice Cream

Will you kindly print a recipe for home-made ice cream? You make frequent mention of it in your menus for family meals for a week. Is it easily made? And is it more expensive than cream bought from a confectioner?

Mrs. W. H. D. (Paterson, N. J.).

If you wish a plain cream, make a custard of a quart of sweet milk, seven eggs and four cupfuls of granulated sugar. Scald the milk, add the eggs beaten up with the sugar, and stir over the fire until the custard is rich and smooth, but not until it begins to break. To prevent this, put a pinch of soda into the milk while cooking. Always make custard in a double boiler. Let the custard get perfectly cold before stirring into it a quart of rich cream. It is now ready for flavoring. If you use a simple extract of vanilla or bitter almond, or lemon, all you have to do is stir it in.

Have at hand a quantity of finely pounded ice and a bag of rock salt. Turn the custard into the freezer and surround the latter with alternate layers of pounded ice and rock salt. Fill to the very top of the tightly closed freezer and pour in two quarts of the strongest brine. The freezer must be buried out of sight in cracked ice. Put over all a thick cloth—a doubled sack or a piece of carpet—and set aside. In an hour’s time open, beat and churn the contents, having scraped the frozen walls of custard from the sides into the middle of the freezer.

Now is the time for adding fruits of any kind—berries, peaches, pineapple, a mixture of chopped crystallized fruits and nuts; in fact, whatever you may wish to vary the dessert with. Beat these in hard with a wooden paddle, and as fast as you can, for the outer air soon melts the frozen contents of the inner vessel. But beating and churning must be thorough if you would have smooth ice cream. Fasten down the lid; drain off about half the liquid which has accumulated in the outer pail; not more, for the salt is needed to carry on the process. Pack fresh supplies of rock salt and pounded ice about the freezer; put a weight on top to keep the freezer from floating; cover so closely that the air cannot get at the salted ice, and leave all for two hours—or six.

This is self-freezing cream. It is about as easily made as any other sweet dish, and the best one can have in warm weather. It is all the better for lingering in the ice for some hours after it is frozen. For many years it has been a favorite Sunday dessert in my family. The custard is made on Saturday and set in the refrigerator. The ice is cracked (or shaved with an instrument made for the purpose), and the freezer is packed down before breakfast. The opening and beating and churning and the repacking do not take fifteen minutes. Nobody’s churchgoing is hindered by the operation.

When you are ready to serve the cream, lift out the freezer, wrap all about it a towel wrung out in boiling water and invert it upon a chilled dish. You will have a column of lusciousness, smooth and firm.

As to the expense. After estimating the ingredients at market prices, we have decided that a quart of home-made ice cream costs about two-thirds as much as an indifferent article under the same name would bring at the confectioner’s.

A Bit of Dressing Bureau Furniture

Cut two pieces of cardboard a little longer than your longest hatpin and of a like width. Cover both sides of each piece with sheet wadding. Cut two pieces of velvet or plush about an inch larger than the cardboard. Stretch these over one side of each card, turning in the edges upon what is to be the wrong side, and draw tightly and smoothly by catching the lapped-over edge with a needle and strong thread, bringing the thread from end to end and from side to side until the stuff is perfectly smooth and taut upon the right side. Now lay the wrong sides of the cards together and sew with a neat overhand stitch all around the edges. Fasten a cord at each upper corner to hang the wadded silk square up by. Stick hatpins all around the edges. I have put upon mine three rows of old-fashioned brass curtain pins, fastening them to the plush. They are convenient to hang keys, buttonhooks, safety pins and the like upon.

LOUISE A. (Fort Dodge, Iowa).

Pickled Beets

If “E. D.” (Chicago), will slice the cooked beets, while they are hot, into vinegar which has been salted (and if she likes, sugared) to taste, then let them get ice-cold, she will, I think, find them to be pretty nearly if not quite what she longs for.

Sometimes we add sliced onion and whole hard-boiled eggs, slicing these last in serving. They contribute materially to looks and taste.

E. B. D. (Mount Vernon, N. Y.).

A seasonable contribution to our list of summer salads. The donor is invited to favor us further along this or any other line of housewifely enterprise.

Fried Chicken

Kindly publish a recipe for chicken à la Maryland and oblige a constant student of the lively and helpful Exchange.

H. P. C. (Chicago).

Fried Chicken a la Maryland

Joint a tender chicken as for fricassee. Wash and wipe perfectly dry. Dip each piece in beaten egg, then roll in salted and peppered cracker dust until it is thoroughly coated. Set upon ice for an hour. Have plenty of clean dripping or other fat in a deep frying pan and bring slowly to the bubbling point. Lay in the chicken carefully and fry on both sides to a fine brown. Do not put too many pieces in at a time, or all sides of each will not be done evenly. Fry long enough to make sure the thickest pieces are done all through.

Virginia Fried Chicken

If cooked as above directed, except that it is usually fried in bacon fat, a pound or so of fat bacon is sliced and cooked crisp, but not to burning. The fat is then strained from the bacon and this set over hot water to keep warm while the strained fat is returned to the fire, brought to the boil and used for frying the chicken. The latter is, of course, prepared with egg and cracker dust. When it is dished the sliced bacon is laid about it. Those who have eaten fried chicken prepared in both ways give the preference to the Virginia method, considering that the bacon, if sweet, imparts richness to the flavor.

Cream Gravy for Fried Chicken

This celebrated dish is often served without any sauce. In Maryland, and sometimes in Virginia, it is highly esteemed as a dinner dish when accompanied by cream gravy.

After taking the last piece of chicken out of the hissing fat, strain the grease yet again, stir in a roux of flour that has been very lightly browned, then cooked in a separate pan with a generous lump of butter and thinned with a few spoonfuls of cream heated in a cup, with the addition of a pinch of soda to guard against curdling. Stir this roux gradually into the hot fat, and continue the stirring until it is of the right consistency and very hot. Lastly, add a tablespoonful of finely minced parsley and pour over the chicken.

drawing at the side. You will work the clover blossoms in large French knots, using coarse mercerized cotton. The leaves are effective when worked in long-and-short stitches, the central veins outlined. This is very short work, and before you realize it you will have finished a group of leaves and flowers. Work the stems in outline stitches and whip over them again to give a heavy cordlike appearance.

Pad the edge and work in the regular buttonhole stitches, giving an extra treatment for good luck.

The story of this is quite short, but the satisfaction is long-lived.

If you wish, you can work the blossoms in lavender or purples and the rest white. Lavender and soft green look well on a lavender linen hat, and white and green are lovely on green or white. The artist's license is yours when the question of color is to be considered. I am but showing you a delightful clover field of work for you to enter.

embroidery shops are taken from German models.

All cross-stitch, no matter how elaborate, consists simply of the little crosses made one after another at varying distances and in varying colors. The design may be transferred from a printed pattern, may be done by hand in lead pencil or marking ink, or may simply take shape from the weave of the fabric, as in the huckaback towels shown here.

There are two ways of doing the work: The first, to make all the little parallel lines needed in one direction and then to come back and make the cross lines, also parallel; the second, to make each little cross separately, making a diagonal stitch to bring the needle out in position to cross. Perhaps the second method is better for the beginner, for it is less confusing, and enables one to see the work grow, so as to guide the next stitch. In general, it is better to do all the work of each color separately, beginning with the one to be most used and continuing to the little touches.

Quaint tapestry shades should be used, like those for Bulgarian embroidery—dull reds, blues, greens and yellows. A touch of brown or black adds to the effect, but should be nothing more than a faint suggestion. Of course, the work can be done in all-black or all-white, and black and white combined are often very attractive; but personally I prefer the many colors, like the gardens of grandmother's day.

As I said, these towels are usually embroidered either in one figure at the center of the border or in a scattered border design. The wreath shown here illustrates the first style. The leaves are dark green, the flowers rose pink, with dark yellow centers. A wreath of this kind looks well with the initial inside it, worked in old English or in the similar Gothic script. Made a little larger, the wreath will hold the entire monogram.

In the scattered pattern the central figure is dark blue and green, the other figures black and green in a light-blue diamond. These figures are purely conventional; but pretty effects are gained by rows of little clipped trees in brown and green, or of stiff green and yellow daffodils, or red and pink hollyhocks all in a row. The best of cross-stitching is that the designs are so simple you can make them yourself, and so have any effect in pattern or color that you desire. You can see readily how this will facilitate matching your guestroom, so that the towels will be the last completing touch in the color scheme.

Of course, it is not towels only that are so embroidered. I will wager that by the time you have done a few of them you will want a whole set to match, and will find yourself working traycloths and doilies and tablecovers. It is the kind of work that you can take up at idle moments and that grows marvelously under your hands, so that you never have time to get discouraged, as is the case with some kinds of embroidery. The towels, at any rate, are fascinating, and I advise you to buy some plain huckaback ones of good quality and start work at once.

Marking Laundry

THE best way to mark clothes for the laundry, unless you want to have your name embroidered on tape for the purpose, is to starch and iron a long strip of white tape and then write your name at intervals along it in indelible ink or pencil. Then you can cut off each section as you want it and sew it on the clothing or household linen. When the piece wears out, remove the tape and use it again.

THREE WAYS TO TRANSFER

HERE are suggestions for transferring the pattern before you to any material before working.

Perhaps the easiest way is the "window-pane" method. This is successful when the material is thin, like linen, batiste, etc. Pin the sheet of paper and the material together and hold them up against the glass of a window. With a sharp pencil draw on the material the design, which can be easily seen through the goods. If one-half of the design only be given, unpin the paper and turn the other side to the fabric. The strong light behind will make it plain.

If you have carbon paper, you should place the sheet between your fabric and the newspaper. This latter is on top. With a sharp pencil go over the outline of the design. The impression will be left in fine lines and will last until worked. This method is successful on heavy material.

The last way is also easy. On wax paper or ordinary tissue paper trace the pattern before you. When the design is completed, turn over the paper and outline the pattern with a heavy lead pencil. Then place the design down on the fabric and redraw the outline, pressing hard with the pencil. The pattern will be transferred without difficulty.

Surely the way is easy.

Two Hints for Linen Showers

HERE are two new ideas, seen so far only in the most exclusive linen shops, but which anybody can copy as the most unique offering of a bride's linen shower. And they aren't of linen themselves, either, but of lace-edged scrim.

No. 1 is a set of four strips to edge the linen closet shelves. There is a rather broad edge of lace at the lower border of each strip, a very narrow one at the upper, where it is to be tacked with little gilt nails to the shelf. Each strip is embroidered in cross-stitch in white or black or any color or colors desired. A little square conventional figure is chosen and embroidered on the scrim, perhaps two motifs at equal intervals at each end of the strip. Then in the middle appears the motto, also in cross-stitch. The well-known series on "The Blessing of the Home" might do, or some selection from Longfellow's "The Hanging of the Crane." One set seen bore, each section on one strip, the motto, "In stately hall—Or cottage small—Is cleanliness—The charm of all."

No. 2 is a binder made of ribbon, to hold tablecloths and kindred articles. It is made like a belt, with a nickel clasp and a sliding catch to make it tighter or looser, as desired. The side that is to be uppermost has stitched to it a label of scrim, edged with the narrow lace (something like coarse torchon is best) and bearing in cross-stitch the word "Tablecloths" or "Centerpieces," or whatever the binder is to contain. A set of these, perhaps four or five, would gladden any bride's heart.

These ideas are worth considering as a relief from the more usual articles with which the bride-to-be is likely to be overwhelmed; and they are, besides, a suggestion for the neat and order-lov housekeeper of an older matrimo generation.

THE SMARTEST FASHIONS OF WELL-DRESSED FOLK

Grandmother's Birthday

DEAR MADGE

I am writing to find how you and little Eleanor got home yesterday. It was such a beautiful day, and mother seemed to enjoy it so much, especially when Nellie gave her that quaint bouquet of roses and forget-me-nots.

By the way, Madge, was it on purpose that the bouquet just matched the quaint bunch of flowers under the lace-frill-covered (I like that word) crown of your hat? That flat trimming was very effective, with the black satin facing and that brim turned up at the back.

So was your gown. I love that light blue-and-white striped voile, and the plain, deep hem was stunning stitched in that scalloped line at the top. The fichu effect and the cuffs were tucked lawn, weren't they, with lace edgings to match the V-shaped chemisette and the undersleeves? And that big obi bow at the back was just the right finishing touch.

Nellie was as cute as she could be, too. I am so glad smocking is coming back; it looked lovely at the neck and cuffs of that pink batiste. And that quaint strapped arrangement at the belt—just stitched to the skirt and fastened to a sewed-on button at each side, wasn't it?—gave the waist line that all but very slender youngsters need.

I flattered myself that I looked "some," as Ted says, also. The military styles in vogue now just suit my style of beauty, and I think that yellow of mine is a duck—although it's a linen! Didn't you like the hip-length coat, with the high-waisted black satin girdle? (Linen and satin again, you see.) And that tucked front frill and shallow sailor collar and cuffs of sheer linen, with the linen buttons on the frill and the bias band on the cuffs and collar, emphasize just sufficiently that becoming military effect.

Mother looked dear, I thought, in her white fichu and cuffs. It's pleasant to see black grenadine in style again. And if she WILL wear caps at her "young old age," the bit of lavender ribbon is very pretty.

Oh, I forgot to ask you if you liked my hat: those white chip helmet-shapes really need nothing but a bit of decoration at the side and something in the way of a narrow wreath. My silk buttercups were just right, I thought, together with that clump of dark green and black grass; and the buttercups wandering in a single line about the bottom of the crown gave the proper line there.

Have I talked clothes enough? We must see more of each other, Madgie. At the very least, write to me soon. Your affectionate sister, ELEANOR.

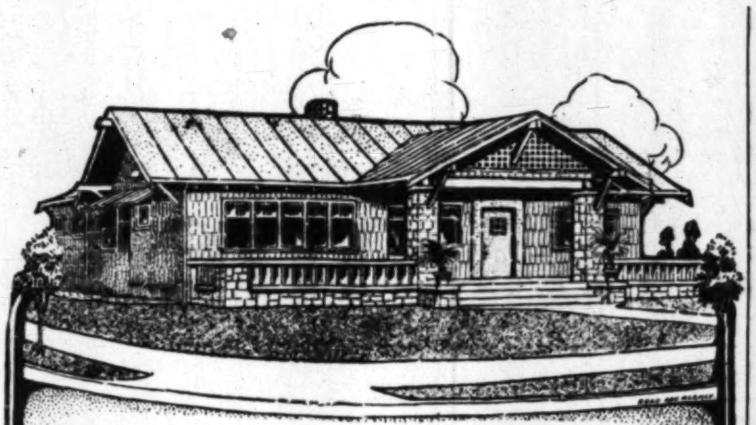
PICTURESQUE CALIFORNIA.

VIRGINIA DEER IN GOLDEN GATE PARK.



Covered with "Pioneer" Roofing

Fine buildings call for the best roofing. Many of the artistic Bungalows, and other types of residences in and about Los Angeles, are covered with Pioneer "Silveroid" Roofing (silver gray in appearance). A roof of Pioneer "Silveroid" Roofing is not alone pleasing to look at—it is a permanent protection, on account of its wearing qualities.

Pioneer ROOFING

If you are going to build—you should by all means investigate the merits of Pioneer "Silveroid" Roofing.

There is one Pioneer Roofing for the residence; another for barns, outhouses, poultry sheds, etc.; and still another for hotels and business blocks. Each has demonstrated by years of service, in all sorts of climates, its peculiar adaptation to the particular type of building for which it was intended. Write for the Pioneer Roofing Booklet 31, which contains much valuable information about Roofs and Roofing.

Malthoid Roofing

More of It Used in Los Angeles
THAN ALL OTHER BRANDS COMBINED.

Manufacturers inexperienced in making roofings — without knowledge as to their dependability—without responsibility as to their own financial standing, will very often guarantee their roofing for any number of years simply to get the order.

The roofing generally fails and so does the firm that makes it and they never live to make good their guarantee.

Malthoid Roofing is made to make good and while its manufacturers guarantee it, their guarantee is unnecessary because the roofing in itself is sufficient to do all that is claimed for it.

This is best proven by the splendid experience of Los Angeles Builders and Owners, who have used more Malthoid Roofing than all other brands of roofing combined.

Los Angeles is practically a Malthoid City, and it speaks well for the intelligence of Los Angeles Builders that this is so, for a Malthoid City is a protected one.

For twenty-seven years, The Paraffine Paint Co. have made and guaranteed their roofing and not one single purchaser can ever say they have ever even hesitated to make good a guarantee.

You can depend upon the responsibility of the makers of Malthoid Roofing, and you will never have to bother about guarantees if you use Malthoid Roofing.

"IS NOT THIS THE CARPENTER'S SON?"

So asked the skeptical, disdainful Jews when they were told of the wonderful things said to be done by Jesus of Nazareth. They made further inquiry: if His family was not well known to all the community, the question carrying with it the conclusion that they were all very ordinary people. These skeptical, disdainful persons of high degree went farther. They referred to the city in which the Prophet had been brought up and ironically said: "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?"

Such is the way of the world. Before the advent of the new Teacher there had been others who brought a message to men. Few of these had come from the ranks of the great, of the rich, of the powerful, and the then "leading citizens" had sneered at the lowly origin of those who had risen up to show men a better way or to lead them to great achievements. Abraham, founder of the Hebrew nation, was a mere nomad herdsman, a dweller in tents all his days. His grandson Jacob had gone out into the world to herd the flocks of his uncle and thus make a foundation for a fortune. Abraham's great grandson, Joseph, had been sold into slavery to become the Prime Minister of the pharaoh of Egypt. In a later era another descendant of Abraham had been raised from the estate of a slave to advise the King of Babylon, while a daughter of Israel ascended from a like lowly place in society to be the queen of the realm. David, the greatest of the kings of Israel, had been a mere shepherd boy, and he was not only a great statesman for his time, but also a great man in war. More than this, he had the great gift of genius and was a master in the art of music and a composer of poetry such as the races of men have not often produced.

There were men of place and power, of wealth and authority, in the days of Abraham, but they have left no such memory to the world as he. There were young men in the time of Jacob who were not forced to seek fortune in servitude away from home. But their names have all perished. Pharaoh had many courtiers around his throne when Joseph was the real ruler of Egypt, but not a jot of their doings has survived the dust of time. When David was a wanderer, hiding in caves, there were great men, rich men, in Jerusalem. Who were they? And who were those who asked in scorn: "Is not this the carpenter's son?" Abraham founded a race. Jacob is the progenitor of a nation great in all time and great today in its wide dispersion over the earth. David left the world his songs. And "the carpenter's son" is the leading figure in all the history of the world. His achievements far surpass those of any other son of man. He is after 2000 years the leader of all men among the most enlightened peoples of the earth, of those whose learning is most varied and general, of those whose philosophy is most profound, of those whose influence is greatest among all men. The sun does not rise on a spot on all the globe where there is not a temple sacred to His name, and where men do not "bow the knee at the name of Jesus." Many millions of the wisest, best men on earth worship as God "the carpenter's son," born in obscurity, raised in penury, unaided by wealth, position or influence other than that the most purely personal by which any son of man ever struggled up to greatness, and He is the greatest of all, so much so that it seems irreverent to name any other name in connection with that of the Christ.

Go out to another race of people and you find Socrates, the child of obscure parents, the product of penury, the man denied by fate a chance, the leader of his time, and still in our time looked upon as one of the greatest philosophers of any nation, of any time, and his teachings still quoted as sound and full of wisdom by peoples all over the world, and in tongues unknown when he discoursed in Greek in Athens.

These reflections arise in connection with a series of articles published by a leading American magazine setting forth again the life and works of Martin Luther, the child of poor German peasants, hard toilers in the dark recesses of a little mine. The prophet who was to be was himself a toiler in the mine, whose obscurity was not denser than that which surrounded the birth, childhood and all the early years of this remarkable man. With a burning thirst for knowledge, he sang his way through the schools, soliciting alms at the doors of the wealthy, or rather pay for the sweet melodies that flowed from his throat in a voice of rarest purity of tone. Like King David, this peasant child had also the gift of genius, taught himself to play on instruments of music, composed his own verses, and set them to his own notes. He had the gift of eloquence as well as that of song, and could sway men's reasons as well as stir the deepest sentiments of their souls.

There were rich men and learned men in Athens when Socrates was discoursing his philosophy in such artless, simple way. There were great men and rich men in Germany, and there were sons of such when Luther was singing at their doors for coppers to buy bread and books and thus fit himself for the work he was to do. But of all the Athenians hardly one has left enough mark on the history of the world to protect his name from the gnawing tooth of time or the corroding rust of the years, except the son of obscurity. Nor are there many of those who were in school with Martin Luther whose larger opportunities were so used as to make it worth while for men to preserve a record of them so much as even to convey their names to us. But the peasant boy has so impressed the race of men that his place in history is secure. His songs are still sung side by side with those of David in many languages; his works are still read with attention and profit by his own German people and by many whose tongue would be strange to the man whose name is borne by the theology of a large and progressive portion of the men of our day.

About the time that Martin Luther was working in a German mine, over the narrow seas in England was a butcher in a small town who had a son apparently destined to cut meat carcasses for the village and thus earn a mere living by hard drudgery and in his time pass away and be forgotten. But Wolsey the butcher boy became Cardinal Wolsey the prelate whose ambition aimed at the papal tiara and missed it by but a hair's breadth. He was not only a distinguished prelate, but a great courtier and statesman who for years guided the policy of the imperious Henry VIII, King of England. Wolsey lives still in the great University of Oxford and in Hampton Court, now the residence of kings, as it has been since the death of the great ecclesiastic and statesman.

If the Jews, the Greeks, the Germans and the English owe much to their poor men who rose in spite of circumstances to greatness, they all must rank second to America in this respect. From the foundation of our government men of obscure origin have been among our wisest and ablest leaders in all the walks of life, and their influence has been pre-eminent over that of all their more fortunate fellow-citizens born in affluence and backed by other influences than their own in the race for place and leadership. Think of the poor stranger printer boy walking up the street in Philadelphia munching his last crust of bread and seeking a place as "printer's devil!" Think of Franklin the philosopher, the statesman, diplomat, courtier at many courts, and always patriot!

This whole magazine this morning would not suffice to print a list of the names of the great men who have done much to make our country what she is, who won their remarkable way in life in spite of adverse fortune. Of the greatest of all Americans it was asked almost in the same terms as in the case of the Master of all: "Is not this the rail splitter?" Abraham Lincoln was born in the backwoods in a hut having only three sides walled in. He dressed in the skins of wild animals, and learned to read at night after a hard day's toil, before the flickering light of a backlog. But to no man does America owe more than to this rail splitter so despised, so disdainfully spoken of by the great and wealthy of his day, while no one knows a letter in the names of those who held him in contempt.

Nor is it merely in the realms of philosophy, letters and statesmanship that so many men of obscure birth in America have so enriched the nation. As was asked of Lincoln: "Is not this the rail splitter?" so men said of Grant: "Is not this the tanner?" Yes. But as the rail splitter was the statesman of all our history, so Grant was the captain of all our history. And in our industries we can point to Edison the wizard, to Huntington the railroad builder, to Harriman the financier, to Rockefeller the manufacturer, and to thousands of other Americans who, born in poverty and in obscurity, by force of personal merit, of talent, of genius, wrought out great careers and left lives which must forever be memorable in the annals of our nation.

Advantage, opportunity, chance, luck! They are all on the side of the boy born in obscurity, brought up in poverty. Provided he be endowed with the will that brooks no obstacle, with the mental ability to conceive great thoughts, to plan great undertakings, the boy is all the more blessed who is not handicapped by wealth. He must develop what there is in him, and once that development has been accomplished no power on earth can hold the man of ability back. Many a great would never have been heard of outside the village where it was first pronounced if its bearer had been born in circumstances which would have made effort unnecessary. Many a boy has lived and left no mark behind him because he was so born and raised that he had not to make an effort by which his powers of mind and will might have been developed. The obscure, the poor, must make the most of their personal gifts. Hence they succeed. The rich boy has not to make the effort. His powers are never called into play. Hence so many of them fail.

SERMONS IN SONG.

AFTER MIDNIGHT.

BY WILBUR D. NESBIT.

Night, when deep sleep falleth on men.—[Job xxxiii, 15.

The firelight throws its fitful ray,
The drowsy shadows creep about—
So the clock ticks the night away,
And all the world is dark without.
The clock's unceasing monotone
Beats on and on, and seems to say:
"The world has left me here alone;
I tick the night away—away."

Its beats drop into swaying rhyme;
It sings the songs of changing years;
"I tell the tale of tireless Time,
I take the toll of smiles and tears,
I beat the rally-roll of war,
I bring peace following the fray,
Or master proud, or servitor,
I tick his hour away—away.

"I have no heed for what is gone,
No heed for what is yet to be,
No care for twilight or for dawn—
Birth, life and death are met in me;
I measure pathways for the stars.
I lead the sun across the day,
I mark the rhythm nothing mars—
I tick the years away—away.

"I know of neither joy nor woe,
I have no need of field or town,
By my rule must the empires grow,
I rust the shackles and the crown;
I beat on restlessly along
Unhearing cries of 'Haste!' or 'Stay!'
I send to dust both right and wrong—
I tick them all away—away.

"For neither death nor life I wait,
For heroes' strength, or cowards' cries;
I change the place of low and great,
I baffle ignorant and wise;
I chant of hunger and of feast,
I am the pulse of work and play;
I mark Time's marching from the East—
I tick all things away—away.

"And you who sit, and smoke, and dream,
I beat the measure of your thought,
I bring the hopes with wondrous gleam,
I end the things that you have wrought;
I care not for your muttered curse,
I hark not if you plead or pray,
If love you hold or hate you nurse—
I tick your life away—away."

Uncle Sam and the Orchardist. By Frank G. Carpenter.

FLIES, BUGS AND BACTERIA.

HOW THE GOVERNMENT FIGHTS THOSE WHICH PREY ON FRUITS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

WASHINGTON (D. C.)—Come with me to the Agricultural Department and see how Uncle Sam is waging war on the flies, bugs and bacteria which are injuring the farmer. He is finding them by the millions and he has scores of scientists who are rearing them, studying their habits and practicing how to destroy them. I went today through a number of laboratories where these little beings are cultivated. Some are so small that a billion or so can be crowded into a thimble, and they breed so rapidly that a single family will produce more than 1,600,000,000 children and grandchildren in a season, many generations being crowded into that time.

Take for instance the San Jose scale, which has cost our fruit growers something like $200,000,000 and for which they are now spending millions to fight. I looked at it through the microscope in the Pomological Bureau today. The one I examined was among those on a peach limb which covered it as closely almost as the pores of your skin. Each scale is a waxy-like body not as big as the head of a pin, and the insect itself lies under this, using it as a shield while it sucks the life blood of the tree.

The little being is male and female, and the sexes are married and have children not unlike human beings. The single female, however, will have 400 young in a season, and the young reach maturity so quickly that one little wife may produce 400 babies a year, while the offspring of one parent during a single season has been estimated at more than 1,600,000,000 females. When it is remembered that there are colonies of this insect scattered throughout every orchard region of the United States from Northern Michigan to the Everglades of Florida and from Los Angeles to Delaware you may appreciate what a job it is to control them.

A Chinese Invasion.

Talk about the Yellow Peril! This little animal came from across the Pacific. It was brought in on some peach stock imported from China and was ruining the orchards of Southern California when one of the farmers of that region gave his trees a wash of sheep dip. The dip was composed of a lime, salt and sulphur solution, which had come from Australia. He was surprised to find that this liquid wiped out the scale. The fact was reported to the Agricultural Department, and then, as a result of its experiments, began the wholesale spraying which now goes on all over the country. Every winter or spring the commercial orchards of the United States are sprayed with this mixture. The concentrated spray is too strong to use after the leaves have come out, but it does not injure the trees while vegetation is dormant, and if applied to every bit of the bark above ground it wipes out the scale.

Moreover, the San Jose scale has no wings to fly from tree to tree, although the young can climb about from their little homes over the branches, and can be carried on the feet of birds to the other trees of the orchard or to other orchards, which may be many miles off. It may also be blown by the wind a short distance.

The insect has so spread that there is scarcely a locality in the United States which is free from it, and the only salvation of an orchard is regular spraying from year to year. The scientists tell me the spraying should begin as soon as the trees are planted, for the scale may exist on the nursery stock, and a single family which may start with a space as big as the finger nail of a baby will soon populate not only your orchard, but also those of your neighbors. The insects live on the trees of the forests, so that the only safe method is a wholesale slaughter each year.

Other Parasites.

I spent some time with Prof. Waite, who is now studying the prevention of the rot, which develops in oranges, apples, peaches and other fruits on their way to the markets. He took me into his laboratories, where a number of microscopists and other scientists were working, and where there were long tables filled with glass jars. These were so covered as to prevent the invasion of bacteria, and they contained oranges which had been inoculated with fungus and given the right conditions for its development. I saw a large number of glass tubes the mouths of which were plugged with cotton. Each tube contained a species of fungus, which, by the way, is one of the lower forms of vegetable life.

Fungus is a sort of plant which feeds on other plants. It is a plant cannibal or parasite, as it were. It is so small that you have to have a microscope to examine it, but it develops so rapidly that it soon eats up and destroys any fruit to which it attaches itself. I was shown a glass cage, something like a telephone booth, which was made by Mr. Waite that it might be bacteria-proof. This is in order that the men may work safely within it and that the fungus they are studying may not be affected by the other little pests flying around. This booth has a draft which forces the air in through sheets of cotton wool, so wadded together that the bacteria cannot go through them. It is this air that is breathed by the operator at work in the booth.

In other places they were working on forms of fungus which affect the leaves and in others upon those which eat at the bark and heart of the tree. It was, in fact, a great medical laboratory devoted to tree diseases and their prevention.

Insects Which Eat Millions.

I found some similar things in the laboratories of Prof. Quaintance, who is fighting all sorts of insects and worms which attack our orchards, and also in the rooms of Prof. Scott, who is one of the most famous of our scientific doctors as to the treatment of fungus diseases.

It is impossible to estimate the damage which is [illegible] to our orchards by bugs and rot. There are from [illegible] to twenty insect pests which cost this country from $60,000,000 to $75,000,000 a year. The control of the San Jose scale foots up many millions, and then there are also the coddling moth, the plum curculio, [illegible] and the apple and peach borers, which fasten on the roots of the trees.

Take the peach. We have east of the Rockies something like 140,000,000 such trees, and they are yielding a crop worth $15,000,000 a year. In some seasons the brown rot takes away fully half of the profits of the South, and the plum curculio often eats down our [illegible] income to the amount of $3,000,000 or $4,000,000. By the recent discoveries of Profs. Scott and Quaintance we are able to control certain peach pests, and this means an annual saving of millions. The material used is self-boiled lime and sulphur mixed with arsenate of lead. It is applied several times during the season.

Our Big Peach Crop.

Now that the people are going crazy over the [illegible] in apples they seem to have forgotten the profits which have been and are being made in peaches. I am [illegible] that the peach is one of the biggest gambles in the great lottery of fruit raising. It often fails, but a single good crop covers many past losses, and two or three make the orchardist rich. Take the Miller Brothers of West Virginia. They have an orchard which has yielded dividends of $500 per acre, and out of which they have been making from 40 to 60 per cent. per annum. We have altogether more than 100,000,000 peach trees. There are 8,000,000 in Michigan and almost an equal number in Georgia, Texas and California. Kansas is a great peach State, and so are Maryland and Delaware. Along the eastern shores of Lake Michigan there is a peach country, which runs from five to ten miles back from the lake, extending north and south for a distance of 150 miles. Georgia has a number of orchardists who are cultivating more than 100,000 trees, and there is a druggist in that State who owns 160,000 trees. The peach trees of the South have been recently greatly injured by rot and other diseases, but the new spray [illegible] tions of the department have proved the salvation of the crop, and there promises to be big money in it.

How One Boy Made Good.

In connection with peach growing, it is interesting to tell how one boy made a fortune in peaches, and by his own exertions and study lifted not only his own family but many others to affluence. I refer to Hale, the Peach King of Georgia, the man who is now at the head of a syndicate which owns orchards capitalised at [illegible] or more, and which has shown profits of [illegible] upward a year. I don't know how many hundred thousand peach trees Mr. Hale owns, but he has built up a great peach-growing industry in Southwestern Georgia, and his fruit is sent in refrigerator cars all over the North. He sometimes harvests a million peaches a day, each peach being handled three times in sorting, picking and packing, and he has the most improved methods of

I have just talked with a man who knows Hale very well. Said he:

"He was born near a little town in Connecticut. His father lived on a farm upon which nothing could be raised, not even the mortgage. His father was in debt and he died leaving the farm incumbered to the amount [illegible] with only two little boys, Hale and his brother, to meet the interest and support the family. They found they had to hire themselves out to keep the farm going, and at 12 years of age young Hale was cutting corn for his neighbors at a few cents a day.

"It was one day during the noon recess, when he was tired of handling corn stalks, that he sat down under a [illegible] peach tree and munched the fruit, while he wondered whether he should ever be able to pay off the mortgage and make a man of himself. As he did so he looked up at the peaches and thought how fine it would be to have a few thousand such trees and make a fortune in fruit. The thought grew upon him, and he decided to try. In one way and another he scraped and saved until he had $100 in cash. He earned more during the winter, and in the spring was able to buy 3000 peach trees and plant them out on the home farm. They grew, and through his excellent care soon surpassed all the trees of the neighborhood. He raised crops between the rows, and finally brought the orchard into bearing.

"Before the fruit was ripe, however, the mortgage came due, and the elders of the church which held it notified him he must come in and pay. He put them off for a few weeks and rushed his fruit to the markets, handling it so that he got the highest prices. He advertised in the Hartford papers, and hired storerooms there for the display of his peaches. His profits were such that he soon had more than enough money in the bank to pay off the mortgages and leave him a big sum for the future.

A [illegible] Peach Crop.

"Hale's first peach harvest, in short, netted him about [illegible]. This was not known to the churchmen until he came in and said:

"'Well, gentlemen, I have come to arrange about that note.'

"'Well, young man, we don't know that we can extend it,' said one of the deacons. 'You boys have been very extravagant in selling your peaches, and we can't afford to lose this money.'

"'Well,' said young Hale, 'you don't need to lose the money. I have come in to pay the note.'

"'Oh!' returned the elders, 'if you have the money we would just as lief let it run. We will have to put the money elsewhere. You had better keep it. All we want is our interest.'

"'No, indeed,' replied Hale. 'I have the money and I am going to get rid of that mortgage.' And he thereupon paid the note.

"The next year," continued this man, "Hale set out more peaches. He cultivated and fertilized his orchard and he proved that fruit could be made profitable in Connecticut. In 1889 he made $24,000 out of one crop from thirty-five acres, and he gave such a stimulus to peach growing in New England that there are now something like 3,000,000 trees in Connecticut, while there are many in the adjoining States of Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

"A little later on Mr. Hale got the idea that Georgia could raise peaches. He traveled all over that State and picked out his present locality. Since then he has had enormous crops, and has shown what could be done by careful cultivation, intelligent marketing, modern machinery and good business management. He is always on the lookout for frosts and pests of one kind or another, and his foresight has several times saved his crop, when those of his neighbors were ruined."

A Word of Warning.

As I write this, one of the many stories of the successes which are now being made in farming, the thought comes to me of the multitude who are rushing into such enterprises and investments without consideration. As Prof. Waite said to me today, the machinery of fruit growing and farming is more wonderful than that of the largest gun factory or electrical industry. Its success requires the most careful selection of soil, a knowledge of the crops one is attempting to raise, a study of fertilizers and diseases, and also the being "Johnny on the spot" throughout all or a greater part of the year. Notwithstanding this men who would not buy a lot without the most careful searching of title or go into any business without having thoroughly investigated the markets, the machinery and the past profits and losses, will risk the savings of a lifetime in a gold mine of which they personally know nothing, or in an orchard scheme the information concerning which is presented only on paper.

Take, for instance, the case of a government employee who called the other day to ask the advice of the fruit men as to the investment in a new orange region which is being exploited in various parts of the South. This orange is of a Japanese variety which will grow much farther north than the sweet oranges of Florida or California. The locality proposed was somewhere in Alabama. The scheme is managed by a syndicate which is selling its lands at $300 per acre, with the understanding that the trees are to be planted at once and are to be cared for for five years, at which time they will come into bearing. The prospectus has figures which show that a tract of five acres so treated will bring a profitable income. Said the pomologist who told me this story:

"The man was a proofreader who has to do with government printing. His work is such that the misplacing of a comma might cost Uncle Sam millions, and a mistake would lose him his job. This, he told me, had so worn upon his nerves, that he felt he must arrange for his leaving the service at some time in the near future. He said he thought this would be a good place to invest his savings, and that he would eventually retire to his orchard. He said he intended to put in all he had and to pay the balance on installments of $15 a month. I asked if he had gone down to Alabama to see the land and investigate the proposition. He replied that he had not, but that the prospectus gave all the figures and showed just what the profits would be. I asked him if he knew the managers. He said he did not. I thereupon strongly advised him to make no such investment without further knowledge. He said, however, that he thought he would risk it, and so went away. His mind was made up before he came in, and my advice was worth nothing."

The Agricultural Department has many such schemes brought daily before it. Some of them are good and will pan out all right, but a great number are questionable, to say the least, and those who invest should make the most careful inquiries into locations, markets and the individuals who are managing before they risk that which has cost them years of privation to save.

Susan.

THE HUMBLE ROMANCE OF A LITTLE LONDON SLAVEY.

By Dorothy P. Willis.

IT had been a long, hot day, hot in the shady parks and darkened rooms of the big houses, and hotter still in the little underground kitchen of a certain lodging-house in a dingy quarter of London. The little maid-of-all-work had had a hard day; her mistress's temper was never angelic, but in the heat she was decidedly lower than the angels, and consequently Susan bore the brunt of it.

From 5 o'clock—fresh, dewy 5, with its breezes and its brilliant prospects—she had slaved until 8 o'clock—fair, peaceful 8 with its disappointed hopes, its broken resolutions, yet withal the knowledge of a forthcoming night wherein to rest and renew. She was very tired; the stairs were numerous and steep, and the trays heavy and wanting steady arms; besides, the rooms had had to be turned out on the top floor that morning because the Joneses had gone out and the Kings were coming in.

But all through the day there had been a song in the little maid's heart; the rough words bidding her hasten had fallen for once upon unlistening ears and called forth none of the usual retorts that she was "a-'urryin' as 'ard as" she could; she had done her best, and she knew those top rooms had never been turned out so thoroughly since she had come there.

Even her mistress at last noticed the earnestness of Susan's scrubbing and silently marvelled, the only thing she ever did do silently. Was not every Wednesday evening Susan's night out? That could not account for it, Sunsan had never been so anxious to please on other Wednesdays. However, she said nothing until it was nearly time for Susan to go. She went down and found the child vigorously polishing her boots.

"Where are yer goin', Susan, ternight, as yer so perticilar?" she asked, in not ungentle tones for her.

Then the tale was told, how the ——th Battalion was to arrive at —— Station at 8:45 that evening, her Dick among them, and how she meant to surprise him by being there to meet him.

The smutty little face seemed almost glorified as she spoke of him, and the limp figure straightened with the elasticity of anticipation; the gray eyes lit up for a moment, and the hard lodging-house-keeper was surprised at the sweetness of the child's smile.

"Well, Susan, yer can 'ave till 'arf-past 10, seein' as its a special night."

Susan's eyes sparkled; a whole half-hour extra! Susan began to think her mistress must have received something over and above her due from the Joneses who departed that afternoon; naturally generosity did not appear usually in the category of Mrs. Bent's virtues.

Susan fled gleefully to her room—if room it could be called, that tiny cupboard under the roof.

Flinging off her greasy apron and print dress, she stood bare-armed before the little glass. "Lawks! ain't there a difference!" she ejaculated as she viewed the high-water mark on her scraggy little neck. "Never mind, 'ere goes," she added, plunging her face and arms into the earthenware basin of cold water. In a few seconds she came up panting but refreshed, and buried her face on the grimy cloth which did duty for her towel.

It was not a bad little face when some of the dirt was gone. She shook down the little hard screw of hair and brushed it out, then she contemplated herself once more. The hair was curly, and framed the face in a pretty aureole of fluffiness.

A smile parted her lips at the thought of seeing "him" again, and she turned quickly to the nail where her only dress hung and put it on. It was just an ordinary, shabby, black serge frock, but when she stood again before the glass to fasten the little bow of pink ribbon at the collar she was as utterly satisfied with her appearance as any great lady dressing before long mirrors and beneath soft-toned lamps, in silk and muslin.

Then came the hat. She sighed wistfully as she smoothed the once-white chiffon ruching and curled the two straight tips round her finger; perhaps she realized that it might be cleaner, though until now it had seemed to her perfect; but then, other Wednesdays had not been so important as this one; she had been faithful for so long to Dick, and had gone straight home to the crying babies and the weary mother every other night out, regardless of the invitations of the butcher's boy to come and have an ice.

Yes, she had been very faithful to the lad who had brought the lodgers' fish until he went for a soldier.

And he had promised that if he was shot she should have the watch he left in charge of a pal; it was to be her very own.

But if he came back she was to be his very own.

So matters were left until she heard from the milkman that the battalion was expected home on the 17th, and that Dick Hardy was among the heroes.

The hat was put on at last, and with her black cotton gloves in one hand and her purse in the other she sped downstairs and out into the street.

The station was not far off, and she was soon standing with the dingy tips pressed against the bar of an iron railing, hemmed in on either side by an eager crowd that waited for the train. It was very late, and the crowd had doubled and trebled before the porters began to run about and clear trucks out of the way in expectation of wildly-flung-open carriage doors and universal disorder. On Susan's right stood a loafer puffing at a short pipe which sent clouds of choking smoke into her eyes; on her left a woman with a baby at her breast, a puny, squalling mite dressed in scarlet plush pelisse and cap. The mother's face was a study of eager, anxious expectation; involuntarily her arm tightened round the child as the porter picked up the great bell from its stand and clanged it violently close to her ear.

Susan jumped. Was the train bearing her Dick really running into the station—this great, puffing, panting creature?

Another moment and the whole platform seemed alive with tall brown figures, leaping from the carriages and bending from their heights to clasp the eager wives, mothers and sweethearts in their arms. Susan stood watching anxiously for "him," the wistful little face growing whiter and more anxious. Had he not come? Ah! at last! There at the very end was the form she looked and longed for. A fishy blue apron had waved gaily round him the last time she saw him, a flat basket had adorned his head when they parted on the doorstep the morning he enlisted; nevertheless she knew him, khaki-clad and puttied though he was. With the patience born of almost realized desire, with that reluctance which makes one postpone the moment when the prize shall be grasped, she waited outside the railing until he walked down the platform.

On he came, steady and gallant, past little groups of women and men; past porters and policemen, until he stood for a moment blocked by a bigger group than usual. Susan drew her breath sharply; another three yards and he would see her. At that moment Susan never could quite remember what happened. She knew dimly that a muslin-clad, feather-bedecked figure bounded past her to the gate, through the gate and onward. Then there was a glad cry, and she saw the feathers crushed against a shoulder and the muslin regardlessly bound by a strong arm, and a face—a fair, pink-and-white, fluffy-fringed face—turned upward.

Then Susan turned from the railing and went home.

The light had died out of the gray eyes and the pink from the white cheeks when she crept up the narrow stairs to bed.

"What! 'ome h'already!" cried Mrs. Bent as she held a flickering candle over her head, and stared.

"Yes, mum, thank you, I'm 'ome earlier than I thought for. Good-night, mum."

"Well, I'm blowed!" ejaculated Mrs. Bent as she retired. "Blest if it don't look as if they've quarreled."

. . . .

Susan hung up the black dress and put away the once-white hat. "Ef only it 'ad been any one but that there Maria Jones from nex' door! But there—there never was nothink in me to think much on, anyway," she said.

"ROUGH-AND-READY DIPLOMACY."

In putting through the Panama Canal, President Roosevelt resorted to some rough-and-ready diplomacy. A treaty for the canal must be consummated before the Panama Commission could come to disturb the programme. But whom could our State Department treat with? We had recognized Panama, but the President had not as yet received a representative from the new government. It became necessary to acquire one. President Roosevelt and Mr. Cromwell and the State Department put their heads together and wondered whom they could get near at home who would look like an envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary from Panama. The result was that they decided to confer the honor upon P. Bunau-Varilla—he had made a fortune out of the canal, and in a way he was related to Panama. But what sort of credentials could he present?

Nothing easier.

The provisional government of Panama was cabled to wire back credentials, and they were found to be perfectly satisfactory to President Roosevelt. It was the first time in history that such credentials had ever been heard of, but, after all, why should there be any undue formality between two sister republics?

All the time the Panama Commission was nearing Washington. They were due to arrive at the capital at 8. Before that hour, however, President Roosevelt had pressed buttons, summoned the parties in interest, and before the Panama Commission arrived in Washington, Bunau-Varilla and our State Department had concocted a treaty which bound ourselves and the republic of Panama for all time. The treaty, which bound a Spanish-speaking nation, was written in English, there being no time to have it translated into Spanish, and it was signed by a Frenchman and an American.—[M. E. The Raisins of Spain. By George W. Burton.

WINE FOR W. C. T. U.

SPANISH AND CALIFORNIA RAISINS, THEIR MERITS COMPARED.

By a Staff Writer.

FOR centuries the whole world looked to Spain for raisins. The English plum pudding is a misnomer. Long ago it was made of dried plums of home growth, but when commerce began to bless human life Spain sent England dried grapes, or the raisins of commerce, and after that plum pudding should have changed its name to raisin pudding. As the United States grew and flourished and Americans became the richest people of the earth and lived the best, our country was the best market for Spanish raisins. Spain in those palmy days of the industry used to ship from the port of Malaga alone more than 2,000,000 boxes of raisins, each box holding twenty-two pounds of fruit, as now, and weighing twenty-eight pounds gross. More than half of these crops came to the United States, and we took six times as many raisins from Malaga as went to Great Britain. Malaga was then as now the great raisin market of Europe. And as in the past the United States took the largest part of the output, so it took the best grades. The loss of the American market has proved a great detriment to the industry. In those times we paid at Malaga an average of $1.45 per box for loose Muscatel raisins. The clusters and other choice grades cost two and three times as much. The province of Denia in past times rivaled Malaga in the amount of raisins produced, but not in the quality. The Denia crop used to run at about 2,800,000 boxes a year, and these were valued at the place of production at $4,200,000. As in the case of Malaga so of Denia, the United States ceased to take nearly half the crop. From both ports our country took as high as 2,000,000 boxes, or about half the product of all Spain. The cost of Denia raisins in those days of low tariffs was more than $1 a box for the Denia product, an average price, and nearly $1.50 for loose Muscatels from Malaga. The cost in the United States was fully twice that price, and the consumer paid 50 cents to $1 a pound for what went in his Christmas pudding or to be taken with the port wine at the end of the dinner. The imports were a total of nearly 100,000,000 pounds. The cost at shipping ports was more than $4,000,000, and consumers paid probably $8,000,000 for the raisins.

California Output Greater and Better.

The output of California raisins is now a little larger than the imports of thirty years ago, and the first cost is not much more than $3,000,000, and that to the consumer less than $5,000,000, so our people are getting more and better raisins than when we imported the crop, and saving to the consumer some $3,000,000, nearly half of the money at one time expended on a luxury, now a common comfort of life. That the California raisin is better I am sure. The Malaga fruit is usually sun-dried, without processing. It is a sweet and palatable food, but the skin is thick and the seeds many and very hard. When masticated, the best refuse to be reduced to a pulp, but leave a residuum as dry as sawdust which must be rejected by any one who has respect to his health. The Denia raisin is more palatable and more tender. But it is because it goes through a very careful process of preparation. The Denia growers do this because they must. If sun-dried, the grape here has so thick and tough a skin that the raisin would not be at all available as a table fruit without cooking. So the cooking is done first. The process consists in making a weak lye made from the refuse of the wine grapes and then cooking the raisins in this over a slow fire for some time at just the boiling point of water. It does not seem to rob the fruit of any of its saccharine matter and makes a raisin very easily masticated to a perfect pulp. The flavor is sweeter than that of the California raisin, but not so "grapey." It recalls my very early boyhood days when I was permitted to take a few raisins from the dish where my good mother was making a Christmas pudding among the green vales of dear Ireland. So we must have bought the more economical Denia fruit in preference to that from Malaga. This was as much as sixty-five years ago, and yet the people of Spain are following the "costumbre" of their grandfathers in the handling of raisins as in most other things.

We hear much about the decay of the merchant marine. It is an old cry. In a consular report sent out in 1883 from Denia, where I am writing, the Consul says: "American ships.—None have visited this port for many years, the entire freight business between this port and the United States being done by English steamers, which from August to December average three a week, loading 200 to 1200 tons each." Well, we are shipping no raisins now from Denia, but wherever we do take commerce from the business is done in foreign bottoms as then.

The Matter of Subsidies.

Down the coast from Denia is Almeria, where the grapes are peculiar in their keeping qualities and in their flavor. These are all shipped away in natural condition, sometimes packed in boxes as they come from the vineyard, but later and for long transportation packed in cork dust. There as many as twenty steamers load grapes all the days between September and December, a good many of them for the United States direct or indirect, but the flag of our country never floats from a masthead. How can it be otherwise? In this current year of grace, to wit 1911, the Bureau of Manufactures at Washington printed a consular report from Hongkong in which our Consul, George E. Anderson, says. "The Togo Kiren Kaisha (the great steamship company of Japan) has been unprofitable for several years, although it enjoys a subsidy from the Japanese government of $2,235,000 annually for the one of the most wholesome as well as most foods in the world. They are served here at hotels and pensions, even the least pretentious principal meals. Since we arrived at [illegible] up to this moment here among the vine[illegible] raisins grow the fruit has been literally [illegible] at us, thrust into our faces. Not only at the table have we been almost begged to eat raisins, [illegible] some places a great dish of them has graced the table daily. Why? Because they are so [illegible]. The clusters may be had by the single pound at [illegible] for 10 cents. The loose ones by the 100 kilos [illegible] a "nickel" the pound. The people know the [illegible] of this excellent fruit. If you ever come into the [illegible] exhausted from any cause, do not take a glass of [illegible] spirits to revive you, or even a glass of the light[illegible]. The spirits will excite for a moment, to force [illegible] into a greater state of collapse after a short [illegible]. The wine will prey on the coating of your empty [illegible]. Try a handful of raisins. The effect is al[illegible]. The refreshment is nearly instantane[illegible] and its effect lasting. In fact, a handful of raisins [illegible] vital force about as promptly and effectu[illegible] as any food. As a regular diet they are the best [illegible] of the internal system ever known. They are [illegible] as meat, more so than bread, and pro[illegible] of the evil effects in the alimentary canal [illegible] from too free use of bread or meat. The [illegible] in its various forms is one of the greatest blessings of the people of countries like Spain, where these [illegible] so cheap as an offset to the high cost of [illegible].

It is a marvelous thing the great crops of the grape [illegible] from such poor soils as these in Spain. They [illegible] like the fat prairie lands of America or [illegible] lands of the Pacific States where millions of [illegible] built up such a supply of vegetable mold. I [illegible] in 1000 miles travel in Spain a hundred [illegible] what we call on the Coast "sandy loam." It is all clays of one kind or another. The siliceous [illegible] from the sandstone; the ferruginous clays [illegible] owing to the large amount of iron ore in [illegible]. The calcareous clays come from the marble [illegible] deposits that abound. There are other argil[illegible] that I was not able in a cursory glance to [illegible], but they are clays sure. The hills are clay, [illegible] clay, the plains clay. What of vegetable de[illegible] ever was in them has been exhausted thousands of years ago. Now the farmer must rely on two [illegible] plenty of patient cultivation and a good deal of [illegible]. The tilth is for the most part an application of purely manual labor; the other is for the most [illegible] the refuse of the farmer's stable and the sweepings of the streets. In all cities in Spain except Malaga the streets are kept as clean as anywhere in the world. The sweepings are all carefully gathered and sent to [illegible] orchards and gardens near the place.

There is not much irrigation applied to vines. At [illegible] places the rainfall is liberal, the moisture in the [illegible] high and the evaporation low. This with good cultivation results in good crops of grapes. To look at the [illegible] with few prongs and to note the thinness [illegible] one would say a ton an acre of ripe grapes [illegible] be the usual crop. Yet I am told that two tons [illegible], and four tons and more than that an ex[illegible]. In December the vines are pruned, leaving [illegible] 1½ to 2 inches. Then the main stem is exposed to the air for a depth of ten to twelve inches. [illegible] the vineyard is left until April, when the [illegible] are carefully covered, not a weed or a spear of [illegible] being left, nor a "sport" from below the fruit[illegible] prongs. This is all done by hand, and the soil [illegible] thoroughly stirred. I saw vineyards in January actually "banked" to a depth of from one foot to two feet, [illegible] spading. The clays are full of coarse gravel in [illegible]. It seems as if the vines feed from the air [illegible] of the valley as much as from any other [illegible] vegetable food. The vines stand six inches to [illegible]. The vines take eight years to come to [illegible], and they do well for nearly half a century. [illegible] pests are here, and many vines have to be [illegible] from year to year. The vineyard is watched [illegible] eyes of a lynx, and when a vine looks "sick," [illegible] and a new cutting—is put in the place. [illegible] of these vineyards yield four and a half tons of [illegible] a year, which make 120 arrobas, about 3000 [illegible] of cured grapes.

[illegible] said, the loss of the American market has [illegible] great blow to the Spanish raisin industry. The [illegible] at the present time is much less than formerly. [illegible] have been developed as in the case of or[illegible], but in spite of all efforts the growers have been [illegible] to let their old vineyards go to decay, then root [illegible] and replant with other fruit. This has [illegible] particularly true of Malaga, where almond or[illegible] have taken the place of vineyards for raisin pur[illegible]. Others simply turn their grapes into wine or [illegible] the poor kinds into alcoholic products. For the [illegible] five years from Malaga there have gone to the United States an average of a little more than 5000 [illegible] of raisins. In these same years the almonds [illegible] to an average of 9000 boxes. The value of the [illegible] has been $114,000 to $185,000, while the almonds [illegible] worth at shipping port $507,000 to $865,000. [illegible] the almond was not made much of here, [illegible] it is increasing at a great pace. I shall pre[illegible] reflections on this in a later letter.

The [illegible] raisin grower can well compete with [illegible] for markets not protected. Land that cost [illegible] than $50 to $100 an acre he can plant to [illegible] and bring to full maturity at a cost of less than [illegible] a year for three years. The crop will pay ex[illegible] after that, increasing yearly so that at the [illegible] he will practically have his property for [illegible] more than his own labor, which would not [illegible] more than $5 a month. He has lived off of [illegible] with his family, too, for the most part, and [illegible] turned out 3000 pounds of raisins from his acre [illegible] a cost of not over $5 an acre all included, plus the gathering of the crop, which can come to $5 more, or $10 for 3000 pounds of raisins. He sells his crop in the lump to those who pack the raisins for shipment at $150 to $175 or $180 for the one yield. Out of this he pays taxes and other expenses of the business, which he thinks will come to 80 per cent. of his total receipts. This would include pay for his labor if the work was hired. For the most part it is done by the peasant and his family. I am not taking the prices of this year, which are in the main 100 per cent. above average. I do not suppose the peasant gets all the benefit of this increase in value. He is doing well if half of it reaches his pocket. It is a fact that prices of all products of the farm are higher in Spain than twenty years ago, as they are the world over. Wages are higher, too, but one hears the same story here as in America, that while wages have gone up perhaps one-third the cost of living to the laborer has risen much more.

Cost of Production.

But as to cost of production, here are the facts. These vineyards are cultivated twice a year only. They are not irrigated at all as a rule. The cost of labor is not more than 25 to 35 cents a day. I estimate that a man should do one acre in two days and that the cost would be as low as 50 cents for each treatment, or $1 for the year. For gathering the crop I allow 50 cents a ton, and for curing about the same, making the total actual cost of labor for four and a half tons but a little over $5 an acre. Above I have put this at twice what I work out here in an effort to be fair, and is it not enough? How much will it cost in Fresno to cure the crop from an acre of vines in raisin grapes? Will it cost $40? If so, then I am right, for labor here is worth 25 to 35 cents a day and there it costs at least $1.50, or six times as much. At that rate the Fresno man would pay out $60 an acre for cultivation and gathering and curing a good crop. I am not figuring irrigation, which here costs nothing; if it is done the expense is too small to distribute over the crop. Nor do I figure taxes, which are not much higher, if any, than in California. Neither do I put in the interest on the investment. Money is worth here 4 per cent., there 6 per cent. If an acre there and here is worth $100, the difference for this is only that between $40 and $60, and when distributed to 3000 pounds of cured product comes to only about half a cent, and that in favor of the Spaniard.

A late government report put last year's exports of raisins in Spain at a value of $3,714,300. Fresh grapes sent export were valued at $2,012,200. The vines of the country were valued at $16,310,000, which would make the products of the grape in all forms come to probably not less than $25,000,000. As to prices, a reference to the value of vines as given in an article on these will confirm my low estimate as to the cost of raisins. For if wine can be turned out at a market price of less than 2 cents a quart racked off of the lees, surely the cost of dried grapes (raisins) cannot be high. The price of grapes to make wine at 2 cents a quart or 8 cents a gallon would be less than half a cent a pound, probably not more than a quarter of a cent. The curing of three pounds of grapes into one of raisins where labor is as low as 10 cents to 20 cents for women and not over 50 cents for men is small. Again I must warn the reader of the fact that all kinds of fruits and all their products in Europe are commanding prices much above the average of five years. They are twice as high as for the year 1909, when the crops were excessive, and at least a third above the average.

RUBBER CROWDING TEA OUT.

The tea tasters in Mincing Lane are in for a hotter time of it than usual, and those who knew anything concerning that mysterious art are fully aware that at the best it is anything but a sinecure.

They are being called upon to exercise more than their usual amount of ingenuity in the matching, in both taste and appearance, of various Ceylon-grown teas of the cheaper grade. The explanation lies in the fact that the "low country" districts in Ceylon, the birthplaces of cheap teas, have been sacrificed for the planting of rubber trees.

It is doubtful whether any cheap Ceylon-grown teas will be upon the market in twenty years' time. Rubber needs a damp neighborhood for its production, and for this reason the low-lying lands are the ones needed, up-country districts being practically unaffected by the rubber craze.

A broker told the Daily Sketch yesterday that the housewife would not, because of this, be called upon to pay more for her pound of Ceylon tea. "The public," he said, "have become so used to the low-priced article that they would never pay a substantial rise. It simply means that the tea tasters will have to be a little more cunning than usual, and match exactly the Ceylon-grown tea."—[London Daily Sketch.

WOULD WIN ANY WAY.

The frequent and unsuccessful candidacy of certain men in this town for public office reminded George (Scotty) Dore of a story of his old friend Hogan.

"Hogan was raffling a clock," said Mr. Dore. "He was fairly successful in disposing of tickets in the shop where he worked, but he ran up against trouble when he canvassed his neighbors.

"Dropping in at a neighbor's house he tried to sell a ticket on the clock.

"'It's a fine timepiece and it'll luk foine on yer what not er mantel,' says Hogan cajolingly.

"'Gwan, the old clock doesn't run,' replied the neighbor.

"'Well,' drawled Hogan, changing front completely, 'well, perhaps yez won't win it, and then ye'll have the laugh on the fellow who does.'"—[Milwaukee Press.

A Talk With a Showman.

P. T. BARNUM AIRS HIS VIEWS ON THE CORONATION.

By Irvin S. Cobb.

"THIS young man George V. Rex, or George Guelph-Wettin, Esquire, or whatever his full name may be," remarked P. T. Barnum, "certainly has my sympathy. I was in the show business once myself.

"From all accounts, George is in for a lot of trouble and expense this coming week. My heart goes out to him, also my best wishes. As I understand it, he's due to lead the ballyhoo, double in brass for the street parade, play the big show under the main top at both the morning and the afternoon performances, and wind up along toward evening by doing a high dive and the Roman standing chariot race three times around the hippodrome track. He'll be lucky if they don't organize a concert and drag him in to do a turn for that.

"But he ought to be trained to the minute for it. He's had plenty of time. It's more than a year since the Lord Chamberlain, or the Lady Chambermaid, or Dr. Watson, or whoever it is that has charge of that department, went in and broke the news to him that he was no longer Prince of Wales. 'You are now King,' says the official announcer, 'and you will be entitled to sit in on the job and remain quiet and docile. But you won't be crowned for a year yet We've got all the preliminaries to arrange.' And George took his orders like a little man and obeyed without a word. That's one good thing you can say about the English royal family. The Kaiser may cut loose once in awhile, leading with his divine right and countering with his almost equally gifted left. There's been a lot of gossip about Manny, late of Portugal, and for the kind of whiskers he wore, King Leopold of Belgium was consideably talkrd about. But you can always say this for George—he's been one of the most thoroughly domesticated kings in the pack. You'd hardly know he was around the house. He remained calm and collected at all times. In the evening he'd be at home reading the works of Schiller until 9:30 p.m. and then retiring in a simple manner, and he rarely left the place, even on his Thursdays out. It was reported at one time that he was taking lessons on the zither, but this has been contradicted. He did shoo all the divorcees off the premises, there being quite a number of those parties that had been left over from the previous administration, and once in a great while, when he felt like a little excitement, he would slip out in the backyard, where he wouldn't annoy the neighbors, and shoot at a few clay pigeons with pictures of Lloyd George on them But in between times he'd help out with the housework. He never went out of the house without his rubbers, and he kept his heavy underwear on until late in the spring. His conduct as a King reminded me strikingly of our own Alton B. Parker. And now, as a reward of merit, they're going to give him a coronation.

"Believe me, it'll be a great show, too. Kings and queens and small suit cards have come from all over to take part. There's an Indian princess on hand that never shows her face in company. She's 50 years old and inclined to be stout, and you'd think she'd feel perfectly safe anywhere, but it's not for you and me to say. The lady herself is the best judge of what precautions she should take. And the King of Spain will be there, I hope, wearing his well-known semi-detached, two-family jaw, and likewise the Czar of Russia, with his half-story bungalow brow. But even if these two should be detained by business at home, there'll be a swell representation from all the other districts. Those related by blood or marriage to the royal family will make quite a party just by themselves. The King is a German who was born away from home, and you know what people the Germans are for large families. Well, they'll all be there with bells on, and then there's any number of these small princesses of the royal house of Denmark and elsewhere expected. I've seen the pictures of eighteen or twenty of them already, but I can't seem to tell one from another. To me all pictures of European princesses look alike, just the same as all pictures of race horses do. In each case—princess or horse—there's the same serious expression, with the face worn long and the front bangs down low on the brow, so it's my custom just to take a fleeting glance. If the Hapsburg jaw is there, I know it's a princess and not a horse, and if there's a small likeness of a jockey in the upper corner, I know it's a horse and not a princess, and I let it go at that.

"Well, anyhow, they'll all be there, along with the peers of the realm and all the noble lords of Perfidious Albumen, as the poet puts it. There'll be some American wives of English dukes and earls along, too. At one time it looked as if they'd have to hold an overflow meeting to accommodate all the American-born peeresses and their jewels, but Queen Mary chopped out of the herd all those who had one or more extra husbands in the discard, and also those that had been elevated to the nobility by way of the music-hall stage, and likewise those that favored harem skirts, and so she carved them down until, if it wasn't for the looks of the thing, the survivors could save money by chipping in and going to the coronation in a four-wheeler together.

"But the grand, free street parade, with the sun-bright chariots, and the soldiers, and the full military brass bands and the open cages full of tired lords, each wearing on his face the expression of fixed and confirmed melancholy that you see on a muley cow—all these will be only the beginning. The real entertainment will come at the Abbey afterward. It will start when all

NEW AND VALUABLE WORK DONE IN INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS.

By William Atherton Du Puy.

THAT the United States may take her position among the great world powers under the conditions that have come to exist in the last decade; that she may go out after the world business which her citizens have just begun to want; that she may place her steadying hand upon the troublous nations to the south and bring about continental peace; that she may lend a hand in the modernizing of the Far East and the near East; that these and a score of other things equally important may be done, the American State Department has found it necessary to throw off the drowse of the past and become exceedingly active. In doing this the department has found it necessary to initiate a score of new branches and to place at the head of these active young men typifying the American spirit and determined to make the American influence felt the world around. Just now the world is waking up to the existence of this new determination. It is inquiring into the manner of it. It is asking about this new work.

Getting World Trade.

Inquirers are finding back of the movement a score of young men at Washington. These men are culled from all those Americans who have had the good fortune of great experience in international affairs, who have had trainings that fit them for the handling of given great propositions where the need is great. These young men are being told to go forth and deliver the goods. The results are showing them equal to the trust.

Take, for example, the foreign trade of the United States. In the 200 years that this nation has taken in growing out of its swaddling clothes it had developed, in 1900, a business with the outside world amounting to two billion dollars a year. In the first decade of the present century that business jumped by more than an additional billion. The United States had never realized an ambition to become a world power previous to the Spanish-American War. That war caused not only her statesmen, but her merchants to begin to look abroad. The statesmen found a fertile field for national influence and the merchants found a prospective market for all they might produce.

The consular service of this nation already had representatives at every important post in the world, but those representatives had been performing comparatively small services for the very good reason that there was a home market for everything that America produced, and she had never thought of going beyond that market. Further than this, the consular service was entirely under the old political spoils system, and the men who made it up were placed upon a shelf of inactivity rather than thrust into the bustle of international business.

In Mr. Roosevelt's time the spoils system was finally done away with, and under Mr. Knox the red blood of business activity is being sent through the whole consular structure.

The post of director of the consular service has recently come into existence. To that post has been appointed Wilbur J. Carr of New York, one of the most experienced young officials of the department. He has served in the State Department since 1892. He has been confidential clerk to several assistant secretaries, has been chief of the consular bureau, chief clerk of the department. The province of the director of the consular service is to go out after the the world. The mere routine of the service from his work.

A short time ago, for instance, Servia templating putting an additional duty cottonseed oil. The director of the got busy, with the result that instead of creased, the duty was lowered. Today we 2200 barrels of cottonseed oil to Servia formerly shipped but 400 barrels. The of America ask Mr. Carr for fields for material. He finds those fields. The men sular service the world around report tariff inations against American goods. Mr. Carr to investigate the grounds back of these tions.

There are a great many matters in foreign trade from the American standpoint adjusting. We are new in foreign comm duty of this office is to ferret out these tions and so adjust matters that the American may have an equal break with all who tendencies seem to indicate that these adequate foreign market will within the become among the most important this nation. Mr. Carr proposes to have a ket ready for the American goods when the ready for the market.

Financing the Far East.

The division of Far Eastern affairs is a the State Department that has a work of nating interest. For the past year among all the great nations of the world progress with reference to the Hukuang China, which is to be financed by China regards the United States as among th her participation in financing all such enterprise in this great railway scheme. Yet a deal would have gone through in which only Europe would have participated had it not been for the newly-created division of Far Eastern affairs.

A protest was filed and a month ago the details were finally arranged under which the United States is to furnish a fourth of the money and certain proportion of the engineers for this great enterprise. American goods are expected to follow this American money and these American builders. Within the last few months, also, the United States has participated in a fifty-million-dollar currency reform loan extended to China. The American influence again follows the American money. The world movement for the reform of the opium traffic is also being actively pushed through this bureau. The protection of American missionaries is a part of its business, as is the delicate question of Japanese immigration. The Siamese princes would have been wards of this office had they remained until the present decade to become the greatest of window attractions.

Ransford S. Miller, Jr., is the head of the division of Far Eastern affairs. Mr. Miller has lived so long in Korea, Manchuria and Japan that the languages of the East are to him as his native tongue. He was for many years interpreter and afterward secretary of the Embassy in Tokio. He is an authority upon all of these vexed questions with relation to the Far East that may any time arise.

Edward T. Williams is assistant chief of the division of Far Eastern affairs. He has served for half a lifetime in China. There is probably no westerner living who knows Chinese business and the Chinese language better than Mr. Williams. He reads that language, for which there is a character for every word, as a light recreation. The philosophy of Confucius is as familiar to him as is that of Mr. Dooley to the Sunday supplement reader. He was for many years an interpreter in China, was Vice-Consul, Consul-General and Secretary of Legation at Peking. If there is anything to be fixed in the Far East the men of this division are competent to fix it.

The Near Land.

All that region of the world about the eastern end of the Mediterranean Sea is a land almost unknown to American influence. The people of those nations whose view the world's history began get but an occasional echo from the great west where republics spring up in a night. They have heard of the wealth and the power of the United States, but directly have had no contact with her. But all this promises to be changed through the work of the division of near Eastern affairs.

The chief of that division is Evan E. Young, a native of South Dakota, but for many years Consul at Egypt and later at Saloniki. Mr. Young has as an assistant Charles W. Fowle, who grew up in the near East and was educated at Roberts College, maintained in Turkey by American missionaries. Turkish is like a native tongue to Mr. Fowle, and through it the lore of the regions thereabout have been opened up to him.

These two young men have been endeavoring to extend the American influence into the turbulent Turkey and near-by states. One of the recent accomplishments of this division of near Eastern affairs has been the assignment of a corps of young Americans to Persia for the purpose of reforming and adjusting the financial system of that country. The reason the United States was asked to perform this service for Persia was because the jealousies of European powers in the Balkan region prevented any one of these nations being acceptable to the others. America, having no interests in Persia, was acceptable. There is just now being completed a railway concession to American contractors to build a road through Asiatic Turkey. It means the expenditure of a hundred million American dollars in that part of the world. It is reasonable to suppose that a great deal of American material will find its way into Asiatic Turkey in the course of this work. With these two accomplishments as a result of its two years' existence the new division feels that in the course of years America may be brought to have no mean hold upon the business of Western Asia.

In Latin America.

Two of the busiest young men in the State Department are William T. S. Doyle and Henry L. James of the division of Latin-American affairs. Mr. Doyle has been long associated with the State Department and was private secretary to Mr. Root when he, as Secretary of State, made his famous tour through South America. Mr. James was for a long time Secretary of Legation at Santiago de Chile, and also at Rio de Janeiro. Both young men are very familiar with Latin-American affairs and are kept intensely busy with the different issues that are constantly coming up in the South.

When young Converse, Blatt and Brown were recently charged with sedition in Mexico it was this office that secured their release. When Conductor A. Cook, charged with complicity in railway wreck, was kept in prison in Mexico for many months it was this same division got busy. When Cannon and Groce were killed in Nicaragua, it was this division of the State Department that investigated the facts and filed protests. War was prevented between the Haitian and the Dominican republics because of the good offices of this bureau in settling a dispute. The Dominican debt is being administered through this division and foreign nations satisfied while the black republic waxes wealthy. It was this division that secured the settlement of claims against Venezuela and umpired the withdrawal of ex-President Castro. It was this division that prevented the so-called Monte Carlo bill going through the Cuban Legislature. It was this division that engineered the downfall of Zelaya and established Estrada as President of Nicaragua. It prevented the steamship Hornet, belonging to the Bonilla faction in Honduras, from taking part in the recent war. It aided in securing for American firms a twenty-two-million-dollar contract for building battleships for the Argentine navy. It secured mediation between Peru and Ecuador when they were recently on the verge of war.

In fact, the division of Latin-American affairs is the liveliest influence in the affairs of the nations to the south that there is in the world today. It is the policy of the United States to be the big sister to the other republics of the western hemisphere and to bring to all of them peace, prosperity and stability of government. This is no small assignment, even for so active a nation as the United States, and the individual men who are carrying out this policy must have no small amount of diplomatic experience and tact.

Other New Ventures.

A division of Western European affairs has been created under the supervision of the Third Assistant Secretary of State, Chandler Hale. This division has charge of those routine matters relating to negotiations with the Western European countries, and is just now working upon the proposition to save the fur seals of our Alaskan islands from extermination. The amelioration of the conditions to be found in Liberia is another of its present activities.

But above all this division of Western European affairs is the entertainment bureau of our State Department. Whenever distinguished guests are formally received by the government arrangements are made through Chandler Hale. Whenever newly-accredited representatives of foreign nations arrive in Washington and are to be presented to the President, it is this division of the State Department that arranges the details. That delicate matter of precedence in the formal society of the nation's capital is settled by this same Third Assistant Secretary of State. And this alone is a task worthy of the steel of any man, for jealousies, national and personal, in such matters as who shall come first in being presented at given receptions are no mean things with which to cope.

The bureau of trade relations has been especially created for the purpose of enabling the Secretary of State to advise the President as to the extension of minimum tariff rates. Its duty is to study tariff relations of other nations and their application to our trade, and to determine whether or not this nation should favor a given country with its minimum rates. Charles M. Pepper has been selected chief of this bureau. He is a man of large experience, particularly in Latin-America. Another innovation in the State Department is the division of information, presided over by Philip H. Patchin. The object in maintaining this bureau is to cull the information in the current press of the world that bears particularly on diplomatic and trade relations and disseminate it throughout the department, including the consular and diplomatic offices of the entire world. So is there made a clearinghouse of this sort of information which will keep the whole of the service thoroughly posted upon diplomatic affairs.

Such are the new stunts that were begun under Secretary Root, and have been developed and perfected under Mr. Knox. The United States is going out after world business, and is awakening to the fact that her position in world affairs is second to none. The policy of the department has been styled by some "dollar diplomacy." The department accepts the nomenclature. It pleads guilty of dollar diplomacy. It acknowledged dollar diplomacy as its policy. It is out after the business of the world. It has put its active young men on the trail of that business and states its determination to bag its game.

The international influence of the United States has grown a hundredfold within the last ten years. Yet it is just now getting under way. In the years that are to come it is expected to forge constantly to the front. The sons of the present generation may see the United States the dominant influence in the neighborly affairs of the nations of the world. That formality and precedent that has so cumbered diplomatic relations in the past may be largely cut away by the young nation of the West which honors precedent more in the breaking than in the observance. International affairs may be put on a basis where accomplishment may be as easy in matters of national business as when a buyer goes to market for his goods. When this becomes a fact the world may be expected to move forward a pace.

Unktomi and The Fox.

HOW THE CUNNING SPIDER WAS OUTWITTED BY HIS FRIEND.

By Myra L. Shriver.

I HAVE told you how Unktomi, the spider, in the old time by singing a magic song during which the time, by singing a magic song (during which the birds were directed to keep their eyes shut) and beating time upon their heads instead of on his drum.

After the last few birds had escaped through the smoke hole in the top of the tepee, Unktomi gathered up all the dead birds and mads up his mind to have a feast all to himself. He was much too greedy to ask any one else to come to his feast.

So he gathered together a great pile of wood and burned it, and when the coals and ashes were just right, he spread them out nicely and arranged all the birds, covering each one with hot ashes so that it would be roasted. The two feet he turned up and left them uncovered. When he had finished there was a bed of ashes with birds' feet sticking out two by two all over it.

Before they were ready to eat the wind began to blow, and Unktomi grew anxious. "Friend," said he, "do stop blowing for a little while, for you might blow these hot ashes up into my face and burn me." But the wind did not pay the least attention to him, but blew harder and harder.

Presently he heard two big trees creaking and rubbing together in the wind. He thought they must be quarreling, so he left his birds roasting in the ashes and went over to the trees to see what all the trouble was about.

He listened for a while, and not being able to understand what was the matter, begged them to stop. But the trees did not pay any attention to him, either.

So he said to himself: "Well, I must put a stop to this in some way. It is terrible." He watched his chance, and put his hand in between the trees. Just then the wind stopped blowing for quite a long time, and Unktomi's hand was caught fast between the trees. He tried and tried to get it out, but could not.

After a little the fox came walking along. "Ho, Kola" ("Greeting, friend,") said he to Unktomi, "How are you getting along?"

"All right," said Unktomi, for he did not trust the fox, and did not dare to tell him what trouble he was in.

"Won't you walk along with me?" asked the fox.

"No, thank you," said Unktomi, "I am tired and I want to rest here a little while. But which way are you going?"

"Over this way," said the fox, pointing with his nose.

"Oh!" said Unktomi. "Well, if you see any ashes over at one side, don't go near them."

"Why not?" asked the fox.

"Because——" began Unktomi. "Well, because they are very hot and you might get burned."

"Very well," said the fox, "I will be careful."

So he went along, and as he went he wondered what the real reason was that Unktomi did not want him to go near the ashes.

Pretty soon he came to the place where he could see the bed of ashes so he went over to see what else there was to be seen.

When he saw all the birds' feet sticking out two by two, here and there and everywhere, he chuckled to himself, and said. "It is no wonder Unktomi was afraid I might get burned."

He walked around carefully and pulled out one of the birds by its two feet. It was roasted just exactly right, and it tasted so good that when he started to eat he never stopped, excepting just long enough from time to time to pull out another bird, until the last one was gone.

Then he buried the bones, and took all the feet and put them two by two into the ashes, and went on home.

All this time Unktomi was working to get his hand loose, and when at last he got it out, he ran back to his ashes as fast as he could, for he was afraid the fox would not mind him. When he saw the feet sticking out b twos he was glad, for he thought everything was all right, so he fixed up his tepee and put a feather in his hair, ready for his feast.

But when he went to get his birds, he found there was nothing at all in the ashes but feet! He was very angry and very hungry, and he hunted everywhere for the fox to punish him, but the fox was wise enough to keep out of sight. So at last he had to give up hunting and go home.

A WOMAN'S DESCRIPTION.

"If there is anything I am proud of," said Emmy Wehlen, "it is the descriptive power of my sex. Once, when I was playing in Pittsburgh, my best chum went out to inspect some locomotive works, and here is how she described it when she got home. 'You pour,' she said, 'a lot of sand into a lot of boxes, and you throw old stove lids and things into a furnace, and then you empty the molten stream into a hole in the sand, and everybody yells and swears. Then you pour it out, let it cool and pound it, and then you put in it a thing that bores holes in it. Then you screw it together and paint it, and put steam in it, and it goes splendidly; and they take it to a drafting-room and make a blue print of it. But one thing I forgot—they have to make a boiler. One man gets inside and one gets outside, and they pound frightfully; and then they tie it to the other thing, and you ought to see it go!'"—[Young's Magazine.

Confederates in Congress.

MORE IN NUMBER THAN THERE ARE UNION VETERANS.

By Worth Harder.

FIFTY years after the first guns of the Civil War sounded the Congress of the United States is in control of the Confederate armies. If the battle roll of the House and Senate were called today it would show more Confederate veterans in each branch of Congress than there are survivors of the armies of the blue

They are veterans of many battles and survivors of many trying situations. In the Senate there are six of these Confederate warriors; three of them—Senator Bacon of Georgia and Senators Johnston and Bankhead of Alabama—were captains in the southern ranks; the others, Senators Martin of Virginia, Thornton of Louisiana and Tillman of South Carolina, fought either as privates in the regular army, or as members of cadet corps that were enrolled for active service.

In the House of Representatives there are eight Confederates, including Brig.-Gen. George W. Gordon of Tennessee, Maj. Charles M. Stedman of North Carolina, and Capts. John Lamb of Virginia and William Richardson of Alabama. The other Confederates include Representatives Talbott of Maryland, Rucker of Colorado, Taylor of Alabama, and Estopinal of Louisiana.

It is about Representative William Richardson of Alabama that the most exciting stories of the Congressional camp fires are told. His story is one that has been preserved in official histories of the Civil War, but only in fragmentary shape. As it is told here again, it is from his own lips, with the memory of nearly fifty years undimmed as to its important features.

Representative Richardson was less than twenty years old when he was made a captain in the Twenty-sixth Alabama Regiment. He had enlisted with Co. E from the town of Athens, Ala., with eighty-seven other young men and boys. The company went through the fierce campaigns in which the Twenty-sixth Alabama engaged, and young Richardson was finally badly wounded at Shiloh, and was captured by the Federal troops.

He was sent to an Indiana prison. Here his wound healed, and after a time he escaped and made his way to Nashville. The city was at that time in the control of the Federal forces, and Richardson found himself in the hands of southern friends, but unable to work his way out through the Union lines to his regiment.

Friends finally told him they had found a man who was going out through the Union outposts, and who knew all the winding paths by which such a feat could be accomplished. Richardson was put in his care, and the two men, dressed in citizens' clothes, made their way safely until they reached the vicinity of Murphreesboro. Here his guide's plans went wrong, and at one of the last outposts of the Federal troops the Confederates were captured.

To Richardson's horror, the Union pickets found upon his companion evidence that he was an important spy in the Confederate service. They found nothing on Richardson, but the circumstances of his discovery, and the charges that were preferred against him by the men who had stopped the couple resulted in his also being held as a spy captured within the Federal lines.

The two men were brought before a court-martial hastily convened in the Union camp. This was about July 10, 1862. The charges were made against them, the court-martial passed upon their cases and both were condemned to be hanged.

The sentence of death by hanging was passed on Richardson July 12. That night a provost marshal came to the jail where the two men were confined, and informed them of the sentence. They were to be hanged at sunrise next day. The opportunity was given Richardson to take the oath of allegiance, but he refused to do this. A minister who had known him in Athens happened to be in Murphreesboro, and after his efforts to secure the Confederate captain's relief had failed, he came to the cell on the night sentence was given, and spent part of the night with the two men.

In the meantime, the Confederate spy had managed to slip word through to the South of the plight of himself and the innocent prisoner of war. It was a forlorn hope, but it was the means by which help came to the two men just before daylight on the day of their proposed execution

"I was lying asleep in the cell," says Representative Richardson, "when I was awakened by Paul's tugging at my arm.

"'Wake up,' he cried; 'listen; it's Forrest coming. We are saved.'

"At first I was too dazed to realize more than that there was a sound like an approaching jumped up on a box so that we could little grated window; and in a few resolved itself into distinct hoofbeats. A more and the advance of Forrest's cavalry sight, and stormed the jail where we That rebel yell was the sweetest ever known.

"Our boys began to break down the jail while they kept the Federal guards busy jailer had gone with the keys, and in the followed the jail was set on fire. The alrymen, led by Forrest himself, had way through all the outer defenses of the our cell corridor. Even then we after they had pried our cell door up with and dragged us out by main force."

The attack upon Murphreesboro by Gen. his famous cavalry was the turning career, and established his reputation He had pushed his men on a long forced a small body of troops into the town and jail, and sent the balance of his force against the Micnigan and Pennsylvania were on opposite sides of the town. Before forces were awake or armed, the had ridden them down, killed hundreds, condemned men, and so firmly established that the Federal troops were forced to

The only Confederate general in Congress sentative George Washington Gordon of the recent Confederate reunion at Little Gen. Gordon was a prominent figure. His striking one; he was captured three times; wounded once and slightly wounded several in every important battle participated in by see troops, and was finally taken prisoner to Ft. Warren, Mass., where he was held months after the war was concluded.

Gen. Gordon graduated from the Western Institute at Nashville in 1859; enlisted in July drill master in the Eleventh Tennessee soon was transferred into the regular military the Confederacy. He became captain, nel, and finally brigadier-general in 1864.

Two men in the House of Representatives John Lamb of Virginia and Maj. Charles M. North Carolina, were with the 1200 fought the battle of Bethel, the first and were still fighting with the army of ginia when Lee laid down his arms at 9, 1865. The records show that only joyed this distinction.

Capt. Lamb was a cavalryman, and tain, commanded the famous Sharpshooters Every officer of his command was killed, exception of himself. The last of his, fell dead at his side the day before der at Appomattox.

Maj. Stedman, commanding the Forty- Carolina, fought with Lee throughout the wounded time and again. He participated ing campaign that stretched through Spottsylvania Courthouse and Petersburg tempt of Gen. Grant to force his passage River.

"There were thirty-two Confederates and sixteen in the Senate when I came says Capt. Lamb. "We used to have erings in Washington then, with telling and reminiscences. Some of died, others have become Governors within the last year or two some have of Congress by the younger boys."

Both Maj. Stedman and Capt. Lamb memory of Robert E. Lee, the man served during most of the war, and as the greatest figure of the war.

[illegible] as to his most lasting impression of the great Confederate leader.

"The picture of Gen. Lee that stands out most vividly in my mind is that of Spottsylvania Courthouse," said Congressman Stedman. "Gen. Lee held a place at the front of the line, mounted on his horse, and close to a brick kiln, against which the Federal bullets and shells were constantly pounding. I remember that he had on a new uniform, and the brick dust sifted over him and marked him from head to foot.

"During much of that fight I was within twenty paces of Gen. Lee. Our line was entrenched behind a hurriedly constructed earthworks; but our artillery had their guns so trained that when the Federal infantry, masking their attack behind an artillery fusillade, would reach a certain point in the field in front of us, our guns would rake their line and shatter it.

"Time and again the Federals made this advance and in one of the last charges part of the Federal troops got up within twenty yards of our line. There the fire became so terrific that some of the Federals, to escape it, dropped to the ground and crawled inside our lines giving themselves up. Two of them came through the lines close to Gen. Lee's position. Raising themselves from the ground they caught sight of the striking figure on horseback.

"'Is that Gen. Lee?' asked one of them.

"I answered him that it was.

"'Well, I don't wonder you fight for him,' said the Federal."

Capt. Lamb tells a striking story of Gen. Lee's characteristic reverence for the rights of non-combatants. After the battle of Gettysburg, as the Confederate forces started the next morning for the march, an artillery train turned out of a farmyard, through a rail fence that had been lowered for the purpose. The artillerymen left the rails down, and Gen. Lee, coming up shortly after, saw the gap in the fence. He dismounted, put the rails back into position, and said to an officer near him:

"Our men are too careless about not putting things back into condition."

The great-grandfather of Capt. Lamb, who was a private in the Revolutionary army, had between forty and fifty sons and grandsons in the Confederate ranks. In the company in which Capt. Lamb enlisted there were [illegible] of these descendants.

Atterson W. Rucker, now a Congressman from Colorado, went through a trying prison experience as a 15-year-old boy. He enlisted from Missouri, with the Confederate forces. He was with Price at the battle of Lexington, and figured in the long running fight under Shelby and Marmaduke, from the Missouri River southward.

When the fighting retreat was ended, Rucker and many others had been captured. They were turned over to the Federal forces, and with twenty-six other men and boys, young Rucker was thrown into prison at Springfield, Ill.

"There were twenty-seven of us put into the Springfield prison," says Congressman Rucker, "and within six months after I left I was the only one alive. I helped to dig the graves of twenty-four of my comrades. Two were in prison when I left, and were soon removed to St. Louis, but within six months they both died from the effects of their imprisonment.

"I don't know why I lived," Mr. Rucker added. "I've always thought it was because they made me work so hard burying the others."

The Colorado Congressman was paroled November [illegible], but was never exchanged back into the Confederate ranks.

The Confederate battle record of Senator John H. Bankhead of Alabama runs through a notable list of engagements. He enlisted with the Sixteenth Alabama, as a second lieutenant, in August, 1861. In 1863, when [illegible] William Powers resigned the captaincy of Co. K of his regiment, young Bankhead was elected to the command of the company.

Through Shiloh, Perryville, Murphreesboro, Chickamauga, Atlanta and Franklin, Senator Bankhead fought his way. He was wounded desperately in Buckner's charge at Chickamauga, and was wounded three times in other engagements. He served throughout the entire war.

Senator Bacon of Georgia likewise had a long and honorable service in the Confederate ranks. He enlisted at the beginning of the war and served during 1861 and 1862 as adjutant of the Ninth Georgia Regiment in the army of Northern Virginia. Later he was made a captain and assigned to staff duty and continued in that rank to the end of the war.

Senator Joseph F. Johnston of Alabama is another who has the distinction also of having attained the rank of captain in the Confederate ranks when he was only about 18 years old. The circumstances of his enlistment at the head of a company were peculiar. He was born in North Carolina, but had gone to Alabama at an early age to be under the care of his guardian, who lived in Shelby county, in that State.

He was put into a military school, and was there at the time the call was made for troops. The class went into the army in a body, and Senator Johnston became its captain and the head of the school company. His service was almost continuous throughout the war, except when wounds kept him out of action. In all, he was wounded four times during the war, having served in many of the most important engagements in the war.

Senator Martin of Virginia, like Senator Johnston, went into the army as a boy member of a military-school brigade. Senator Martin was 17 years old, and a student at the Virginia Military Institute, when he enlisted with the students of that school as a private in the Confederate army. He served throughout the last year of the war, until Lee laid down his arms in April, 1865.

The Virginia Military Institute had an important place in the education of the men who led the Confederate forces. From among its graduates and students that school furnished five major-generals, twenty-one brigadier-generals, eighty-nine colonels and 117 captains to the Confederate forces.

Senator John R. Thornton of Louisiana has a long record of Confederate service, although he served as a private throughout his entire enlistment.

Louisiana's Confederate delegation includes, besides Senator Thornton, Representative Albert Estopinal, who served more than three years in the campaigns through the lower Mississippi Valley. He was in the siege of Vicksburg, and in the Mobile campaign, but was not wounded in any of the engagements.

Mr. Estopinal joined Co. G of the St. Bernard Guards as a private, and with that company went into the Twenty-eighth Louisiana Regiment. He commanded the squad which took prisoners from the Indianola to Libby prison; served later in the quartermaster's department at Meridian, Miss., and finally surrendered with his regiment to Gen. Canby at Meridian, in March, 1865.

Representative George W. Taylor of Alabama is another Confederate veteran now in Congress who went into the army by way of the schoolroom door. When the war broke out, Mr. Taylor was too young to be even a drummer boy. He was sent to an academy in Columbia, S. C., in the early years of the war, and from that place he enlisted at the age of 15, in November, 1864.

He found constant employment as a courier until the end of the war, the next spring. His first few weeks' service were on the coast near Savannah, with the South Carolina State troops. Then he enlisted as a private in Co. D of the First South Carolina regiment, and served with them until peace was declared.

The only Confederate representative from north of the Potomac River is Joshua F. C. Talbott of Maryland, the oldest Democrat in point of service in the House of Representatives, and the member who administered the oath of office to Speaker Champ Clark at the beginning of this Congress. Representative Talbott was a cavalryman during the last year of the war, serving as a private in the Second Maryland Cavalry.

CLOTHING OF MINERAL WOOL.

Now Thomas A. Edison is telling us that one day we shall find clothing "dirt cheap" for the reason that the sources of mineral wool are inexhaustible and processes are under way by which it will be robbed of its "scratchiness," be spun, woven, dyed and withal turned out into the nattiest kind of garments.

Mr. Edison might have said that it will be "slag" cheap. Mineral wool, or as it has been called mineral cotton, is produced by turning a jet of steam through liquid slag from a furnace. Under the influence of the steam the hot slag is blown into fine white threads. Until Mr. Edison mentioned its coming adaptability for clothing mineral wool has been valuable as a nonconductor of heat, and as such has been used as a covering for boilers and steam and hot water pipes.

Which suggests that a mineral all-wool overcoat may be all right in a hard winter, while an undershirt of even mineral cotton might be uncomfortably warm in August.—[Chicago Tribune.

FORETOLD IN A DREAM.

A fatal accident that was foretold in a dream was described yesterday at an inquest at Old Hill, near Birmingham, on the body of a miner named Benjamin Westwood, who was killed at the Fly Colliery.

His brother William said that on Tuesday night he had a dream, and in it he saw his brother killed. He added: "I did not go to work on Wednesday morning, for my dream made me so ill that I was unable to leave my bed, and have been unable to do any work since.

"In my dream I saw a considerable quantity of coal fall from the roof on to my brother, knock him down and kill him, and from what those who witnessed the accident have told me, my dream was fulfilled. I did not go to my brother's house to warn him, as I was too ill to leave home."—[London Chronicle.

NAMING THE GERRYMANDER.

The gerrymander was christened in 1813, although it must have been in operation long before that. A stanch old Federalist, Gov. Eldridge Gerry, controlled through his Legislature the redistricting of Massachusetts under the census of 1810.

In the office of Benjamin Russell, an ardent Republican editor, hung a map of the State as newly subdivided by Gerry and his men. Gilbert Stuart's ready pencil whimsically added to the outlines of a gorgeous district the wings and tail of a dragon.

"Ha!" he said when he had finished. "How's that for a salamander?"

The Republican Russell growled: "Better call it a Gerrymander." And American politicians have taken his advice.—[The Independent.

STORY OF DURUY AND PASTEUR.

The centenary is approaching of the birth of Victor Duruy, the French historian, who was also Minister of Education under Napoleon III. One day he and Pasteur shared a cab to drive to the Institut de France, and Duruy proposed to pay. "No change," said the cabman when tendered a five-franc piece. "No matter," replied Duruy. "Keep the coin as a souvenir of the fact that you have today driven the greatest man of science in France."

Whereupon Pasteur, not to be outdone, produced another five-franc piece. "And keep this coin also," he said, "in memory of the fact that you have today driven the greatest Minister of Education that the world has ever seen."—[Pall Mall Gazette.

A Famous Tree.

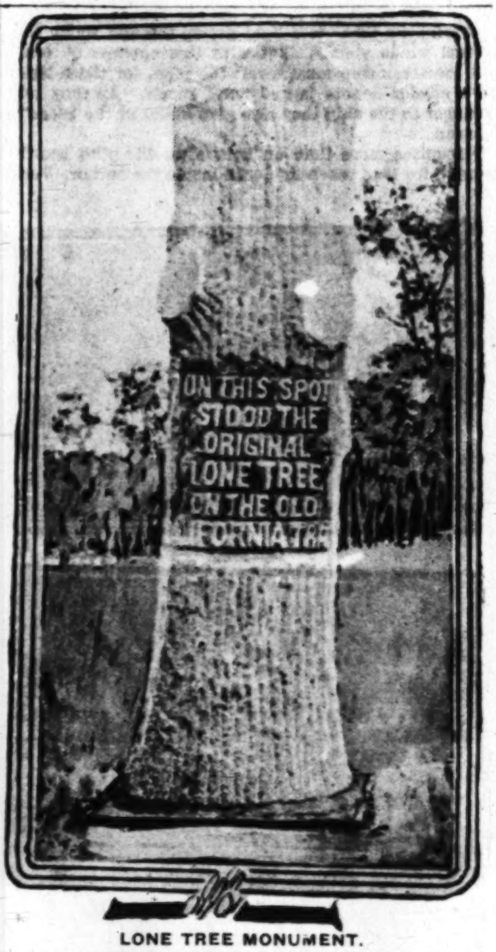
LAND MARK OF CALIFORNIA TRAIL PERPETUATED IN STONE.

By T. R. Porter.

CENTRAL CITY (Neb.) June 12.—The famous "Lone Tree" which stood almost in the center of the United States and under whose wide branches rested thousands and thousands of gold hunters of '49 en route to the El Dorado of the Pacific Coast, has been perpetuated in marble and a facsimile in stone has just been erected on the spot once occupied by the famous old landmark.

The "Lone Tree" was the best-known camping ground on the old California trail, and from 1849, when the gold seekers rushed across the great plains, down to the completion of the Union Pacific Railroad, the old tree stood out boldly as a guide-post to the wagon trains trekking westward. After the railroad was completed and there was no further use for its help, the tree died.

It was an immense cottonwood, four feet in diameter and very tall. Being one of the few trees between the Missouri and the Rockies, it soon became the best-known landmark on the trail. As a further mark of distinction, the old tree stood almost in the center of the continent between New York and San Francisco—within less than one mile of the central point.



LONE TREE MONUMENT.

The monument which the Nebraska Pioneers have just reared in memory of "Lone Tree" is made from Vermont marble, and was chiseled in the East. It represents the trunk of a giant cottonwood and bears this inscription:

"On This Spot Stood the Original Lone Tree on the California Trail."

A POLICEMAN'S JOKE.

"Ever go over on the East Side?" asked Rose Stahl. "If not, you miss half the joy of living in New York. Just for fun I made the rounds the other day with a reporter friend of mine. A few blocks east of the Bowery we observed a crowd hanging about a certain corner and approached a policeman.

"'What's the row over there?' the reporter asked.

"The policeman grinned. 'Nuthin',' he replied. 'Nuthin' but a wooden weddin'.'

"'A wooden wedding?' The newspaper man pondered and reached for his pencil. 'Who is it?'

"'Why, it's a wooden weddin',' answered the policeman, in a matter-of-fact voice. 'It's a couple of Poles gettin' married.'"—[Young's Magazine.

COMEDY IN THE CAPITOL.

"Whenever I am in Washington," said Wilton Lackaye, "I always spend an afternoon at the Capitol. They put on the best farce comedy there ever staged. The last time a friend accompanied me to point out the 'celebs.' A newly-elected western Senator was pounding his desk and waving his arms in an impassioned appeal to the Senate.

"'What is the matter with him?' I whispered to my friend.

"'Oh, he can't help that,' was the answer. 'It's a birthmark.'

"'A what?'

"'A birthmark,' repeated my friend. 'His mother was scared by a windmill.'"—[Young's Magazine.

A Chip of Old Holland.

HOW THE DUTCH LIVE ON AN ISLAND IN THE CARIBBEAN.

By Alfred C. Pickells.

PICTURE an island barely ten miles wide and twenty miles long, fringed with white, bleached sand backed by somber gray rocks and a mass of green foliage, topped by half a dozen small peaks of brown clay, the whole centered in a broad expanse of deep blue and tinted with a purple haze, and you have before you the little Dutch island of Curacao in the Caribbean Sea.

Drawing nearer toward the harbor entrance on the southern side of the island, Willemstad, the capital, comes into view with the riot of the light and color of a sunburst. It is like a picturesque section of old Dordrecht transplanted to the West Indies. The city, low and squatty, presents the appearance of confused jumble of houses colored pink and yellow, blue and green, with red-tiled roofs lined with white edges and shaped into the queer gables and dormer windows of the Old Fatherland. It reminds one of an Oriental toy shop. Here and there to the east and west are the white, thick-walled and red-topped buildings of a plantation.

With the approach to the harbor the deep blue of the Caribbean turns to a light green, through which the channel winds visibly. Yet with this apparently easy trail the steamship must await the pilot, for those light green shades denote jagged coral shoals. As they tell of danger to the ship they also give a hint of the island's make-up.

It requires more than an hour after the pilot boards the ship for it to reach its docks inside the harbor. Very slowly old Fort Curacao, at the entrance, passes. It can hardly be said that it guards the entrance, for it is only a low, antiquated, irregular structure of granite that is slowly crumbling into an unheeded decay. It contains a few rusty cannon, and is garrisoned by a company of short, rounded Dutch soldiers dressed in light blue jackets and white trousers and wearing police helmets.

Passing this narrow entrance brings the steamer into a wide lagoon, the most securely landlocked harbor in the Caribbean. To effectually describe it best would be to use Capt. Kidd's own words, for it was once his favorite headquarters:

"The entrance is narrow, but once inside there is plenty of water, and a ship can lie here in safety, completely hidden from the sea by the hills."

On the right is the town of Willemstad, populated by the Dutch colonists and the foreign residents; on the left is Overzijde, the city of the natives. Only about a quarter of a mile of water surface separates the two, and one can easily hear the guttural tones of the Dutch on one side and the chatter of the native jargon on the other. It is really one big city divided by water.

Before the vessel can reach its dock it must await the opening of the queer little bridge that connects the two towns. It is, in fact, nothing more than a string of little boats over which a flexible plank walk is laid. I say flexible because to open the bridge a little, puffing tugboat pulls one end around until it forms a great half-circle from one side of the harbor until the incoming steamer passes.

For its size Curacao has been in the limelight of history far more times than its neighbors of larger territory. The principal reason for this is that it is regarded as one of the best naval strategic bases in the Caribbean Sea. The River Schottegat runs back with navigable waters to a great plain between Goat and Santa Barbara mountains, where the Dutch have established their naval station in a still safer and more secluded spot.

History says that Curacao was first discovered by Hojeda in 149_, and until the sixteenth century was occupied by Spanish settlers. In those days such island possessions could be seized by the mere taking, for the affairs of the Old World had not spread thus far west and garrisons were small. In 1632 a Dutch admiral captured the small garrison in the old Spanish citadel that had been built at the foot of Goat Mountain, subjugated the few Spanish settlers, and planted the flag of the Netherlands.

The Dutch held it until 1807, but not without a great deal of fighting. First came the pirates, to whom the Dutch finally allowed harbor privileges. Then came the English, whom they beat off by a decisive battle on the plain of Santa Barbara. But the English finally conquered it and held it from 1807 to 1815, when they ceded it back to Holland by the Treaty of Amiens.

In late years it has become the refuge of the political exiles from Colombia, Santo Domingo, Haiti and Venezuela, and very frequently the headquarters of the plotters against those countries. During the last defense of his administration, ex-President Castro made it the object of both his spite and his convenience. In 1908 the business of preparing for the struggle in Venezuela on its shores by both government and revolutionary troops became so great that the Dutch Governor came out with a decided stand for neutrality. Castro at once issued a decree that goods for the western ports of Venezuela from the United States and other countries, which had always been transshipped at Willemstad, must thereafter pass through Porto Cabello, on the north Venezuelan coast, otherwise they would not be admitted. The result was such a depression in the commerce and business of Willemstad that the population rose in anger and sent the Venezuelan representatives home. But when Castro fled from his own country he entered Willemstad and so completely wrapped the slow-thinking Dutchmen about his fingers that he remained for several days in security.

A census of Curacao has never been taken, but its population is estimated at 50,000. Due to its great maritime commerce about one-half of this number might be included in the floating list, for, especially among the maritime contingent, they make their home there for several years at a time. In conversation with a negro sailor-cook, on a recent trip to Willemstad, it developed that the fellow had left his ship eight years before, had worked on the docks and learned the language and customs of the natives, and was then awaiting an op-

The answer is simply the repetition of that which has developed the native jargon of Curacao. Originally it was Castilian. But with the Dutch came Hebrew bankers, English, German, French and Spanish shippers, and from these the natives were quick to pick words here and there. The resultant language in Overzijde, therefore, has become a peculiar combination of corrupt Spanish, Dutch and English, accentuated by the strenuous physical contortions of the Latins. It is called papamiento.

Being the center of population and commerce of the island, Willemstad is a busy little place. Its streets are narrow and irregular, and paved with the great cobblestones of the Fatherland. Sometimes it is quite possible to shake hands across the narrow walks from the overhanging windows of the houses. Farther up toward the Governor's palace, however, the streets widen out, and immediately in front of the building there is a great plaza.

Business in Willemstad is centered along the water front. One glance shows that it is mostly a maritime business. Along the docks lie great flat-bottomed lighters, quaint tugboats, schooners and sloops, and the steamships of the regular lines that trade th there are great warehouses filled with incom going freights. Rapid transit in Willemstadd.

A TRAMP ALONG THE SHORE WEST FROM POINT FIRMIN.

By F. W. Reid.

FOR a tramp of exploration any trolley terminus makes a good jumping-off place. You can travel on wheels a long way from home, and reserve your muscles for the walking. At one end of the iron network the mountain canyons open their attractions to the climber. At the other end begins the long trail of the sand where, should the day turn out sultry, the sea breeze is sure to take the sting out of the temperature. Point Firmin is as far south as the cars go. Many people remember the point as the rocky corner which they rounded just before entering the harbor of Los Angeles. The car ends its run close by the low tower of the government lighthouse. Open to the public on Sundays, this free show is largely patronized by visitors. To the east of the cliff lies a rocky cove, down to which a winding path has been cut, and sheltered seats have been placed in every available nook. All along the cliff edge, too, there are resting places, from which the lazy tourist can watch Catalina Island developing, like a slow negative, out of the morning mist, and now and then a lumber schooner creeping down channel. Altogether Point Firmin, high and breezy, is an ideal spot to lounge away a hot midsummer holiday.

But we have not come down to loaf, but to explore the coast. A big dancing pavilion on the edge of the bluff is the last building in Point Firmin. Passing beyond its sheltering cypress hedges, the westward-lying country opens out to view a perspective of promontories backed by rounded hills of moderate elevation. It looks a lonely land, and it is. For that cluster of houses a mile off is the last settlement. Thence to Redondo, which is more than twenty miles away, habitations are few, and extremely far between. Seven miles or so west along the coast lies Portuguese Bend, and this we will make our objective.

A road bordered by young bluegums runs parallel with and close to the cliff. Down below the tide has ebbed so far that the bright green offshore weeds are uncovered. All the smooth water of the sheltered bay between Point Firmin and the next cape is stained a red-brown by the kelp, which always grows densest where there are plenty of rocks for its stalks to anchor on. A stranger might imagine that a shipload of paint had been jettisoned and mingled with the ocean blue. If houses are few, there is plenty of cultivation. A pleasant smell of harvest comes from the drying grasses and the heaps of cut barley. Near the angle of the bay stands a tall post supported on a pedestal of timbers. This arrangement is twice repeated on the hillsides inland, and, as the posts are in line, they probably serve as landmarks to vessels at sea, as church steeples do in more populous localities.

A little farther on we pass through a gateway marked with the letters "Private Road." The gate stands hospitably open, and the sign indicates that all beyond lies in the domain of Los Palos Verdes. One of the lordly old ranches, it covers all the hill and mesa land from here to Redondo. In the map it is represented by a blank space, and its contribution to the last census return must have been small indeed. Just here the unfenced fields are green with tall rustling corn plants and the lowly Lima bean to the very brink of the bluffs. The cultivators, who are watering their horses at a wayside trough, are Japanese. The babies that toddle out of the unpainted shack and "hello" in American fashion are also Japanese by mark of eye and hair, even if they were born on this soil. Close by the reservoir a good road winds down the cliff to a private beach owned, it appears by the notice, by Ramon Sepulveda. Looking down one sees a bungalow nestling in an angle of the rocks, and in front of it a small grove of baby gum trees, which seem to be bravely making headway against the sea breezes. For a secluded retreat this little seaside property is very well located.

A mile or two beyond the tank the ranch road curves inland alongside a big tomato field. But we need not leave the coast. There is plenty of room for pedestrians between the last row of plants and the edge of the cliff, though no vestige of a trail is visible. From the top of the next hill we get a wide view of the wild country ahead. That nose of land which sticks out so far in the west must be the Long Point of the map. It shows where the coast trends away to the northward. Portuguese Bend we cannot see for intervening hills, but we must be half-way there. At the bottom of the next ditch a short easy trail leads down to the beach, and we will do the rest of the trip alongshore.

There are no yellow sands. The continuous line of cliffs is mainly built up of a rotten shale, fragments of which pave the shore with a mosaic of rocks and boulders of all shapes and sizes. The cliff itself is buttressed by a sloping "talus" or embankment of stony debris, matted together by herbage of sorts; small sunflowers shine out against a mass of briny thick-leafed plant, the ice plant, which is now turning strawberry-red, trails its stalks covered with glistening drops. A line of jetsam marks the limit of the spring tides. Broken boxes and planks, the sawn trunk of a small tree and heaps of small kindling wood remain where the sea cast them up. On this lonely coast there is no one to gather them. The risk of being caught by the tide is small. The beach is raised, with a margin beneath the cliff base and the high-water mark of dried weed which cushions the pebbles. On this surface the walking is springy and easy underfoot. Where it is necessary to pick the way among a chaos of rocks the perpetual change of step becomes tiresome. Then by way of relief one strikes the back of a long smooth reef, dipping seaward. It has held back a great pool of clear salt water in which shoals of small striped fish are swimming and feeding. Crabs with enameled shells, black and red or yellow, scuttle into the weedy crevices; the overhanging eaves of rock are studded with anemones, fleshy lumps half-smothered in sand and fragments of shell. A beach like this is full of interest at low tide; and, the coast being deeply indented, every corner hides a new scene.

Only points of importance are named on the map. But here juts out a headland so like a ruinous tower that it immediately suggests the name Castle Point. After rounding it, Portuguese Bend comes into sight. For a mile ahead the shore line runs nearly straight. The parallel cliffs diminish to low banks where they meet the huge outthrust of Portuguese Point, looming dark and high. The sheltered angle is the "Bend." It was a whaling station, they say, in the olden time of Dana's "Two Years Before the Mast;" and the lone white cabins which stand out against the broken hummocky background may be a legacy of the whalers. The bay is completely protected from westerly storms, but lies open to the southeast. No tall ships anchor there now; only a fishing boat and the steam launch which carries excursionists over from Long Beach.

The last of the ebb has uncovered hard, firm sands on which a multitude of gulls are taking their ease. Out on some tide-washed rocks pelicans, white and gray, stand stiffly, with their necks curved back like interrogation marks. And here lies a genuine relic of the past: the bleached vertebra of a whale. Plug the hole through which the spinal cord passed with a cork, and the socket of the joint would make a large wash basin. Perhaps it is a fragment of the last whale beached here, one wonders how many years since.

The cabin at the Bend carries a sign with the legend "Silk Hat." The connection of this with an old whaling station is not obvious, but there happens to be no one around to solve the mystery. The trail that climbs up past the buildings leads over the back of the headland, and then drops down to a very picturesque little bay. Landlocked by two long capes which jut far out to the southward, it might be the pirate's haven of a Treasure Island. The cliffs here are steeper and of a denser composition; the coast more rockbound. In spite of this the waves have worn a needle's eye clean through the westerly horn of the bay. The tide comes in through the passage with a hollow rumble and splash. Swallows flit in and out of the archway, in the niches of which they are nesting. The beach is elevated, and the end of the point comes down upon a solid platform of rock that shows no signs of being submerged at high tide. Passing round the promontory, further progress is checked by a wide trench of uncertain depth through which the sea is surging. It leads into the other end of the tunnel, and shows from which quarter the work was excavated by the current.

Here, then, our beach tramp came perforce to an end. The objective point had been reached in three hours from Point Firmin, or thereabouts. It remained to take a good long rest under the lee of the rocks, and then return by another way as far as practicable.

That is always good policy on a walking round trip. The homeward route, too, should be shorter and easier, if possible, than the outward in order to stave off that tired feeling. The plan here was to pick up the ranch road somewhere on the mesa back of the "Silk Hat." A narrow weed-grown trail was discovered, which wound through a gap in the cliffs and led to a great barn where some more Japanese were at work.

Underfoot, the surface, a crumbling adobe, proved as easy as a cinder track. The point of view was changed. For this mesa road is terraced high, perhaps 300 feet higher than the beach. Close by on the left hand rose the hills, gentle undulations like the South Downs of the English coast. They had changed their green garment for that robe of early summer which is woven of so many tints; into which the sages put pearly-gray and the bee flowers stands of purple, which the mustard splashes with vivid yellow. On the right the long slope was more or less occupied with green crops, whose thrifty condition testified to the skill of the Japanese as "dry" farmers, for no signs of irrigation were apparent. For leagues the channel spread out its level blue, fading into the misty horizon.

It is no thoroughfare, this ranch road, and therefore somewhat weed-grown and pleasantly dust-free. No human wayfarers were encountered. But rabbits popped in and out of the herbage; squirrels scuttled away flourishing their tails; from all sides came the sweet fluting of many meadow larks; glossy blackbirds swooped down, showing their scarlet shoulder knots. A strange bird, half sky-blue, half white, swings for an instant on a stalk, and is gone. What was it? Maeterlinck's bluebird in flesh and feathers, or a lazuli bunting? Anyhow, there is such a bird as a lazuli bunting.

Half-way back the moaning at the bar was plainly heard; the strange bell-like sound that comes from the warning signal off Point Firmin, where you see the red cone. By this easy route it took only two hours and a quarter to reach the trolley end from Portuguese Point. Say seven miles for the return and nine going out; a round trip of sixteen.

But one word before leaving Point Firmin. Don't be in too great a hurry to go home. The hour before sunset in summer is often of exquisite beauty here. Go to that angle of the coast where you can look down upon the breakwater and a wonderful panorama of a clear evening, all the breadth and depth of the land is spread out; from the westland hills, mellow with sunshine, across to Long Beach and the blue mountains of Santa Ana; from the winding river of the harbor front to the jagged skyline of the Sierra.

TOWN MADE OF METHODISTS.

SIN REDUCED TO MINIMUM IN THE CITY OF BALDWIN, KAN.

[Kansas City Journal:] Baldwin, Kan., the home of Baker University, the big Methodist school of the West, is in a class all by itself. There is no other town in the State like it.

Religion forms the warp and woof not only of the college and its attaches and students, but of the business interests as well. Talk with the Baldwin banker, barber, druggist or liveryman for five minutes and he will say something about the religious spirit that pervades the townsite. And he speaks of it in a friendly way, too. He seems to take great pride in it. The spirit of the people is so entirely different from that of other towns that it is very noticeable as well as refreshing.

Once upon a time Baldwin had a Commercial Club, run on the same lines as such clubs are run on in other towns. It failed of its purpose. The business men say it was due to the lack of true Baldwin spirit, which being interpreted means that it lacked the thread of religion in its fabric.

Another club has now arisen in the ashes of the Commercial Club and it is accomplishing all sorts of things in town development. It is the Methodist Brotherhood. When some one thinks of a scheme that will help the town he presents it to the Methodist Brotherhood, which gives it consideration. If it is approved then the brotherhood gets behind and pushes with all the vim of the Kansas City Commercial Club. If the brotherhood disapproves it the scheme is dropped.

Every business man in the town being a Methodist belongs to the brotherhood, and all take great interest in the club and its work. The brotherhood meets once a month, and all the business houses close, except the drug store, so that the proprietors and clerks can attend the meeting. The brotherhood aroused interest in municipal improvements until the town now has a complete sewer system, electric lights and water works.

It is working on a Fourth of July celebration at present and a farewell reception to Dr. Murlin, retiring president of Baker. These things are cited simply to show the wide scope of its work.

A stranger is soon impressed with the seeming eccentricities of the town. For instance, the hotel will not keep cigars in stock for its customers. The proprietor doesn't believe in smoking. One druggist keeps cigars, the only ones in town. A stranger noticed that the cigar case was rather empty and asked about it.

"Oh, we had quite a run last week," said the druggist, "and I haven't got around to ordering any more." For many years, it is said, it was impossible to buy a cigar in the town.

Methodists own and run Baldwin, the Presbyterians have a slight toehold in one of the suburbs and the Catholics have a church with a dozen or so members over near the railroad. But it is hard sledding for both anti-Methodist institutions. Some years ago a Topeka Presbyterian opened a bank there, but he sold out later.

Perhaps more superannuated preachers live in Baldwin than in any other city of its size in the world. They flock here to spend their last days, as the spirit of the town just suits them. It is also a great place for retired farmers with religious tendencies. Parents move there from all sections of the country in order to get the effect of the spirit upon their children during the period of character forming.

A person can walk the streets for six months and haunt every public place, even the livery stable, without hearing an oath uttered.

Baker University has about 500 students. This makes Baldwin a lively, though solemn town during the school term. Three or four young men students were discussing their studies and the coming commencement exercises on the hotel veranda the other night. A stranger began to quiz them about the town and its peculiarities.

"Isn't it rather dull here in the summer, when the students are away?" he asked.

"It usually gets pretty dull," remarked one of the young men in great earnestness. "But the town is going to be lively, all right, this summer."

"What's going on?" he was asked.

"Oh, the brotherhood is arranging for a Fourth of July celebration. And besides that the Epworth League is to hold its convention here one week.'

The people are looking forward with great interest to these two events.

However, there is always something going on in Baldwin in a church way, and that is what the people enjoy. A good lecturer or preacher can draw a big audience any time. Theatrical outfits, especially musical comedies, couldn't draw a corporal's guard. In fact, they are not wanted. Baldwin doesn't believe in frivolities nor any funny business. Tom McNeal of Topeka once made a speech there and referred to Baker as "a preacher factory." He shocked the people.

Crime is a thing almost unknown in the town. Most people never lock their doors at night. A bootlegger can find no customers there. Once upon a time the town was scandalized when it learned that some of the college boys were drinking sweet cider.

A TROUT STORY.

While John Hamilton was sawing a log in his mill at Montela, Sullivan county, he opened up a hollow log from which flopped a trout 27½ inches long and weighing seven pounds. The hole in the end of the log lying in the pond had evidently been its home, and when that was pulled from the water the trout evidently swam the wrong way and became wedged in the cavity.—[Fairport Herald.

The Singed Cat.

HIS LONG STRUGGLE AND FINAL RISE IN THE WORLD.

By Richard Spilling.

IT does not matter particularly whether the foreman quit or got fired. He got separated from the job somehow, and Mrs. Harriet Hannis, owner, editor and chief contributor, had to get some one in his place, or the Christian Champion might not get out. A woman who invades the business realm, and particularly the newspaper field, has much to contend with. This Mrs. Hannis had discovered long before, but she was one of those dynamic souls who had to be doing something for the general public all the time, and the Christian Champion acted as one vent for her energies. Usually when any one failed her she pitched in and did the work herself, but she could not set type, and she could not make up the "forms" of the paper, so she had to look for help. She had sought aid from the editor of one of the great dailies of New York, and it was this editor who recommended David. Mrs. Hannis read the letter of the editor and then looked at David, and her heart sank. The letter said David was a first-class printer, and that he was just over from Scotland. That he was just over from Scotland she had no doubt, but how could such a tiny, mangy human being be first class at anything? When she looked at him she thought of a poor singed cat. Hair grew on him as it does on a wire-haired terrier, only more irregularly. His clothes were poor and ill-fitting, but that did not signify, for he would ruin the reputation of the most famous of tailors, just as he would disgrace the most talented of barbers. Nothing would fit him or look becoming. Where hair did not grow about his face, freckles did.

Mrs. Hannis, worried about her paper, disappointed in her hopes, sorry for herself and this poor immigrant, read the letters he had from the Scottish printers he had worked for and determined he would not do. The letters spoke well enough of him, but the man by his very manner spoke ill of himself. He was so mild of voice, so hesitant of speech, so insignificant that he never could fill a foreman's job, even if the foreman of the Christian Champion only bossed himself, one journeyman printer and the printer's devil.

Mrs. Hannis cleared her throat to tell him she was very sorry and so forth and then, in the goodness of her heart, she did not say it, but instead and with grave misgivings she told him she would give him a trial.

Whatever David MacGregor's shortcomings were they did not include lack of knowledge of typography. He had to stand on a box when he stuck type, but he was a fast and accurate compositor. He loved the business, too. Mrs. Hannis had noticed the immigrant's eyes. They were blue and clear—the one redeeming feature in his homely makeup. As she got to know the wee Scotchman better she got to think less of his size and his mangyness and more of his eyes. There was not a lazy bone in his body. Once he got the hang of the shop he was able to get more out of the plant than any foreman Mrs. Hannis ever had employed. He delighted in doing an artistic bit of work. A well-set, attractive ad. had all the charm to him that a good painting has for an artist. The journeyman printer and the printer's devil, who had been inclined to scorn him at first, had come to recognize his ability as a craftsman, and his soft spoken orders were obeyed more faithfully than the loud and sometimes profane ones of his predecessor.

David had not been in the shop many days before he went tremblingly to Mrs. Hannis to borrow money. He had a wife and various children. They had come over with him in the steerage. He had rented a house and grounds out fifteen miles from the city. The rent was $5 a month. The house was a tumbledown shack, but it would cover his brood for the time being. But all his cash was exhausted.

Mrs. Hannis advanced enough to relieve the family's immediate needs. She was happy to do so, for one of her hobbies was to help deserving immigrants. This was the beginning. It was not long before Mrs. Hannis was busy keeping books. David never had a full week's wages coming to him. There always was something happening that necessitated the borrowing of money. Donald had a fever or Kathleen had to have shoes or Mrs. Macgregor had given birth to another youngster or little David had fallen and broken his collarbone or Eileen needed a new dress. It always was something for the wife or children, never anything for himself. He wore the same rough clothes he had on the day he applied for work and the same coarse shoes. Half the time he slept in the shop at night that he might save the car fare it would cost to go home. He made a confidant of no one except Mrs. Hannis. Sometimes he owed her $25, sometimes $50. Once he almost got clear of debt, but something happened to set him back again. Occasionally Mrs. Hannis got tired of this chronic impecuniosity, but David was a rare hand at borrowing and never failed to get what he asked.

It was a weird life David Macgregor led in those days. To feed the family was in itself a task. There were nine or ten children. Mrs. Macgregor, who was nearly six feet tall, did all the housework, sewing, mending, washing, ironing. David, to reduce the home expenses, cultivated the little patch of ground about the old shack, getting up at dawn such days as he was home to work in the garden. Such nights as he did not sleep in the shop he utilized to teach the children. He was passionately devoted to the little ones. No sacrifice on his part was too great for them. Recognizing their power over him, they took advantage of him in many ways, but he did not care. If they pleaded for anything he was not happy until he provided it for them and heard their cries of delight. He was in distress when one of them was ill and rarely a week passed that some of theme was not in need of a doctor. Year in and year out, it was worry and starving for him. Nearly every year Mrs. Macgregor presented him with another son or daughter.

One day David went to Mrs. Hannis with a plea for an additional loan.

"What is it for now, David?" she asked.

"I want to buy an organ—a parlor organ," he replied.

"Nonsense," exclaimed the boss, "you have a hard enough time as it is without adding to your burdens with such a ridiculous thing as an organ. I wouldn't think of giving money to you for such a foolish purpose."

But Macgregor, in his small voice and his halting way, told how lonely it was for the missis and the bairns sometimes and how the missis longed for an organ. She had an organ in her home in Scotland before she married Macgregor, and now and then she spoke of it. Recently a man had been around selling organs on the installment plan. The missis had mentioned it. She had not asked for it, but he knew her heart was set on getting one. It would bring joy into her life, and she had such a dreary existence. It was work, work, work from morning until night for her. Young children need so much and are so helpless. And there is so much mending and washing to be done for them.

Mrs. Hannis tried to argue how much more good the same amount of money spent for clothing would do than if put into an organ, but Macgregor could only think of how the organ would cheer up the missis, and Mrs. Hannis finally advanced the amount he asked for the first payment.

It was not a time of good wages for printers, and the Christian Champion was not a gold mine by any means. Macgregor might have earned more in another shop, but it was doubtful if he could get another job readily. Generally he seemed content. It did not matter particularly how much heavier became his burden, he did the best he could, borrowed when he had to have money and paid back as best he could. For all his tiny appearance, he was soundly healthy. What would have happened to that big family had it been otherwise is unpleasant to contemplate.

The payments on the parlor organ were almost ended and Macgregor was looking forward to being really clear of debt when suddenly he was threatened with disaster. He went to Mrs. Hannis one morning so upset that he almost spoke as fast as an ordinary person. His home—the house he had lived in for all the years he had been in this country—the house in which several of his children had been born—would be sold at public auction if he did not buy it at once for $600. He had come to love the place. So had his wife and the children. It would break their hearts to leave it. Not only that, but he had improved the land and the house until the improvements represented much to him. He had gotten the place for $5 a month because of its tumbledown condition. Each year he had made repairs and improvements with his own hands until now the house was homey and liveable. The garden, too, had been brought up to a fine state of cultivation and the fruit trees had begun to bear. No one could know how much the loss of this house would mean to him, and he begged Mrs. Hannis to lend $600 to him so he could buy the place.

Mrs. Hannis, tender hearted and sympathetically as responsive as ever, told him she did not have $600 in the world and she could not raise that much any easier than she could raise $6,000,000. It was a difficult task, in fact, to keep the paper going, and sometimes she had to do some high financing to pay the wages of Macgregor and the others.

Macgregor, downcast for the first time, went home that night without a smile with which to greet the children, but the next morning he was back in the shop in his usual quiet, tenacious humor when on borrowing bent. He was accompanied by his wife. She had in her arms her last born, a girl two weeks old. The wee man and his great, tall wife invaded the office of Mrs. Hannis. As the owner of the paper looked at the foreman she was more and more reminded of how he had appeared the first day he had come to the shop. If anything, he looked more singed than ever. He went over the same ground he had traversed in his appeal to her the day before, and as he talked she became more and more uncomfortable. It was not what he said. It was Mrs. Macgregor. She did not say a word. She simply hugged her wee baby to her breast and looked with her big, pathetic eyes at Mrs. Hannis. There was an appeal in those eyes that Mrs. Hannis could not withstand. The baby, too, wailed a bit just when Macgregor was at the most touching part of his story.

Mrs. Hannis loves babies. Most childless women do. The combination of baby, mother and father was too much for her and she said she would do her utmost to raise the money for them. Like the ardent spirit that she is, Mrs. Hannis did not delay. She went at once to one man who she thought might advance the money. He could not spare it, but suggested she go to the Rev. Mr. Burchard.

The Christian Champion continued for and then passed out of existence. Mrs. Hannis enthusiasm never wanes, turned her attention other field of endeavor.

It was thirty years after the incident of that Mrs. Hannis received a letter from gregor. Her hair is silvery now, but time has gently with her. She still is the ardent, helpful woman of former days. In the letter gregor asked her as a great favor to come to and attend the wedding of one of his daughters gave directions as to the train by which she travel and said he would meet her at the She went by the train he specified and when stepped from the car he was there to greet her frock suit was of the finest weave. The Bear at Happy Camp.

HE SEEMS TO HAVE AS MANY LIVES AS A CAT.

By Edward C. Crossman.

"[illegible] a sober man can't always believe what he sees," said Bailey, commenting on the fact that after we had apparently seen the dogs put a bear up a tree in plain view, the bear finally appeared at the top of a pine 200 yards away across the canyon. The dogs, running around the first tree and then into a little gully close by, prevented us from firmly believing that the bear had taken wings and flown from the top of one pine to the other.

"Sometimes, even out in these woods, where everything is fair and aboveboard, a man sees things that are like that camel in the circus. 'Member that one the [illegible] talk about? The ole farmer stands an' looks at it about fifteen minutes, then he turns his quid an' says disgustedly: 'Shucks! they ain't no such thing!'

"Couple o' years ago they was a Kanaky livin' on a ranch about a mile out o' Happy Camp, down river from here. B'ars is plenty down around Happy Camp. Kind of a jumpin'-off place, too far from the railroad for many hunters, an' only havin' about a hundred people all told, anyhow. The part of 'em that ain't too lazy to hunt is busy workin' placer claims or clearin' land for farms, so the b'ars jist about stop short o' carryin' off the kids. They ain't so p'ticular when it comes to [illegible].

"This Kanaky I'm tellin' you about gits so he's runnin' a regular b'ar restaurant. If a brown one ain't a-rollin' around in the middle of a regular fog of bee disturbance, why a black one is down pawin' over the young pigs to find one that just suits his taste. When the b'ars ain't on the job, a mountain lion'd drop in for a meal or two off'n the handiest bit of live stock.

"Got on the Kanaky's nerves after a while. Looked like he'd have to take to eatin' venison or else turn vegy[illegible] you call those parties that live on cabbage an' heads of lettuce an' other sich rabbit feed. Finally he gits a couple of Airedales of ole man McLaren, livin' about forty miles from Happy Camp. Those dogs is good, only they take to killin' sheep when they ain't got a hunt. Bein' as the Kanaky didn't have any sheep, that part didn't bother him. Somebody gave him one of these little .22 automatic rifles, built for jack rabbits and other big game about the same size. Kept tellin' him that gun wasn't big enough for b'ar, an' that some day a mean one would be bitin' off hunks of Kanaky, but it didn't make any difference, so we might as well 'a' saved our jaw.

"With them two pups and that kid's gun he really got to makin' the b'ars think that ranch was regular poison. No more'n one of 'em would come off'n the hills and git to nosin' around to see whether he'd find a big bed of honey an' a pig to top off on, or something about, than one of the Airedales would wing him and raise the whole blame canyon with his yowls. The other one would be on the spot in about two seconds, the Kanaky would hustle for the house an' git his gun, an' then there'd either be a fresh b'ar hide on the Kanaky's barn, or else that b'ard be clean over in [illegible] an' still goin'.

"Funniest thing about it was that he'd git the b'ars with that little popgun. For the first three months we sort of waited around, expectin' to have to go out an' bury the fellow, or else pack him up river to Hornbrook to be glued together by the doc up there. Nothin' happened except to the b'ars, so we sort of forgot about the little party's gun.

"Well, sir, one evening in the late fall we was sittin' around in front of the store in Happy Camp, swappin' lies an' springin' all those good ole jokes that everybody in a small town like that knows by heart. All of a sudden here comes a yell from down the road. A second later here comes another. Sounded like somebody was mighty worried about something. Right in back of the yell comes the Kanaky. He came right into the middle of the bunch an' yells: 'Look out! he's comin'! Lo-o-ok out!'

"Smithy, the storekeeper, runs in the store and gits his Winchester, while the rest of us stood peerin' down the road an' feelin' shaky. The Kanaky's face was gray instead of the ordinary brown shade; they was still enough daylight to see that part of it. He kept grabbin' me an' gittin' around me an' yellin' all the time: 'He's comin', I tell ye! he's right after me! Look out!'

"We stood waitin' for a minute an' wonderin' what was on its way down that dark road. Way the Kanaky acted it might 'a' been a ring-tailed rhinoceros, breathin' flame an' smoke into the bargain. Gent sure couldn't 'a' been any more scared if he'd 'a' tried.

"'What's comin', ye blame fool?' says Smithy, purty soon, when nothin' comes in sight.

"'B'ar!' howls the Kanaky; 'the biggest darn b'ar in the mountains. I shot him three times through the eye an' never even drew blood.' An' then he dives for the store and tries to crawl under the counter.

"'Thunder!' says Smithy—he didn't say thunder, but I'm writin' this down—'what's the matter with ye? Think a b'ar is goin' to run ye clean into town to git ye? Probably some little, ornery, 300-pound b'ar that ye couldn't kill with that .22 fice gun!' An' then he puts the Winchester back in the rack, growlin' like one of the b'ars he was talkin' about.

"After we got the Kanaky ca'med down a little—[illegible] quiet folks those Kanakys, but flighty as [illegible]—he told us he was out in Four Mile Canyon lookin' fer a calf he had out in the range. He'd left the dogs tied up for fear they'd come acrost a b'ar trail an' make 'em chase fer 'em to shoot the treed b'ar. Blame fools wouldn't quit a treed b'ar before they starved to death. Ain't got sense enough to come home when they see nobody's comin' to shoot the b'ar out'n the tree.

"He was comin' down the canyon 'bout dark, an' he comes to a little open place with a dead tree in the middle of it. Says he'd passed the tree a hundred times. The top had fallen off and left about ten foot o' hollow trunk standin'. As the Kanaky got to the tree he heard a little noise. He stops to listen. Jist then 'kerslap' goes something across the calf of his leg, and he went into the air like somebody had hollered 'Scat!' in his ear unexpected-like. When he lights he looks down. Here's the leg of his pants torn half off, an' his calf bleedin'. The bottom of the tree was rotted away a little, an' something like a coyote had dug it out to a hole big enough for a small beast to crawl in.

"A-peerin' out of this little hole—an' grinnin', so the Kanaky says—was the head of a b'ar, the eyes twinklin' an' the lip droppin' just enough to show a set of ivories. Then the head went out o' sight.

"The Kanaky tumbled to what had happened. He'd stopped by the hole, and tne b'ar had jist naturally reached out and slapped him acrost the leg. The hole was jist about big enough for a b'ar to make a good swipe through it.

"Well, sir, that party had killed so blame many b'ars with that little gun and his two dogs that he never thought of anything else but gittin' that b'ar. Didn't occur to him that a tired and scared b'ar up a tree, at the end of a four-mile chase, is a different article from one in good shape, not up a tree and with no dogs around to worry.

"He scrapes up a handful o' pine needles, sticks it an' some green stuff into the hole, lights a match to it, an' stands off to wait fer further proceedin's.

"Purty quick here comes a little curl of smoke out'n the top of the dead tree, made a nice chimly. Things was gittin' nice an' smoky inside of it. In a minute they was a-scufflin' an' a-ramagin' an' a-snortin' around in the tree, an' then Mr. Kanaky could hear the b'ar climbin' up the hollow trunk.

"The instant Mr. B'ar poked his head up over the top, the Kanaky lets go with the little gun an' hits the b'ar plumb in the eye. Swore by all the sandwiches of his native home that he seen the bullet hit. He was a mighty good shot, too, an' he was only standin' about fifteen foot away.

"The b'ar shot down out o' sight, and inside there was a reg'lar b'ar riot, snuffs, snarls an' clawin' clear out o' proportion to the racket a decent dead b'ar ought to make.

"Figurin' that he'd skin the b'ar by firelight, while he was still warm and the hide peeled easy, the Kanack walked over an' begin to gather firewood an' needles. All of a sudden here come the same noise of claws rattlin' on the inside of the trunk. They was sure one surprised Kanaky about then; he'd bet his ranch that b'ar was dead.

"He picked up his rifle, and jist then here comes the b'ar again, looking as peart as ever, not a sign of blood on its head, an' with both eyes in good workin' order.

"Well, sir, that sure made the Kanack nervous. What we'd been tellin' him about that little gun bein' no good for b'ar, and about some b'ar eatin' him shoes an' all, come into his mind about then.

"While he was thinkin' about it, he takes good aim and hits the b'ar in the eye again—good and center, so he told us. Down shoots the b'ar, an' then the riot inside the trunk starts again. That Kanack didn't feel happy a bit, from what he says. They was about four times the noise inside that tree they should be, and it didn't get much weaker. He begin to have visions of a b'ar an' Kanaky wrastlin' match right away, if that b'ar managed to git over the edge of that tree trunk instid of fallin' back inside. It was gittin' dark in the canyon, and things was gittin' on his nerves. Scary people, those Kanacks, anyhow.

"He didn't have much time to feel scared. About the time he'd made up his mind to run while the goin' was good and they wasn't too much undesirable company, here comes the b'ar head again—and it had grown! The Kanaky says it looked as big to him as that big grizzly they killed down at Hornbrook. The lip was hung down to show the pretty teeth, and the b'ar says: 'Ha-a-a-r!' to him in a voice that seemed like nothing would be satisfactory short of eatin' Kanaky tenderloin right there. Bein' shot in the eye seemed to make the b'ar peevish-like.

"The Kanaky takes one horrified look at the big head up in the smoke, takes one shot sort of instinctive-like, and then fades out o' that clearin' without even takin' the gun along. Nope, he didn't run; I seen him when he come into Happy Camp, and he hadn't even dropped to a run by that time. It's a sin that somebody wasn't holdin' a watch on that party; I'll jist stake my gun that his time fer the three miles would 'a' had these prickly-shoes college kids runnin' around in circles with envy.

"He told us that he never seen the b'ar from the time he shot—an' I don't wonder. I'm pretty sure he wouldn't 'a' seen a greyhound dog chasin' him unless the dog was a mighty peart animal.

"We couldn't get him to go home that night; he bunked in the store, and I'll bet he rolled a sugar barrel against the door into the bargain.

"Next morning he took us as far as the mouth of the canyon; then he stopped; said he wasn't tryin' to lay any spook b'ars.

"Up in the clear space we found things just as he said they were. Tne gun was lyin' close to the dead tree, the fire had burned itself out, and there was not a sign of a b'ar around.

"I walked up to the dead tree and hit it a rap with the ax. Nothin' moved; there wasn't a sound inside. Couple of the boys cocked their rifles an' watched the top of the tree, while I went for it with the ax. In a minit or so I had it cut nearly through at the bottom; it was rotten, and cut easy.

"It began to crack and lean over a bit, an' I stepped back to let it fall. Over it went, bustin' open as it hit the ground. Out of it rolled three b'ars, a mammy and two half-grown cubs, deader'n herrin' and each one shot through the eye."

WRITERS' REWARDS.

What reward, apart from the fun of the thing, do most writers get? Everybody reads of the big sums earned by the fortunate few, but few people hear of the small sums earned by the hopeful many, perhaps because the hopeful many usually pretend that they are really in the fortunate few class. How much do the hopeful many make in dollars and cents?

An answer to the question has recently been furnished in an article in Collier's Weekly on the "Rewards of Writing," by a "Near Writer, in which the writer's experience was set forth. Passing over earlier years the author recorded that in the last two years he had sold forty short stories to Munsey's, Black Cat, Blue Book, Leslie's Weekly, Red Book, New Idea, etc.; nad run three newspaper serials in most of the large cities of the country and had published two text-books and a romance through two of the most important publishing houses in the United States. For all this he had received altogether about $1500 and had to depend on a government office for his main support. The author closed by begging some one to show him the way into the promised land.

But mark the sequel. The writer has been too candid to permit his identity to remain hidden. He was recognized as Crittenden Marriott, author of "The Isle of the Dead Ships," "Out of Russia," etc., the latter just issued by Lippincotts. Letters poured in upon him from all over the country. Merely on his record, as set forth in the article, three jobs were offered him all at salaries higher than the one he was earning from the government. One of them, that of editor and press agent for the Hudson Motor Car Company of Detroit, he has accepted, nearly doubling his income thereby. Moreover, his new romance, "Out of Russia," is having a demand that seems likely to lift him into the class of big sellers.

ENTERPRISE IN GERMANY.

Why shouldn't commercial and industrial cities advertise in the "want" columns of newspapers? Here is an example of what is done in Germany, where municipalities are run on a business basis and where the post of Mayor is secured by competitive examination. Magdeburg, a flourishing town of 280,000 inhabitants, presents itself to the manufacturing and commercial world at large by advertising in the principal German papers thus:

"Excellent sites for factories and works producing chemicals, textiles, soap, oil, sugar, paper, leather and electro-technical goods; close to railroads, fast trains to everywhere; cheap coal and cheap river transport; workmen's dwellings in immediate vicinity; cheap and good labor; cost of living moderate, low death rate; excellent schools, theaters, and museums; active trading, intellectual, musical and sport center; first-class banks. For all particulars apply to the Burgomaster."

Subjoined to this there is a little map showing rail and water connections with the principal places in Germany and giving the most advantageous rates for freight to the Baltic and North Sea ports.

No stone seems to have been left unturned in Germany to secure the best possible market at the most economical outlay, which goes far to explain the great industrial advance of the Fatherland in the last few decades.—[New York Sun.

Weary of missing trains because of the uncertain schedules, the people of Gage, Ellis county, have hit upon a plan that is intended to insure everybody against this annoyance. THE TALENT SMALL.

My voice is weak,
I may not speak
  With eloquence and power;
But I can pray
From day to day,
  And rightly spend each hour.

I cannot preach,
Or others teach,
  I've been denied that gift;
But while I live,
I'll comfort give,
  And another's burden lift.

I cannot sing
And solace bring
  With tones so soft and sweet;
But I can say
Kind words each day,
  And guide some faltering feet.

I may not rise
And win the prize,
  My talent is so small;
But I will strive,
While I'm alive,
  To heed the Master's call.

Farming With Dynamite.

SOMETHING NEW IN AGRICULTURE IS ATTRACTING NOTICE.

By Rene Bache.

THE newest thing in agriculture is farming with high explosives. It is cheaper, in the long run, to plow with dynamite—at all events, in occasional years—and there is no such satisfactory way to get rid of stumps as to blow them out of the ground.

The work of digging holes for fence posts is cheapened and hurried along by the use of small dynamite cartridges, made specially for the purpose. All that is necessary is to drive a crowbar down to within six inches of the desired depth, and the cartridge, dropped to the bottom and set off, does the rest. One should not "tamp" the charge.

In planting fruit trees dynamite is a great help. A suitable cartridge, buried a short distance below the surface of the ground, will excavate instantly as large a hole as a man can dig in an hour. Incidentally, the explosive loosens up the earth for many yards around, giving the roots a better opportunity to spread; and all the grubs and other injurious insects in the soil around about are destroyed.

If, in addition, every other year, small charges are exploded midway between the trees and four or five feet below the surface, the output of fruit, it is claimed, is greatly augmented because thereby the soil is kept in a loose and open condition, so that moisture percolates through it more freely, and the tree roots have a better chance to spread.

Ordinary plowing turns over the same old soil year after year, and decrease of output is prevented only by rotation of crops and expensive fertilizing. With dynamite, on the other hand, it is possible to break up the ground all over a field to a depth of two or three feet for less than the cost of fertilizer and with better results. Fertilizing improves only the top soil; dynamite renders available all the moisture and elements of growth throughout the entire depth of the blast.

In the case of a worn-out farm (the trouble with which is that the top soil has been worked out,) the high explosive turns up fresh and fertile soil from underneath. By this means, in many instances, land worth $10 an acre has been augmented fivefold or even tenfold in value.

The most recently discovered way of saving money by the use of high explosive is in the blasting of ditches and the dynamiting of swamps. Possibilities in this direction are especially obvious in Louisiana and certain other parts of the United States where, in the aggregate, there is something like 70,000,000 acres of swampy lands which, if drained, would yield magnificent crops. The cost, by ordinary mehtods, would be prohibitive, but dynamite will dig ditches cheaply and rapidly through any swamp which man can penetrate.

When ditches are dug by dynamite, practically all of the material is thrown out by the blast, and little shoveling is necessary. The material is not heaped up alongside the ditch, but thrown far and wide, so as to be spread evenly over a considerable area on both sides. When it is explained that the method of procedure consists merely in boring a series of holes along the line of the proposed trench, putting a cartridge in each, and setting them off simultaneously, it will be seen that the process is both easy and rapid.

At the present time great areas in New Jersey and other parts of the United States are being systematically ditched for the purpose of draining them, the object in view being to get rid of the mosquito nuisance. This is a kind of work that can be done to much advantage with the help of high explosives. But there are many other uses for dynamite as an aid to agriculture—such for example, as the demolishment of boulders. Where such rocks occur in a field it is the farmer's usual practice to let them lie and plow around them; but the proper thing to do is to blow them up. Even the biggest boulder can be broken up by a single properly-adjusted blast into fragments small enough to be handled.

Where rock is encountered in the sinking of a well, dynamite will soon cut through it. In digging drains it is often desirable to remove rock, and high explosives will do the work cheaply and quickly. Trees may be felled with dynamite, and even the splitting of logs for rails is accomplished by the same means. Removal of stumps by blasting is inexpensive. According to the records of the Long Island Railroad, the cost of getting rid of stumps in this way on its experimental farm, including the wages of the men who did the work, was only 16 cents per stump.

After the stumps are all blasted out, there remains a new, rich field, easy to cultivate and requiring no fertilizer to yield bumper crops. If it be desired to remove a whole tree, dynamite will lift it bodily out of the ground, and there will be no stump left to take away. The biggest of all tree stumps (those of the California redwoods) have been shattered by this means and utterly destroyed.

In the South, by the way, pine stumps are large producers of turpentine and its by-products. such material can be distilled, it must be broken pieces small enough to go into the retort. The est method of accomplishing this is to explode small charges of dynamite simultaneously in a ber of auger holes bored in the stump, the effect ing to shatter it completely.

Plows rarely break up the ground satisfactorily a depth exceeding eight or ten inches. Eventually hard stratum, sometimes called "plow hardpan," "plow sole," forms just below the layer of soil which the plow reaches. This must be broken up, after a while the land will begin to fail. Then, it often happens that land has only a thin surface underlaid by an impervious subsoil, and will not duce good crops unless the latter be broken up.

Blasting subsoil is a new idea that is being put practice by many farmers, with wonderful results the way of increased crops. Not only is this with land already under cultivation, but also for the purpose of transforming into productive fields which was previously worthless. A Georgia farmer writes of a phenomenal yield of watermelons, ing fifty to sixty pounds apiece, obtained on blasted with small charges of dynamite in bore two and one-half feet deep and ten feet apart. other, in South Carolina, placed his charges only feet apart, and corn grown on the area thus was 50 per cent. taller than on unblasted ground, fuller ears and firmer grains.

Soon after the outbreak of our war with Prof. Charles E. Munroe of Washington, who is ably the greatest authority on explosives living, certain experiments in the digging of military with dynamite and "jovite." Interested with him the matter was Frank Hitchcock, now Postmaster General, but then confiected with the Department Agriculture. The experiments were performed Analostan Island, in the Potomac River, with degree of secrecy—one consequence being the plant was finally raided by the police, who had informed that Spanish spies were at some mischief on the island.

The upshot of the matter was that the digging such trenches with dynamite proved highly ble, and if the war had lasted longer this would doubtless have been used. By such trench of any desired depth can be laid open, in a finished state, at a few minutes' notice, an immense amount of labor and much valuable From this idea came that of ditching land for purposes, and out of it was eventually developed whole system of assisting agriculture by the ment of high explosives.

The allotment of furniture corresponds with the "class" of the employee, that is with his work and his salary. The general style is wicker. Bedroom furniture is white enameled and rugs of grass weaves are furnished.

Electric lights are in every house. Coal and wood are brought to the door every morning and distilled water is supplied by the sanitary department. Orders for groceries are taken at the door by a man who comes every morning and delivers them the following day.

The servants are practically all West Indians. Some are wives or relatives of canal employees. Others, hearing of the richness of the land, come from their island to improve their own condition. The class is not good, and the servant question is one that agitates the housewives of the Canal Zone not less than elsewhere.

The food supplies furnished at the commissary stores are of the very best quality. Of course canned goods are used in great quantities. Six ships belonging to the Panama Railroad service bring in cold-storage supplies once a week. Meat, fish and like products come from New York, while nearly all the fruit and vegetables are brought from New Orleans and supplied fresh to the employees. There is an ice plant at Cristobal and a bakery which makes many kinds of bread, cake and pies, sending them out daily to the stores along the line.

Government working hours are from 7 to 11 a.m. and from 1 to 5 p.m. for the outside forces, and from 8 to 12 a.m. and 2 to 5 p.m. for the office employees. The usual rising hour is 6 o'clock, with breakfast at 6:30. Lunch is at 11 and dinner at 7.

The rainy season is not a time of continuous rain. The tropical showers are often deluges, but they are short and generally come at a regular time of the day. In the beginning for weeks the rain will come at noon, later it will be in the afternoon, and toward the end of the season it is at night.

The better class of houses have a dry room, that is a tightly-sealed room with electric lights which are kept burning. Here every article of clothing that becomes wet or even damp is dried at once, for if laid aside, if only for a few hours, it will be ruined with mildew. Boots and shoes and leather bags and trunks are also attacked by mildew, and must be wiped frequently. Gloves become covered with mildew if laid away in a drawer.

The women whose husbands have outside work have the greatest trouble in keeping their wet clothes in order. But each seems to have solved the problem for herself, and the men, dry, mended and well cared for, are seen going out to their engines, their digging, or their machines in the shops every morning, no matter what the weather.

The care of books is another of the housekeeper's problems. Leather moulds and cloth-bound books become mildewed and fall to pieces. It is necessary to go over the bindings with a dry cloth every few days. For this reason there are practically no libraries in the Canal Zone and people are reduced to reading magazines and newspapers. Of course paper-covered editions of books are used to some extent.

Shopping opportunities are limited to the cities of Colon and Panama, the latter having larger and better equipped shops. Nearly all of them are influenced by Paris. There is an English shop in Panama that takes its cue from the requests of the American patrons and tries to supply such articles as they wish. As a rule, however, the women purchase their material in the States, and make up their clothes for the year after the return from their vacations.

The Chinese merchants have large stores and there are some Indian importers whose goods are purchased by the American women. A familiar sight is a coolie peddler who carries a pack on his back and goes from house to house and from village to village offering his wares for sale. These consist of fine linens, silks, embroideries, laces and damask table linens.

It is the monotony of the life that hurts the Isthmus. The lack of variety, no change of season, no change of verdure, always green within green, no change of occupation. The calling, visiting, card parties, luncheons, teas and dinners are varied by no visits to the theater, no good music ever penetrates the Isthmus and no variety of entertainment.

A continual round of doing the same thing over and over again constitutes the life until, ten months being accomplished, vacation is due and the husband and wife joyfully pack their trunks and turn the key of the quarters over to the quartermaster and turn their faces to the beloved homeland for the intoxicating period of joy that is to last for six brief weeks, the vacation period allowed by the government.

The Woman's Club is one of the saving points in the lives of the women of the isthmus. Year by year those who have been with the movement from the first realize how much it has done in indirect as well as direct ways. A playground was equipped and presented to the city of Colon and district visiting nurses in the same city were established at the suggestion of the Woman's Club of Cristobal.

MAN OF MANY FUNCTIONS.

The British Postmaster-General is what Londoners call a universal provider, a regular department store of public functions, says the Telephone Review.

He will insure your life, give you a little bank to hoard your pennies in, take care of your savings, sell you an annuity, a postal order or a foreign draft, invest your spare capital in a nice little government bond and pay a weekly pension to your aged mother or aunt.

He carries letters and other mail matter, transmits telegrams, cablegrams and wireless messages, maintains an enormous staff of messenger boys and conducts an express company business for every sort of parcel, from a half-penny packet up to shipments of eggs, dressed poultry and fresh fish.

He collects all the worn copper coins for the British Treasury. He has factories for making his supplies and an electric central station of his own in London for lighting his offices, bringing the current through his cable ducts. He will sell you a license for a dog, a carriage, a motor car, a private brewery, a male servant, a gun, or a family coat of arms. Or he will put in your telephone and take care of your hellos.

At a dinner the other night the Postmaster-General confessed that he sometimes doubted whether he had any human personality at all. When he thought of his own functions, he said, he was appalled by them. In his official capacity he is responsible for more property than anybody else in the United Kingdom, employs far more people than any individual or corporation (212,364 at the last report.) prosecutes more malefactors every day than the Public Prosecutor, and sends out every week more apologies for himself, and explanations of his actions, than all the rest of the British population combined.

Some time ago the engineering staff of the postoffice wanted to trim some trees down in Sussex. The Postmaster-General notified their owner, Sydney Buxton, saying they would be trimmed. Sydney Buxton did not want them trimmed, but the Postmaster-General was firm, and had the law behind him. When Sydney Buxton and the Postmaster-General got together on this matter, however, there was no difficulty, because at that time Sydney Buxton and the Postmaster-General were the same person.

GREEN WATERS OF THE NILE.

The "green water" of the Nile is quite a different thing from the green water of the ocean.

About April 15 the Nile begins its annual rise, and a month later the effect is felt at Khartoum. A very curious phenomenon accompanies this increase in the appearance of the "green water."

For a long time it was believed that the color came from the swamps of the upper Nile lying isolated and stagnant under the tropical sun and polluting the waters with decaying vegetable matter. With the spring rise this fetid water was supposed to be swept into the streams to make its appearance in Egypt.

Within recent times, however, this theory has been abandoned. Now, we are advised, the green water is caused by the presence of innumerable numbers of microscopic algae, offensive to the taste and smell. They originate away up in the tributaries and are carried to the Nile, where under the hot sun and in the clear water they increase with amazing rapidity, forming columns from 250 to 500 miles in length.

The weeds continue to grow, die and decay until the turbid flood waters put them to an end, for they cannot exist except in clear water.

Offensive as in some respects the green water is, it is hailed with delight by the Egyptians, since its appearance is a sign of the real flood time and the close of the water famine.—[Scientific American.

A SWISS CHARITY FESTIVAL.

The annual charity festival known as "The Little Flower," on behalf of sick and infirm children, was held at Zurich yesterday with extraordinary success. Over £4000 was collected by pretty girls who sold artificial marguerites and other flowers.

Although the nominal value of each flower was about a penny, it was sold for silver, gold, bank notes and even checks. One wealthy professor wrote out a check for £1000, which he handed to an astonished girl, and selecting a marguerite disappeared. A tall, handsome girl armed with an empty revolver, which she presented to her victims, met with great success.

When the 300,000 artificial marguerites were sold out in the afternoon the girls raided the principal shops for artificial flowers, while others entered private gardens. The owners of these allowed them to pluck all the flowers, which were sold out by night.—[Geneva Correspondence London Daily News.

SOMETHING LIKE A PIE.

Seventy guests banqueted on a single pie at Gorleston, and there was plenty to spare when they had finished. The pie had a three-inch crust, and weighed a hundredweight and a half. It was made in three sections or water-tight compartments, and each hold had substantial bulkhead of crust. Its interior was packed with six rabbits, six kidneys, twenty-eight pounds of beefsteak, and potatoes, turnips, carrots, and sprouts. The sea pie, as it is called, is boiled, not baked, and its builder, Skipper Harman, made the cooking process an eight hours' watch.

This three decker provided a savory meal which more than satisfied the guests, and its wrecked and dismantled hull provided ten gallons of excellent soup, that was gladly welcomed by the poor of Gorleston.—[London Daily Sketch.

THE POWER OF NIAGARA.

A recent estimate of the amount of energy derived from Niagara Falls places it at 273,140 horse power, divided in its applications as follows: Electro-chemical industries, 126,000; railway service, 50,200; lighting, 36,400; various industrial purposes, 54,540. The total energy of the falls is estimated at 5,000,000 horse power, so that not much more than 5 per cent. is at present utilized.—[Youth's Companion.

Brookby.

A ROMANTIC BACHELOR TELLS A BEAUTIFUL STORY.

By Alfred C. Pickells.

IT was at the urgent and repeated requests of the four young ladies in the party that Mr. Maclay decided to head the yacht for San Juan to allow them to run back to Aibonita Pass on a brief excursion. Some one had told them of the fame of the picture owned by the Augustinians who dwelt in the midst of those hills, and it had excited their curiosity.

Brookby guessed he would stay aboard. But some one had heard, too, that Brookby knew the Augustinians. Brookby was a typical bachelor with a tall, spare frame and a decided drawl. He spoke only when he pulled at the ends of his drooping mustache. And like many bachelors, he had traveled much, always to unheard-of haunts, and Aibonita was one of them.

When they left Jacksonville the Misses Maclay spoke of him to their chums in the privacy of their own cabins as an "old stick." For the past year he had been a close friend of their father; for the same length of time he had also been an acquaintance of their Aunt Constance. Knowing him thus, they decided it would be a source of fun if Ellen Maclay cornered him some night when they were out on the peaceful bosom of the Caribbean under the spell of the moon and tried to wheedle a possible romance out of his former life.

Brookby was easily cornered, but he "tush-tushed" the idea of a romance.

"Romance," he said, "ends in two ways—tragically or matrimonially. For man both lead to the same end, since in the successive steps following matrimony man becomes an obscurity."

After that, with the approval of Aunt Constance, they said he lacked sentiment. He gallantly replied that he delighted in the company of young ladies. They demanded proof. They led him to the piano and informed him that before they could again become friendly with him he would have to play and sing "I Wonder If You Miss Me."

Brookby could do neither. But to show a good faith he picked out the air with one finger, and bellowed what words he could remember with less harmony.

Then Ellen became solicitous of his future, and advised him that something was wrong with a nature that could not see the beauty of romance. Even Aunt Constance, were she to change her mind and become matrimonially inclined, would shun such a man, she told him.

Brookby's "Ya-as" was particularly drawled in reply, and he pulled long and thoughtfully at his mustache. Its import escaped Ellen until the night before entering San Juan Harbor, when he was heard to observe as he gazed out over the sea:

"Beautiful—a lover's night."

Then just before retiring she stepped on deck for a few deep inhalations of Caribbean air, and looked upon the picture of her Aunt Constance and Brookby in that same corner of the deck, engaged in quite serious conversation. A consultation of the four girls in their cabin resulted in the deep conviction that there was romance hidden within that tall, spare frame.

So, as he eventually did when assailed by those four misses, Brookby gave in and went along as the romancer of the hills of Aibonita.

They reached the Hotel Macias, perched on the northern ridge, just before sunset. Later in the night, as the moon rose out of the eastern sea, Brookby gathered them on the terrace and pointed out the position of the monastery. Its old Spanish architecture was only dimly outlined in the semi-darkness, but as the moon rose higher its gray walls stood out prominently as if they formed the lights and shadows of a pen-and-ink sketch. Then came the purple haze of the tropics, settling above the old structure as if it were a halo.

"There, young ladies," said Brookby, signifying the phenomenon, "you may now behold the romance of these hills. That halo is said to come by the intervention of the departed spirit of the Virgen de Oro, whose lover, Don Manuel, once graced the precincts of the monastery."

Brookby spoke with more interest in his tone than they were accustomed to. But no one spoke, and Brookby went on.

"Don Manuel was a novice in the monastery, and in the beginning his life was one of religious devotion until the day that he opened the gates to a party of visitors and bowed low in welcome.

"Don Manuel was young, of the artistic temperament. When he raised his eyes he gazed long upon a face that forever planted its impress upon the innermost depths of his heart, and when the father superior commanded him to guide the visitors through their holy home, Don Manuel's cup of joy was filled.

"Many times during the visit did their eyes meet, Don Manuel's soft, earnest, pleading, the senorita's sparkling, playful, tantalizing. And when they prepared to take their leave, Don Manuel caught her aside, and said: 'I pray thee will come often to us.' And there was a deep fervor in his voice.

"'How very, very good of thee,' and she rewarded him with a smile that set him afire.

"Many parties after that did she accompany, and many times in many weeks did Don Manuel see her face, always that same playful, teasing light in her eyes, leading him on to the mighty love which only his passionate nature could experience. And it came to be that one day she fell behind the party, and Don Manuel lay in wait for her, and they met alone in one of the underground corridors.

"He told her of the honor and esteem which Aibonita had given his father, and his father's father, and his great-grandfathers, and which might yet come to him. She toyed with her fan and listened until Don Manuel fell upon his knees before her. But ere he could again speak she was gone, and only once again as the party left did Don Manuel gaze into her face, and it was with eyes exceedingly reproachful and sad, but in which still shone the love which could never be quenched.

"But the ever-watchful eye of the father superior was upon his younger children, and when the gates were closed and Don Manuel still stood looking after the retreating forms, he touched him lightly upon the shoulder.

"'My son, I will have a word with thee,' and the father superior's face was not stern, but saintly, his voice not harsh, but gentle.

"The father superior entered the chapel, and Don Manuel followed and fell upon his knees. The father superior made the sign of the cross, and said: 'My son, thou art now in the Sacred Presence. Raise not thine eyes until thou hast decided for all time questions I put to thee. This day, within the hour, thy thoughts hath flown to the carnal and the worldly; thou hast offended the cloth which thou wear. But thy Church and Mother is a gentle and kind protector and parent. Thou art but a novice, and to such as thee she hath naught but words of compassion and love and guidance. But thou art this day, this hour, to pronounce or renounce the vestment. Dost thou, canst thou, here and now, will to cleanse thy brain of that which is forbidden?'

"And Don Manuel reflected upon the love that was apparently cast lightly aside, and answered. 'It is as thou hast said, my father.'

"'Be sure, my son,' and again the father superior repeated the admonition, gently, as a parent would speak to his own offspring. 'It is not yet too late to withdraw. If thou dost feel a weakness to the church's precepts, which might grow upon thee, thou mayst now go with her blessing upon thine head; if thou dost elect to remain, hast thou the power to be strong and courageous, as all men who bear the church's burdens should ever be?'

"And Don Manuel, seeing once again the eyes of coquetry, answered: 'Father, I have.'

"Then the father superior the second time blessed the bowed head of Don Manuel, and he recited the vows of the order, and after Don Manuel had repeated them word for word the father superior blessed him the third time, and said: 'Arise, my son, a cleansed being, to be henceforth known as Francoli. Thou art received unto the full communionship of the order. Go thou in sanctity and peace.'

"For a long time Brother Francoli saw no more visitors. He remained in retreat, and the father superior, thinking of the possibility of a soulful struggle, became appreciative and remained silent.

"But Brother Francoli's retreat was not entirely one of patient reflection, nor entirely one of self-chastisement. Inch by inch, day after day his canvas was filled with the work of a great painting. Each touch was made as if it were a gentle caress, each delicate tint was added with a silent prayer of thankfulness for the power of his gift, and when it was completed the splendor and glory of beautiful womanhood shone forth to his joy. And from the face of the woman reflected the features that could never be effaced from Brother Francoli's memory. And to Brother Francoli the work was neither harmful nor worldly.

"It came to be that on Saint Augustine's Day the work was finished. And it was the order's celebration of St. Augustine's day—which drew visitors to the monastery, who came early and stayed late. But Brother Francoli kept to his retreat until vesper time, and then he came forth to stand face to face with the original of the Virgen de Oro, for so he had named his great work.

"It may have been that Brother Francoli had studied long the face of his painting to his own weakening, for he said unto her: 'Hast thou come to me to torment? Dost thou not know that, though my mind followeth spiritual things, I am but human and subject to the weaknesses of the flesh?' And he saw in her eyes a wonderful light, and trembled with fear of himself, and cried: 'Why, oh why, didst thou not before give me the invitation thou dost now give?'

"The senorita's eyes were dimmed with moisture, and she stretched out her arms to him in appeal, and cried: 'Forgive me, dear brother; I, too, have suffered, oh, so much! I was frivolous, thinking not of the deeper things of life, gay, wishing only for the joys and pleasures of freedom; careless, heeding not the wounds that were caused by my irresistible desire to conquer and cast aside. But God, who is the ruler of all destinies, has led me to the path in which I should walk; the Blessed Virgin, who is the hope and salvation of all women, hath changed my heart from that of the statue to that of the woman, and I—I, too, have loved with all my heart and with all my soul.'

"Brother Francoli recoiled. But it was not the recoil of horror. One moment did he gaze upon her in unbelief, his right hand pressed close to his brow, his left resting against the rough stones of the wall, steadying his tottering form, and then, blind and heedless, he clasped her in his arms and whispered unto her: 'All else is but naught beside the supreme passion of my life. 'Tis a matchless crime to stand between a love that is bound with thongs that can never be severed. God never ordained that mankind should so suffer. Listen! This night I shall——'

"'Hush, my prince,' and the Virgen de Oro placed her hand upon his mouth. 'Dost thou am human?'

"Then the voice of the church the chimes in the tower at the time of the Virgen de Oro pushed him from her knees.

"With her crucifix held to her him: 'Thy founder, St. Augustine, Grace, by its nature, is effectual tively, not relatively and conditionally, pray for thee, my brother.'

"Brother Francoli bowed and when he looked up she was gone.

"Brother Francoli's soul was came to be that he was given the was to be seen, and his great love worship that cared only for the spirit. And when there came from the chorus that grew into the rich crescendo of the Gloria in Excelsis, grasped his brush, and not knowing he dipped it, drew around her head stroke, the halo. And instantly there glow, and as the chorus decreased ing wave of harmony grew softer and into the perfect silence of the tomb, fell to his knees and worshiped.

"When the father superior entered upon the form of Brother Francoli canvas, he was seized with consternation; he glanced from his silent child to the beheld in the gathering darkness the became kindly and he laid his hand Brother Francoli's bowed head, and it well with thy soul?'

"And Brother Francoli answered: my father.'

THE TASTE OF WHALE

I suppose no question is more frequently "What does whale meat taste like?" to answer, for the flesh has a flavor quite unlike anything else. In the first at all like fish. And why should it be, though living in the water, is no more a horse or a cow. True, some species small fish, but it is not habitual with whales, the food consisting chiefly of about three-quarters of an inch in meat has a decided "gamy" flavor one of venison, but its grain is very nese prepare it in a variety of ways, most often chopped finely and eaten bles, dressed with a brown sauce.

One of the most common sights is the peasants carrying great chunks swung from their shoulders, selling it house or in the streets. The flesh whale is most highly esteemed, and times brings as much as thirty pound. During the hot summer price of the meat is very low and it the greater part of it is canned. The Tagasaka Maru was scarcely well under way, indeed she had not passed out of the straits, when a gale arose. Somewhere out in the ocean a weird fog bell resounded intermittently over the roar of the sea, and the steamship's own foghorns kept up a constant bellowing as she rolled in the trough of the heavy waves.

Meanwhile, Mildred Travis sat apart from the other passengers in the saloon, bravely determined not to succumb to the dreadful seasickness with which such rough weather was afflicting most of the passengers. She could not drown from her memory Jack's stricken face as she last saw it. The sounding fog bells, and all the mysterious noises of the sea, filled her with an indescribable sadness and longing. How happy she and Jack had been a year ago! And now, all on account of her own foolishness, there was such an impassable barrier between them. Well she realized, at last, that Jack could not have been guilty of such conduct as her letter had implied. Whatever his mission, it could only have been an honorable one that took him into such uncongenial company that night. And she had not even given him a chance to explain himself. A little self-accusing voice kept whispering in Mildred's ear until she almost forgot the rising storm.

The staunch ship rolled heavily in the tremendous sea, the storm increasing the farther south she went until, when she was off Cape Blanco, it was blowing a perfect hurricane. Almost without warning, a great sea swept the deck and carried away two lifeboats. Another stove in some of the panels in the saloon and almost literally washed the passengers out of the after cabin. Scarcely one missed a drenching of salt water. As the water poured down the stairway and aft along the cabin floor, two barrels of lime were caught in the deluge and began smoldering. These were quickly carried out and thrown overboard, although the fumes were almost stifling. Capt. Brown ordered blankets to be brought and wrapped around the heads of the barrels of lime lying tier upon tier in the end of the cabin.

Down in the engineers' department, the firemen and engineers were working away waist-deep in water, for through the hatches of the engine-room great volumes of water were thrown. At the first deluge these men calmly stood at their posts, and coolest among them stood Jack Maitland. Even when the water became so deep that the iron platforms upon which the engineers stand to do their work were almost submerged and washed up and down with the rise and fall of the steamer, Jack worked on calmly with his co-workers, and by his coolness and courage instilled the same spirit in the others. There was a stern, set look in his young face, however, for he was thinking of Mildred and those 5000 barrels of lime stored away on board. What a danger threatened almost 200 lives—not only death by wind and wave, but by fire, menaced them. Yet, it was mainly little Mildred's face he imagined he saw above, outlined in the shadowy light of the ship's cabin—for darkness was settling down upon them.

With the oncoming night, the wind increased until it blew about ninety miles an hour. Suddenly a great breaker, at least a hundred feet high, swept the steamer with a roar, and bore away three life rafts and the forward side of the saloon. Immense quantities of water were thrown down into the cabin where the wretched passengers huddled, seasickness adding to their miseries of cold and fear. Of 186 passengers, at least 100 were men, and as the water poured into the saloon, these passengers, without waiting for orders, went valiantly to work to help bail out some three feet of water, which every minute threatened to soak into those terrible tiers of lime not ten feet away. All hands, even the frightened cook, toiled to protect those menacing barrels by piling nearly all the remaining bedding of the ship as a barrier to keep the water from the lime, until there seemed no chance for seepage.

Through the long night hours the crew and the male passengers bailed water with desperate energy to save the lives of those on board. There was work for the carpenter also, who, with his assistants, strove to nail boards across the opening whence the door of the social hall had been torn, and to patch up those portions of the wall which had been stove in by the force of the waves.

Mildred sat cowering with some of the other women passengers, trying to keep her senses and her courage. A woman with a babe of some two years was near her. She was so seasick that she paid little attention to the child, who wailed piteously in his childish fear and discomfort. Mildred took him in her arms and hushed him asleep. She sat so still herself that one would have thought her dreaming except for her wide, dark eyes, which held something besides sleep within them.

Mildred, and likewise many an experienced sailor on board that night, had no idea but that they were lost. Never again did she expect to see land, nor kindred, nor even the light of day. Never would she be able to tell Jack it was all a mistake and assure him of her undying love and confidence.

With the thought of Jack, Mildred shook from head to foot. Where was he now? Down in the engine-room! And what must it be like, if, there in the cabin, all was flooded with water? Supposing—Ah! No supposition about it—when the ship sank, think of those brave firemen and engineers going down like rats in a trap! Beads of perspiration stood on her white forehead and matted the soft tendrils of dark hair above it. What would she not give to see Jack once more before the end! To ask his forgiveness, at least. Dear Jack, down there in the darkness and danger, and she had called him a coward!

She laid the sleeping child gently in its mother's lap and arose. Every one was busy. In the saloon and cabin men were working away quietly and incessantly. There seemed to be a slight abatement of the storm, and the pitching of the boat was not so marked. Out in the darkness Capt. Brown and the chief officer stood on the bridge trying to keep the vessel's head to the wind. Mildred never quite remembered how she reached there, but she found herself standing by one of the hatchways clinging desperately in the teeth of the wind. Some one was crying despairingly in the darkness:

"My God! We're lost! We're lost!"

Just at this moment Mildred's horrified eyes beheld in the semi-darkness a great green sea, like a devouring monster, towering over a hundred feet high, come roaring and foaming to engulf the vessel. As she closed her eyes, expecting to be swept away, some one seized her and the next moment she was lying in a closed hatchway more dead than alive, while the raging flood swished overhead and the crash of broken timbers and lifeboats was heard over the roar of the gale.

The next thing Mildred remembered was the sudden opening of the hatchway, and being held again in the strong arms of some one until she was almost breathless. Without, the same voice was crying:

'Oh, my God! We're lost!"

As Mildred tried to speak, her rescuer stopped her with passionate kisses.

"Yes, Mildred, we've been lost this long time, but we've found each other again, thank God! Now I can die happy."

"Oh, Jack, forgive me!" Mildred sobbed brokenly.

Jack silently attempted to soothe her, when again the boarding waves shook the vessel from stem to stern. It was then that Jack told Mildred how some one had taken his watch for a short time while he came up for observation, and that seeing her and the oncoming sea, he had barely had time to rescue her ere the wave swept down upon the vessel and carried him struggling for some hold almost to the stern. Here he was caught in a rope which alone saved him from being swept overboard. Indeed, so great was the depth of the water over and around him, that he fully believed for the time being that he was overboard.

"And to think I called you a coward!" Mildred sobbed.

"Never mind, dear, let us forget. We are both to blame for those months of pain," Jack replied, with a tender caress.

After a silence, Mildred asked:

"What was all that crashing and noise right after the deluge, Jack?"

"The bridge on which the captain stood gave under the heavy blows of the sea, and I think Chief Officer Davis was injured by being thrown against the iron railing. Yes, and some more of the lifeboats went by the board."

"We are certainly lost, Jack, but I am glad some of you are braver than the one I heard crying out there that we are lost, or where would we all be?"

Jack started.

"That reminds me of my duty, dearest. I must go. See! The dawn is coming and the storm seems to be passing off. First I must take you back to the cabin, and you must promise to remain there unless I come for you. One kiss, little girl!" And with a manly tenderness Jack pressed the girl to his heart and then bore her back to the cabin.

Before Jack went to his post, he took note of the damage done the vessel. A sailor told him that during the worst of the storm, while the social hall was filled with water, one of the incandescent light globes at the ceiling was broken and the boards of the ceiling torn away in such a manner that the woodwork was set fire by the electric current, and but for another sea booming into the place, extinguishing the blaze, the fire thus created must have made rapid headway.

Outside, Jack noted that the captain's gig and the lifeboats, the after-wheel-house and sounding machine were all gone. Tarpaulins were ruthlessly torn from the hatches. Down in his own department, everything was flooded. Forward, the forecastle was filled with water, and everywhere below the main deck the steamer was still awash.

Filled with unutterable happiness, even with the knowledge that every minute might be their last, Mildred set to work to comfort and relieve some of her less fortunate sister passengers. Still the men bailed water, and as one gave out another took his place.

The morning brought some relief. The clouds were still threatening and the seas were rolling heavily, but the wind had greatly moderated.

The captain stood away to the southwest for some time, when down upon them the hurricane came again in all its fury. All the starboard boats were carried away, and the tremendous billows again flooded the vessel. All day long the brave ship struggled along trying to weather the terrific seas that swept her decks. All day long the brave crew and passengers bailed water. All day long the courageous men in the engine-room held by their posts, and but for their efforts to keep the engines going all would indeed have been lost.

On the second night the hurricane again abated somewhat, and, though all felt that their plight was hopeless, there was more spirit infused into the workers. Still did they stand by their posts, and so seasick were many of the men passengers who tried to work, and so exhausted did they become, that some of the women sought to help in bailing out when they gave up. Mildred was among this number, and so happy was her young spirit in her renewed love, that she succeeded in inspiring more courage in the sinking spirits of the others.

On the evening of the fourth day Jack Maitland and one or two of his companions, utterly exhausted, threw themselves upon strange berths, their own being full of water, too weary to care whether the vessel sank or not. For four days and nights they had had nothing to eat or drink save canned corn beef and beer; nor had they threatens to involve the free trad in a fight as endless and as fight of Dr. Buckleton and Dr. Rusk. though they belong to rival schools of best friends till recently. Then Dr. and Dr. Rusk, being the only other township, at once took charge of the case. Dr. Rusk's treatment was most efficacious, and Dr. Buckleton's dangerous symptoms rapidly disappeared before it; yet this treatment was diametrically opposed to all the patient's tenets and beliefs, and hence he fought it stoutly. So bitter, in fact, was his prejudice that the treatment had to be administered by force, and during its administration Dr. Buckleton protested with all his might, both vocal and physical. Held down firmly in his bed, yelling and swearing at the top of his lungs, Dr. Buckleton only swallowed by compulsion Dr. Rusk's hated remedies, which nevertheless proved so efficacious that in a miraculously short time the patient was on his feet again.

"The first thing he did on leaving the house was to visit Dr. Rusk and beat him so severely that his life was despaired of. In this contingency, overwhelmed with remorse, Dr. Buckleton took charge of his former friend's case, treating him by the methods of his own school so capably that Dr. Rusk, to his chagrin and mortification, soon saw himself coming round with a speed and certainty that seemed hardly probable.

"Dr. Rusk is not yet on his feet, but he expects to be so shortly. In fact, thanks to Dr. Buckleton's hated treatment, against which he protests in vain, Dr. Rusk was able yesterday to announce that by the end of the week at latest he proposes to shoot Dr. Buckleton into the living image of a coal screen."

A Delicate Position.

THE play was an execrably bad one, and the company playing it was even worse. When the curtain fell on the first act, sounds of marked disapprobation were heard from all parts of the house. One man alone sat quiet.

At the close of the second act a perfect tornado of groans, cat calls and hisses broke out. Still the man sat unmoved. At last a man sitting in the next seat turned to him and said:

"Pardon me, but are you not disgusted with this wretched play?"

"I am, indeed," heartily concurred the silent one.

"Then why don't you signify your displeasure like the rest of us?"

"Well, you see, it's this way with me. I am here on a free ticket, and as I am getting something for nothing, I hardly feel justified in expressing my disapproval; but I'll tell you what," he concluded with emphasis, "if this confounded play gets much worse I am going out to the box office and buy a ticket, and then I will come back and hiss like the rest of you."—[Metropolitan Magazine.

Frightened the Darky.

"ARGUING backward from effect to cause," said Robert Edeson, "isn't always as easy as it seems. The other day I happened to stroll along upper Broadway, behind two mischievous hospital internes when they came to a large, fat, black African sitting on a box sound asleep. His mouth was wide open, displaying a set of perfect teeth and about $4 worth of pink tongue, at the prevailing rates. One of the internes yielded to temptation. He took a five-grain quinine capsule in his pocket, pried the end off, and deftly dusted the bitter powder on that tempting tongue. Then he wakened the negro. 'Is this Broadway?' he asked, by way of excuse for the liberty.

"The negro rose, stretched himself, and then began to savor that acrid presence in his mouth. 'Um,' said he, reflectively. 'Um-um!' His eyes widened and he clutched his throat. 'Nevah min' whether this is Broadway or not, w'ite man,' said he. 'You go git er doctah, er day'll be a daid niggah on dis corner. Ah done bus' mah gall.' "—[Young's Magazine.

PROF. W. LAWSON TALL, apropos of the new serum cure for hay fever, said at a medical banquet in Denver.

"This cure is the result of patience, the result of much patient toil. Indeed, when I think of the patient waiting involved in the perfecting of this cure, I am reminded of Dr. Bob Sawyer's ante-room.

"Dr. Bob Sawyer stepped proudly into his ante-room one day. There were quite eight or nine persons there. And Dr. Bob, looking from one face to another with complacence, said:

" 'Well, who comes first? Who's been waiting the longest?'

" 'Here, Doc—that's me,' said Snip the tailor, rising and flourishing his unpaid bill. 'I've been waiting over eighteen months!' "

Matchless.

"WHEN Edwin Gould took up the manufacture of matches seven years ago," said a New York banker, "his friends were a good deal amused, and many a joke was cracked at Mr. Gould's expense.

"I remember one June day, at an open-air luncheon at Tuxedo, a superb four-in-hand dashed round a turn of the road and we all looked up from our strawberries to admire it.

" 'That is Mr. Gould's team,' said some one. 'Who is driving?'

" 'Mr. Gould himself,' a lady answered. 'Doesn't he look striking on the box?' "

GEORGE ADE recently heard that an old lady from the neighborhood in Indiana where he was born was in town on a visit to a relative. Mr. Ade thought that theater tickets would be a fitting attention, and on consulting her as to what she would prefer to see, she said that she had seen "The Merchant of Venice" over thirty years ago, and had always desired to see it again. He accordingly procured the tickets.

The next day he called and inquired to find out how she liked the performance as compared with that she remembered from long ago.

"Well," replied the old lady, "Venice seems to have spruced up a right smart bit, but that Shylock is the same mean, grasping critter that he used to be."—[Metropolitan Magazine.

Hard on Husbands.

"I, FOR one, am in favor of the bill to abolish the use of aigrettes and paradise plumes in ladies'hats. I favor this bill not only for moral reasons, but for financial ones as well."

The speaker was Col. Lionel C. Harris, the well-known ornithologist of Memphis. He resumed:

"The cost of these aigrettes and paradise plumes is a dreadful thing for any husband to contemplate. I saw yesterday a Virot hat covered with aigrettes that was ticketed $200. And that reminds me——

"A lady novelist wrote to a publisher last month:

" 'Please send a check in advance of royalties. I want to buy a new hat for a June wedding.'

"The accommodating publisher sent the lady a check for $50. She acknowledged it indignantly.

" 'I said,' she wrote, 'that I wanted a hat, not a veil.' "

Tom's Reform.

UPTON SINCLAIR, at a vegetarian banquet at Battle Creek, said of a social reform he disliked:

"That social reform is as foolish and ridiculous as the reform attempted by Tom Haines.

"Tom Haines was playing checkers in the general store with a man who kept looking at the clock.

" 'What do you keep looking at the clock for?' said Tom.

" 'Because,' said the man, 'I see by the Sunday paper that every time that clock ticks old John D. is $10 richer.'

"Tom Haines rose hastily.

" 'What are you going to do?' said the man.

" 'Stop the clock,' said Tom."

MRS. S. T. RORER, the well-known cooking expert, compared French and American cooking in a lecture to the girl graduates of Chicago.

"American cooking, with its simple dishes and its free use of the grill," she said, "is healthful; but the rich sauces of French cooking and the liberal use of the frying pan make the French flabby and dyspeptic.

"I was once entertained at a Paris restaurant famous for its chef. We had such dishes as salmi of becasse, etuve of beef and aubergine au gratin—and then my host, leaning back with a satisfied smile, handed me the menu and said:

" 'And what'll we have next, Mrs. Rorer?'

" 'Well,' said I, 'I think we'll have indigestion next.' "

The Wrong Interpretation.

ROBERT HENRI, the well-known New York painter, was condemning a stupid critic.

"His interpretations are always wrong," Mr. Henri said. "He always misunderstands totally an artist's conception. He reminds me of the Cinnaminson woman before Millet's 'Angelus.'

"When the 'Angelus' was on exhibition at Earle's in Philadelphia, a Cinnaminson woman dropped in to see it. She gazed with lively interest at the two peasants standing reverently in the sunset glow in the quiet meadow. Then she said:

" 'A courtin' couple, hey. Seem a bit shy, don't they?' "

What is the Inference?

"I HAVE collected," said a statistician, "data from 100 men who married their girl typewriters, and I find that every one of these men now employs a male typewriter, though, as you know, male wages are much higher than female.

"Furthermore," said the statistician, "I find that these 100 men employ male typewriters not of their own volition, but at the express wish—I may almost say the express command—of their wives.

"It is a very remarkable thing to get, in 100 cases, statistics so absolutely uniform as these. What, I wonder, can be the meaning of such unanimity? What is to be inferred from it?"

Almost an Angel.

GEORGE ADE was talking at a June wedding in Chicago about matrimony.

"Matrimony is perhaps a little too much idealized," he said. "These June brides, radiant under their white veils in a glitter of June sunshine, seem capable of changing earth to heaven, but, as a matter of fact, they are not capable of anything of the sort.

"I am in hearty sympathy with old Brown, to whom young Black said at a wedding:

" 'A good wife can make a veritable angel of a man.'

" 'Yes, that's so,' old Brown agreed. 'My wife came near making one of me with her first batch of doughnuts.' "

A Quaint Thought.

The House Beautiful—Its Flower Garden and Groun

OUR BEST ROSES.

RESULTS OF PERSONAL EXPERIENCE WITH DIFFERENT VARIETIES.

By Ernest Braunton.

ALTHOUGH England and Oregon, two places having very similar climates, may grow finer roses than Southern California, as may the bay region roundabout San Francisco, none of these sections can produce flowers over so large a portion of the year. We may also have very fine roses here if we will but choose those best adapted to our gardens and not look to other States and countries for our new sorts. That is, we should buy the latest and best from local nurserymen who have tried out large numbers for a year or two, or more, before placing them before a confiding public. Furthermore, not all good roses do well every year, despite the fact that they receive similar treatment each year. The writer has 135 roses that have been planted three years—some of them four years—and the flowers vary much in the different sorts from year to year.

Each year, for many years, the writer has recorded what has proven to be the most satisfactory roses for that particular year. This year will be no exception. There are a few old "stand-bys" that should be with us always, and in annual bloomers we should keep both the white and the Pink Cherokee and Beauty of Glazenwood. Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, either the bush or the climbing variety, is worthy a place in any garden. So, too, in bush roses the old Magna Charta cannot be surpassed. In very early spring it should be cut back very heavily, and from April to June it will produce a crop of large, showy blossoms not surpassed by any rose. With this one, as with all others herein mentioned, the writer is speaking from actual experience gained in his own garden.

This year the first fine roses came from Peace, a very large, semi-double rose that is pure white in the bud, changing to blush as it opens. This was closely followed by Mad. P. Rivror, nearly white outside, deepening to a light buff in the center. At the same time came a fine rose for early spring cutting, named Madam Vermorel, a light and glorious pink, with glossy foliage second to none. Then came other fine ones such as President Carnot, Betty, Franz Deegan, Madam Leon Pain, all beauties of the highest type. In the climbers the best has been Francaisse Crousse, the most perfect double red rose the writer has ever seen, far surpassing Climbing Wootton, beside which it grows. Another splendid climber is Caroline Testout, and a most vigorous grower. The old Celine Forestier has proven very fine, but lacks sufficient length of stem for cutting. There are numerous new roses now on trial by local growers, and we hope soon to write of some of them that trial has proven well adapted to this climate and having merit above the average sorts grown hereabout.

Dandelions in Lawns.

SOME one asks for a remedy for the dandelion pests in lawns. The writer knows of but one aside from digging them out. With a piece of large wire sharpened at one end, a scratch awl, or similar instrument, punch a hole down into the crown of each plant and drop in a few drops of any strong acid, using a small oil can. There are some who claim to have killed them merely by dropping the acid on the center of the plant. The writer rid his own law of thousands by simply digging them up, and does not consider their eradication a very hard job.

The Carob or St. John's Bread.

A COUPLE of weeks ago George W. Burton gave a very interesting account of his investigations in Spain concerning the value and uses of the beans grown on the Carob (Ceratonia siliqua.) Nevertheless but little was told that has not, from time to time, appeared in this department, for the tree has been grown on a commercial scale for many centuries, and is well known in Southern California. The trees nearest to the center of Los Angeles are two in front of the house on the southwest corner of Main and Fourteenth streets, which have twice been figured in this department. Not only may you get a bulletin concerning them from Washington, but the government has been sending out cuttings of the very best sorts grown for food. The writer knew of a lot of those going begging in this city last spring and believes they were thrown away. The tree does not grow very fast in our climate, and for that reason has not proven a favorite for street planting.

White Flowers.

THE Bindekunst has the following to say concerning the prevalence of white among flowers:

"Botanists say that nearly one-third of all plants have white flowers. This color predominates in some families, as lilies, narcissus, saxifraga and others. The color of the flower is said to have direct bearing on its fertilization, as being a means of attracting insects. White, as the lightest color, is in strongest contrast to its darker surroundings, as leaves, ground and water; hence it is most conspicuous to animals, and especially insects which fly from flower to flower in the dusk and in light nights. White is also the prevailing color among plants blooming in shady places and in hollows. It is a curious fact that many plants with colored flowers will produce occasionally white flowers, occasionally side by side, with those of their own color. These albinos are generally found among blue flowers, less often with red, and rarely with yellow flowers. Botanists do not agree as to the cause of this aberration. Some white flowers assume a reddish tinge in northern regions; this is due to anthocyan and probably serves to transform light into heat."

Cocoa Palms in Pernambuco.

FROM our government representative stationed in tropical Brazil we glean the following interesting facts about the cocoa palm:

"Pernambuco is situated in the center of the tropical section of Brazil, within which the cocoa palm grows most luxuriantly. The cocoa palm seems to be indigenous to the district which extends from the vicinity of Bahia, on the south to Parahyba, on the north, but it attains its fully luxuriant and most prolific development in the vicinity of Pernambuco.

COCOA PALMS IN FLORIDA.

"The cocoa palm is one of the most beautiful and attractive natural adornments of many of the public parks and private gardens of this city and environs, often attaining a height of from eighty to ninety feet. The trunk is without branches, and the leaves, which cluster in a tuft at the top, are from fifteen to twenty feet in length. At the base of the leaves the nuts hang in clusters, the number varying from three to fifteen, according to the age and condition of the tree. Occasionally cocoa palms are found which do not bear nuts, and these attain even a greater height, their sterility seeming to augment their virility and consequent attractiveness.

"While this particular palm grows naturally, it thrives a great deal better with care and cultivation, and there are several large plantations in this vicinity planted within recent years and carefully cultivated which are now returning a fair revenue to the owners. Most of these plantations are located along the coast, but the tree will grow and produce up to an altitude of 880 meters (2624 feet.) The nut is first planted in its natural state, with hull and fiber. At the expiration of about twelve months, or when the plant has reached a height of about three feet, it is transplanted and set out in rows about forty feet apart. If cultivated and irrigated, the tree will produce at the end of five years, otherwise it will require about ten years to produce. Although the rainfall within this coast region averages about eighty inches per annum, several inches often fall within a very short while, and all falls during the months of the "rainy season," and often when it is of no service to certain vegetation. The summers are hot and dry, and young plants and trees need to be irrigated."

Fighting Garden Insect Pests.

THE word insect is so generally used for any small living creature that a word as to what an insect really is may not be out of place, more especially that not all the living pests treated under this head are true insects.

Every true insect exists in four stages: Eggs, larva, chrysalis and perfect insect. All insects have six legs; some are wingless, others have one or two pairs of wings, the latter state only marking the typical perfect insect. The true insect is also

PARK SYSTEMS.

ABOUT THE PLANS OF THE PARK COMMISSION.

cities in general have been much admired and praised by European authorities by reason of their excellent park systems. While Los has parks that do, or soon will, compare very with those of the average eastern city, we attained a "system," although our present has such a move well under way. A differs from a number of scattered parks are united or connected by boulevards for the express purpose of making them whole. This unification has made the of some of our large eastern cities famous and the delight of every observant visi-

A good beginning was made in the Elysian Park, though this has of late been by easing the grades and more abrupt who have driven over the new Griffith say it is a marvel, only surpassed as marvelous landscape views it has opened wonder of every visitor. Around Silver Lake good road building has been done, and and expectation of the Park Board that all with Westlake Park, may be "tied" together great stretches of scenic parkway drives. "On to Richmond" cry will be with all the Arroyo Secoward. Los Angeles, Pasadena, and those districts lying without are all interested in the scheme of making them into a mighty canyon drive, well stretches of natural scenery on either side. has long worked for a section for its Gervanza being a pioneer in the movement quarter century ago, but Commissioner Lippincott has a dream, that seems easy of fulfillment, from the city to the mountains, connecting mighty forest reserve to the north.

value for money expended through the in this city may be seen in the station in Central Park. In its line it is palace and surpasses any similar the writer has seen, even in our best skyscrapers. There is no question but the public, when it gets a taste of this great convenience, will demand others in all our close-in parks. Not only should we have them in parks, but in every sort of public grounds, for there is nothing of which Los Angeles stands so much in need as a score of modern public-comfort stations.

"Where Nature is Unassisted."

UNDER the above heading the Graphic lately complimented Santa Monica and its park superintendent on the naturalness of their strips of seaside park. This preservation of one of nature's beauty spots, already harmonious with its surroundings, has been due to the protection and farsightedness of Park Commissioner E. H. Sweetser, who for several years has served his city in the capacity of acting park superintendent, without pay. Mr. Sweetser is now chairman of the lately-appointed County Board of Forestry. It has indeed been fortunate for Santa Monica that what little money she has had to spend on park work has been placed where it is most effective for public good. The article is as follows:

"One appreciative of nature's own sculptures and garbing cannot fail greatly to admire the treatment accorded the escarpment along Ocean avenue in Santa Monica—or perhaps its absence of treatment. In music it is evident that there is much art in refraining from touching the keys of the piano, or the strings of the violin, at the right time, just as much art indeed as in touching them correctly and deftly. But in other arts the idea is far less apparent, and the necessity for the successful artist rather to conspire with nature than to obliterate the natural outlines and supplant them with conventional curves and angles, is a conception entirely foreign to the modern landscape gardener and architect.

"With few notable and beautiful exceptions, modern architects and gardeners have done their worst (and their best) to teach nature how she ought to deport herself, and the result is that everywhere man has had a chance he has filled the circumjacent with a terrible sameness of conventional geometrical lines. One of these notable and beautiful exceptions is the Santa Monica ocean cliff gardening. Here was an excellent opportunity for the landscape gardener to obliterate the multitudinous carvings of nature, the sculptures of centuries of wind and rain and sun, and produce a mile or more of artificial sameness. As the cliffs are but hardpan, the expense of rounding them off into methodical curves and angles would have been small. But, thank heaven! the opportunity was neglected. Santa Monica's ocean front escaped defacement. A monument should be erected to the gardener who held his hands off, or to whoever it is that may be responsible for the fact that the tired human eye can find relief from a sameness that is maddening when it rests on this most delightful bit of ocean front."

The Ginkgo or Maidenhair Tree.

IN the city of Washington are some fine ginkgoes on streets, one avenue in particular calling forth the admiration of all who see it. This tree is slow of growth, however, and its naturally pyramidal form must be changed by constant pruning before it makes a shade tree. It is hardy as far north as Boston, but beyond this limit it is damaged by cold and also by snow. With us it groves fairly well, though rarely found in local gardens. It is, however, a comparatively new tree in the United States, and when its behavior is better known it may be more popular. Nevertheless, something is wrong, for out of every hundred planted in our parks and gardens during the past twenty years not more than one is now alive. The writer has never seen a street planted with them in our State, so we cannot judge of them except through eastern examples.

Parkway Planting.

"THE Park Commissioners shall have the power to designate the position, the kind, or variety of trees, palms, or shrubs that may be planted in or along the sidewalk space in the streets of said city; to fix the distances apart that they shall be placed; to remove any or all such trees, palms, or shrubs considered by them to be objectionable, and to enforce rules concerning their protection and culture.

"Every person, firm or corporation shall before setting out or planting any such trees, palms, or shrubs, along any premises bordering any such streets, make a written application to the Park Commissioners and obtain a permit so to do before entering upon the work. Such application shall state the place where it is proposed to set out or plant such trees, palms, shrubs, the position and the variety or kind thereof.

"It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to allow any hedge to remain untrimmed or in such condition that any part thereof shall project over the property line in the sidewalk or street." Such are the present restrictions on street planting now in force in Santa Monica, and it is expected before long that all our cities will have still more drastic laws so that the municipality shall absolutely control the parkway and do its own planting on all streets.

The Norway Maple.

IN many parts of the East the Norway or sycamore maple is a favorite for street planting, though it is somewhat intolerant of dust and smoke and is therefore better suited to rural districts and villages than conjugated city centers. As it is a spreading tree, care should be taken to prevent its heading too low. It thrives in Southern California as well as any of the maples, but seems to thrive still better farther north. Nature seems to dictate an evergreen country, and it is somewhat puzzling to know why we have sycamores, cottonwoods, etc., almost identical with species found in eastern States. In Central and Northern California, where oaks are deciduous, the maples thrive and no objection should be made to use on street and highway. With us they have no place in public haunts except grouped in lowlands in extensive parks.

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

THE COMING SHOW.

THE MEN IN DUSTERS AND CAPS WHO WILL AWARD PRIZES.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experiences with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

IN these languid summer days the average person is more apt to have mountain and seashore vacation on the brain than the more prosaic and laborious duties of the chicken yard Nevertheless, it will not do to entirely neglect the factors that stand for success; the coming show and commercial season—not the least of which are the preliminaries to be observed for the coming Los Angeles show. And as all exhibitors like to know who the gentlemen in dusters and caps are to be that will pick the winners, we here give the list for the breeders' show in Los Angeles.

George W. Masterson of Duarte will judge Barred and White Rocks, Golden, Partridge, Black, Silver Penciled and Columbian Wyandottes; Light and Dark Brahmas; Black and White Langshans; R. C. Dominiques.

E. E. Emerson of Los Angeles will pass on Buff, Silver Penciled, Partridge and Columbian Rocks; White and Buff Wyandottes.

H. W. Gunston will do the honors in S. and R. C Rhode Island Reds; Pea Comb Buckeyes.

William F. Brace will judge the S. C. and R. C. Brown and White, S. C. Buff, Black and Duckwing Leghorns; C. C. and R. C. Black, Buff and White Minorcas; W. F. Black Spanish; Mottled Anconas; Golden and Silver Spangled, Golden and Silver Pencilled, White and Black Hamburgs.

Will Purdy will examine and place White, Silver, Gray and Colored Dorkings; R. C. Redcaps; S. C. Buff, Black, Jubilee and R. C. and S. C. White Orpingtons; Houdans; Crevecoeurs; La Fleche; Faverolles; all water fowl and turkeys.

Ben M. Woodhull will place the ribbons on Buff, Partridge, White and Black Cochins; White Crested Black Bearded Golden, Silver, White and Buff Laced, Nonbearded Golden, Silver and White Polish; all Games and Game bantams; Silkies, Sultans and Frizzles.

Robert V Moore, Black Sumatras, Lakenfelders and Andalusians; all varieties of pigeons.

This is certainly a splendid array of judges, which insures that all awards will be up on the opening day. Breeders interested in exhibiting should preserve this list for future reference.

Three-year-olds as Layers.

Much has been said in this department on the egg-laying contests which have been such a pronounced feature of poultry culture in Australia. Owing to the fact that these contests have been for the most part under governmental supervision, we have been disposed to admit their truthfulness, hence have given them a corresponding careful consideration. Touching the latest, or third year laying contest, the Sydney Daily Telegraph gives the following condensed and important information:

"For the first time in poultry history accurate data have been accumulated as to the productivity and value of third-year hens as layers. The facts established quite upset the preconceived ideas of the majority of practical poultry farmers, who would have been prepared to stand by their opinion that the light breeds would excel the heavy ones in the third year. The actual result, however, is that the Black Orpington and Langshan quite overshadow the popular White Leghorn, and by giving an average net profit of over 6s. per hen have demonstrated their profitableness in the third year, provided they prove good layers in their first and second seasons. The best strains of White Leghorns were under observation in this test, and the verdict must be that the profit of 3s. 2d. per head which they earned does not warrant them being kept for the third year's laying."

Thus it would seem that the lighter breeds, such as Leghorns, Hamburgs, Blue Andalusians, etc., "run out" as egg machines much sooner than the English and American classes. A preference was also expressed for the ordinary way of feeding over the dry-hopper system.

Denver Wins.

The report of the election commissioner of the American Poultry Association furnishes the pleasing news that Denver has been chosen as the place for holding the annual convention of the association for 1911, and that the time will be the second week in August. The officers elected are as follows:

President, Reese V. Hicks; first vice-president, S. J. Hopper; second vice-president, L. B. Audigier; secretary, S. T. Campbell; executive board, Charles M. Bryant, Harry H. Collier, Earl Hemmenway.

The Pacific Coast receives recognition in Harry H Collier, who is a resident of Tacoma, Wash.

Caught On the Wing.

The breeders and fanciers of the Escondido Valley have organized themselves into an association of which A. B. Elder is president and R. V. B. Lincoln secretary.

POULTRY IN AN ORANGE GROVE.

To be well born is good, but to be well bred is better. This applies to men as well as poultry.

A correspondent asks if $1000 will start a poultry ranch. Yes, but unless one had capital in reserve it might be difficult to keep it going until established.

If a rancher keeping poultry, it is a good practice to allow the birds free range over the stubble after the grain has been cut.

"Standpatters" in a political atmosphere may be open to criticism, but in the poultry business they are usually the winners.

California will undoubtedly send a strong delegation to the Denver meeting of the American Poultry Association. A number will go from this county.

Concerning Judges and Judging.

The agitation for a national association of poultry judges, it seems to us, is bad politics and wholly impracticable. This being a country of magnificent distances we regard it simply impossible to call together delegates representing every State and poultry section for such a purpose. Even the national Poultry Association never represents in person all sections at its annual meetings. Neither do we think it at all feasible for the A.P.A. to control judges in the issuing of permits or licenses. The art of judging poultry cannot be taught from the book, neither can it be learned in a correspondence school; it is rather a matter of adaptability and experience in handling and growing the birds. It is no haphazard undertaking, but rather an exacting occupation. As a general thing, good breeders know good judging, and when the awards give satisfaction to the rank and file of exhibitors, the judge can be rated as competent, irrespective of membership in a judges' association or a license from the American Poultry Association.

I merely whistled. To think that my silent, cynical friend, Grant, should own to a deep devotion for a little girl who played in musical comedy, probably a typical young person with a smile and a good set of teeth. I was fairly bewildered.

"Are you sure, Ridding?"

"Dead certain. What's more, I am going to be introduced to her."

Next night I went round to Grant once more.

"I have come to ask a favor, old chap."

"Not——" he began savagely.

"No; I shall make no more inquiries as to your ideal's identity. Ridding has found her."

It is not often that Grant does more than grunt; he swore then.

"What do you mean, Maxwell?"

"What I say. You must have known it would be an easy matter."

There was no mistaking Grant's face. It revealed pure, undisguised bewilderment.

"Surely you know that she is on the stage in musical comedy?"

"She had not gone on the stage when I last saw her."

"Well, she has now then. Ridding recognized her at once on a picture post card. It is my belief that the boy is in dead earnest."

Later I saw Grant. "You assure me that young Ridding is straight?" he said.

"Absolutely," I told him.

"Then let me know when the wedding is."

I walked on more puzzled than ever.

Strange to say only two days later Ridding came round to my rooms.

"I have got the special license. Of course, nobody knows. I can trust you, can I?"

"Of course," I said, "and I say, may I bring Grant if he undertakes to be mum? He guessed this would come, and he asked me specially."

"Well," said Ridding hotly, "I do not see the force of that."

"I will answer for him," I said.

After the ceremony Grant went up to the bridegroom and asked a favor.

"I want to put three questions to your wife," he said. "Will you allow me?"

Ridding assented, somewhat to my surprise. The little bride looked puzzled. The artist turned to her abruptly.

"Does your father know of your marriage?"

"He is dead," she said slowly.

"Your mother?" he rapped out.

"We shall tell her afterward."

"One more question—her address?"

Ridding, still surprised, handed him a card.

In the evening I sought Grant out, as I was determined to solve this queer mystery.

"Explain? With pleasure. You were a precious pair not to realize at first that a man seldom waits to my age to have the one romance of his life. 'My Ideal' was painted twenty-three years ago."

"Then the new Lady Ridding——"

"The daughter simply cannot be compared with the mother."

At last the truth dawned upon me.

"But why," I cried, "in heaven's name did you not tell us at first?"

"Well," he said, "afterward I could not understand, and I would not risk saying a word which might hurt her in any way, but as soon as I saw the post card I realized just how matters were tangled."

The Tagasaka Maru.

closed their eyes in sleep in all that time. Now, with the storm abated, and with some one with recuperated energy to take watch, Jack lay in an apathetic stupor unable to fear for any one, even Mildred.

Lying thus, he was aroused by some one entering the room and bending over him. A soft hand lifted his head and held something hot to his lips. This something he took with the obedience of a child, and after a while he was so much refreshed and strengthened that he was able to recognize his small nurse. Mildred had found a can of beef extract, and with the aid of a small alcohol lamp had concocted a broth for some of the more famished workers.

It was some hours later that Jack awoke a new man and realized that the staunch ship was still riding the waves and that he could go back to his duties with renewed hope.

On the morning of the seventh day after the Tagasaka Maru left Seattle, she was sighted coming into San Francisco port. She was deep in the water, with a decided list to starboard. Her bowsprit was gone, and the iron railings had been almost entirely carried away along with the lifeboats and rafts.

Upon boarding her, wondering landsmen discovered that the social hall had been completely gutted by the waves, and that but for the persistent and almost superhuman efforts of the crew and passengers the ruthless waves would have reached and devoured the hundreds of barrels of lime stored in the cabin, and none would have been left to tell the fate of the missing Tagasaka Maru.

Amid the unusual confusion and excitement of their safe arrival at San Francisco, there were few to notice bluff Capt. Brown bidding a smiling adieu to a pretty, dark-eyed little girl and a tall, worn and heavy-eyed, but still distinguished-looking, young man, their faces irradiated with happiness; few to hear his parting words:

"May you always weather the storms of life as bravely and steer safely into port together!"

A Talk With a Showman.

the assembled peers and peeresses put on their coronets. Some of them haven't worn a coronet in years, except, of course, around the house, and doing so in public is bound to be fraught with interest. You take a loose-skinned duke, now. If he doesn't frown, he can't keep his monocle in place, and if he does frown, his coronet may slip down over his aristocratic nose and shut off his even more aristocratic breath. Unless they pass a ground rule permitting peers without much hair to tie theirs on with a string or hold 'em in place with one hand, there's sure to be considerable suffering entailed.

"But, bad as those things are, the King is in for even a worse time. From his published likenesses, I take it he's naturally a man of simple tastes. Far be it from me to pry into the private life of the ruling monarch of our mother country across the sea to whom we are related by many ties, but I'll bet you, if the truth were known, he's secretly addicted to health underwear and pepsin pellets before each meal. Merely wearing Vandyke whiskers doesn't necessarily prove that he has any fast sporting tendencies. Our own Henry Cabot Lodge wears that kind, and Henry Cabot's life is an open book. Not an interesting one, but open. Yes, sir, George V looks from his pictures like the kind of a man that would abhor having a fuss made over him But he's got to go through the whole string. He'll have to sit there on a hard rock while eight or nine people are batting him with swords, and then somebody will put a garter on him, which in itself is bound to be very embarrassing to any modest man, and the Archbishop of Canterbury—he's the Dave Belasco of the production—will anoint him with sweet oil, just like he was a scalded thumb.

"I only hope they thought to have it reblocked. Some of his predecessors were large, full persons, and it would be a sad sight to see His Grace of Canterbury trying to adjust a size 8½ crown on to a 6⅞ King. One slip downward and George V would look as though he was wearing a muzzle. Trying to appear regal while peering out at the world through the bars of a golden diadem would be my idea of a real hard job. I don't believe it could be done, not by this George, anyhow.

"And at the finish, they have the aquatic sports and pastimes. All the peers of the realm come forward and kiss George. I only hope he's a good swimmer and used to holding his breath under water. The crowd shouts 'God save the King' at this stage. He'll need saving, too—there's bound to be a lot of crude and careless kissers in a mixed crowd like that. Alfonso of Spain has a natural drip-pan attachment on his face that would catch any overflow, and the Kaiser's mustaches are trained back so when the Kaiser kisses somebody, the other party gets all of it and there's nothing held out on him. But when some of the others get busy—well, he's not a very tall King, and I only hope he doesn't mar the ceremony by going down for the last time with a low, gurgling cry. However, if Queen Mary should survive, I suppose things would go on about the same. She appears to be the active member of the firm, anyhow.

"So far as I see, barring the danger of the King being drowned, or some noble duke strangled by his coronet, or some member of the peerage who's only one generation from the steerage making a fox pass, there's only one real drawback to the coronation," continued Mr. Barnum. "I refer to the action of the American populace at large in staying away. For a while it looked as though, during the third week in June there wouldn't be enough people left in Battle Creek or Fall River to run things. Everybody you know was going over to the coronation to show George that we didn't bear him any grudge on account of the attitude of his great, great-grandfather in regard to certain matters. But the word got passed along that the English populace was going to show its contempt for Yankee money by taking all of it away and hiding it in a safe place. And so a large number of those who had figured on crossing over decided to stay at home and attend the Calloway county fair instead.

"Of course, there'll be plenty of New Yorkers on hand. Any place where he's liable to get crowded to death in a jam and has to pay nine prices for everything is just the same as home to a New Yorker. But the rest of the United States won't be there to any large extent.

"It looks like a frightful outlook for the English shopkeepers and the thrifty householders who lived along the line of march and were figuring on letting their front windows by the day to low Americans for slightly more than the entire property was worth—they'll have to live off of each other, and that's merely another name for slow starvation, if I remember rightly regarding the habits and customs of the true Londoner.

"But, after all, even if everybody else on this side should stay at home, our country would still be represented Our Ambassador, Whitelaw Reid, will be all over the shop, and our special envoy, John Hays Hammond, the only man who ever ran for Vice-President on a platform of a box of 50-cent cigars, can also be depended upon to put Old Glory well up to the front. When it comes to putting up a front, John Hays has no superiors."

"I wonder if Mr. Reid will be among those who are to kiss the King on the cheek?" I asked innocently.

"According to the rules, I believe not," said Mr. Barnum, "but I wouldn't be surprised to hear that he was caught standing on tiptoe blowing a few off the tips of his fingers at His Gracious Majesty. As for Mr. Hammond, any time he got close enough to the King to kiss him, he'd put in the time interesting George in some gilt-edged mining-stock proposition."

Beneficial Insect Claims.

A CORRESPONDENT living in Imperial county and a grower of cantaloupes writes that he has tried a consignment of ladybirds upon his aphis infestations this spring; that the aphis has done no damage and wants to know if we claim that the ladybirds should be depended upon under all circumstances to control the pests that have on certain occasions made melon growing in the Imperial Valley very uncertain. We make no such claims, nor do we have the means of determining to what extent the ladybirds are responsible for the immunity of the melons from aphis attack this season. It is enough to know that the ladybirds are voracious feeders and that their natural food is other insects, chief of which are the aphids. We also know that every cantaloupe grower is in favor of continuing the dissemination of the ladybirds, and that all the growers from whom we have heard believe that these insects are truly beneficial and in some cases the growers have reported that these predators have saved their melon crop. Whether one should depend altogether upon these insect friends cannot be determined by other than the grower. But the subject of the continuance of the distribution of the ladybirds is not a question for argument as far as the insectary department of the State is concerned.

There is now in the insectary a barley sackful of prune boughs. They were placed in a tent in one of the breeding cages a few days ago, and now there are issuing from the brown apricot scale upon these boughs such myriads of Comys fusca that the constant work of two men cannot gather them as fast as they emerge. We are sending out these helpful flies by the hundred thousand every day. Whether the apricot grower or the prune grower should depend upon this most effective parasite to control the scale is a moot question, and must be settled by the party most interested. It is the business of the insectary to collect and breed and distribute all the parasitic and predatory insects that the funds and the machinery of the institution will admit of, and let those who wish argue as to the benefits that may be derived. As long as the growers are satisfied that good work is being done it will be continued.

Progress in Apple Growing.

THE development of our mountain apple lands is proceeding far more rapidly than the public is aware of. In the Oak Glen and Yucaipa Valley 60,000 apple trees were planted during the month of April. When these new orchards come into bearing we may expect to see a large production of fruit from these districts of such high grade in type and quality that a distinctive industry will result, such as we now have with this fruit in Oregon, Washington and other parts of California. Some 2000 acres of similar lands are now under bearing in San Diego county at Julian, Mesa Grande and Smith Mountain. A few years ago I had the pleasure of a visit of several days in the latter region. At that time transportation was inadequate. The farmers had not very good hauling facilities in the first place; they had to depend upon the local markets largely, and that fall I saw wagons loaded with as fine fruit as the State ever produced of this kind being freighted to near-by towns and sold for what the small local demand would justify. When the output reaches higher tonnage and shipping gets to be a business as it is at Watsonville and Rogue River the profits will most certainly be greater than in the past and the industry assume a more solid and satisfactory form.

In our own county the apple industry is increasing. A letter from a grower at Tehachapi states:

"In this Tehachepi district there are many apple and Bartlett-pear orchards of good, healthy trees, forty years old and more, that are still bearing good fruit; of course these trees are scattered over the whole district in family orchards and have never received any scientific care, never having been sprayed, seldom pruned, and allowed to grow with no cultivation and very little irrigation; we have many commercial orchards now, ranging from trees just planted this season to three years old and aggregating over 700 acres.

"We have sixty acres of Bartlett pears and thirty acres each of Jonathan and Spitzenberg apples; George C. Roeding, the Fresno nurseryman and horticulturist, has 160 acres of pears, mostly Bartletts; J. A. Woy and associates have 160 acres of apples and pears, mostly apples; Clark Bros., the Los Angeles fuel merchants, have fifty acres of apples and pears and ten acres of currants; B. M. Denison has eighty acres of Bartlett pears; besides which there are many small tracts."

Cost of Citrus-fruit Production.

EVERY one must see the vital benefits that should arise from the plan the Citrus Protective League has inaugurated for accounting upon some 200 orange and lemon groves to show by actual figures the cost of producing and selling our citrus fruits. The plan will embrace the following points: Cost of producing up to the time of packing; the cost from the picking to the car; the freight rates; the cost of distributing and selling. Not only should this plan be helpful in case an attack is made upon the tariff schedule, but it will have a wholesome effect upon the business in many other ways. All too little is known about the economics of fruit production, and yet it may be said in behalf of the citrus growers that they are in advance of all other fruit growers in this respect. The same determination to get down to some of the fundamentals is seen among the deciduous-fruit men. They have made a great advance in leaving out the lower and unfit grades, and are thus saving to the producer many freight bills, keeping the markets in a measure clear of worthless fruit, and discouraging the production of poor fruit by exposing the results at the shipping-houses. In the furtherance of true economics in fruit husbandry I hope the results of the accounting upon these citrus groves will at the proper time be given to the public.

Pomona Citrus Acreage.

THE Pomona fruit district is the subject of a late report of great value to irrigators at large and indispensable to growers along the foothill region of Los Angeles county, east of Glendora. The report shows that there are 8779 acres of citrus fruits, including 365 acres of lemons at Azusa and Glendora in the San Dimas Lemon Association, and the acreage of the Walnut Fruit Growers Association. In addition to the producing orchards there are about 2500 acres of young citrus trees making a total of 10,739 acres of citrus fruits in the Pomona district.

The title of this valuable report is "The Use of Underground Water for Irrigation at Pomona." It is known as Bulletin No. 236, and is issued under the direction of the chief of irrigation inspection, Department of Agriculture, Washington. The map of the San Antonio Basin is worth the few cents that may be charged for the bulletin. The work describes the organizations for pumping water, pumping installations, methods of distributing water, methods of applying it, duty, cost and future use of the water. The maps and illustrations are as follows. Map of the Pomona Valley and San Dimas; plate, gravels at mouth of San Dimas Canyon; electrical pumping plant; laying concrete pipe; pumping plant and reservoir; orchard irrigation with concrete stands; destroying furrows by cultivation; irrigation with surface pipes. This publication should be in the hands of every fruit grower in the Pomona district.

The Maligned Pepper Tree.

J. H. REED, the able and respected tree warden of Riverside, comes to the defense of the pepper tree in a letter just received. He writes:

"I fear your strictures, in a recent number of The Times on this tree may work an injustice to our most beautiful shade tree. I may say that having been especially interested in street beautification of our California cities for some time I have made a special study of the character of trees available for this purpose. The term 'scale breeder' in this citrus country arouses enmity at once toward anything it is applied to. I feel sure that it is wrongfully applied to the pepper tree. That it is often used by those who do not know what they are talking about, I know it to be a fact. That black scale is sometimes found on the pepper is true. That the tree especially encourages the breeding of the insect I have found no good reason to believe. What locations have given you the impression that it 'has become the scrubbiest, most disreputable and altogether worthless of the lot' I cannot conceive.

"I have had occasion to visit many of our Southern California cities recently in the interest of street-tree planting. In not a single case has the scale trouble been mentioned to me, and in no town have I found pepper trees as a rule worthy of the above description. We find shabby pepper trees in most places, but so far as my observation and examination has gone we find other causes than the scale amply sufficient to account for the condition. We find peppers crowded together on narrow parking spaces—two or three trying to grow where there is space for but one, either for sustenance or beauty, without water or other care, the storm waters of the winters even being shed by the pavements. Is this not cause enough for looking shabby, even without pernicious scale?

"There are probably more pepper trees in Riverside than in any other California city. Among the many thousands on our streets there are poor-doing ones, but they are the rare exceptions. These we are improving where practicable by changing conditions. Where not they are removed to give place to better trees. As you know, Riverside is in the midst of an orange-growing section. Were the trees a real menace to our groves they would not be tolerated. I think you have occasion to know that there is no horticultural commissioner in the State more alert than Mr. Cundiff in warding off dangers to orchards. Of all the miles of pepper trees on our streets he reports to me but three cases where scale-infested peppers endangers adjoining groves. These were at once attended to by heavy pruning. In two cases this relieved them of the pests.

"We are not planting pepper trees along orchard margins except where property owners urge it, and in some cases we are displacing those growing. But not on account of scale, but because we think there are other trees more suitable for such locations. You will find long rows of healthy, beautiful peppers, a delight to strangers and a joy to residents, in Redlands, Ontario and Corona, where intelligent, systematic care is being given. But last week I found some fine, vigorous pepper trees in your beautiful suburb, Hollywood. I must confess on my way out and back I felt a great sympathy for the people who have the taste to surround their homes with these beautiful home grounds and street trees and are obliged to traverse the long stretch of neglected streets to and from the municipality of Los Angeles takes the ornamentation and gives the same ment it now gives to its other public be long before it is known as widely is now for its commercial greatness.

Onion Sets by Wholesale.

CORRESPONDENCE from Santa Ana, Orange county, gives details of very large production of onion sets for export which are very interesting. The Murdock onion-packing-house, five miles west of Santa Ana, is the largest establishment of the sort in the country perhaps. There are seventy acres in the ranch, thirty-five of which are given to growing onion sets for the growers. During the early history of the ranch, onions were produced for the market, but the growing of seed and "sets" was found more profitable. Last year 140 tons were shipped over the entire country.

The early varieties, the seed for which comes from the Island of Madagascar, are the Crystal Wax and the White Bermuda. This year the seed for these early producers began to be sown February 9 and is still being put in. Sometimes the crop goes in as early as December and January. Following these comes the New Queen variety, which is followed by the Brown Australian. The planting continues till June and the harvest comes in the fall. The early sets will be ready for shipment in June and July, and will go mainly to Texas and Georgia. The latter State has already ordered twenty tons for this year. G. A. Murdock is the owner and superintendent of the business. His father, S. J. Murdock, began to produce onions near Westminster twenty-two years ago.

In preparing the sets for shipment the crop is first pulled and spread on racks prepared for that purpose, to be dried in the sun for three to five weeks. From the field the trays are hauled to the packing-house, where they are dumped into the hopper of a large circular separator, run by machinery, in which the tops are beaten off. In another machine, to which the onions and chaff are conveyed by an endless belt, the chaff is blown out. Thence the elevator takes the onions to the grading machine, which separates them into four classes according to size, and from which another elevator carries them upstairs, where a final sorting takes place. Here is a long row of machines, before each of which an operator sits to inspect the sets as they pass along the carriage, while the defective sets are cast out. This double sorting insures a high-grade product. From here the onions drop back to the ground floor, where they are sacked and crated for shipment. All the machinery was invented by G. A. Murdock. The shipments are made from Westminster, about twenty tons being placed in a car. The average per acre is close to four and a half tons. The highest yield on record here is ten tons, while six and seven are frequent.—[Pacific Rural Press.

Australian Kumquat.

THIS is on of the most interesting of all citrus fruits and one which, curiously enough, has never yet received adequate attention from botanists or horticulturists. It was first mentioned by Leichardt, the German explorer, to whom we owe much of our knowledge concerning the interior of the deserts of Northeastern Australia. It is a shrub or small tree from twelve to fifteen feet high, with a trunk two to six inches in diameter. It has small but thick, leathery leaves of gray-green color and one is struck by the scantiness of the foliage. The flowers are small and the fruits about a half-inch in diameter. An agreeable beverage is made from the acid juice and a fair preserve may be made out of the fruit. The peel has the sweetish flavor of the kumquat. It is known in Australia as the native lemon. The plant was described botanically in a footnote to Lieut.-Col. Thomas Livingston Mitchell's "Journal of an Expedition Into the Interior of Tropical Australia in Search of a Route from Sydney to the Gulf of Carpentaria." This plant was discovered on October 17, 1846, not far from Lieut.-Col. Mitchell's camp, near the juncture of the Maranoa and Merevale rivers, in the southern limit of Queensland. Decidedly cold weather was encountered near this point, in some cases the ice being so thick that it had to be broken in the morning before the horses could drink. It seems quite probable from this that the plant grows in a region where the temperature occasionally falls to 10 deg. F. and in rare cases nearly to zero. It is the hardiest of all evergreen citrus fruits, and is very promising for use in breeding new and hardy types. Not only has it highly developed ability to withstand cold, but it is very likely to have an even more desirable quality of being able to withstand occasional spells of hot weather in winter, a quality usually possessed by the desert plants and also characteristic of the kumquat, to which this plant is to be referred. It is not at all impracticable that it can be utilized in its present form in many parts of Arizona, as well as in some parts of Southern Utah, Nevada and Southern Oregon. It is obviously drought-resistant, a point of the very greatest interest, both botanically and agriculturally, and its introduction into the United States will undoubtedly lead to the inauguration of a new era in the breeding of citrus fruits. This very interesting fruit is now introduced for the first time at the suggestion of Walter T. Swingle, because of its resistance to cold, drought, and hot spells during winter. He believes it may be of the greatest importance in the breeding of citrus fruits. The seeds, which are quite small, germinate very readily, and in ten days from the time of sowing in the greenhouse were an inch or more in height, and of sufficient strength to be inarched on two-year-old stocks. By this means it is hoped that within two years there will be flowers sufficient for whatever crosses may be decided to be worth while.—[Rural New Yorker.

ALL WILL HAVE MIRRORS.

At King Edward's coronation the peeresses had a grievance which they are determined shall be remedied this time. Mirrors were lacking in Westminster Abbey, and the troubles the peeresses had in adjusting their coronets may be imagined. This year petitions have been sent in to the committee in charge of arrangements and it is hoped that small mirrors will be affixed to the seats allotted to the peers and peeresses.

But it is certain that no woman will take unnecessary risk in the matter, and every peeress will have her own mirror in case anything has happened to the one which ought to be at her place. Lady Sackville of Knole Park, in Kent, has designed a special coronation bag. It is made of red velvet to match the robes, and lined with white silk. It has a flat, round bottom which has a looking glass inset in gold lace, on the outside, so that by turning the bag upside down it can be used as a mirror.

The initial and coronet of the peeress are worked on the bag in gold embroidery. Small articles, such as combs, powder puffs, smelling salts and handkerchiefs, can also be carried in the bag. Many of Lady Sackville's friends are having similar bags made.—[New York Sun.

THE ROBERT E. LEE'S PILOT WHEEL.

The pilot wheel which guided the steamboat Robert E. Lee in the famous race with the steamer Natchez in 1870, when the Lee made the record on the Mississippi between New Orleans and St. Louis, is now being used on the steamer Nashville, plying the Cumberland.

The old nautical relic was recovered from the City of Providence, to which steamer it had been removed from the Lee. The wheel is over ten feet in diameter, more than thirty-two in circumference, and is made of walnut and cherry. It is of the double circle type of wheel, with two circles of stays around the spokes, which are inlaid with two rows of highly polished basswood. The wheel is in an excellent state of preservation and apparently is as sound as when it guided the Robert E. Lee to victory in the famous old steamboat days on the Mississippi. The record run was made with Capt. Cannon in command of the Lee, and as the story goes, "a negro on the safety valve."—[Nashville correspondence St. Louis Republic.

JUSTICE MARLAN'S SCARAB.

"I was riding down Pennsylvania avenue in a car with Justice Harlan of the United States Supreme Court," remarked Charles Francis Bedloe of Missouri, "and after admiring the fine old man whose portraits we see in the Capitol I could not help noticing the fine scarab that he wears as a scarfpin.

"I have looked over the Senators and other members of the Supreme Court and have not noticed that any other one of them wears a scarab pin. They may have them at home, but Justice Harlan wears one that would attract an expert. The genuine ones are becoming rare, and that is why the Harlan scarfpin would be noticed.

"To tell the truth, the genuine ones are scarce enough, so great has been the demand for them, but the museums have great collections that will never be broken up for the sake of scarfpins."—[Washington Post.

Care of the Body—Suggestions for Preserving Hea

CONDUCTED BY HARRY ELLINGTON BROOK, N.D., OF THE TIMES STAFF.

PRACTICAL HYGIENE.

[The Times does not undertake to answer inquiries on hygienic subjects that are merely of personal interest, or to give advice in individual cases. Those desiring personal advice should write to the editor of the department for particulars. General inquiries on hygienic subjects of public interest will receive attention in these columns. No inquiries are answered by mail. It should be remembered that matter for the Magazine Section of The Times is in the hands of the printer ten days before the day of publication. Correspondents should send their full names and addresses, which will not be published, or given to others, without the consent of the writers. Addresses of correspondents are not preserved, and consequently cannot be furnished to inquirers.]

Summer Vacations.

ABOUT this time of year a majority of the readers of the Care of the Body are planning their summer vacations, unless they have already started on one. Such a vacation is an excellent thing, if properly undertaken. It is specially desirable in this country of strenuous life, where most of us overwork ourselves and play too little. A summer vacation may, however, do no good, or may even do more harm than good. It all depends upon how you take it.

The main thing in a vacation is to get away from one's business—to "forget it." You must avoid rushing around or thinking of your business by night and by day, and you must learn to loaf and to "invite your soul." You should have no set programme whatever. Often, on a vacation, you see people keeping themselves at a tension all the time. "What are we going to do today?" "What shall we do now?" and so on. This is bad business, and will give no good results in strengthened nerves and increased efficiency. Such people often come back from a vacation more weary than when they started.

Los Angeles is fortunate in having within easy reach a great variety of charming and attractive vacation grounds. Within an hour's journey on the south lies the broad Pacific, and within half a day's trip to the north and east are the pine-clad mountains. It is true that we of Southern California lack the charm of forest and running water that are found in the northern part of the State, unless we climb to reach them, but this having to climb perhaps makes us appreciate such natural delights all the more.

Our mountain resorts have not so far been developed to anything like the extent of the beach places. Much improvement has, however, been made in this direction during the past twenty years. In the long range of mountains known as the San Gabriel, the San Bernardino, and the San Jacinto ranges, extending for a distance of a hundred miles, there are dozens of modest mountain resorts where entertainment may be had for man, and sometimes for "man and beast," although fodder is a scarce thing in the high altitudes. These resorts range in elevation from 2000 to 7000 feet above the sea, and several of them are over a mile high. Some of them are reached by good wagon roads, others only by trail. You have to climb well above the half-mile limit before you begin to get among the big pines of various kinds, and firs, where the open ground is covered with a carpet of fragrant pine needles, with a growth of ferns. Most of these places have, in addition to regular boarding establishments, furnished tent cottages, where the camper may play at housekeeping. This is much the better plan, for even if the food furnished at these establishments is what is known as "good," it is seldom that any particular attention is paid to the hygienic side of eating. You will greatly add to the benefit to be derived from such a trip if you give your overworked stomach, as well as your busy brains, a partial rest.

For camping purposes, where it can be arranged, a brush hut is infinitely preferable to a tent. Some people talk about living in a tent as if they were going forward, whereas they are going backward, so far as the breathing of fresh air is concerned, for you cannot ventilate a tent as well as a room that has a window and a door in it. A brush hut may easily be made with half a dozen poles and a little chicken wire, in which you interlace branches, leaving enough light to read by. This is cool, comfortable and wholesome.

Wear old clothes, loose clothing, and as little of it as possible. Give your much-abused skin the luxury of an air bath.

A trip with a wagon, camping over-night in any attractive and convenient spot, is a good idea, but in such parties there should always be at least one who has something of a mechanical turn of mind, to overcome the many little difficulties that are sure to arise.

Turning to the seashore, we find, in the 250-mile stretch between Santa Barbara and San Diego a score or more of resorts that have sprung up during the past few years, in addition to the few that were in existence before that time. The drawback to near-by places is that a vacation spent there is too much like living in town. You meet the same people, discuss the same subjects, and are surrounded by a whirl of merry-go-rounds, popcorn stands, and other trifling distractions that you may find on Spring street and Broadway. You are not getting near to nature. If you select a seaside place for your summer vacation, go at least north of Santa Barbara or south of San Juan Capistrano. Or better still, go over to the Summer Isle, Catalina, where, although you are only fifty miles from Broadway, you seem to be out of the world, and may enjoy that rarity, a dry marine climate, while playing at camping in the Tent City, under the great sugar gums.

As to whether you should go to the mountains or to the beach, that depends upon circumstances. From a hygienic point of view, the mountains are better for those of phlegmatic temperament, while the beach, within sound of the surf, is better for those of a nervous disposition. If your heart is weak, or if you are subject to hemorrhages, you should not venture above an elevation of 2500 feet, or thereabouts.

For those who are able to wander farther afield, there are delightful places for a vacation among the redwood forests of Santa Cruz county, in the Yosemite Valley, or on Puget Sound. This article is, however, intended for the average man, who has only a couple of weeks' holiday in summer. It is all too short a time, for it takes a man about that long to begin to appreciate and enjoy and benefit by an outing.

A Northern Californian recently suggested that the school authorities of California cities and towns should adjust the school vacation for the benefit alike of the fruit growers and the school children. This is a good idea. Health, and strength, and some pocket money may be earned by a little light work during the summer in our orchards and vineyards and hop fields. In the English county of Kent, besides the "hoppers," who swarm down from the East End in September, some people who are not so poor form little groups and improve their health while earning some spending money in this manner.

There are some little precautions which it is well to take while on an outing, either in the mountains or by the seashore. Those who are specially subject to the influence of the ever-present poison oak—or rather poison ivy—would do well to avoid our mountain resorts, in which it grows so freely, because while one may become absolute immune by using the remedy frequently printed in these columns, yet it is somewhat troublesome to be forced always to take this precaution. The remedy is this: To one quart of boiling water take one level teaspoonful of concentrated lye. After it cools, bottle for use. Before going to a place where you expect to be exposed to the shrub, rub every part of your skin that is exposed to the air with this mixture, and do the same on returning to camp. The rhus toxicoendron, or poison ivy, is only poisonous at the time of year when it is in blossom, and when your pores are opened by perspiration, and the wind blows the minute spores into the skin. Some people are so easily affected by it that they become poisoned if they go within a hundred feet of a plant under these circumstances. On the other hand, years ago, in Santa Cruz county, the editor of the Care of the Body has chewed the leaves with immunity.

For snake bites, instead of whisky, which as a remedy is worthless and somewhat harmful, carry with you a little permanganate of potash, and if you should be bitten, tie a handkerchief tightly above the wound, then slash it and insert a few of the crystals, if you have not a solution. At the seashore, see that you do not overdo the bathing business. If you are thin-blooded, and don't get warm as soon as you come out of the water, stay out of it altogether, except that you may paddle around with your feet and legs bare, and take an air bath on the beach. This will do you good instead of harm. The doctors are kept busy in the late fall attending to foolish people who have injured themselves by overdoing the bathing business at the beach.

Above all things, however, remember that when you go on a vacation it should mean a real change, not only for your body, but also for your mind. So cut entirely loose from all business cares. Otherwise you might about as well stay at home. Indeed, in some cases it would be better for some people to stay at home, for they worry while away about how their business is going on more than when they are at home.

Dangers of "606."

FOLLOWING is from an article by Dr. R. L. Alsakar, in A Stuffed Club for June:

"Arsenic is an intensely irritating poison. Any of its soluble salts or compounds have the power of quickly destroying life, even in doses of two or three grains. A large dose causes acute arsenical poisoning, the symptoms being much the same as in poisoning by other irritants.

"If arsenic is given for a long period it will cause chronic poisoning, one of the prominent features being fatty degeneration of various structures, such as the liver, the glands and the muscles of the body. Fatty degeneration of the heart is one of the most dangerous sequels.

"A peculiarity of arsenic is that it disturbs the vision; sometimes it is nothing more than a temporary functional derangement, while at other times complete blindness ensues. If it causes atrophy of the optic nerve the blindness will be permanent. It is reasonable to believe that a remedy that affects the optic nerves in this way also has a deleterious effect on the rest of the nervous system.

"Dr. Koch (of tuberculin fame) treated over 1600 individuals for sleeping sickness with arsenic; twenty-two of these became permanently blind.

"Prof. Ehrlich, who is responsible for the introduction of salvarsan, claims that his patent medicine will not cause blindness; that where the blindness follows the use of the drug it is due to syphilis, not to salvarsan. This is merely begging the question, and will not convince those who have studied the action of arsenic. The professor is simply prejudiced in his own favor. . . .

"In the first article of this series on syphilis, published in the January Club, the prediction was made that the profession would soon wake up to the fact that it had been fooled again. The awakening is taking place. At

…meeting of the Sunset Club, at Squirrel … San Bernardino Mountains, a mile above … recreations indulged in was a mock … Legislature, at which a number of … introduced. Among them was the following, introduced by the editor of the Care of the Body. It was entitled "An Act to Establish a State Burro of Health." Three of the sections have been eliminated, in deference to United States postal prejudices:

"Section 1. The California State Burro of Health shall be under charge of an official to be designated as the 'Chief Burro Driver.' His salary shall be fixed at $17,500 a year, and expenses.

"Sec. 2. There shall be eleven divisions of the Burro, as hereafter noted, each in charge of an official to be known as the chief divisional burro driver, whose salary shall be fixed at $10,000 a year, and expenses.

"Sec. 3. For each county in the State there shall be appointed a chief burro inspector at a salary of $5000 a year, and expenses.

"Sec. 4. For each township in the State there shall be appointed a first assistant burro inspector, with a salary of $3000 a year, and expenses.

"Sec. 5. For each voting precinct in the State there shall be appointed a second assistant burro inspector at a salary of $2500 a year, and expenses.

"Sec. 6. The sum of $750,000 is hereby appropriated for the preliminary expenses of establishing (or stabling) the burro. The feeding of the burro shall be provided from the fees hereafter mentioned.

"Sec. 7. The punishment provided for infraction of any section of this law shall be a fine of $1000 or one year's hard labor in special burro pens to be provided in each county, or both.

"Divisions of the burro shall be as follows, to wit:

"I. General Health.—Every citizen, male, female and neuter, above three years of age, shall present himself or herself, or itself at the office of the precinct burro inspector the first Monday of each month to obtain a clean bill of health. The fee for this service shall be $2.50.

"II. Infectious Diseases.—In addition to the diseases usually regarded as infectious or contagious, the following shall be so designated: Hives, poison oak, hay fever, corns and falling-in-love. Wherever any of these diseases break out, the head of the household shall immediately report it to the precinct inspector, who shall cause the house to be strictly quarantined to everybody but officials of the burro, who may freely pass in and out. A sign six feet by nine feet shall be affixed to the front of the house. Four burro inspectors, working in six-hour shifts, shall guard the house day and night. For this service they shall each be paid $5 a day by the householder. Should this fee not be paid, it shall become a lien upon the property. The patient shall also be inoculated every two hours, night and day, with serums specially prepared under the direction of the burro. The charge for each of these inoculations shall be $2.50.

"III. Foods.—No food shall be sold or consumed unless the package is labeled with a picture of the burro. The charge for these labels shall be 5 cents each. Where food is not usually sold in packages, each unit of food shall be regarded as a package, thus each oyster shall constitute one package, provided, however, that in the case of beans and breakfast foods one pound of each food may be sold under one label.

"IV. Drinks.—All drinks sold and consumed in the State of California shall hereafter be vended in bottles. Each bottle must bear the burro label, for which the charge will be 5 cents. In addition to this, consumers of alcoholic beverages shall be required to take out an annual license. For this they shall receive a button bearing the imprint of the burro, and coupon books of forty coupons, each serving as a license for one drink, and costing $1 for the book.

"V. Clothing.—Only clothing approved by the burro shall be sold or worn. Each garment shall bear a burro label costing 25 cents.

"VI. Medication.—Only ethical drugs approved by the burro shall be consumed A list of drugs that have become ethical shall be published in the weekly Burro Bulletin, the subscription to which shall be $5 per annum.

"VII. Mentality.—Anybody who obeys the burro, thus escaping liability to punishment, but who questions the desirability of any of the outgivings of the burro shall be regarded as being of unsound mind, and shall be incarcerated in one of the burro insane asylums to be established in each voting precinct, for which accommodation such patient, or the relatives or friends of such patient, shall pay weekly $30 for board and lodging and attendance. . . .

"XI. Irregular Medical Practice.—Any person attempting to practice, directly or indirectly, the care of the body, or the mind, who does not hold a license from the burro, shall be arrested and subjected to the usual fine or imprisonment, or both. In this category shall be included nature healers of every kind, mind healers, chiropodists, barbers, manicurists, masseurs and bath attendants, provided, however, that any and all of these practitioners shall be permitted to carry on their business if they take as a silent partner a licensed graduate of the burro.

"Sec. 8. This act shall take effect and be in force twenty-four hours after the date of its passage.

The Pernicious American Ice Habit.

THEY had recently a terribly hot spell in Chicago. More than a score of adults and a large number of unfortunate infants died from the effects of the heat. A few days before that they had been suffering from a blizzard. No wonder so many of these people want to come to California. In one of the dispatches it was stated that ice was the one thing needed to save the lives of thousands of infants. Ice is a useful thing to bring drinks down to

CARE OF THE EYES.

BY DR. M. M. RING.

KRYPTOK

TRADE MARK

Kryptok Means "Hidden Eye"

KRYPTOKS are the "PEARLS" of the optical world. They are a beautiful creation—gems beyond value and beyond price.

KRYPTOKS are the strong lever that lifts your appearance above the average level.

KRYPTOKS are fitted by us under conditions that insure your enthusiastic satisfaction.

Kryptok Bi-focals are made by fusing together two pieces of glass having different refractive power. The reading part being flint glass with high refractive power, and the distance part being crown glass with low refractive power. This enables us to grind both sides of a Kryptok lens of any desired curve and still have two refractive powers in the same lens. This also explains why Kryptok bi-focals are invisible.

You have seen dignified people duck their heads and roll their eyes upward to peer over their eyeglass lenses at things too far away to focus through them.

Clergymen read from manuscript, duck and peer at the congregation. Lawyers read impressive sections from the code, duck and peer at the jury. Business men engaged with correspondence, duck and peer at entering visitors. It is a solemnly ridiculous habit, practiced unconsciously.

KRYPTOKS cure it.

You have seen people wearing a very conspicuous sort of bifocal glasses—the kind with divided lenses for near and far vision.

These glasses do not cause amusement, but they do provoke sympathetic curiosity. They give the impression that there is something the matter with the wearer's eyes—something uncommon.

KRYPTOKS cure that.

Kryptoks are bifocal glasses without the objectionable appearance commonly associated with bifocals.

In the common bifocal a full size lens is ground for distant vision, another thin segment is prepared for near vision and cemented to the outside surface of the first. There is an exposed edge to the attached wafer that chips and collects dirt, the outline becoming always more and more pronounced; and there is softening cement to cloud the lens and gradually detach the two parts. There can be no clear vision with such lenses, no permanent satisfaction with them.

Kryptoks are light, solid lenses, with perfectly even, unbroken surfaces. They are absolutely indestructible except by breakage, and present no hard "lines" obstructive to sight and destructive to nerves.

As a matter of course there are imitations, but no imitation of anything ever equals the genuine article, and it is generally conceded that no one who practices the art of living upon other people's genius is entitled to public encouragement.

"Practically the same," "Just as good," "Made on the same principle," etc., etc., are the quibbling terms you may hear applied to imitations. Don't take them.

Kryptoks are made to fit the near and far vision requirements of any individual. They are by far the most elegant in appearance, the most serviceable, and the only perfect bifocal lenses.

Many people think to themselves: "I do not wish to wear glasses because they make me look old," or "I will not wear Bifocal glasses because they are so conspicuous," etc.

One who thinks this now is thinking in terms of several years ago. All this has been overcome in the recent invention of the KRYPTOK and the TORIC form of lens.

QUALITY AHEAD OF PRICE.

Do you not prefer to have your eyes examined and your glasses fitted by an acknowledged specialist who makes QUALITY the first consideration rather than price?

And when this specialist, by virtue of his long experience as a professor in optical and other colleges, and by virtue of the perfection of his optical manufacturing equipment, and by virtue of the fact that every detail of the manufacturing is done under his immediate supervision by expert workmen, and by virtue of his being a licensed and practicing physician in the State of California is able to combine the very highest possible quality with prices that are far below the average you are certainly acting wisely when you go to him for your glasses and advise your friends to do the same.

BRING US THE PIECES

When you break a lens in that high priced pair of glasses you are wearing, just bring us the pieces, for we can make an absolutely exact duplicate and you will be surprised to learn how little it will cost you. No need to bring the prescription—just bring the pieces.

ADVANTAGES OF TORIC LENSES

They may be set closer to the eyes without touching the lashes.

They conform to the natural curve of the eye.

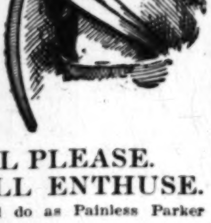
They permit a wider field of vision and allow you to see through them in all directions with equal distinctness—a decided improvement.

They eliminate annoying reflections from back of lenses.

They are the result of modern skill and methods and are a great improvement over the old style.

They can be ground lighter and prettier in every way.

They are especially desirable in Bifocals because they give a much more direct focus through the segment, and besides they are much more elegant in appearance.



THE PRICE WILL PLEASE.
THE QUALITY WILL ENTHUSE.

Obey that insistent impulse and do as Painless Parker says: "See Dr. Ring first."

a cool temperature, when there is no other way of doing so, but the ice habit is a great curse to the American people. Everywhere one sees people swallowing drinks of all kinds at a frozen temperature, thus ruining their stomachs, and producing dyspepsia. The soda fountain does more harm to the health than the saloon. In Europe they would never think of drinking beer at such a cold temperature as they do here. Water and other fluids should be drunk cool, not ice cold. The temperature of mountain spring water is just right. The Mexican olla has largely been adopted in the southwestern part of the United States, particularly in Arizona and New Mexico. It is much better than icing—and cheaper. Some time ago a Los Angeles man invented an improved olla, which not only cools but filters the water.

A School for Nurses.

A NEW and interesting feature has been introduced in the Los Angeles Y.W.C.A. in the shape of a school for nurses. It is under the direction of Mary P. Putnam, M. D., a medical practitioner in Boston for twenty years, and lecturer in hospitals and elsewhere to nurses. The summer course will open on July 5.

This is an excellent idea. It should be remembered, however, that a nurse, like a physician and a poet, is born, not made. Those who are not imbued with a real love of their fellow-creatures, and who further do not possess a soft touch and a well-modulated voice, may take up the nursing or doctoring profession, but they will never be real bedside ministers or healers of the sick.

The Naturopaths.

FOLLOWING is an extract from the report of the State Board of Medical Examiners, read at the forty-first annual meeting of the State society, in Santa Barbara, in April last, and published in the California State Journal of Medicine for June:

"The records also show that no naturopath as such has ever presented himself for examination, though a number of men now listed as licensed naturopaths had tried the examinations several times and failed. Some even tried through the medium of the courts to obtain a license to practice, failing there also. The amended medical act of 1909 gave 105 naturopaths, among whom were included irregular practitioners of many kinds, a license to practice naturopathy—whatever the term may mean—in the State. These men, now practicing under a naturopathic license, are reported from time to time as practicing medicine, but it has been impossible to obtain sufficient evidence to prosecute them. Of the 105 naturopaths eighty are located in Southern California."

This is a misstatement of fact. The law licensing the practice of naturopathy in California became effective on March 19, 1909. For six months after that date the law compelled the State Board of Medical Examiners to accept licenses issued by the Association of Naturopaths of California. Since that time no naturopath has been before the State Board of Medical Examiners for examination, for the good and sufficient reason that the naturopaths are intelligent enough to realize that under present conditions they have no chance whatever of being admitted to practice.

The interpolation in the above statement—"whatever the term may mean"—bears the earmarks of the distinguished editor of the Journal. For a physician in authority, or of standing, in California, to express ignorance in regard to a school of healing that has been licensed by the State for two years, shows that physician to be unfitted for the position he holds.

As the editor recently said "naturopathy" is a rather clumsy and unfortunate word. Under the name of the "nature cure" this school of practice has been widely known in Germany for over half a century, where it is highly respected by the "regular" medical fraternity.

In brief, the naturopaths believe with Hippocrates, sometimes called the "Father of Medicine," that "nature cures, not the physician." Naturopathy, or the nature cure, differs absolutely from most of the other schools of healing, in recognizing the fact that disease is an effort of nature to remove morbid matter from the system and restore normal conditions, therefore that instead of suppressing the symptoms of disease, we should discover the cause and aid nature to remove it. Naturopathy uses no poisonous drugs whatever, but utilizes such natural means of aiding nature as diet, fasting, exercise, rest, massage, osteopathy, hydropathy, and mental suggestion. Most wonderful cures have been effected by this method, all the more wonderful because in a great majority of cases people do not take up the nature cure or the natural method, which involves patience and will power, until they have been practically given up as hopeless cases by the "regulars."

It may be added that the editor of the Care of the Body has a diploma from the Naturopathic Institute of California, and a license to practice as a doctor of naturopathy, signed by the State Board of Medical Examiners.

One Law for All.

THE old saying: "One man's meat is another man's poison" is true only to a very limited extent.

One of the consultants of the Care of the Body, writing for advice in regard to her husband, who is an invalid, said: "We understand that each person is a law unto himself." To this the editor of the Care of the Body replied.

"When you say that each man is a law unto himself you are absolutely and entirely wrong. Each one is subject to the great law of nature, and cannot escape the consequences of breaking that law. People are fond of thinking that their ailment is something peculiar and rare, and in this they are encouraged by the regular medical fraternity, because it makes the case appear more important, and enables them to charge higher fees. It is, however, all foolishness. There is but one disease, and there is but one cure—to stop breaking the laws of nature and to obey those laws—to "cease to do evil and learn to do well."

The Story of a Plucky Paralytic.

IN the first week of November of 1886, when the editor of the Care of the Body came to Los Angeles from Arizona, where for five years he had been pursuing the unprofitable occupation of publishing newspapers in mining camps that died a-bornin', he obtained a job as a scrub reporter on the Los Angeles Times, then a modest little six-day-a-week paper, with a circulation of about 3500. Its offices were located in the Downey block, an old rat-infested rookery at the corner of Temple and North Spring streets, on the site of the new Federal building. At that time the city editor and general literary roustabout of the paper was Charles F. Lummis, who may properly be described as a "character." He had recently walked across the continent to Los Angeles, a distance of 3500 miles, and had written an entertaining serial story of his tramp in The Times.

Lummis was powerful, physically as well as mentally, and proud of both forms of strength. Also, like many

To return to Lummis. A little book recently reached me, on the fly leaf of which was inscribed: "To my long-time and valued friend Harry Brook, with high regards. Charles F. Lummis." The book is entitled "My Friend Will." (A. C. McClurg & Co., publishers, Chicago.) It is adorned with several half-tone illustrations and a most artistic cover. Lummis might have called it "My Indomitable Will," for it is a story of an interesting episode in his own life. Here is his own description of his physique:

"He was hardly five feet seven inches, but sinewy and agile as a panther, and of really extraordinary strength. All over his body the knots and strands of muscle stood out like whipcords. He never bragged of this; but he knew his strength, and was proud of it, and gloried in it.

"He stripped 135 pounds, but he could lay his head on one chair and his heels on another and let a 200-pound man stand on his rigid belly for a full minute by the watch. He had made one straightaway walk of 3500 miles across the continent, and hundreds of shorter but considerable trips on foot, on horseback, and on the old high bicycles. He was a trained boxer, wrestler, acrobat, mountain climber and long-distance runner and canoe man."

He tells how for months he would work twenty-two or even twenty-three hours a day. That, of course, could not last long. Nature, while sometimes apparently cruel, is honest as a rattlesnake in giving warning. She gave him several little tips, in the shape of fingers that went to sleep and legs and head and trunk that were afflicted with an odd tingling numbness. Also warnings had been given him for many years by his friends and acquaintances, but he would laugh at them. He writes of one of these occasions:

"Even now, when the telegraph editor said to him one night, apropos of the 'sleepy' finger: 'Mr. Will, if you don't let up, you are going to be paralyzed!' my friend looked at him in unfeigned admiration.

"'Do you mean to tell me, Bates,' he cried impetuously, knotting his left arm till the biceps actually split the sleeve, 'you mean to say that when I tell this arm to do so and so it will disobey me? By heaven! I would like to see it!' And there was a glare in his eyes as if he would make short work with such unheard-of mutiny."

Bates, the telegraph editor referred to, has for many years been editorial writer on the San Diego Union:

A week later the prediction came true. At his own fireside, after supper, he suddenly toppled to the floor. After twenty minutes of awful struggling he managed to get up, weak and trembling, but victorious—that is partially victorious, for his left arm had mutinied. He could not move a muscle of it.

Most people would have accepted the lot of a crippled invalid, but not so Lummis. He determined to go to the wilderness and live out of doors until he was well. So he packed his togs and trekked off to New Mexico, where he knew some good Spanish people who lived the primitive life of the Southwest, now so rapidly disappearing. In a day's ride from the railroad, Lummis managed to get around and even to shoot rabbits with one hand, bringing home a good bag day after day. He went to the sheep camps and shared the hard life of shearing time. Seven thousand feet above the sea, it was bitter cold in the month of March. Yet Lummis would go down with an ice chisel, chip through eight or ten inches of ice and take a morning bath, to the great astonishment of the simple natives. Other almost incredible feats he tells of in this little book, showing what a mutilated man may do, when his brain retains the mastery of the rest of his body. He also tells of frequent ineffective attempts that were made to assassinate him by Mexican bandits, whom he had opposed. So wonderful were his escapes that he came to be credited with bearing a charmed life.

There came one day exceedingly bad news, followed by a third paralytic stroke, and then, not long, after, there came suddenly complete recovery.

The latter part of the book is devoted to the reproduction of a most touching tribute to his son, "The Little Boy that Was," who died a little over ten years ago, the article being reproduced from the Outwest Magazine, of which Lummis was formerly editor.

What Lummis has done others may do, if—and this "if" is an awfully big little word—they have the determination and spunk and hard uncommon sense which he displayed. It should be added that Lummis's recovery might have been hastened had he paid more attention to the dietetic side of the subject, especially the exceeding great value, in such cases, of foods that are rich in the organic salts, such as raw green stuff and fresh fruits.

A Natural Inquiry.

A NUMBER of men gathered in the smoking-car of a train from Little Rock to another point in Arkansas were talking of the food best calculated to sustain health.

One Arkansan, a stout, florid man with short gray hair and a self-satisfied air, was holding forth in great style.

"Look at me!" he exclaimed. "Never a day's sickness in my life! And all due to simple food. Why, gents, from the time I was 20 to when I reached 40 years I lived a regular life. None of these effeminate delicacies for me! No late hours! Every day, summer and winter, I went to bed at 9; got up at 5; lived principally on corned beef and corn bread. Worked hard, gents, worked hard from 8 to 1, then dinner, plain dinner, then an hour's exercise, and then——"

"Excuse me," interrupted a stranger who had remained silent, "but what were you in for?"—[Housekeeper.

[illegible] CHAUVENET AT THE PIANO.

MME. JEAN DE CHAUVENET, director of the school and principal of the vocal department, is indeed well fitted for the promotion of educational work. It was while pursuing a college course in her teens, that the thought and consequent preparation for teaching began, which later developed into a thorough course in the Kindergarten Training School in Des Moines, Iowa, with special work under Miss Amalie Hofer of Chicago, Mrs. Treat of Michigan and Prof. White of Philadelphia. This study takes up the different phases of child life, the needs and how to meet them in the most natural way, temperaments, psychology, etc., etc. Although gaining rapid promotion in the public schools in this and other grades for several years the "natural tendency" toward music (which was begun at nine years of age) began to dominate all else, and for one year considerable time was successfully given toward assisting in the public school music, but this only strengthened the growing desire of pursuing a career in the great world of music.

Mme. de Chauvenet's success in this line has won for her an enviable reputation both as teacher and singer.

The above is a small part of a recent composition by Mr. de Chauvenet for violin and piano, and has been called "remarkable" by the judges of "Musica," the largest musical journal of France.

Of which Otheman Stevens wrote—"Romance," a delicately beautiful composition by Jean de Chauvenet of this city for violin and piano, has recently been published by a Parisian firm, Alphonse Leduc.

Mr. de Chauvenet is a member of the International Congress of Music and has high rank, both abroad and at home as a composer and pianist. De Pachmann said of him: "He will some day be the great de Chauvenet.

Of another composition Julian Johnson writes: "Jean de Chauvenet has written a characteristic piece, "Pecadora," which has had great success during the past season. Charles Kunkel, an eminent composer, wrote Mr. de Chauvenet: "I am charmed with your beautiful ideas; it would certainly do credit to any composer living."

Concerning "Pecadora," Mr. de Chauvenet has received the most flattering comments from the well-known composers, Louis Conrath, Eppstein Bros., Chas. Kunkel and the famous pianist, Teresa Carreno. Mr. de Chauvenet has three times received programmes from eastern cities showing that his "Pecadora" has been used for a graduating number in a large musical institution. This composition has also been graciously received and arranged for the Apollo-Player and can be heard reproduced in that manner. Mr. de Chauvenet has also composed several fugues, one of which, the G minor, has won for him the credit of producing a contrapuntal work which has been pronounced by critics to be a near approach to the fugues of Bach.

as recently arranged for the summer school and the coming year, are all artists of true worth and we believe their high standing in the musical world is sufficient recommendation to the public.

The annual June concert of this institution will be held in the Conservatory auditorium, 845 Figueroa street, next Saturday at 2:30 p. m. No admission to these recitals.
